The rest period brought only a refreshed onrush in the final quarter. Howe and Langmaid connected for a 20-yard pass, first and goal was won through the line, and again Langmaid found the way to the tape and followed with the point. Though Huntington put the ball in play in the middle of the field after the kick-off, Middlebury aspirations were swamped. Jacobs and Guarnaccia were consistently intruded upon while slipping the ball from one to the other behind the lines, and Huntington was smothered well back while contemplating a pass. But at the same time the Great Offensive was checked or at least delayed so that, after Wheeler and Putnam had intercepted the last frantic convulsions of the Panther, the victors once again found themselves within feet of the line, but too late.

The line-up and summary follows:

... with their feet on the ground

MEN of vision, yes. But don't overlook the fact that those old Roman road builders and empire builders kept their feet firmly fixed on the ground. They faced the facts squarely. They were demons for detail. They were the world's first great organizers.

Pioneering in the telephone industry is like that. It is a work of vision and of leadership into new fields. But back of it all must be the ability to organize men, money, material and machines.

The telephone executive must coordinate his machine before he can run it. He must understand the possibilities in his organization before he can lead it. That done, his opportunity is empire-wide, vision-broad and ambition-deep.

PRINCETON PROFESSOR LAUDS HOOVER POLICY

P. M. Brown '98, Speaking Before
Hoover Club, Reviews 1928
Political Issues

As the opening salvo in the campaign of the Williams College Hoover Club, Professor Philip Marshall Brown '98 addressed a meeting held under the auspices of that organization in Jesup Hall last Thursday evening. In discussing "Both Parties and Their Candidates", Prof. Brown stated that his aim was not to "exalt one candidate by the disparagement of the other" but to maintain an open mind in reviewing the stands of the two major parties on the important issues of the campaign.

The fact that the Democrats have been in power only 16 out of 68 years was pointed out by the speaker as a proof of lack of popular confidence. This fact Prof. Brown explained was due to the identification of the Democratic Party with the South, with opposition to protective tariff, with free silver under Bryan, and with Wilson's international policy. In the words of the speaker, "the Democrats have become identified with hard times."

As the stand of the respective parties on current issues, Prof. Brown affirmed that Hoover is sworn to a strict enforcement of the 18th amendment, while Smith has already shown that he considers enforcement hopeless by discouraging attempts at enforcement in New York state. Further he said: "The Republicans offer cooperative marketing as the means of farm relief. This might be said to be the key to Hoover's whole philosophy. He implicitly believes in individual freedom with government aid only when of distinct advantage. This sound and tried process is winning the farmers."

Prof. Brown quoted P. L. Smith's article in Current History in assigning reasons for voting for Smith; "young men want to march and Smith can set the pace, time enough later to find out where you are going." In conclusion the speaker maintained that "in Hoover we have a man pre-eminent in training, and America's most respected internationalist. For our own interests, and the interests of world affairs, we should support him."

INTRAMURAL TENNIS AND GOLF PROGRESS

However, Five Matches Are Behind
Time; Psi U. Leads, Commons
Club Eliminated

With five matches not completed according to schedule, the intramural series in tennis and golf has been progressing slowly, and only one game has been played in the round-robin program, in which Psi Upsilon defeated Delta Psi in tennis. However, all but two of the first-round encounters have been decided in both sports, which were shifted to the Fall schedule for the first time this year because of overcrowding during the Spring, and results show the Commons Club, winner of last year's Interfraternity Championship Trophy, eliminated from both tournaments.

In the preliminary matches of the tennis series of the American League, Delta Psi defeated Kappa Alpha, 2-1; Psi Upsilon defeated D. K. E., 3-0; Phi Delta Theta defeated Zeta Psi; and the Delta Ipsilon-Chi Psi match is yet to be played. In the National League, Alpha Delta Phi defeated the Commons Club, 2-0; Phi Gamma Delta defeated Phi Sigma Kappa 2-0; Delta Phi defeated Beta Theta Pi, 2-0; and Sigma Phi defeated Theta Delta Chi, 2-1. Psi Upsilon won over Delta Psi in the only round-robin match played so far.

In the first round in the American League of the golf tournament, D. K. E. defeated Chi Psi; Phi Delta Theta defeated Delta Psi, 2-1; Delta Upsilon defeated Psi Upsilon by default; and Zeta Psi defeated Kappa Alpha, 3-0. In the National League, Phi Gamma Delta defeated Beta Theta Pi, 2-0; Theta Delta Chi defeated Alpha Delta Phi, 2-0; Sigma Phi defeated Commons Club, 2-1; and Phi Sigma Kappa and Delta Phi have not yet played their match. Likewise, two matches are behind schedule in the round-robin series. In both the tennis and golf tournaments, the program is to

'LITTLE THEATRE' TO PRESENT TRIPLE BILL

Original Play by Casaday '29 and Romer '28 Will Be Produced on November 9

Opening its activities for the year, the Williams Little Theatre will present a bill of three one-act plays in the Jesup Hall auditorium on Friday, November 9, the parts in the casts being taken by students, wives of members of the faculty, and other residents of Williamstown. The plays which have been selected for presentation are Wurzel-Flummery, by A. A. Milne, Anna Janska, the Bolshevik Empress, by George Bernard Shaw, and Aranea, by Alfred Romer '28 and James Lewis Casaday '29.

Wurzel-Flummery is a light comedy of the British aristocracy dealing with two members of Parliament who change their names. It will be produced under the direction of Reiff '30. Beall and Gilbert '30 have the direction of Shaw's Anna Janska, a farce satirizing the Red Revolution in Russia. Aranea holds a peculiar interest for the audience in that it is written, produced, and directed by members of the College. Casaday, one of the co-authors, will have charge of directing the play, which is a tragedy of medieval times.

The Little Theatre through its Executive Committee has announced that subscription tickets for the five performances of the coming season may be procured from W. F. Hartwell '30, business manager of the organization. This Committee has also announced that the second or December presentation of the Theatre will feature The Queen's Enemies by Lord Dunsany, while, later in the year, an adaptation of Edgar Allan Poe's Masque of the Red Death will be attempted.

The tentative casts for the November 9 production are as follows:

Wurzel-Flummery
A. A. Milne
Robert Crawshaw M. P.	Rogers '31
Margaret Crawshaw	Mrs. Avery
Viola Crawshaw	Miss McLaren
Richard Meriton M. P.	Polyzoides '30

R. P. I. FACES PURPLE SOCCER TEAM TODAY

Purple Eleven in Good Shape for Troy Team Which Has Tied
Wesleyan, 2-2

In the second game of the season the Varsity soccer team will endeavor to keep its record intact at the expense of the R. P. I. eleven, which faces the Purple this afternoon at 2.30 p. m. on Cole Field. The Williams team emerged from the St. Stephens game in fine shape and with an additional week of practice and training behind it should present a formidable front to the visitors.

Daily practice with scrimmages has been held every day this week, with the exception of Mountain Day. Yesterday a practice game was held with an eleven from the Pittsfield General Electric Company. The Varsity squad was divided into two teams, each playing half of the contest. For the match today the lineup will probably be the same as that which started last week.

Only four letter men are back on the R. P. I. team, but Coach Gailey states that it is the best combination he has had in recent years. The Engineers have also played one game so far, tying Wesleyan, 2-2. Pritchard, Heasley, Garcia, and Haiss were the outstanding men in the contest.

Following is the probable line-up of the two teams:

Reverend Sewall Dies

Funeral services of Reverend Albert Sewall, a graduate of this college and a former resident of Williamstown, who died last Saturday at Canandaigua, N. Y., were held in the Congregational Church last Monday. Reverend Mr. Sewall was a member of the Class of 1867 and following the completion of his theological studies, he was ordained to the ministry and became pastor of the Williamstown Congregational Church in 1872. In this capacity he remained for fourteen years before moving to a pastorate in Schenectady. His death followed a long period of ill health.

Ely Selected President of 1930 for Third Time

Richard Ely, of Westfield, Massachusetts, was again reelected President of the class of 1930 at a meeting held last Thursday evening in Jesup Hall. At the same time Franklin K. Hoyt, of West Newton, Massachusetts, and David P. Williams, of Santa Barbara, California, were elected to represent the class on the Student Council, and the election of the other officers was postponed until next week.

Ely was first elected President after mid-years in Freshman year, and held that office last year as well. He is now Corresponding Secretary of the W. C. A., and is Assistant Manager of Tennis. He prepared at Choate, where he played basketball, and has played on the Freshman and Varsity fives at Williams. Williams prepared at Thacher, and won his letter in football and baseball last year. He also played on the Freshman football and basketball teams. Hoyt came to Williams from Andover, and has played Varsity hockey for two years. He was class Secretary last year and was on the Varsity tennis squad in Freshman year. All three men are members of the Purple Key Society.

Lehman '99 Is Nominated on N. Y. Democratic Ticket

Herbert H. Lehman, Williams '99, has lately been declared democratic nominee for the lieutenant-governorship of New York at the Rochester convention, as running-mate to Franklin D. Roosevelt. Mr. Lehman was particularly active while in college, and has been the generous benefactor of many gifts to his alma mater, including the coveted Lehman Cup and the new freshman dormitory which bears his name.

Back in the "nineties" Mr. Lehman was a member of Gargoyle, belonged to the Cap and Bells, guided the chess players, clashed in varsity debates, managed the track team, orated upon occasion, and was generally busy in extracurricular activities. The cup of which he is the sponsor is offered annually in point competition to the highest scorer in a series of outdoor track events. The dormitory, standing behind Chapin Hall, is the latest addition to campus equipment and is being used for the first time this year.

COLLEGE BODY GIVEN ANNUAL FALL HOLIDAY

Outing Club Leads Trips to Flora's
Glen and Greylock; Smith
Proves Popular

Conforming to time-honored tradition and one of the most ancient of all Williams customs, Mountain Day was observed last Tuesday by students and faculty alike in exploring the surrounding hills. Approximately 55 men took advantage of the opportunities offered by the Outing Club, one party proceeding up the Hopper Trail to Greylock for an all-night trip, and another, starting out Monday with the intention of hiking to Flora's Glen, eventually spending the afternoon in a search for two children who were reported to have been lost.

President Griffin first definitely mentions the origin of the custom of setting aside a day in the College year for a trip up Greylock in his manuscript Journal, containing the Code of Laws for 1827, when he notes: "about the 24th of June—a day to go upon the mountain." Later on two days were set apart, one in the spring, the other in the autumn. In the spring, each class petitioned for the day it desired, while in the autumn, the faculty and elements settled the dates. Apparently only the later part of the custom has come down to the present time.

Under the leadership of Covell '30, 35 men met at Jesup Hall about 4.30 Monday afternoon to climb Greylock, via the Hopper Trail. The college truck took the entire party as far as Bacon's Farm, the rest of the trip being made on foot. From here, Greylock was ascended in the quick time of one hour and 15 minutes. After a memorable supper, replete with good food and better stories of Williamstown lore, the expedition retired to their blankets. About three in the morning, however, old-man Pluvius began to show his wares with a vengeance, and the majority of the hikers hurried to the reservation for the rest of their sleep, although four enterprising freshmen slept in the observatory. For the trip home, diverse routes were chosen by the members of the party, almost all arriving in Williamstown by 9 a. m. Another group of 17, which included President Garfield, was led by Haviland '29. Starting out with the intention of

Notice

A direct violation of the Interfraternity Rushing Agreement occurred on the morning of Friday, October 5. At the request of Charles Fochl '32, Richard H. It was voted by the Interfraternity Council to accept the decision of the Arbitrator, and also that an account of the violation be published in THE RECORD.

VARSITY WILL OPPOSE BOWDOIN TEAM TODAY

Undeclared Purple Eleven Makes Journey to Brunswick for

RIVALS LOST TO AMHERST

Maine Team Boasts Fast Attack
Which Downed M. A. C.—Chapman Is Star

Journeying for the first time in several years to the other extremity of New England, the so far successful Williams football team will meet a strong Maine aggregation when it opposes Bowdoin College this afternoon on the latter's field at Brunswick. With a fast and shifty team of veterans which gave Amherst the scare of her life last week when it led the Sabrinas until the last few minutes of play, finally losing, 7 to 3, Bowdoin is expected to furnish stiff opposition, but in the light of the showing that Williams has made against Providence and Middlebury, Coach Caldwell is anything but pessimistic about the result of today's encounter.

The Williams team, which thus far has been able to score six touchdowns as against but two for the total of both its opponents, will be composed of the same men which started against Middlebury last week. Williams, Deming, Lasell, Watson, Captain Andersen, Schwartz and Ashby will comprise the forward wall, reading from left to right, while the backfield will again be made up of that very effective quartet, Putnam, Langmaid, Chase, and Howe. The team will feel the loss, probably permanent, of Muller at center through a leg injury contracted in the Providence game. It will be strengthened, however, by the return to the lineup of R. Brown, who has so far recovered of his injury that he will probably see service in the backfield during part of the game. D. Smith, quarterback of last year's Saccos, is also reporting for practice, and is expected to play in later games.

During the past week Coach Caldwell has worked especially to develop the smooth operation of plays, and to carry out this end several scrimmages have been held with the freshmen. A blackboard talk Wednesday evening explained in detail the part of every member of the team in each play. In addition to this, stress has been laid on an aerial attack and the development of the punters, Howe, Chase, and Wheeler. Among the linemen who will be used as reserve material are Hood and Elting on the wings, Miller and Trauernicht at tackle, and Williamson at guard, while Wheeler, Eisner, and McAllister will undoubtedly be called into action in the backfield.

Other business transacted at this meeting consisted of the reappointment of L. M. Bellerose as hockey coach, the awarding of baseball letters for the season of 1928, and the final acceptance of certain Varsity and Freshman schedules.

UNFORTUNATE AND UNFORESEEN

THE RECORD regrets to learn that the publication of the Dunbar prize essay, entitled "Undergraduate Society at Williams", was the cause of certain unfortunate results. The RECORD furthermore, denies all responsibility for the sentiments or opinions expressed in this essay, although it does not hesitate to affirm that many of the facts discussed, if not strictly false, were certainly obsolete. The social conditions depicted may have been true several years ago—perhaps when the Committee of Ten report came out, but they were not true when that article was written, and they are not true now. And the fact that the writer utterly failed to give adequate recognition of recent internal and external improvements in the Commons Club must convince those who are informed in the matter that he was guilty of inexcusable misrepresentation.

THE RECORD was quite conscious of all this when it printed the article. What we were perhaps too short-sighted to see was that harmful consequences might have resulted. Our one excuse is that the essay was printed by request to further the aims and purposes of the Dunbar Foundation in placing before the College ideas on campus problems as developed and expressed by undergraduates. If THE RECORD was guilty of attracting undue attention to the essay by labelling it with a sensational headline, it was a breach of good taste more than anything else: therefore a matter of great regret.

Inasmuch as THE RECORD was instrumental in raising a question which for several reasons might have done more harm than good, we are glad to deny, editorially, acquiescence in the opinions as stated in this essay. We hope that this, together with accompanying communications in this issue, will have sufficient merit to correct whatever false impressions the essay has created, especially in the minds of those readers who are unfamiliar with undergraduate society at Williams as it really is.

COMMUNICATIONS

Although communications may be published unsigned if so requested, the name of the writer must in every case be submitted to the editor. The Board assumes no responsibility, however, for the facts as stated nor for the opinions expressed in this department.

ESSAY DRAWS REPLIES

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

For the information of alumni and friends of Williams College who are unacquainted with present conditions and developments in the Commons Club, we the undersigned seniors in that organization, wish to correct any misconceptions that may have arisen out of an essay by Sweeney '28, appearing in the last issue of THE RECORD.

The strong backing of the Administration has been largely responsible for the great number of improvements in the past three years which completely contradict Mr. Sweeney's assertions as applied to the present. The following quotation from the "Freshman Bible" aptly describes the present scope and aims of the Commons Club:

"The Commons Club is a social organization in Williams College, membership in which is open to all students, instructors, professors, alumni, and officers of the College. Too formal an organization has intentionally been avoided, and membership is in no way binding. The general supervision of the Club is delegated to the officers: arrangements for the reception of alumni, the supervision of the scholastic standing of underclassmen, the general charge of the social activities, including house parties and entertainment of the Faculty, the management of the food, the organization of the numerous intramural teams, and all other activities of the Club are in the hands of committees chosen by the organization. Upperclass members of the Club use the dormitory rooms in Currier Hall for rooming purposes. In addition a large Common Room for social activities of all kinds, a lounge room for reading and conversation, and a dining room are occupied by the Club. The purpose of the Commons Club is to create a pleasant environment for all of its members, and to further their intellectual and social interests."

At present the membership of the Commons Club is approximately 150 men, who are adequately accommodated without overcrowding either in dining or lounging facilities.

Signed,

John G. Haviland '29

Robert Lees '29

Howard W. Rymer '29

To the Editor of THE RECORD,

Dear Sir:—

In his article dealing with the "fraternity-non-fraternity situation," which appeared in your issue of Tuesday last, Mr. Sweeney makes the following statement: "The present social situation ruthlessly creates discord on the campus. The social grading forms a barrier which prevents the free play of friendship. The neutral who courts fraternity friends is suspected of seeking a bid, while the fraternity man who associates with the neutrals is frowned upon by his brothers."

The impression which this passage creates is one of a state of social narrow-mindedness, wherein the foolish pride of one class not only dominates its own members, but acts as a restriction upon those of another. Looking at the situation as a member of a fraternity, it appears to me that a false light has been thrown over the whole matter. To my knowledge there is no social barrier between non-fraternity and fraternity men. If any member of a fraternity conceives such a barrier for himself, he is hardly worthy of the friendship of a non-fraternity man, and the latter will assuredly recognize the fact. If such a barrier did exist, would so many non-fraternity and fraternity men choose each other as roommates, or would there exist in any degree the present custom of exchanging dinner invitations indiscriminately? These two points alone must carry weight as an answer. It is but natural that a man should be more intimate

DR. E. A. BIRGE SPENDS SUMMER IN RESEARCH

President Emeritus of Wisconsin
Examined Contents of 229
Small Lakes

(The following article about Dr. E. A. Birge, '73, president emeritus of the University of Wisconsin appeared in the Sept. 16th edition of the New York Times.)

"Tanned, enthusiastic over the progress of his research, eager to start delving into the results of a strenuous summer program of field work, Dr. E. A. Birge, president emeritus of the University of Wisconsin, returned to Madison recently from Northeastern Wisconsin, where with his party of ten men he had studied the contents of 229 lakes.

"Dr. Birge spent his seventy-seventh birthday unpacking boxes containing hundreds of samples of lake water and low forms of lake life, collected during the summer in the comprehensive study of lake productivity which he began about thirty years ago.

"With more help and better facilities than he ever had before, he announces new strides in the project, which is expected to result in laying foundations for a scientific conservation of lake life. The study is the only one of its kind in the country.

"We are trying to do for the lakes what the soil men did for agriculture," comments Dr. Birge. "Once we had to make haphazard prescriptions for various soils. Now the work is based on chemistry, physics, and biology of the soil. The difference in the analogy is that in our lake work we have few men and little money. Progress has been slow, but we are getting somewhere, and interest in the work is increasing."

"Dr. Birge began to study the 'fish-pasture' in lakes around Madison many years ago. Busy with administrative work, first as dean of the College of Letters and Science and then as president, he could devote only spare time to the project. In 1926 he resigned the presidency. Since then he has worked daily on the lake studies, conducted officially under the Wisconsin Geological and Natural History survey.

"During the last four years the work has expanded into an inventory of lakes in a wide district. Investigations in Vilas, Price and Oneida Counties have included 322 lakes. Headquarters are at Troy Lake in Vilas County, where facilities have been improved for the work at the State Forestry Nurseries.

"Included in the party this summer were Dr. Birge, C. Juday of the state survey, two representatives of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, and six helpers. Equipment consisted of laboratory apparatus, four boats, including two collapsible ones, and three small cars. Dr. Birge describes the 1917 model he used as 'morally perfect, but physically weak.'

"Daily trips were made from the camps to outlying lakes. Data collected included temperatures at various depths, surveys of algae growing in the lakes, chemical analysis of water at various depths with reference to content of carbon dioxide, oxygen, three forms of nitrogen, phosphorus, chlorine, silicon dioxide and residue. Every bit of residue was earned. One and two-thirds tons of water yielded on evaporation only one and three-quarters ounces.

"Much of the early work done dealt with inorganic and organic content of the water. This summer the next step was taken. Insects and a variety of animal life on the lake bottoms were studied. A dredging device aided in the task of gathering data on the kind and extent of these forms of life. The big job still concerns chemical analyses, but such forms of life as the tiny crustacea of the open water are now included in the survey.

"Ten-liter samples of water were taken at various depths, and the extent of tiny animal life computed. Crustacea are known to be important food of small fish. They are also the intermediate or 'middlemen' between the tiny plants or algae of the lakes and the small fish. The small fish are in turn eaten by larger game fish, so the study will eventually embrace the whole community of plant and animal life in lakes, each one progressively dependent on another.

"Hundreds of fish were caught to supply samples of fish scales from which the age of fish can be computed. These data aid in establishing the rate of growth of fishes in the various lakes, and may aid in comparing the fish food present in the lakes with the condition of the fish.

"After a lifelong interest in fish Dr. Birge admits that he does not care for fishing as a sport. He says he does not get any pleasure out of it.

"His co-workers tell stories of his enthusiasm for the work. This summer he was up daily at 5 a. m. He started the evaporators going before any one else was up. Then he pitched energetically into the day's work as 'the hardest worker and slave-driver of the bunch.'

"To him age is a mere detail. Birthdays are like other work days. Dr. Birge says the fact that he has reached 77 years is of little interest, 'except that in certain games of chance those figures might come in handy.'

Easy Victory

With all but three matches of the second round completed by last Thursday, 18 players, including seven of the eight seeded men, remained in the all-campus Fall tennis tourney, which began two weeks ago. Two third round matches have also been played, in which Hoyt '30 fifth seeded entrant, easily defeated
Doscher '31 in straight sets 6-2, 6-1, and Groehl, another seeded player and leader of last year's Freshman team, won from McGlynn '31 after a close match.

Harry Wolf '29, Captain of the tennis team for the coming season, won his second round engagement, allowing Tittmann '29 only two games in two sets, while Burnett
'32 won just three games in two sets against Sewall '29. T. R. Shoaff '30 had a little harder time defeating Webster
'30 6-3, 6-3. J. S. Clark '30 also advanced to the third round, while the remaining seeded player, F. Nye '30, has

R. P. I. Will Meet Cross Country Runners Today

Cross-country will start officially this Saturday when 'Doc' Seelye's fall runners, fortunate in possessing a lineup including five veterans of last year, compete with the R. P. I. barriers on the Taconic Course.
The Polytechnic team has been hard hit by graduation and ineligibility, so that only one letter man, Captain Day, will be able to run.

The rest of the visitors are more or less inexperienced, but have shown up well so far in time trials. In addition to Captain Day the Troy barriers count upon Mosher, Smith, Lewis, Warren, Friday, Haggerty, and Beach to give Williams strong opposition, while the Purple Bersaglieri will include the following: Captain Moore and Herick '29, Fitcher and E. V. Reynolds
'30, and Goodbody, Guernsey, and Sufferin
'31.

EARLY PLAYS SHOWN IN CHAPIN EXHIBITION

Display Contains First Editions of Elizabethan Dramas and Source Books

Both for the use of English students and the interest of the public an exhibit of first editions of sixteenth and seventeenth century literature has been placed in the Chapin Library. The display, which is contained in a case in the center of the room, is divided into two groups:
the first, dealing with the Elizabethan drama for reference in English 3-4, shows the first printings of the original comedies and tragedies as well as several source books from which material for contemporary Elizabethan plays was taken; while the second division is taken up with various documents written during the heated controversy concerning the situation of the stage before the Restoration together with many prints of plays written after the Restoration of the theatre.

The most interesting items in the first part of the exhibition, those devoted to the subject matter of English 3-4, are the first copies of Gammer Gurton's Needle, Gorboduc, Holinshed's Chronicles, and Alabaster's Rexana. Holinshed's Chronicles, as it rests in the show case, is opened to the woodcut in which is depicted the scene with the three "weird sisters" in conference with Macbeth and Banquo, from which picture Shakespeare is supposed to have taken his description of the three witches in his play Macbeth. The front-ispiece contained in Alabaster's Rexana is the first representation of a stage. Besides these there are in this division of the exhibit: Jonson's Sejanus and Volpone, Lyly's Eudamion, and Marlowe's Jew of Malta.

The second part, which is set aside for English 11, takes up the controversy between the opponents and supporters of the stage in the middle of the seventeenth century. Two items stand out: An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons, in which the utter suppression and abolishment of all plays is suggested, and Prynne's
Historio Mastix which represents the unlawfulness of the stage. Another treatise of the opposition is that of Collier, A Short View of the Immorality and Profaneness of the Stage. Although most of the tracts are written against the stage, there are a few on display in which support is given to the theatrical situation. The list of plays written after the Restoration includes Dryden's Tempest, Congreve's
Way of the World, Steele's Conscious Lovers, and Etherege's Man of Mode.
Besides these documents there are also first editions of Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer, and Sheridan's School for Scandal.

Art Department Holds Water Color Exhibition

Featuring twenty water colors and drawings by Genevieve Cowles of New York the college Art department announces the first of its annual exhibitions in the Lawrence Hall art museum. There is also on exhibition a group of five wood carvings by Adlai Hardin, entitled: Negro Revivalist, The Professor, Fundamentalist, Tough Guy, and New York, 1928.

Miss Cowles, who is well known for her paintings and designs on stained glass, spent four years in Palestine and the pictures on exhibition include landscapes and sketches of the people of this historic spot. The wood carvings of Adlai Hardin, which have received high praise from eminent critics of that art, are being shown in Williamstown for the first time. The public is cordially invited to the exhibition, which will last until October 18 and will be open from 9 a. m. to 12 m. and from 2 to 4 p. m. week days, and on Sundays from 3 to 5 p. m.

Annual Fall Golf Tourney Draws Large Entry List

Upon the announcement of the Fall Golf Tournament, held annually on the Taconic Golf Course, 27 men signed the entry list. To overcome the usual slow method of bracket match play, the winner this year will be determined by the lowest individual score for 72 holes of medal play.

Though the play-off has not as yet proceeded very far, only four men having finished 36 holes, the cards indicate something as to the difficulty of the new course. Swinehart '32, former captain of the Hill School Golf team, turned in low scores of 83 and 84 for the first two rounds. The cards show 83 and 89 for H. L. Noe, also of '32, while D. L. Bryant '30 shot 89 and 93, and F. B. Williams '31 had 87 and 89. J. G. Williams, captain of this year's team, was handicapped by a bad start, running up 87 strokes for the first 18 holes. Since very few entrants have completed their first round and some have not started, Manager Healy has urged that the play-off be speeded up, due to the uncertainty of the time remaining before play becomes impossible.

Varsity Will Oppose Bowdoin Team Today

Bowdoin started the season off well with a decisive 13 to 0 victory over Massachusetts Agricultural College. The strength of the line and a very effective use of lateral and forward passes made possible Chapman's two touchdowns, and the Aggies could not even threaten to score until the last period.

At Amherst, however, a steady march down the field in the last quarter, with Grosskloss doing most of the running for the Sabrinas, proved the undoing of Bowdoin. The Pine Tree Staters were ahead at the time, a drop kick from the 25-yard line by Larcom having furnished a three-point advantage. Chapman again proved to be Bowdoin's best bet in the backfield, and he uncorked one thirty-yard run, which, had it not been followed by a fumble, would have been unfortunate for Amherst.

The strong point of the Bowdoin team seems to be the right hand section of the line, where Pollock, Hirtle, and Adams at right guard, tackle, and end respectively, have shown up exceptionally well this year. Chapman, in addition to his running ability, has some skill as a punter, while Larcom excels at drop kicking and making interference.

The probable lineups are as follows:

INTERCOLLEGIATES

Brown starts the year with the first hand-picked freshman class. The alumni did the rushing, with instructions to report as to whether the candidates were "attractive and well-bred in appearance and deportment" . . . would be "welcome as a classmate in college" . . . "would be an asset to Brown University". The scholastic aptitude rating of the class is one point higher than that of the class of 1931.

A regulation passed at Oxford closing the athletics of the University to all men over 23 years of age deals a blow to American Rhodes scholars. Cambridge rejected the measure.

Coach Bill Roper of Princeton Says That Football Players Today Are as Combative and 'Hard' as Ever

"Twenty-five years of football have convinced me that men are just as courageous, virile, and combative—just as 'hard' as they ever were", was the way in which Bill Roper, famous football coach at Princeton, described modern youth in a recent newspaper and magazine article, which appeared all over the country. He went on to say that "when a game that requires the courage, the stamina, the combativeness, the virility—in a word, the 'hardness'—that is demanded by football, attracts more than 250,000 young men to engage in it actively, day after day, week after week, through the entire fall, then it's going to be pretty hard to convince me that men are getting pallid and namby-pamby, that men are getting 'soft'."

Mr. Roper also stated that, when one realizes the millions of people who attend contests each Saturday, this game certainly deserves to be considered as a "force that is shaping the qualities inherent in the youth of the nation." Although football has its faults, it undoubtedly cultivates and develops "courage, initiative, intelligence, idealism, loyalty, team spirit and a sense of fair play". The writer said that he thought the best part of the student body went out for the team, and that the thing which most impressed him was their "willingness to stand pain", which makes the game worthwhile, and keeps the youth of the country from becoming "softies".

Another sterling quality of football is that it demands "utter sacrifice of self for the good of the team, complete devotion to a cause, and a wholehearted abandon to 'take it'". Mr. Roper considers it a democratic game in every sense of the word, a place as a regular on the varsity being won by "merit alone". In describing the life of the scrubs, he wrote, "Fame, glory, and the plaudits of the crowd pass the obscure scrub by. They have no scrapbooks of newspaper clippings, but scrub football is so rich in bruises, in battles, against overwhelming odds, that no other reward seems necessary."

When noting the changes of the last twenty-five years, Mr. Roper said that emphasis on the qualities necessary for football had changed from weight or "a survival of the toughest" to speed, brains, and courage, which are the necessary characteristics for the modern player. Another improvement in modern youth is evidenced by the fact that now 88% of the entire student body at Princeton actively engage in some sort of athletics. Athletes are respected on the campus until they no longer measure up to a standard of clean living, "consistent with their prominence".

In another article in College Humor, entitled "How Bill Roper Picks His Varsity", he wrote, "The quality I look for at first is best described as the ability to handle oneself, a close correlation between mind and muscle which shows in balance, speed, rhythm, and grace. I seek out the men with nerve and cheerfulness, who do not complain too readily of bumps and discouragements and bruises. The successful coach studies his squad and learns the dispositions and temperaments of every player. The unimaginative boy perfectly set up but utterly lacking in fire and spirit to rise to a fighting pitch during a game is a thorn in any coach's basket of roses."

1931 Heads Soccer Series With 1932 by One Match

Although the first game in the Freshman Sophomore soccer series on Wednesday resulted in a two to two tie, the Sophomores were victorious in Thursday's game by the score of two to one. In these two games, no individuals starred, both teams, according to Coaches Bullock and Bellerose of the Varsity and Freshman respectively, showing good teamwork.

In Wednesday's game, Capps and Sommer scored for the Sophomores, while Avery and Smith tallied for the Freshmen. Dunn made both kicks for the Sophomores in yesterday's match, and Avery made the single point for the Freshmen. The series is to consist of five games, the last on October 23, and the team winning three of the five will be considered champions. The third match will be played on next Tuesday, October 16.

The line-ups for the two teams were practically the same in both games and are as follows:

SOPHOMORES	FRESHMEN
Olmsted	g. Cotter
Sommer	f.f.b. Iliff

with those who are in closest contact with him, and in a college of more than eight hundred members, groups must naturally form themselves; but to say that friendships are contracted in any sense with an eye to social equalities is thoroughly unfounded.

Extending the same theme to such a degree as to state that fraternities look down on their members for associating with non-fraternity men, and that non-fraternity men must beware of scandal because of friendships contracted with fraternity men is patently absurd. Williams men are not themselves so self-centered as to read selfish motives into every act of their companions. If they were, their pride in the ability of the college to inculcate openness of vision in its students would have long ago died out, and the present loyalty of alumni, both non-fraternity and fraternity, would have turned to something very akin to scorn.

ALUMNUS QUERIES ARTICLE

To the Editor of THE RECORD,

Dear Sir:

It is no doubt a little late to call your attention to an article appearing in the June 5, 1928, issue of THE WILLIAMS RECORD under the heading "1907 Baseball Team Met Western Clubs", but part of the article is so far from the truth that it should be corrected even at this late date.

At the end of the first paragraph of this article it states "the jubilant squad forgot to return to college for about a week or so and the length of the athletic trips was materially lessened".

The squad had no lapse of memory whatever and returned to college exactly according to the schedule as made before they left Williamstown. After playing their last western game with Chicago on Saturday they went to New Haven, where on the following Monday they defeated Yale, 4-2.

The inference contained in this article is that the squad indulged in such a celebration after the victories that they did not know the way to go home. The writer of the article should remember that this trip was before the Volstead act was in force and it was not so easy then for boys to get drinks.

Athletic trips were not lessened "materially" because of the conduct of the squad or any member of the squad but because Williams has adopted a policy, or continued a policy, of athletics for the students and eastern alumni only.

Since 1907 many other eastern college teams have made sojourns to this part of the country for games and always were able to find their way home. I do not believe that being confined to Williams-town most of the year would so dull the sense of direction of present day Williams men that they could not also find the way back, just as those of that 1907 baseball team did.

Why not change the 200-mile rule which is rather silly anyway and give the western alumni a chance once in twenty or twenty-five years to see a Williams team in action?

Yours very truly,
Eugene M. Hoynes '07

DR. GARFIELD, MR. HOOVER AND PROHIBITION

To the Editor of THE RECORD,

Dear Sir:

In THE RECORD of October 9 Dr. Garfield nominates as the three main issues of the campaign, prohibition, farm relief, and the foreign policy. He favors Mr. Hoover's stand on each, "particularly," says Dr. Garfield, "on the prohibition question". He continues on this subject, saying that prohibition ought not to be, but has been made a political issue. Then follows this curious statement:

"If one believes in the modification of the Volstead Act, a friend and not an opponent of the Eighteenth Amendment should be relied upon. Certainly those who do not respect the law as it stands cannot be trusted either to modify it or to obey a modified statute."

There are to my knowledge several members of the college community to whom that proves a dark saying; probably there are many more. Following on an approval of Mr. Hoover's prohibition stand (alleged), the meaning of the lines quoted above is not entirely clear, and the first sentence, even if we accept its logic, unavoidably gives rise to three legitimate questions:

1. Does Dr. Garfield believe that Mr. Hoover, though a friend of the Eighteenth Amendment, favors modification of the Volstead Act?

2. If so, what reason has he for believing it?

3. Does Dr. Garfield himself favor modification of the Volstead Act?

The writer knows no reason for supposing an affirmative answer to Question 1 except the pragmatic one of its usefulness in Dr. Garfield's argument, where it is of extreme importance—for if the answer is negative, if Mr. Hoover is a friend not only of the Amendment but also of the Volstead Act, how can the believers in modification look to him for the comfort which, Dr. Garfield implies, awaits them at his hands? The validity of Dr. Garfield's argument to the modificationist depends on an affirmative answer to this question; hence Question 2 is in order, asking for justification of such an answer. Mr. Hoover has allowed the public only the following sentences from which to ascertain his stand on prohibition:

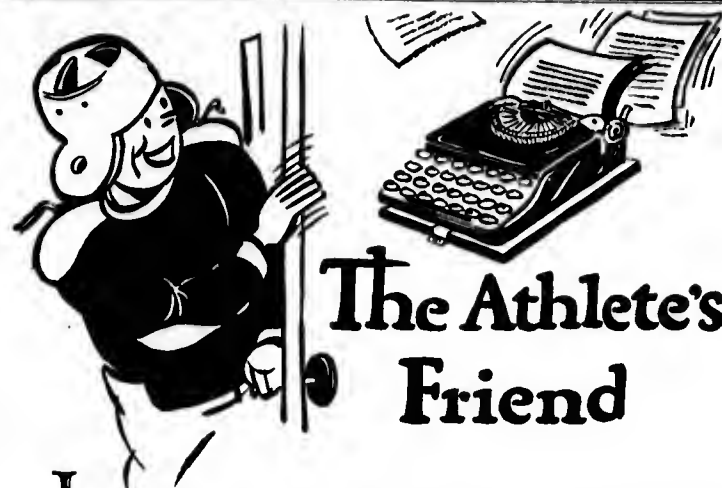

"Prohibition is a noble experiment, elevated in motive and far-reaching in its consequences."

"The purpose of the Eighteenth Amendment is to protect the American home. A sacred obligation is imposed on the President to secure its honest enforcement and to eliminate the abuses which have grown around it. I wish it to succeed."

I challenge Dr. Garfield and mankind in general to deduce from these statements that Mr. Hoover favors modification of the Volstead Act. Furthermore I challenge them to deduce therefrom that Mr. Hoover opposes modification of the Volstead Act. And he has made no other public statement from which one can draw evidence of one kind or the other. In brief, Mr. Hoover is unwilling to place before the electorate to which he is appealing his views on this not unimportant question. Evidently Dr. Garfield knows those views and, unembarrassed by the political exigencies which surround Mr. Hoover, will, we hope, reveal them.

Still attempting to bring into the light of day this "stand" of which Dr. Garfield approves, we ask him Question 3—does he himself favor modification of the Volstead Act? If he does and thinks Mr. Hoover doesn't, what can he hope for in this regard from Mr. Hoover's election? If he doesn't and thinks Mr. Hoover does, why, again, this approval of Mr. Hoover's stand, "particularly on the prohibition question"? If he doesn't and thinks Mr. Hoover doesn't, why should he advise friends of modification to vote for Mr. Hoover? And finally, if he does and thinks Mr. Hoover does, where on earth does he get his information?

So far we have been told that we should rely upon the Amendment's friends, not opponents, to modify the terms of its enforcement, and, in our eagerness to find out just who these friendly enemies are, we did not stop to question the premise. Let us now apply the maxim of that premise in an illustration:

I, the friend of modification, Mr. Hoover, Governor Smith, and a gentleman representing the American public are shut in an airless, stinking room. I perceive that we are in a bad way and likely to be in a worse. There are two windows, against one of which a strong wind is blowing. I want some air, but have to depend on Smith or Hoover. Smith is eager to open the window marked Volstead Act and also wants to experiment with the one marked Eighteenth Amendment, on the windy side; Hoover, as far as I can determine from his noncommittal remarks, will leave the windy one alone—he will not comment concerning the other. Dr. Garfield would have me rely on Hoover to let in the air.

The analogy is not quite complete. If I chose Smith instead of Hoover, my chances of getting some air would appear infinitely better. If he succeeded in opening both windows, he would promptly cover the windy one with shutters known as the Ontario Liquor Act, which no modificationist can reasonably object to, and which would serve to exclude a gale known as the Corner Saloon.

So much for Dr. Garfield's first sentence; his second is also a puzzler. He says:

"Certainly those who do not respect the law as it stands cannot be trusted either to modify it or to obey a modified statute."

Again we mysteriously incompetent modificationists must place the work we want accomplished in the hands of the doubtfully friendly enemy. Continuing our analogy, this seems to mean that if I object, yea, because I object to suffocating, I cannot be trusted to try to get a window open, or, if I should open one, I would be still dissatisfied and would presumably jump through the aperture. Paraphrasing again, if a man has an opportunity to exchange a law he does not respect for one that he does, he cannot be trusted to make the exchange; if he should make the exchange he cannot be trusted to obey the law that suits him. O tempora! O mores! What is wrong with this picture?

I have no hesitancy in saying that I am one of those who most emphatically do not respect the present law; who are for temperance and for modification as a step toward it. The assertion that I could not be trusted to modify the law, were I able, or to obey it if modified, presupposes on the part of the asserter an uncanny knowledge of my unconscious realms of mind and a surety of my bad faith.

Coming back to Mr. Hoover, I should like to emphasize again the fact that his opinions on prohibition as set before the voters this fall do not constitute a stand. Eight years ago, in the infancy of prohibition, they might have done so. At that time there could have been no criticism of Mr. Hoover for saying no more than that prohibition was a noble experiment intended to protect the American home, and that he wished it success. But where has Mr. Hoover been, during these eight years that the experiment has been tested, that he has no comments to make concerning its success or failure? It is such comment that is in order at the present time. Most of us will agree that prohibition was a noble experiment. We have known for eight years that it was intended to protect the American home. We might still wish it success, however sure we may be that such success is impossible. The question before the nation now is whether the experiment has succeeded sufficiently to warrant its continuance on the same basis at a tremendous cost of life, health, private liberty, respect for law, and general morality. Governor Smith has unequivocally given his answer to the people, and has proposed a substitute plan which has been tested in Ontario and found eminently successful in maintaining temperance; Mr. Hoover has had nothing to say. Either he has, during the past eight years, cared so little for the state of the American people that he has given insufficient thought to the problem to form an opinion . . . or he is dodging. One or the other of these conclusions is inescapable. In one sentence only in his public utterances on the subject does he intimate that prohibition has been tried for some time:

"A sacred obligation is imposed on the President to secure its honest enforcement and to eliminate the abuses which have grown up around it."

Evidently this is Mr. Hoover's private commission from on high; surely it could not have been meant to apply to the last two Republican Presidents. Elsewhere he speaks as one might have spoken at the christening of the maiden ship Prohibition, in phrases fitly concomitant with the breaking over her stalwart hull of the first bottle of grape juice to be thus used. And he seems blissfully innocent of the knowledge that that same craft, leaky when launched, has now for half a dozen years been floundering helplessly, all but submerged, in a sea of bootleg liquor, and showing now and then to the sun but the limp though tenacious pennons of the W. C. T. U. and the A. S. L., hanging dejectedly from the mainmast.

Dr. Garfield regrets that prohibition has been made a political issue. If Mr.

Hoover is amenable to modification of the Volstead Act, as Dr. Garfield seems to think he is, he could lift this issue out of the campaign, virtually entire, with one straightforward sentence. But, shades of Mark Hanna! Think of the votes! Certainly if Mr. Hoover keeps his political life it will not be because he has been ever ready to lose it. "Let sleeping dogs lie" is the tried and true maxim of success in the ranks of present-day Republicanism. Is it too fantastic to hope that the somnolent electorate may someday, in an hour of restive slumber, overhear those words, and awake?

reaching Flora's Glen, information was brought that the two children of Professor and Mrs. L. E. Brett were either lost, strayed, or stolen. Consequently the trip was given up, and an extensive search was planned. The entire afternoon was spent in a careful inspection of all land lying between Northwest and Petersburg Mountains. When the searchers finally wound their weary way homewards, it was found that the missing children had been accidentally locked in a vestibule and had spent five hours in confinement.

As usual, the neighboring girls' colleges proved a potent attraction, and throughout the day caravans of vehicles traversed the various trails loaded to capacity with the more socially inclined undergraduates. A landmark of the day, which could only be found in this day and age, was the chartering of an aeroplane by two Williams students for a flying visit to Northampton.

The Outing Club will sponsor a trip to the Dome this afternoon, leaving Jesup Hall at 1:00 under the direction of Billie '30. This is open to all students and members of the Faculty. A large number is expected, for the trail has been reported to be in good shape, and the scenery is especially colorful at this time.

R. P. I. DROPS SOCCER GAME TO THE PURPLE

Continuous Bombardment of R. P. I. Goal Finally Nets 1-0 Victory in Last Minute

Only in the last minutes of play did the ball finally make its way through the mass of combatants which jammed the mouth of the R. P. I. goal to save a definitely one-sided game from the monotony of a scoreless tie, when the Purple soccer team won its third consecutive victory on Cole field last Saturday. The second success of the season had been scored over a Pittsfield General Electric line-up in a practice game on the preceding afternoon to the tune of 3-1.

A careful account of the play would resolve itself into an analysis of the reasons why the continuous bombardment of the R. P. I. stronghold resulted in so little scoring. To begin with there was a wind opposing the Williams players throughout the first period which might have presented an explanation had they not had the same wind at their back during the second quarter to no avail. Much more credit is due to Jones, R. P. I. goalie, to the entire red-shirt aggregation, which worked rather well with its back to the wall, and to the Purple assailants, who were wont to pile themselves up into an impenetrable barrier before the threshold of the promised land. In spite of this, half a dozen shots ricocheted from the post or grazed the roof.

The opening period was, if not slow, at least ineffective. Here the wind appeared to play its part, for, while Bright led the forward line on numerous incursions into enemy territory, a somewhat intangible force postponed any serious scoring threat. A more menacing attack launched the second quarter. Bright opened with a try from right corner which turned out to be the first of many broken promises. Well executed relays from Bright to Thoms to Nelson also sunk into oblivion in the midst of the melee. Without the blockade the Williams wings, Thoms and Phelps, frequently eluded their adversaries in shifty manoeuvres.

A reorganized line-up, which played the whole game for Williams, offered promise of increased efficiency in the future, even though it seemed a bit inarticulate at times last Saturday. McKittick, who shifted from right half to replace J. Willnott at inside left, found the responsibilities of his position too much for his footing and "fell down on the job" more literally than figuratively, since he carried home the ball that won the game. Heine assumed the

Messer Addresses 40 Basketball Candidates

In answer to the first call for candidates for the Varsity and Freshman Basketball teams, about 40 men met last Thursday evening in the lobby of the Laseil Gymnasium to hear plans for the coming basketball season as outlined by Coach Guerdon N. Messer and Captain Herbert L. Betham. In addition to most of the veterans of last year's Varsity, and many of the members of the 1931 Freshman team, 30 members of the Class of 1932, most of whom had played basketball before, attended the meeting.

In a short informal talk, Coach Messer emphasized the fact that all men must be up in their studies to be able to play in the games of the coming season. He pointed out that last year much valuable material was lost through ineligibility. Captain Betham, in making a few remarks on basketball in general, stated that basketball was the coming sport at Williams. He pointed out that Yale, Colgate, Lafayette and Columbia are on this year's schedule, while next year the schedule will include Harvard, Yale and Princeton. He made a plea to the Freshmen for interest in basketball, assuring them that they would be well repaid in coming out for the team.

Before adjourning, Coach Messer announced that regular practice would not begin until the fifteenth of November, but that anyone might come in before that time for individual practice.

Professor Odegard Plans Course in Human Thought

Feeling that a course in the history and evolution of human thought would be of tremendous value to a college student, Assistant Professor P. H. Odegard, appointed this year to the Political Science Department, is anxious to organize a group of about ten upperclassmen to meet informally and discuss one classic each week. The course will carry no college credit and for the present will function merely as a discussion group, but it is possible that if the experiment meets with success, this subject, known as General Honors, will be included in the curriculum.

Assistant Professor Odegard has been teaching this subject for the past two years and, previous to that, he studied the evolution of human thought in the General Honors course at Columbia. The work, as outlined, will involve the reading of one volume a week, treating such authors as Aristotle, Lucretius, the Greek Dramatists, Galileo, Kepler, Descartes, Shakespeare, Johnson, and numerous other writers of a later date.

Columbia's victory over Wesleyan was by the decisive score of 31 to 7. Lockwood, the Little Three team's fullback, went over from Columbia's four-yard line after three long passes from Tetley had advanced the ball down the field. Kumpf and Scott starred for the New York team, whose weight and shifty running as a whole brought about Wesleyan's downfall. The Columbia barrage on Wesleyan's goal began early in the game, and two touchdowns were put over by Kumpf, one on a 65-yard run, in the early part of the first half. Well-timed Wesleyan passes scored that team's only touchdown at this point, and after this a steady fire was trained on the Little Three champions' goal, which resulted in three more touchdowns. Announcement was made at the regular October meeting of the Board of Trustees of the creation of two new scholarships, to be known as the "John D. Hass Scholarships", yielding $500 annually to candidates from Pittsfield High School, or in the absence of any students from Pittsfield, to candidates from any Berkshire County High School. These scholarships were made possible by the gift of $30,000 by Miss Alma Hass in honor of Mr. Hass, who was a member of the class of 1911.

The Trustees also announced the appointment of Prof. J. P. Comer as A. Barton Hepburn Professor of Government to succeed Professor Leigh.

R. P. I. TAKES CLOSE RACE FROM HARRIERS

Goodbody's First Place Fails To Save Purple From Defeat by 25-30 Score

Ability to bunch its men at the finish rather than any spectacular and individual running enabled R. P. I. to defeat the Purple cross-country team last Saturday over the slightly muddy Taconic course. Although Goodbody of Williams finished in first place with a comfortable margin, three of the winning combination took the next places, with another following closely behind Guernsey of Williams, thus assuring R. P. I. of the victory.

At the turn, the first ten runners were well bunched, and continued to be so for the next mile and a half. From then on, they began to stretch out into their eventual finishing places. Goodbody of Williams was followed by Captain Day, Smith, and Boice of R. P. I. in the order named. Close on their heels came Guernsey of Williams, who in turn was closely followed by Mosher of R. P. I. The last four places in the scoring were taken by Reynolds, Fitcher, and Captain Moore of Williams, followed by Lewis of R. P. I.

It is to be noted that Captain Moore of Williams, while within easy striking distance of the leaders, had a severe attack of cramps on the last long hill, and that his finish, in the face of no little pain, was one of the most plucky seen here in sometime. Since the Taconic course has been considerably lengthened this year, the time of 29:17 can not be compared with other times.

In Goodbody Coach Seeley has apparently developed a runner who will step into the shoes of Brown, Fauce, Crofts, and Adams of recent years. His performance this Saturday in finishing with a comfortable 75-yard lead over the visiting captain is one of the best that has been seen over the College course for some years, and bodes well for the future.

Following is a summary of the meet: Goodbody (W), Day (R. P. I.), Smith (R. P. I.), Boice (R. P. I.), Guernsey (W), Mosher (R. P. I.), Reynolds (W), Fitcher (W), Moore (W), and Lewis (R. P. I.). Time: 29m., 17s. Score—R. P. I. 25, Williams 30.

'FLONZALEY QUARTET' TO PLAY NEXT SUNDAY

Annual Concert To Mark Farewell of Famous Ensemble Which Is Disbanding

For the last time the students of Williams and the residents of western Massachusetts will have the opportunity Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Chapin Hall to listen to the Flonzaley string quartet which has given an annual concert in Williamstown for 20 years. This is the twenty-fifth and final tour of an organization which has come to be considered the world's greatest chamber ensemble and which is disbanding at the height of its career.

The Flonzaley was first brought to Williamstown 20 years ago by Eugene Delano, '66. Since then it has given an annual concert here in his memory. The importance which has become attached to these concerts and the interest which is taken in them were expressed last year by Mr. C. L. Safford when in reviewing the quartet's concert he said, "To us, it is in the nature of a pilgrimage—at least, it marks a red letter day in the musical life of the college and community."

Of the four musicians who will play Sunday, Adolfo Betti, first violin; Alfred Poehon, second violin; Ivan D'Archambeau, violoncello; and Nicholas Moldavon, cello, the first three have played in the quartet since it was founded in 1903 by E. J. de Cappel. The Flonzaley has played in 500 American cities and made over 20,000 American appearances and 500 in Europe. It is the only quartet to have played with a symphony orchestra. It has played with the Philadelphia orchestra under Leopold Stokowski, the Chicago orchestra under Fredrick Stock and the Minneapolis orchestra under Henri Verbrughen.

It has probably contributed more than any other group to the universal appreciation of chamber music. (Continued on Sixth Page)

'Graphic' To Appear Soon

Consisting entirely of prose work with the exception of three poems written by members of the Class of 1932, the Graphic for October will appear within the next ten days. The feature article, written by Allen '30, portrays village life in New England. Two of the three poems were submitted by Lakin '32 and the third by R. R. Miller '32. A psychological study, a tale of Canada in the days of the Gold Rush, meditations by a camp-fire, and a humorous short story comprise the prose subject matter of this month's Graphic. The contributors to this issue are, in addition to the Freshmen, Heaton '30, Koller, Rabbit, and Wilson '31.

October 'Cow' Due Saturday

Humor in print will make its first appearance at Williams this year when the October issue of the "Purple Cow" is put on sale next Saturday. With a cover by Baxter '30 and a feature, "Campus Portraits", also by an upperclassman, the issue will be entirely a product of the Board, with the exception of one drawing by a freshman. The competition for the members of 1932 will begin with the preparation of the next number, which will be a special issue.

HOWE AND LANGMAID ARE OFFENSIVE STARS

Long Runs, Intercepted Passes, and Fumbles Pave Way for All Points Scored

Believing in the maxim that first impressions are the best, the Williams football team made good use of its first trip to Maine in the history of gridiron competition to register a decisive 20 to 6 victory over Bowdoin College last Saturday afternoon at Brunswick.

The game as a whole was marked by frequent fumbles and penalties, and by long runs, most of the latter accounted for by Howe and Langmaid. Williams' first score came in the first minute of the second period, when Howe's 35-yard run to the two-yard mark enabled Langmaid to carry the ball over. Langmaid kicked the goal to make it 7 to 0, but later in the period Bowdoin threatened to tie the score when Pollock recovered a Williams fumble and

Nye Sets College Record for Taconic Golf Course

In playing the 18 holes of the Taconic Golf course in 75 strokes last Friday afternoon, George L. Nye '29, veteran of last year's Varsity Golf team, established a new College and amateur record for the course. In addition to setting these records, Nye equaled the professional record set previously by Maniro of North Adams.

Playing in the Annual Fall Golf Tournament on the day before his record round, Nye turned in scores of 83 and 78 for the 36 holes, tying P. Cavanagh '29 for the lowest score yet recorded in the tournament. On Friday, Nye, playing in brilliant form, went around the course in 75. His card shows that he was one above par on the 4th, 10th, 11th, and 13th, while on the rest of the holes he was par or under. His score for the record round is as follows:

GIRLS ARE SO STIMULATING

In the Fall a young college man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of houseparties. At Williams the official social season opens next week-end with the well-known, ever changing program: movies, Meadowbrook, football game, tea a dance, and the happy hey-hey of fraternity night life is off once more. Girls—oh, some swell moms—come over the mountains to see us. Smith girls, Poughkeepsie girls, debutantes, and debutantes of 1925. Types for almost every taste: dark and deep; light and shallow; wind-blown, rumble-seat bobs; lots of blonde curls and waves; brunette hair bunched behind; eyes and lips of many shades and many meanings. Girls with a past, girls with a future, and some with practically nothing at all. Laughing, giggling, cooing, and a flashy toothpaste smile. Gay colors (blue hasn't got a thing on red). Let them all swirl around the floor. White arms and black velvet go well together. Every girl has her man, but many men have no girls. These stand around, concentrating, about to pounce.

And how do the boys behave? Their hip-pockets should be empty: girls nowadays are so stimulating. Anyway, a lot of Williams men think so, and now our houseparties have a milder breath than most. Just watch other colleges go to a dance, and you will understand. We would rather have nothing than have brawls. We—the students and the Faculty—decided this several years ago, and all the fraternities are still agreed upon it. This Agreement comes out in THE RECORD at certain times to remind them exactly what it is they are agreed upon.

It is very important that there should never be a disagreement. If there is, fraternity night life will go out, and no more girls will come over the mountains to see us.

UNSUNG HEROES WANTED

The College welcomes back the football team with real joy. Last Saturday's opponent may not have been the Purple's most important one, but the grand victory has very special importance. Besides piling up confidence and spirit in the undergraduates, it has given the team a solid send-off for the tougher half of its schedule. R. P. I. comes to Weston Field next Saturday to meet men who will not be defeated. There is nothing fancy about the new Williams football team; there is nothing fancy about its coach; but they both play football the way it should be played. They deserve their victories. They earn them.

Early-season optimism is not generally considered a good thing for anyone. It is supposed to create over-confidence, cause carelessness in important fine points, and to corrode the heart. But light-headed optimism and the Will to Win are not the same thing: one rests on its laurels; the other is out for more. Williams is out for more.

Around this time, when the season is three games old, a football man is either physically fit, or else on crutches. They are quite inevitable, these mid-season injuries, but for every man hurt another must take his place. The supply, especially in a small college, very often fails to keep pace with the demand, with the result that some of the gaps are never filled. The whole structure is therefore weakened, and the team sags.

It takes a somewhat noble nature to go out for football in the middle of a season. Not every man will go through the drudgery of daily practice when he knows that his greatest chance for glory is probably a seat on the players' bench. But possibly during this difficult period when the hospital list begins to swell, a few able-bodied men will consider that to put on a uniform is in itself sufficient reward for whatever sacrifice may be necessary.

If you can, report to Coach Caldwell this week. He needs more men.

Football Opponents

Meet With Setbacks

downs. A 75-yard run by Liflander and an 89-yard run by Scott after a recovered fumble, featured these later touchdowns.

After squeaking out a close 7-3 victory over Bowdoin last week, Amherst met defeat at the hands of Paverford College, 23 to 13. The Lord Jeffs held the Pennsylvania team to a field goal in the first half, while they were piling up 13 points, but after a scoreless third period an avalanche let loose that resulted in three Haverford touchdowns against a badly bewildered Amherst team. Tripp, the 137-pound halfback of the Haverford team, led his team with two touchdowns and a goal from field. Groskloss, the sizeable backfield man of the Lord Jeffs who was instrumental in the Amherst Freshman victory over the Purple frosh last year, was an outstanding performer for his team, getting one of the touchdowns the Sabrinas scored in the first half. The other was accounted for by fullback R. Wilson. The utter bewilderment of the Amherst team in the fourth quarter can not be laid to any one cause, and is quite surprising to followers of the team.

Union, who will face Williams in Schenectady on November 3, lost to Hobart by the one-sided score of 30 to 0. Providence College, the Purple's opening game opponent, was trampled over by Army, 44 to 0, and M. A. C. defeated the weak Middlebury team by a score of 7 to 0.

A semi-upset occurred in the Amherst-Harvard soccer match when the Cambridge team, fighting a desperate battle, lost to the Lord Jeff eleven by the score of 2 to 1. Stahr of the Amherst team was an outstanding performer, and the work of the defense men in keeping Harvard away from the goal was especially noteworthy. The Williams booters meet Amherst on the day of the football game, November 17.

Are We Right or Are We Right?

After exhaustive rumination, Child Herald, THE RECORD's prodigious sage, severs the tethers of secrecy and bestows upon us the fruition of much cogitation concerning the "big games" on this Saturday's menu. ## GROUSE SHOOTING IN THE HIGHLANDS

SPORT OF THE BEST

For generations the red grouse has brought a host of sportsmen to the moors, whose zest for enjoyment is as keen as their eyesight. Traditionally the BBB OWN MAKE briar pipe has been taken along as a loved companion.

SHOOTING over dogs is the best form of sport—says the real dog lover. He is the very sort who would never think of setting out for a day on the moors without his BBB OWN MAKE briar in his jacket pocket—or more likely, between his teeth.

For generations these extra fine pipes have stood as the ultimate in smoking pleasure. Age-mellowed briar roots—meticulously selected, expertly fashioned into distinctive shapes, individually baked by the old exclusive BBB process, beautifully finished. And you have the traditional mellowness, sweetness and coolness so characteristic of every BBB OWN MAKE.

These fine briar pipes may be had in either the smooth finish or in the sandblasted ripple finish, all marked with a red diamond on the stem. Five dollars the pipe. Wm. Demuth & Co., New York and London. Established 1862.

Frosh Eleven Polishes Offense for Pittsfield

After a week of hard scrimmaging, including a practice tussle with the Second Varsity last Wednesday, in which it not only prevented that aggregation from scoring, but itself intercepted a forward pass for a touchdown, Coach Graham's husky freshman squad will spend the next few days in putting the polishing touches on its speedy offense in preparation for the opening game with Pittsfield High this Saturday. The team has an exceptionally heavy line, with a heavy backfield behind it which carries a great deal of speed, good kicking, and a powerful forward passing combine.

Although no definite first team has been selected, and although none will be chosen until all candidates have had opportunity to show their ability under actual game conditions, Coach Graham has selected a squad A, from which the first team will probably be chosen for next Saturday's game. From all appearances, the freshmen are in fine physical condition, and should make a heavy bid to better the record of last year's aggregation.

A list of the tentative squad A follows: ends, Patterson, Nelson, Foehl, and Hackett; tackles, Ris, Dawson, Winston, and Rowan; guards, Hulse, Wheeler, and Stevens; centers, Ripple, and Hebard; quarterbacks, Senn, Good, and Bartlett; and half-backs and fullback, Fowle, Tuttle, and Engle.

Exhibition at Chapin Library

An exhibit of rare manuscripts, the work of Flemish and French scribes, ranging from the ninth to the fifteenth centuries, was announced recently by the Chapin Library. The copies of the classics comprise a volume of Ovid's complete works, the Aeneid, the Bucolics, and the Georgics of Virgil, from the fifteenth century and a copy of Dante's Inferno from the fourteenth century. The oldest books in the collection are a Latin book of Gospel lessons written in the ninth century and a New Testament written in Greek on Mt. Athos in the year 1295.

Battey Works Are on Display

Through error, the article concerning the current art exhibition in Lawrence Hall which appeared in The Record for October 13 omitted the name of C. H. Battey, whose work in crayon and chalk drawings are being shown conjunctively with the works of Genevieve Cowles and Adlai Hardin. Bruges, Antwerp, and Ghent are presented from a variety of angles in the Battey drawings, buildings and streets comprising most of the scenes. Of especial interest are the works showing the purely modern side of Belgium in railroads.

COLUMBIA CARES FOR THREE STUDENT TYPES

Problem of Adapting Curriculum to Differing Needs Solved, Says Dr. Hawkes

Realizing the theory that all college courses should be adapted wholly to the scholarly type of mind to be fallacious, Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of Columbia, in his annual report to President Nicholas Murray Butler, stated that students are now divided into three classes with regard to their work. Dean Hawkes says, "The new curriculum recognizes the fact that there are three types of students each one of which is worthy and on each one of which the degree of the college will be gladly conferred upon the completion of the requirements for the degrees."

While Dean Hawkes had no solution to offer for the student who expects merely social position from four years at college, he named three types as being worthy of treatment by curricular adjustment. To quote Dean Hawkes:—

"In the first place there is the student who is looking forward to a professional school, and who is pointing his entire college work toward a broad and comprehensive preparation for a life of professional usefulness.

"Closely related to this type is the student who by temperament and ambition is a scholar, and for whom the most effective college course is the one which gives him the opportunity to go far toward the bottom of some field of scholarly interest.

"There is also the man whose best intellectual development is not obtained through research work or even through 'search' work of the kind encouraged by seminars and intensive attention to the cultivation of a narrow field."

"The administrative device which has been adopted automatically to take care of these three types of students consists in the requirements for the degree of sixty so-called maturity credits.

"The solution of the problem of the first two collegiate years hinges upon the organization of a program permitting the student to make a wide survey of various fields of intellectual interests in order that he may determine the direction which he should finally take."

Current Silver Screen Attractions Criticized

For the exclusive patrons of discriminating taste of the Walden Theatre, The Record is printing a critical review of the motion pictures which will be presented in this week's bill. It is to be expected, however, that our readers will not take our word as final, for we must admit that we are sometimes not unbiased in our opinions—in fact, we have a decided leaning toward Billie Dove, no matter how much she may wilt, or flee from a villain, or yield to a hero, and we also think that Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton form the best comedy team east of the Rockies, or rather west.

The first picture on Monday is Tempest, featuring John Barrymore and Camilla Horn. John Barrymore needs no introduction to the cultured Williamstown patrons, and it will be remembered that Camilla Horn, who recently came to this country from Germany, played the part of Marguerite in the German production of Faust to perfection. The cast, then is obviously fine, while the story is the typical Russian theme—a general's daughter, prison, glistening army officers, ragged peasants, and of course, a revolution, and even a bit of bomb throwing by time and torso-chid madmen.

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton take the stage on Tuesday in Fireman, Save My Child. While our memory fails to go back to the time that this picture appeared, it is dimly remembered that it was very amusing, exciting, and even in parts sentimental. This picture may perhaps awake in the hearts of some students memories of the time when they borrowed nickels from their fathers to see this production with the rest of the gang in short pants. However, old wine may be the best wine.

Wednesday's feature is The Yellow Lily with Billie Dove and Clive Brook. What more need be said? That beautiful star of easy virtue could draw a crowded house with final exodus on the next day.

Homic James, starring Laura LaPlante and Charles Delaney, is the picture for Thursday. This is a fairly clever comedy, although rather ancient, with much rushing about in taxis. All the time-worn gags are employed, but the result is surprisingly amusing.

On Friday, William Haines appears in Eccentric Faggot. Mr. Haines is still the horridly fresh youth with the winning personality, the kind that gains a big job after introducing himself to his future boss by covering him with mud from his speeding roadster. The show is very hackneyed, but still very entertaining. Saturday brings again the weekly wild-west show, with the shrieking heroine's being carried off by the bemoustached and two-pistoled villain, and the pursuing posse, led by the sheriff and the determined hero, thundering after on horseback to arrive in the nick of time. Jack Holt and Betty Compson are featured in this picture which is entitled Court Martial. There is plenty of opportunity for shouting and huzzahing and the hissing of the villain.

In addition to straw votes and Hoover and Smith clubs, more specific activity is indicating the interest of the American campus in the coming campaign. Wesleyan debaters are taking the stump under the direction of Professor Snow on the behalf of the Democratic candidate for Congress. A prize essay contest on the Smith candidacy has caught the eye even of Williams students.

With the first issue of Circolino, Italian undergraduate publication, Columbia takes on another ear-mark of the cosmopolitan University. The new paper is the ambitious undertaking of the Columbia Circolo Italiano, corresponding to the language circles at Williams.

W. C. A. WILL START PROGRAM THIS WEEK

However, Work Has Been Started by The Community Religious Work Committee

Although work on the formal program of the year has not yet been started, the Community Religious Work committee of the Williams Christian Association has been active for the past few weeks under the chairmanship of Park '30. At the first Cabinet Meeting, to be held this week, Rohrbach '29, president of the Association will present the revised schedule for 1928-29, and soon after the meeting a circular explaining last year's work and activity cards will be sent out to the student body.

In connection with the religious work already started, various Churches around Williamstown have been supplied with student Sunday School teachers, and Cooke '29 and Fedde '30 have inaugurated several discussion groups. Reeves '32 is engaged in work at the First Baptist Church of North Adams. President Rohrbach has been active since the opening of College in obtaining speakers for various meetings during the winter, among whom is Dr. Bernard A. Bell who will speak in December.

INTERCOLLEGIATES

Intercollegiate air racing will be discussed as the next addition to college "athletics" at the first Intercollegiate Aviation Conference to be held at Yale on October 19 and 20. Yale, Pennsylvania University, M. I. T., and the University of Southern California are the leading spirits.

The Princeton Undergraduate Council has passed a resolution to stop begging by children in local show-houses by discouraging students from giving such alms.

Because Brown students, released from Saturday classes to swell the rooting sections at Harvard and Dartmouth football games, have taken the advantage of the opportunity for a week end and have consistently failed to appear on the side-lines, the privilege has been removed by the dean's office.

Irregular sleep is among the most insidious of undergraduate evils, according to the opening address of President Farrand of Cornell.

Presidential year is being celebrated in the colleges in more ways than one. President Richmond of Union tendered his resignation this fall, and Dr. Barbour, of the Rochester Theological Seminary, has been elected to the presidential chair of Brown. He will take his post in June.

Hitch-hiking in New Jersey has seen its last days, according to the decree of the legislature. In the future it will present a strategically located obstacle to many free undergraduate tours.

Symbolical of differences in atmosphere militarism is now throwing the C. C. N. Y. campus into a furor similar to that which the chapel question caused in Williams two years ago. It has gone further. Communist objectors have been expelled from the institution, and the undergraduate demand for their readmission has been the center of the disturbance this fall.

New Biology Laboratory Dedicated for Wesleyan

Professor Charles M. Child, Wesleyan '90, head of the Biology Department of the University of Chicago, was the chief speaker at the dedication of the Shanklin Laboratory of Biology at Wesleyan University last Friday. President McConaughy of Wesleyan presided at the two exercises, at the new laboratory and in the Memorial Chapel, and Professor E. G. Conklin, of Princeton, and Professor E. C. Schneider of Wesleyan, were the other speakers.

The laboratory, which is a memorial to William Arnold Shanklin, who was President of Wesleyan from 1909 to 1923, is a building of two stories and a ground floor or basement, and is completely equipped with all modern devices for instruction and research in all branches of biology. Special laboratories are provided for students in general biology, comparative anatomy, histology, embryology, and bacteriology, and all of these are provided with the appropriate refrigerating and constant-temperature rooms. It seems that nothing has been overlooked in the way of equipment, special means being provided for storing rain water for filling the tanks of the aquarium room, so that various forms of delicate aquatic life will not be injured by the city water.

Walter Wins in Frosh Cross Country Try-out

Under the direction of Coach Seeley, the Freshmen cross country runners have been having strenuous work-outs for the past three weeks, which culminated in time-trials held last Saturday. A squad of some 25 men ran the trials over the slightly muddy Taconic course, with the winner, D. Walter crossing the line in the fair time of 14:20.

At the half-way mark the runners were bunched closely together, but from then on the leaders began to pull away from the vanguard. The first three runners to enter the track for the finish, at intervals of about twenty yards, were Baker, Davol, and Walter in the order named. Here Walter showed a very pretty sprint, passing Davol and just managing to nose out Baker at the tape. The majority of the remaining runners finished in a bunch some distance after the leaders.

Business Competition Starts

'Cercle Francais' Plans Activity for the Year

With plans to adapt the new policy of making scholastic attainment in French a definite requirement for admission to the Cercle Francais and also to develop closer cooperation between the Faculty and student members, the Cercle Francais will shortly have its first meeting of the year under the following officers: W. H. Collins '29, president, S. L. Faison '29, vice-president, and C. B. Elbrick '29, secretary-treasurer. At this meeting, the Club will work out the details of an extensive drive for membership, especially among the two lower classes, since as many men as meet the requirements will be admitted.

At present, the Cercle is searching for a suitable, permanent meeting place and will possibly rent a room for permanent use. The meetings themselves will be devoted almost completely to intellectual subjects, particularly modern French literature. Reports on present-day French authors and selections from their works will be read, the general aim being to combine modern with usual classical literature.

The Cercle Francais is considering affiliation with the National French Honorary Society, an organization which fills in French circles the same position as the Phi Beta Kappa Society in the general intellectual world. Whether or not the Cercle will join the national society is to be discussed at a later date.

1931 Officers Nominated

The following members of the Class of 1931 have been nominated for class offices for the election which will take place to-night at 7:30 in Jesup Hall: President, Field, Langmaid; Vice-president, Dean, Grosvenor, B. Williams; Secretary, Eynon, Gregg; Treasurer, Beattie, Dougherty; Student Council, Schwartz, Sholes.

Many Colleges Forming Hoover and Smith Clubs

In accordance with the trend of widespread interest being shown in the approaching presidential elections, many eastern colleges, including Harvard, Yale, and Columbia, have formed student political organizations similar to the Hoover club of Williams. Yale and Harvard have arranged for a debate before the opening of the Eastern Intercollegiate Debating League, the topic for argument centering mainly upon the candidacies of Hoover and Smith.

At Columbia a Smith-for-President club was formed last week in order to canvass all possible university votes for that candidate, while at Harvard the student interest and activity during these closing weeks of the campaign will center about the Harvard Union, where an array of nationally prominent speakers will set forth the issues of the campaign in an effort to capture the undergraduate vote.

Underclass Track Meet

The annual Freshman-Sophomore track meet will be run off on Tuesday and Thursday of this week. Those desiring to enter are advised to consult today's Adviser as to the events scheduled for this afternoon.

tion of chamber music in America. In doing this it has introduced in this country the works of Loeffler, Griffes, Maron, Lilienthal and Schelling. It has, also, played in addition to these and the accepted classical composers, Schonburg, Reger, Sealiso, and Stravinsky.

To this group more often than to any similar musical organization has perfection been attributed by the critics of many nations. The Cleveland Press says, "If perfection in ensemble is obtainable, they have obtained it." Concerning one of their Boston concerts, the Transcript said, "Perfection has long been theirs." It is the New York Evening Post which makes the statement, "It is too rarely one hears ensemble playing so perfect in its finish as this." The London Daily Telegraph: "When all has been said in praise of other famous organizations, there is still something to be said which is true of the Flonzaley Quartet alone." In France, the consensus of opinion was expressed by Le Figaro in Paris: "In the finish of its executions, the Flonzaley has attained perfection."

Pittsfield Game
Coupling an increase of speed with their consistently good heading and passing, the Varsity soccer team had little difficulty in defeating the General Electric team from Pittsfield by a decisive 3-1 score when they met the latter on Cole Field last Friday. The contest, which was in the nature of a preliminary to the hard game played with R. P. I. on Saturday, was unbalanced from the beginning, and the varsity, which played only the first half, succeeded in keeping the ball almost continually in their possession and bombarded the visitors' defense from every corner of the field.

Bright's excellent feeding of the forward line from the left half-back position was again a feature of the play, and, with Sherman, he formed a defensive combination which the Pittsfield forwards rarely evaded. The scoring honors were impartially divided between Captain Christie, Neilson, and Phelps, each accounting for a goal. In spite of the apparent one-sidedness of the contest, the electricians worked well together which may be explainable in the fact that the team contained an uncle and his three nephews and an additional pair of brothers. Coach Bullock started the second half with a completely new line-up, and it was in the early minutes of this period that the visitors gained their single tally.

The Purple booters kicked off at 4.30, and, after a few unsuccessful attempts on the part of both teams to get the ball into action, Phelps passed in from the right outside to Captain Christie who deftly headed it into the cage. The ball remained constantly in the opposing territory and, when Christie had failed to score on another pass from the outside, and Bright had twice missed the goal by inches, Neilson got the ball from the center of the line and extricated himself from a scramble in front of the cage to drive in the second score. It was Phelps, however, who furnished the spectacle of the afternoon when he received a long one from Bright and, instead of passing it over to the center forward, hooked it beautifully into the goal from the right corner of the field to complete the varsity's score.

With the second team in the field, the visitors threatened more seriously, and when Middleton, playing out left opened the half by tallying on a pass from the center, it looked as though they might come back to take the game. Middleton got free for several attempts and missed an additional score only by the width of the goal post. The Purple seconds, however, succeeded in holding off further attacks and the game finished without any change in the score.

Purple Triumphs Over Maine Rival

Chapman ran 37 yards on the next play for six points. The try for point, however, failed.

Shortly afterward, Langmaid increased his contribution to the success of the day by intercepting a Bowdoin pass near the 35-yard mark and running over 20 yards to a position from which he again scored on a line plunge in three tries. His successful drop kick made the score 14 to 6 at half time. Bowdoin seriously threatened to score at the end of the third period, but no more points were added to the tally of either team until the game was almost over. Williams rounded out her even twenty points, which became her score for the third time this year, as the result of a twenty-yard pass from Howe to Langmaid, a fifteen yard line plunge by Wheeler, and a clever run over the final marker by Howe.

The opening period was marked by two remarkable runs, averaging fifty yards, both of which would have resulted in touchdowns had not the referee declared a penalty. Langmaid received Stiles' punt on his 40-yard line and in a brilliant dash down the right side of the field crossed the line, only to be called back, as someone on the team had been offside. A few minutes later Putnam, who scored on a 40-yard run after receiving a punt, was recalled for the same reason.

The game opened inauspiciously when, after a few preliminary skirmishes, Bowdoin took the pigskin and started a steady march down the field which, it seemed, nothing would be able to stop. Time after time the Maine backs, Chapman and Stiles leading the way, would rip through the wavering Purple line, made less effective by a Bowdoin forward wall which often proved its worth during the course of the game, for long gains. The tide was finally stemmed, however, and Howe punted out of danger. It was on the answer to this punt that Langmaid made his first bid for fame with a 60 meter spurt to the tape for the first of the Purple twin should-have-been touchdowns. Then with a rapidly bewildering to the spectators six more points became mere phantoms when a lineman's over-eagerness made Putnam's long dash go for naught.

An exchange of punts gave Williams the ball again. After a failure to gain the necessary yardage, Howe booted a spiral so skillfully directed that it rolled to within inches of the home team's goal. Bowdoin was able by kicking to put 40 yards between the ball and her goal line, but her security was short lived, as Howe streaked around left end and was not dropped until a mere three yards kept Williams out of the scoring column. At this point the whistle blew, and 22 men were forced to walk to the far end of the field before the useful Purple halfbacks could plunge past the marker.

Seven points for Williams thus opened the activities of the second period, during which three of the four touchdowns registered during the encounter occurred. After an exchange of punts Morrell received one and ran it back for thirty yards along the side of the field. Stiles attempted a long pass, but it reached Langmaid instead of its intended destination, and Williams had the ball in her own territory. Then occurred the break which gave Bowdoin her score. A Purple back fumbled and dropped the ball, and it found its next resting place in the embrace of Pollock. Chapman, whose work in the backfield has been outstanding all season, was given the spheroid on the 38-yard marker, and he cleverly avoided a number of tacklers to cross the line and save his team from a shutout. Stiles' try for point was slightly wide.

Score—Williams 7, Bowdoin 6. Williams received the kickoff but, failing to gain, was forced to kick. Howe's neat spiral carried almost 60 yards and rolled over the far goal line. Bowdoin lost possession of the ball when Langmaid intercepted a pass and crossed four white lines to within striking distance. Howe tore off ten yards and a penalty contributed five more. Then, on one of his famous finishing-touch line plunges, Langmaid scored. His drop kick sailed true, and the remainder of the half was spent near mid-field.

After an intermission made pleasant by the music of an excellent Bowdoin band, play was resumed. Chapman made first down but the succeeding plays were smeared and Stiles kicked to within such a short distance of the Williams goal that Howe lost no time in punting out of danger. Morrell's line plunges procured a first down, but the try for a field goal was futile. A few plays left Williams with the ball on her 30-yard line. Howe's pass was juggled by its receiver and Stiles intercepted it. Chapman then made Bowdoin assume a threatening aspect by making first down to the quarter-century line, then another to the Purple's ten-yard mark.

After a loss of yardage on a bad center pass, Stiles opened the final quarter with a drop kick which barely trickled to the end line. After punting and regaining the ball Williams looked good for another score when Howe ran 20 yards and almost evaded his tacklers. Events left the Purple again on the offensive in mid-field, and a long heave to Langmaid gained a score of yards. At this point Wheeler was substituted for Chase. The new arrival immediately tore off enough distance to make it goal to gain. Bowdoin's line held for a time but Howe dodged his way over the marker for the final six points. Williams' record of having scored exactly twenty points in every game this season was left unblemished when the try for point hit the crossbar and bounced back.

SMITH CLUB PLANS VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

McKean, Healy, Shoaff, Ely, Chosen Officers at First Meeting; Challenge G. O. P.

With its joint object the promotion of interest in the candidacy of Governor Alfred E. Smith for President and the formulation of principles for an active campaign against the College Hoover Club, the Williams "Smith for President" Club held its first meeting in Jesup Hall on Wednesday afternoon, electing officers and taking other preliminary steps for a systematic campaign. McKean '29 was elected president of the Club, while Healy '29, Shoaff '29, and Ely '30 were chosen for the positions of vice-president, secretary, and treasurer respectively.

John F. McKean is a member of The Record board, chairman of the Honor System Committee, a member of Purple

Key Society, and treasurer of the Class of 1929. Winston Healy is also a member of Purple Key Society, and is secretary of his class. He has been on both the Varsity football and swimming squads for the last three years. John D. Shoaff was a member of his class track team in his Freshman year, and has been on the Varsity squad every season since then. Richard Ely belongs to the Purple Key Society, will be manager of the tennis team this spring, was a member of last year's basketball squad, and last week was elected president of the Class of 1930 for the third time.

Campaign literature, stickers, buttons, and posters were distributed at the meeting, and a collection was taken to defray the publicity expenses of the club. Announcement was made that the Democratic candidate for the Governorship of Massachusetts, General Cole, will speak here this Monday at 4 p. m., in Jesup Hall, and that an effort will be made to bring Colonel H. ### Chapel Department

The attention of the student body is called to the agreement entered into between the student council and the faculty regarding the undergraduate regulation of chapel department. The continuation of the present chapel policy depends upon the cooperation of the undergraduates in living up to this agreement:

  4. General co-operation in service.
- III. Means of enforcement
  1. Six (or any suitable number) senior ushers, to be recommended by the Student Council.
  2. These ushers, acting as instruments of the Council, to use their judgment in warning offenders, at the time of the breach or later, and reporting misdemeanors to the Council.
  3. Upon the discretion of the Council, offenders to be recommended to the Dean for punishment.
  4. Punishment to consist in loss of cuts, probation, or dismissal from College, depending upon the nature of the offense.
  5. All Student Council members are to co-operate in the spirit of this policy.

Freshman Booters to Oppose Williston Team

With the prospect of a hard struggle before them, the Freshman booters will open their season with a game with the strong Williston Academy soccer team to be played on Cole Field at 12.30 this afternoon. All indications point to a severe tussle if the yearlings are to gain the victory, as they will be called upon to face an eleven which has already met four formidable opponents and has administered sound beatings to all, while the frosh have yet to play an outside game.

Williston has defeated Easthampton High, 5-3, Springfield Technical High, 6-0, Holyoke High, 5-2, and Deerfield Academy, 4-2, the last named being the next

FIVE HOUSES LAUNCH FALL SOCIAL SEASON

Two Combinations Will Hold Tea Dances After Game; 80 To Be Entertained

Nearly 100 guests will be entertained by five fraternities during the first house parties of the year which are being held this week-end, while the remaining houses are withholding their festivities until the time of the Wesleyan game. Alpha Delta Phi and Sigma Phi are holding a joint party, as are Delta Kappa Epsilon and Delta Psi; Zeta Psi is entertaining alone.

The Miner-Doyle orchestra will provide the music for the Alpha Delta Phi-Sigma Phi combination both at the tea dance at the house of the former and during the evening at Sigma Phi Place. The second consolidation has secured the services of Lowe's orchestra from Boston. The tea dance will take place at the Delta Kappa Epsilon house, while St. Anthony Hall will be the scene of the evening feature. Ruby Newman's orchestra from the Ritz Carlton Hotel, Boston will play during the evening at the home of Zeta Psi, where no tea dance is planned.

'FLONZALEY QUARTET' TO PLAY HERE SUNDAY

Famous Artists Now on Last Tour To Hold Farewell Concert In Chapin Hall

Making its farewell appearance in Williamstown, the Flonzaley quartet will hold its annual concert of chamber music in Chapin Hall at 3 p. m. this Sunday. For twenty years this group, which has come to be recognized as the world's greatest Chamber ensemble, has been coming here, and its passing will be marked by deep regret on the part of all those who have been privileged to hear it in previous years.

Of the four musicians who will play Sunday, Adolfo Betti, first violin; Alfred Poehon, second violin; Ivan D'Arbanbeau, violoncello, and Nicholas Moldavon, cello, the first three have played in the quartet since it was founded in 1903 by E. J. de Cappet. The Flonzaley was first brought to Williamstown in 1911 through the courtesy of Eugene Delano '66, and its annual concerts here have been continued in his memory since his death in 1920.

It has played an important part in the popularization of chamber music in this country, and in so doing has introduced the works of Loeffler, Griffes, Mnron, Lilienthal, and Schelling. To Williams College and Williamstown its annual concert has become the high spot of the musical year, and they look forward with both anticipation and regret to this, its last appearance here.

Harriers to Encounter Hamilton Runners Today

In the second meet of the season and the first one away from home the Purple harriers are scheduled to run the Hamilton cross country team at Clinton, N. Y., at 1.00 p. m. today. No prophecy can be made as to the results of the meet, although both teams suffered defeats in their first encounters, Williams having lost to R. P. I., 30-25, and Hamilton, to St. Stephens, 21-15.

Capt. Seely expects that Capt. Moore and Herrick '29, J. Chapman, Fitcher, and E. V. Reynolds '30, and Goodbody and Guernsey '31 will represent Williams, while Crane, Douglas, Grub, Isaac, Lathrop, and White will compose the Hamilton team.

HAMILTON WILL FACE PURPLE SOCCER TEAM

Buff and Blue Has Already Beaten Cornell, 4-3; Williams Still Has Clean Slate

Meeting the strongest opposition thus far encountered, the Varsity soccer team will endeavor to keep its slate clean in a clash with Hamilton, for the third game of the season, at 1.00 p. m. this afternoon on Cole Field. Practically the same lineup will start the game today as that of last week, the team having been particularly fortunate in not having been hampered by injuries to any of the players.

Hamilton brings an unusually strong combination this year. The team defeated Cornell, 4-3, in its only game so far with an outside college. It succumbed last week to Clark Mills by a 5-2 score, but this professional organization is composed of first-rate players, mostly of Welsh extraction, who have been reared on soccer. Against Cornell the forward combination of Captain Chan, Carpenter, and Ingalls performed in fine style.

Following is the probable line-up of the two teams:

WILLIAMS		HAMILTON
Phelps	r.o.	Ferry
Christie (Capt.)	i.r.	Ingalls
Neilson	e.	Carpenter
Willmott, J.	i.l.	Chan (Capt.)
Thoms	e.l.	Lawton
Heine	r.h.f.	Montgomery
Bright	e.h.b.	Miller
Strong	i.h.b.	Dutcher
Leber	r.f.	Kinsey
Gregory	i.f.	Webster
Willmott, S.	g.	Normile

Substitutes: WILLIAMS—McKittick, Sherman, Travers; HAMILTON—Kavakos, Hartman.

1932 Harriers to Open Season Against Albany

Filling an open date in the Freshman cross-country schedule unexpectedly, the Albany High School team will come to Williamstown today to engage the 1932 harriers at 1.00 p. m., in the first meet of the latter's season. The strength of the New York school's team is not known, this being the first meeting between the two institutions in cross-country, but Coach Seely is optimistic, depending on his lead-off men, Porter, Roy, and Walters to head the run.

After three weeks of training and trials held last Thursday, the following men have been selected as the final line-up: 1, Porter; 2, Roy; 3, Walters; 4, Burnett; 5, Hadley; 6, Davoe; 7, Swift; 8, Estabrook; 9, Searl; 10, Palms; 11, Reeves; 12, Turner, and 13, Skinner.

GROSKIN IS ELECTED 1930 VICE-PRESIDENT

Other Offices Filled by Cuddeback and Thoms; Jameson, L. Thun on Honor System

Concluding the election of officers, after a postponement from a previous meeting, the Class of 1930, last Monday evening, elected Jerome Chester Groskin of Wynnewood, Pa., Charles Van Inwegen Cuddeback of Port Jervis, N. Y., and Frank Rodgers Thoms of Brooklyn, N. Y., to the offices of vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively. Richard Ely had already been elected president. ## WILLIAMS AND R. P. I. TO CLASH HERE TODAY

Purple Team Will Have To Display Power To Keep Its Record Unblemished

BROWN IS BACK IN LINE-UP

Engineers Have Registered Two Wins; Lost to St. Lawrence by Two Points

After a week of disappointing practice, during which the Freshman team held the varsity to a scoreless tie, the Williams eleven will try to gain their fourth straight victory of the 1928 season, when they meet R. P. I. on Weston Field at 2.30 today. Although the Troy engineers have been deprived of much good material through ineligibility, and have already dropped a game to St. Lawrence by the narrow margin of two points, they are considerably stronger than last year when the Purple took their measure 34-7 in the opening game of the season, and promise an interesting contest this afternoon.

Coach Glen Killinger of the visitors had a number of veterans on hand at the beginning of practice, but six players of the last squad, who were counted on to strengthen this year's team, have been forced out of the game through ineligibility and injuries. In addition to this, the three-year rule was inaugurated this fall, and kept several promising freshmen from playing. In the first game, R. P. I. crushed Cooper Union by a 32-0 score, but the following week St. Lawrence scored two touchdowns in the first half to win a 14-12 decision, when the Troy team missed both points after touchdown.

Clarkson was the second victim of the visitors, being on the short end of a 13-4 score. In all three games played to date, the work of Capt. Daday, who is in the backfield for the third year, Ferguson, and Diadario ha. stood out on the offense, while Kennedy has proven himself a bulwark of strength in the line, smearing many plays before they were started. The defeat at the hands of St. Lawrence was due to poor defensive work in the first half and the failure to kick the needed points after touchdown. In the last half R. P. I. held their opponents scoreless, and were continually threatening to score themselves.

With the return of Brown to the backfield, and the addition of three veterans, Gailer, Healy, and D. Smith, to the squad, the Williams team appeared considerably stronger on paper, but the work of the past week has not justified these expectations. The passing has been especially weak, while the team as a whole has shown no pep. As yet, the eleven has not played up to its possibilities, and its success has been marked by individual stars rather than team play, so that several changes are expected in Saturday's line-up.

On Wednesday, the Varsity had a long scrimmage against the 1932 team, the score being a 0-0 tie. Late in the game, 15-yd. passes from Brown to Langmaid carried the ball deep into the yearling's

Vermont Artists to Hold Exhibition in Lawrence

Friday, Oct. 19—Three well-known contemporary artists, Herbert Meyer, Mary S. Powers, and H. E. Schnakenberg, will be present today at the opening of an exhibition of a number of their works in Lawrence Hall. The exhibition, consisting principally of landscapes and flower studies done in water colors and pastels, with a few small pieces of sculpture by Mrs. Harriet Miller, will continue until October 31. Although these artists do much of their work in Dorset and Manchester, Vermont, the works of Mr. Meyer are exhibited annually at the Macbeth and Balchcock Galleries in New York, and Mrs. Miller's pieces have been on exhibit at the Paris Salon. In connection with Mr. Schnakenberg's exhibition at the Kraushaar Galleries last year, The Arts said of his work: "Mr. Schnakenberg has made steady progress since he first showed his work publicly. Devoid of mannerism, he is a direct, faithful, and serious painter, thorough, and devoted to the realities. Portraits, landscapes, still-lives, and watercolors all come within his range. No one can fail to respect his willingness to carry things through, which he does with steadily increasing ability."

NO MORE PEERADES—

We have put aside childish things—by a unanimous vote of the Student Council. The Freshman Peerade is no more. No longer will the treacherous assumption that this performance amuses the Williams boys compromise our longed-for sophistication. No longer must we practice that casual smile with which to assure the disillusioned creature at our side that this is not our Williams—just a tradition, you know—the alumni.

The alumni had more ingenuity or more naivete. We need not argue which. Sophistication permits of neither, and so another tradition goes. The dropping of traditions and the decline of reverence and spirit which is alleged to go with it is not a new trick sprung by the rising generation. Even the cave man would have thought it crude to respect all the accumulated traditions of his Neolithic ancestors. What, then, can we expect of a college student backed by a century and a half of alumni? We had no reverence for the Peerade.

The mark of distinction (if there is any, and we do so hope there is!) between our own breaking with the past and the reformings of other days is that we have no desire to reform. They have traded new traditions for old. We wish to leave no traditions behind us, believing them superstitions—crude (and in some cases expensive). But the forming of traditions creeps insidiously upon one; we must take care lest we make a tradition of our sophistication.

Now as a matter of fact we have put aside childish things, not because we don't like them (confess that we will rather miss our Peerade), nor because they are too expensive (the boys will pay a good price even, or especially, for childish things), but because this one particular thing is no longer worth the cost, in money, in effort, or, if you like, in "atmosphere". In such discrimination lies the impartial sophistication with which, under the leadership of the Student Council, we may carry on to the downfall of all traditions, old or new, conservative or liberal, and hence to the salvation of mankind and Williams College.

—BUT MORE ROPE PULLS

Perhaps the bustle of modern life and the addition of the automobile to the student's wardrobe have been responsible for the decreasing interest in traditions of inter-class rivalry. Twenty-five years ago, undergraduates rarely left Williamstown except when they travelled in a body to an Amherst or Wesleyan game. But today a semester is considered unbearable without at least three week-ends and many mad dashes to nearby places. This may be a natural and inevitable result of Twentieth Century civilization, but we hope that it does not mean the abolishment of all our traditions.

To show that we are completely destructive, we temper our joy at the death of the Peerade with a plea for the resuscitation of the Rope Pull. If this last remnant of inter-class rivalry lacks that old-time spontaneity, at least a gentle push is usually enough to get it going. It still manages to make a noise somewhat fiercer than a purr, to create a rumpus somewhat more masculine than a pillow fight.

Much water has passed under the Green River bridge since the last Rope Pull, but perhaps the smell of the hemp will be enough to cause at least a ripple upon the calm (and chilly) surface. Let 1931 and 1932 pitch their camps on these venerable shores, and pull each other in! Let them scatter the sleepy fishes and stir those muddy waters once again. They may get wet—but they will find the Green River preferable to the Peerade.

The Editorial Board of THE WILLIAMS RECORD announces with regret the resignation of Nathaniel Gorham, Jr., '30.

COMMUNICATION

Although communications may be published unsigned if so requested, the name of the writer must in every case be submitted to the editor. The Board assumes no responsibility, however, for the facts as stated nor for the opinions expressed in this department.

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

About twice every year some one of your staff, either in an editorial or in a news item, makes a statement that is not supported by facts, and is inexcusable for the reason that the statement may be easily checked up, and the exact truth ascertained.

In THE RECORD of the 16th instand, the account of the Bowdoin game begins with the unsupported statement the Saturday's game marked Williams' first athletic invasion of Maine.

There are numbers of persons in Williamstown who distinctly recall Williams' football game with Bowdoin in Portland, Maine, when Orton Brown led his team to a 50 to 0 victory there early in November, 1890.

The college periodicals of that time, to say nothing of the Athletic Council's "Statistics of Intercollegiate Contests", are certainly available for a record of this event; and, as I have said above, more than one person in town has a memory, and an accurate one, of things that happened farther back than the day before yesterday.

Please use a little care when you make reference to events long past, and be sure of your facts.

Very truly,
William S. Cooper '84

Erratum

In the notice referring to the foundation of the "John D. Hays Scholarships Fund", which appeared in The Record of October fifteenth, a mistake was made in the principal amount of the fund. The correct amount of the fund is $20,000, and not $30,000 as was stated.Band Is Organized for Appearance on Nov. 10Strengthened by the addition of several new members, the College band, which was inaugurated last year during the football season, is conducting weekly practices on Sunday evenings in Chapin Hall under the direction of Mr. Safford. This new organization, which has had several short-lived predecessors in the history of Williams, at present comprises 16 men, and will make its first appearance on November 10, when it will play at the Wesleyan game, and probably also accompany the team to Amherst for the final game of the year.The band was quite active after its organization last year, furnishing popular music and college songs at several of the football games and during the basketball season. It is interesting to note that Amherst has recently given considerable impetus to a newly-founded student band, having hired the director of the famous Yale University band for its leader, with the expectation of adding spirit to the football games this fall.Five Reach Fifth Round in Frosh Tennis TourneyFurther progress was made this week in the Freshman Tennis Tournament, with the fifth round brackets filled. The play was marked by two very close and interesting matches, in which Baker defeated

Lederer, 6-2, 4-6, 8-6, and Beal defeated
Burnett, 6-1, 7-9, 6-1, to gain their respective fifth round places.The other three men who enter the fifth round are Good, by winning from Myers,
6-3, 6-3, Boyce, by winning from Levine,
6-1, 6-3, and Thayer, who defeated Sherwood 6-2, 6-2. Three more of the places will be filled by the winners of the fourth round matches between Doughty and Zalles, Harris and Goldman, and Parker and Alexander. At present the whole tournament is being delayed by the failure to complete the third round matches between Otto and Kent, Warner and Rose, and Dewey and Roy, the winners to meet Hobson, McClaren, and Patterson, respectively.

COLLEGE NOTES

Competition for 1932 positions on the board of the Williams News Bureau was started Tuesday noon with four freshmen entering. The competition will last about a month with one or two men to be elected to the board at that time. The men in the competition are: Hackett, Hamilton, Sellery, and Tonks.Opening their season last Saturday at the Plymouth Inn at Northampton, the Williams Purple Knights Orchestra displayed much ability and promise. Plans for this fall include a large number of engagements, with the date of November 10th definitely reserved for the Zeta Psi dance at Dartmouth College.In view of the contemplated Christmas trip, three additions have recently been made to the orchestra: Davidson, '29, and Bramley and Yarnelle, '32. The complete list of members and the instruments they play is as follows: Davidson, Thurston, Yarnelle—saxophones; Bramley and Dickerson—trumpets; Chamberlain—trombone; Chapman—piano; Amerling—drums; Lapey—bass horn; and Webster —banjo.Rawley Hobson '32 has been pledged to the Delta Upsilon Fraternity.Fred Peters '32 has been pledged to the Kappa Alpha Fraternity.1932 FOOTBALL TEAM
OPENS SEASON TODAYPittsfield High School Furnishes Opposition for Fast and Experienced FroshFollowing three weeks of intensive practice the freshman football team will open its season this afternoon at 12.30 on Cole Field with a game against Pittsfield High School, conquerors of last year's yearlings.
Coach Graham has spent the previous week sifting out the wealth of material which is on hand and has a combination ready which should repeat the trick of the 1931 team and come through the season undefeated.Starting the training slowly, Coach Graham has been increasing the length and stiffness of the workouts until his men are in mid-season condition. Scrimmages with the varsity have helped the yearlings to prepare for today's game and have given them the necessary experience which they needed. Last Saturday the squad held a practice game while the varsity was out of town. The place kicks of Tuttle and Dawson together with the punting and running of Gowle were notable features.The work in the line of Tuttle at center and Dawson at tackle was also noticeable as was the fine showing made by the ends, Fohl and Patterson. The Varsity scrimmage which was held on Wednesday showed up the frosh to a good advantage.
Tuttle started the afternoon by place kicking over the goal line and his teammates kept up the spectacular work by refusing to let the Varsity score. The running of Fowle was a feature. Wood, playing at right tackle, broke through the Varsity line time and again to throw the upperclassmen for a loss.The Pittsfield High School team is rated as one of the strongest in the Berkshires and has furnished the former freshmen teams with plenty of competition. Little information could be gained about the present team, except that they have a majority of their letter men back and will present a large, fast team well versed in football science.The Williams 1932 line-up is as follows:
or Wheeler, right guard; Wood, right tackle; Patterson, right end; Sem, quar-
half; Good, fullback.Frosh Tie Sophomores in Class Soccer SeriesOvercoming their opponents' one game lead, the Freshman soccer team has again tied the score in the 1931-32 soccer series by defeating the second-year men in the game played on Cole Field last Tuesday afternoon by a 4-2 score. The first game, which was marked by good team-work on both sides, ended with the score tied at two all, while Dunn's two goals gave the victory and the lead to the sophomores in the second encounter, the final count being 2-1.The freshmen, however, showed considerable improvement in the third contest, and were able to secure the victory by a safe margin. The series is to consist of five games, the last one being scheduled for October 23, and the team winning three encounters will be given the championship.
As the series now stands, the two teams are tied, but the yearlings appear to have a slight edge, having scored seven goals to their opponents' six.

Notice

The attention of the students is called by College Treasurer Hoyt to the fact that the common practice of replacing burned out fuses with others of higher amperage than the insurance requirements allow is necessarily for-bidden as exceedingly dangerous. Regular inspection of the fuse boxes will be made at stated intervals and the men found guilty of such practice will be reported to the Dean for discipline.THE

The remaining first round matches must be played by October 20.

Sophomores Earn Big Lead in 1931-32 Track

Victories in four out of five events, and nine out of the 12 places won, was the majority by which the sophomores showed their superiority over their freshman rivals in the first events to be run off in the 1931-1932 track meet, which were held on Weston Field last Tuesday. Dougherty, Lewis, Sessions, F. Bartow '31, and Lieber '32 won first places in the 120-yard hurdles, the mile run, the 440-yard dash, the 100-yard dash, and the high jump respectively.

Good time was made in all of the races, and in the high jump Lieber cleared the unusually good height of 5 feet, 8 inches, although officially no more than 5 feet, 6 inches, because this was all that was necessary to win. Lewis won the mile in 5:04.5 with ease, while in the century Bartow breasted the tape a scant foot ahead of Dougherty in the time of 10.5 seconds. Sessions won a hard 440 in 58.6, and Dougherty came in far ahead in the high hurdles in 16.1.

The summary:
120-yard high hurdles—Won by Dougherty '31; Lewis '31, second. Time, 16.1 seconds.

Mile run—Won by Lewis '31; Reynolds '31, second; Suffern '31, third. Time, 5 minutes, 4.5 seconds.

440-yard dash—Won by Sessions '31; Kimball '31, second; Estabrook '32, third. Time, 58.6 seconds.

100-yard dash—Won by Bartow '31; Dougherty '31, second; Jacobs '31, third. Time, 10.5 seconds.

High jump—Won by Lieber '32; Davidson '31 and Patterson '32 tied for second; Meier '31, third. Height, 5 feet, 6 inches.

Thompson Course Plans Only Two Performances

Because of the number of other attractions being offered here this year, there will be only two numbers of the Thompson course before Christmas vacation according to Prof. Weston. These will be the

PROFESSOR K. E. WESTON
Director of the Thompson Course

Yale Puppeteers on November 23 and Andreina Naterkessr Hyacinthe Barton, pianist, December 14.

In the past a large number of Thompson entertainments have been before Christmas due to the fact that most of the musicians prefer to come here in the fall. This year the Roth, Flonzaley and Marine band concerts have fairly well filled up the season.

The Puppeteers scored a very distinct success here last year with their program, and they are being re-booked in response to public interest in this art. Mrs. Barton, before her marriage was, under her maiden name, a well known concert pianist.

COLLEGE NOTE

With the establishment of R. L. Ahearn, president of the Springfield Airlines Inc., and his plane in Williamstown, undergraduates now have a permanent opportunity to travel by plane to neighboring points with a great saving in time. Already two juniors have flown to Northampton, and last Saturday, Beach, '29, having missed a train at the B. & M. station hurried to the flying field, engaged the plane and was taken to Schenectady in 35 minutes where he was able to catch his train. The return trip only took 20 minutes.

In spite of the fact that THE RECORD in its last issue has made various prophecies concerning scores of future intercollegiate football contests, Joe Godfrey Jr., sports writer, brings guessing a little nearer home in the November number of College Humor. Mr. Godfrey has gone so far as to predict a 20-7 defeat for Williams at the hands of Columbia on October 27, and also adds that the Royal Purple will go down in disgrace in its game with Amherst on November 17 by a score of 10-0.

C. E. Strong, Jr., '30, A. M. Lawton '31 and C. A. Bacz, Jr., '32 have been pledged to the Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity.

George Read '32 has been pledged to the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

ALUMNI NOTES

Dr. and Mrs. Stuart Patterson of New York City have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Charlotte Hopkins Patterson, to Barton Bruce Griffin, '31, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Griffin of Riverdale-on-Hudson. Miss Patterson, whose wedding will take place during the latter part of November, is a great-granddaughter of President Mark Hopkins of Williams, and Mr. Griffin is a member of the Williams Chapter of the Kappa Alpha Society, and is now with the American Brass Company in Waterbury, Conn.

Smith Club Plans Vigorous Campaign

Lieutenant-Governor of New York and running-mate of Franklin D. Roosevelt, to speak before the College in the immediate future.

After various other matters concerning the future of the club had been settled, a resolution was passed to the effect that a challenge be issued to the local Hoover Club to debate on the merits of the two candidates. A telegram from Alfred E. Smith arrived shortly after the termination of the meeting, expressing gratification for the support and cooperation shown by the club.

Remarkable enthusiasm was manifested at the meeting, and the interest and loyalty shown in behalf of the Democratic nominee bodes well for the Smith for President Club. Approximately 80 Democrats and "Smith Republicans" turned out for the first meeting of the Smith Club, and it may safely be predicted that this spirit will result in a successful campaign in the College.

A partial list of those men present at the meeting is as follows: Adsit, Alexander, Allen, Andersen, Ashley, Baird, L. Brown, R. Brown, Bryan, Cannon, Case, R. Chapman, Connard, Cook, Dawson, Dunlop, Elbrick, Ely, Erdwurm, Forbes, Foster, Georgi, Halley, Hamilton, H. Harmon, Hauget, Healy, Henninger, Hood, Howse, Hutton, Inverso, Jameson, Lane, Lees, J. ## Cavanagh and Nye '29 Still Lead in Tourney

Of the nine completed scores turned in thus far in the Annual Fall Golf Tournament those of Cavanagh and Nye '29, who are tied at 161 for 36 holes, still lead their nearest competitor by six strokes. A card of 167 was turned in by Swineheart '32, while Hart '30 and Nye '32 were close on his heels with records of 171 and 172 respectively.

Scores of 176, 180, 182, and 188 were turned in by Williams '31, P. Williams '30, Bryant '30, and Cuddeback '30, and five matches remain half finished, their first rounds resulting as follows: Southgate '31, 83; Nicolls and Williams '29, 87; Lee '32, 97; and Capps '31, 99. These matches must be finished up by Sunday afternoon as the greens are to be taken up thereafter.

opponent on the end of the 1932 eleven. To contrast with this excellent record, the freshmen have only their showing against the sophomores in the inter-class series, which is tied at this writing. However, they have shown considerable improvement of late, and may be counted on to put forth their best in today's encounter. The tentative starting line-ups are as follows:

'LONG TRAIL' CROSSED BY TWO SOPHOMORES

Cannon and Guernsey Spend Three Weeks of Summer Hiking
Over Famous Trail

Starting out from Williamstown at the close of the examination period last June, John Cannon and Jackson Guernsey '31, members of the Williams Outing Club, spent the first three weeks of their summer vacation in hiking over the Long Trail which extends from the Massachusetts-Vermont State line to the Canadian Border. In crossing 30 Vermont peaks, this famous trail led the hikers along the very sky-lines of the Green Mountain State.

The Long Trail is maintained by the Green Mountain Club of Vermont whose members have erected cabins and shelters at convenient points along the trail. Though these stations were found to be in excellent condition, the trail itself presented certain difficulties where the Vermont flood had washed away all traces of the path and where the undergrowth, waist-high in some places, had spread across the hikers' route. These difficulties however, were to be expected on any hiking trip and were overcome by referring to the maps, furnished by the Vermont club, and by the aid of information received at the occasional farm houses along the way. These farms also served to vary the routine of sleeping out-of-doors in three-sided shelters and were a source of supply to the hikers who naturally could not carry provisions sufficient for a 270-mile journey.

On Killington Mountain, Cannon and Guernsey met Douglas Vernon, President of the Williams Outing Club in 1927 and one of the authors of the "Mountains of Eph". Vernon was in charge of the supply station there and he informed the two men that they were the third party to go over the trail during the summer. At the more famous points such as Killington Mountain, Mount Mansfield, Sherbourne Pass and The Monroe Sky-line the hikers stopped to explore the surrounding country.

One of the most famous wilderness paths in New England, the Long Trail offers itself to everyone who enjoys hiking and camping and who wants to spend a vacation out-of-doors.

WORLD NEWS SUMMARY

Amid huzzahs of waiting mobs, the "Graf Zeppelin" arrived at Lakehurst. A son of Dr. Eckener, commander of ship, received particular ovation. He not only mended broken fin in the middle of the Atlantic but looks like the famed Col. Lindbergh.

Boston has acclaimed Hoover and wet St. Louis has greeted Smith with an uproar. After 150 years of discussion the tariff continues to receive much attention. The "whispering campaign" is continued by loyal followers of both nominees.

Col. Charles Lindbergh's indifference to the fair sex is said to be changing. The cause of this dives like an otter, swims like a nymph and is good for sore eyes.

Wesleyan freshmen joined sophomores at a banquet without the proper invitation. Result—fresh nite the banquet, broke crockery, and repulsed hosts forcibly.

Will Rogers said his show couldn't compete with politicians. The latter charge nothing, the former six-sixty. "Political leaders even conscript people to make 'em go and listen to them", wailed Will.

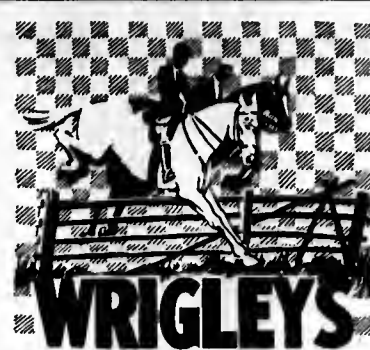

A Jew in Latvia escaped a sentence to death for murder by being infected with leprosy and used for experimental purposes. Maybe he'll be cured, maybe not. Will those opposed to capital punishment take notice.

Infirmity Patients

Goodwin '30 and Taylor '32 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. It a student becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

Cornelia Otis Skinner

The Business Woman's Club of Pittsfield will present Cornelia Otis Skinner in a series of character sketches at the Colonial Theatre on Wednesday evening, October 24 at 8.15 p. m. Miss Skinner is the daughter of the well known actor, Otis Skinner, and is an outstanding entertainment attraction. At midyears he was chosen to succeed Ralph E. Swanson as class president. Langmaid comes from Loomis where he was a member of the football, hockey, and baseball teams. Last year he represented his class in all of these sports and was elected class treasurer. He is a member of the Varsity football team. Jenks was president and valedictorian of his class at Mount Vernon High School, and since coming to Williams has become a member of the board of THE RECORD and secretary of the Commons Club.

After captaining the Glen Ridge High School track team, Dougherty was chosen to lead the Williams 1931 runners last season. He is also a member of the Glee and Mandolin Clubs. Schwartz, coming from St. Paul's Academy, captained the Freshman football team, and won his numerals in hockey and baseball. He is a member of the Varsity football team this fall.

Peerade Abolished by Student Council

the business of automobiles, chapel, the Freshman Peerade, house party rules and petitions, and the College Calendar agency.

Attention was called to the fact that the student body is on probation as regard automobiles, and that the continuation of the present policy by the trustees depends upon the student adherence to the rules regarding the owning and driving of cars. The Council members were also asked to cooperate with the ushers in the enforcement of deportment in chapel in accordance with the agreement drawn up two years ago. By a unanimous vote, the Freshman Peerade was abolished, because it was felt "detrimental to Williams, lacking in humor, an unnecessary expense to the Freshmen, and outgrown by the college through its lack of spontaneity." House party petitions were granted to Delta Psi and Delta Kappa Epsilon, Alpha Delta Phi and Sigma Phi, and Zeta Psi. R. Inverso '30 was awarded the Calendar agency.

The following resolution was also adopted at this first meeting of the Council: "We agree on our honor that neither as individuals nor as members of any organization shall we be moved by personal or partisan influences in relation to matters pertaining to the Student Council and to the interests of Williams College."

territory, but any attempts to score through the line were effectively stopped. Three times the first team was able to reach the five-yard line, but lost it on downs. Brown starred for the first team, while Smith, who was substituted for Putnam at quarterback, also played a good game. A cut in the squad Thursday reduced it to 30 players, including four ends, twelve backs, and fourteen linemen.

The varsity squad is as follows: Capt. Andersen, Ashby, R. Brown, Chase, Coughlin, Deming, Eisner, Gardner, Gailer, Healy, F. Hood, Howe, Langmaid, Lobo, Lasell, McAllister, L. K. Miller, Muller, Newman, Putnam, Reiff, Stayman, D. A. Smith, Schwartz, Trauernicht, Williams, Watson, Wheeler, Stuart.

The probable line-ups are as follows:

Three Triumphant Yankees conduct the Blindfold test . . . and MILLER HUGGINS picks OLD GOLD

The Babe and Lou here will tell you that there is only one way to choose a pitcher . . . and that's to send him into the box and let him twirl a few innings.

So the best way to choose a cigarette is to put them all through their paces in the blindfold test.

In the test I have just made, OLD GOLD played right into my mitt. Its zippy flavor and mellow smoothness couldn't be touched by the other three brands.

FLONZALEY QUARTET GIVES FINAL RECITAL

Famous String Ensemble Made Its Farewell Appearance Here Last Sunday

(Courtesy of Mark Harris '29)

The Flonzaley Quartet, now on its farewell tour of the United States, has appeared for the last time at Williams. The Roth Quartet, on its initial tour of the country, recently played at Williams for the first time. The relation of these facts induces one to both analysis and speculation, yet the greatest opportunity is for thankfulness, a rare attitude in our day. It is true that we must give up wonderful perfection, the fully acknowledged attainment of the Flonzaley Quartet. For recompense, we have the startling actuality and as yet unmeasured potentiality of the Roth string ensemble. What a fortunate circumstance. How dull we should be to take it for granted.

The reviewer had some such notions as these in his head when he went to the Flonzaley recital last Sunday afternoon. In consequence he could not bring himself to snoop suspiciously over the iridescent surface of the music, nor stab about amid the deep and sometimes peerless structures of Beethoven and Schubert. He heard great music superbly well played. Further comment can be little more than particularization.

However, one of two less generalized observations claim attention. One hears it said (the writer has said something of the sort himself) that as a result of such long association as performers and friends the members of the Flonzaley quartet have crystallized the emotional content of their playing to a degree which has at times seriously detracted from its merit. This tendency has been clearly evident in performances at Williams. It cannot be said of the last recital. Perhaps the artists were conscious of a farewell atmosphere, perhaps, it being early in the musical season, they are as yet comparatively fresh, or it may be that the program was emotionally congenial. At any rate there was sufficient spontaneity and vigor, but never an excess of either. The Roth Quartet must yield place as regards purity and balance in conception and execution. Then there was the rare charm of the work by Glazounov. It is an early composition, youthful and high spirited. Yet it has sustained coherence and a marked span of phrase to which the artists brought adequate and pliant power. One felt that there was reserve energy behind the performance not only of the Russian music, but of the entire program, the first two movements of the Beethoven excepted.

Frosh Harriers Lose in Opener to Albany, 45-18

With only one Williams runner among the first eight finishers, the Freshman cross country team lost its opening race to the harriers from Albany High School last Saturday afternoon over the Taconic course. Although coming in 50 yards behind the first two New Yorkers, Ayers and Kieciniski, the newly-elected captain of the freshmen, Roy, finished in good shape, but he was the only Purple contender to cross the line until the last Albany runner had come in.

Over the two and one half mile course, half the length of the Varsity run, Ayers and Kieciniski held together all the way, while Roy pulled out of the bunched Albany runners to take third place. The next Williams man, Potter, did not arrive for two minutes after Snyder the seventh opponent, scored. Following is a summary of the meet: Ayers (A), Kieciniski (A), Roy (W), Dayton (A), Filippona (A), Eckel (A), T. Kieciniski (A), Snyder (A), Potter (W), Walters (W), Burnett (W), Hadley (W). Time: 13 m., 1.7 s. Score: Albany 18, Williams Freshmen 45.

FOOTBALL OPPONENTS MEET WITH VICTORIES

Columbia Only Defeated Opponent; Union, Wesleyan, Amherst Score Triumphs

Three victories and one defeat were the fate of Williams' four remaining 1928 football opponents in games played last Saturday when Columbia was handed a setback by Dartmouth, 21 to 7, Union defeated Vermont, 7 to 6, Wesleyan defeated

Rochester, 14 to 13, and Amherst triumphed over Hamilton, 19 to 0. Of the teams which Williams has already met this season, Providence won over Manhattan, 18 to 7, Middlebury was beaten by Springfield, 13 to 7, and Bowdoin was defeated by Tufts, 12 to 0.

In her game with Dartmouth, an early error in judgment on the part of Sheridan, Columbia's quarterback, who attempted to catch a punt on his own goal line and then proceeded to fumble it, began a slump for the New York team from which it did not

HAMILTON SWAMPED BY SOCCER TEAM

Purple Opens Powerful Attack in Second Half To Overcome Buff and Blue

Burying its opponents in an avalanche of goals in the third quarter, the Williams soccer team kept a clean slate by soundly trouncing the Hamilton eleven by a 6-1 score on Cole Field last Saturday. After the visitors had tied the count at 1-1 shortly after the beginning of the second half, the Purple took matters in their own hands and scored five tallies in rapid succession to bewilder completely the Buff and Blue team.

Only for short and widely scattered periods was Hamilton able to take the offensive. The Williams forwards showed greater passwork than thus far exhibited, while their kicking was also far more accurate than in the opening games. As a result, the Hamilton backs were almost constantly under pressure, and finally broke down under continual bombardment. A high west wind gave one side a distinct advantage, but the Purple backs far outshone their opponents in the length and effectiveness of kicks.

There were few individual stars in the contest, the team playing exceedingly well as a unit; yet the work of Thoms and Neilson in the forward line and Bright, in the center half position was particularly effective and well concentrated. Until he received an injury in the second half, Captain Chan of Hamilton was the outstanding player on his team and accounted for its single tally. Scoring honors on the Williams team were divided among Thoms, Neilson, Park, McKittrick, and Bright, who scored twice from penalty kicks.

The first half of the game was comparatively slow and uninteresting, each side showing a fairly good attack, which was, however, quite ineffective. Bright scored the first goal when the ball bounded through several of the Hamilton backs into the cage. A Williams offensive continued throughout the period but no one was able to send the ball through, although several shots came within a few inches of their intended destination.

Hamilton had the wind at its back at the opening of the second half, and soon started an attack that puzzled the Purple fullbacks to the extent of leaving the goal quite unguarded. At this point Captain Chan scored for his team. Williams tightened up at once and displayed a more vigorous attack than has been seen on Cole Field for some years. Neilson soon tallied with a beautiful boot, having received the ball from right wing near the goal. Another penalty was called and Bright scored again in much the same manner as before.

With the score at 3-1, Hamilton came back once more, threatening the Williams goal. The playing grew noticeably faster as the period progressed, but the home

Litterateur to Discuss Modern French Theatre

M. Yvon Lapaquellerie, Sub-prefect of the Prefecture of the Seine and at present lecturer under the auspices of 'L'Alliance Francaise', will give a talk in French on 'Le Theatre Francais d'après-guerre', in the Thompson Physical Laboratory next Friday evening at 8.00 p. m. This will be the first of a series of lectures which M. Lapaquellerie will give in this country, and his subsequent tour will include, among others, New Haven, Cleveland, and Chicago, the University of Michigan and Vassar College.

M. Lapaquellerie has been prominent both in political life and in the field of French literature. Prior to his present office, he was sous-chef of the cabinet of M. Painleve and adjutant-chief in the cabinet of M. Datadier. As an author, he has written two historical novels, 'Amoret', and 'La Princesse Tarakanov', which received favorable critical notice, and also a collection of short stories entitled 'Sept Pé-heresses'. During his tour, M. Lapaquellerie will not confine himself to a discussion of the post-war French theatre, but will speak on a variety of subjects connected with French literature.

In addition to these members of the faculty who are thus recognized as outstanding in their line, the book records the achievements of seven other residents of Williamstown, including two prominent lawyers, a zoologist, a chemist, and an author of books on finance.

The members of the faculty whose lives and works are described in the new volume are Dr. Garfield, Dr. Carlton, College Librarian, Professor Dickerman, Professor Dutton, Professor Howes, Professor Kellogg, Professor Lessing, Professor Maxey, Professor McElfresh, Professor McLaren, Professor Mears, Professor Millam, Professor Morton, Professor Pratt, Professor Smith, Professor Weston, Professor Wetmore, and Professor Wild. Of this number eight are Williams graduates.

Many of the facts brought out in connection with the activities of these faculty members other than in the teaching profession prove interesting. Dr. Garfield

WILLIAMS VICTORIOUS OVER ENGINEERS, 26-7

Purple Attack Strong, Although At Times Undependable; Passing Feature of R. P. I.

HOWE AND LANGMAID STAR

Long Pass In Last Quarter From Wheeler To Langmaid High Point of Game

Through an attack which at times swept the visitors off their feet, the Varsity football team won its fourth straight game of the season from R. P. I. Saturday afternoon on Weston Field by a 26-7 score. Although beaten, the Troy engineers put up a much harder fight than the score would indicate, tallying thirteen first downs to eleven for Williams, and at times flashing an overhead attack that completely fooled the Purple team. Howe and Langmaid again stood out for the home team on the offensive, while the passing combination Dichl to Daday completed many sensational tosses for the visitors.

R. P. I. attempted nineteen passes during the game, completing eleven of them, while Williams made five out of seven. Neither team could gain consistently on the ground. Howe and Langmaid, aided by good interference, occasionally made sensational gains, but at other times were snared behind the line. The visitors made several offensive drives, but were stopped when they reached the Williams safety zone. The feature of the game was a long pass from Wheeler to Langmaid, which netted forty yards and a touchdown.

Williams drew first blood in the opening quarter, when R. P. I. was forced back to its three-yard line through a fifteen-yard penalty and several poor plays. Bliss punted to Putnam, who returned the ball to the twenty-eight-yard line. Howe cut loose around left end for eighteen yards, McAllister taking the ball to the three-yard line on the next play. Howe then sliced off left tackle for a touchdown, while Langmaid made the extra point. In the latter part of the period, Denning recovered a Troy fumble on the fifteen-yard line, but the home team was held for downs.

Williams scored again in the second quarter after Langmaid recovered an R. P. I. fumble. Here the Williams offense rushed the visitors off their feet. On a deceptive pass Howe sneaked through center for five yards, and on the next play went through the same hole for a first down. Putnam took the ball six yards around right end, and the Troy line once more yielded before Langmaid's plunging. Howe then made his second touchdown of the day on a dash around left end, while Langmaid again put the ball between the bars.

'Fraternity Men Are Neither Idle Nor Frivolous' Opines Lehigh Dean in Recent Magazine Article

That the average fraternity man is neither lazy, a lounge lizard, nor a snob, is the opinion of Dr. Max McConn, Dean of Lehigh University, which he expresses in an article entitled "Tired Business Men of the Campus" in the November issue of the North American Review. Dr. McConn characterizes the American fraternity as a group "of very agreeable, personable, young men, living together most comfortably, and devoting themselves chiefly to athletics and other outside activities—with, of course, some incidental attention to studies."

The points which a fraternity considers in choosing its members, are, according to the writer, money, family, the preparatory school which the rushee has attended, and personal qualities. "Money is the least considered of the four," he writes, "the possession of sufficient funds is essential, but beyond that unimportant. The boy with the largest roll and the handsomest motor car in the class may be left out."

"Family is somewhat more heavily weighed; if a boy's father is a man of mark in his home town and his mother a social leader there, his chances are good. As to the preparatory school, please let no one suppose that scholastic standards are weighed. The point in question is exclusively the social reputation of the school; this third criterion is merely supplemental to that of family."

As regards personal qualities necessary for election to a fraternity, Mr. McConn says, "if a lad has an agreeable exterior, a winning smile, and a pleasing manner, if he is a 'slick dresser' and a 'smooth talker', and is duly accredited as to purse, progenitors, and preparatory school, he is sure to be taken. On the other hand, if he is notably deficient in 'personality', notorious millions and Mayflower ancestry and New England's most famous Eton all combined may fail to land him safely. The second kind of personal qualification consists of capacities, reported or displayed for distinction in outside activities."

On the question of the relation of fraternities to studies, Mr. McConn says "Fraternities are officially interested in this matter to the extent of seeing to it that their members 'stay in college', and also that they are 'kept off probation'. Beyond this point one cannot truthfully say that the fraternities in general concern themselves with scholastic matters."

"In every fraternity I ever visited the whole atmosphere and spirit is definitely non-intellectual. The recognized, accepted topics of conversation in these houses are invariably athletics, other outside activities, and girls, and any theme which 'could by any stretch of language be classified as intellectual or 'high-brow' is taboo, socially incorrect." To the charge that fraternities are the rendezvous of "lounge lizards", the writer answers that "the occasional lounge lizard is no more typical than the sporadic Phi Beta."

"Fraternity men in general are exceedingly industrious", thinks Dean McConn.

Professor P. M. Brown '98 Criticizes Fraternities and Compares Qualities of Williams and Princeton

Williams	Princeton
"Provincial familiarity"	"Sense of family solidarity"
"Inspirational teachers"	"Greater self-sufficiency"
"Immensely greater possibilities in fraternity system"	"Aims to provide the atmosphere of a gentleman's club"
"Similar traditions concerning the purpose of education, college spirit, standards of gentlemanly behaviour, and the amenities of life."

Above are the probable line-ups of Williams and Princeton in the small college big college controversy as suggested to a Record reporter by Philip Marshall Brown graduate of Williams in the Class of 1898, resident of Williamstown, and professor of international law and diplomacy at Princeton. He amplified:

"Unquestionably Williams and Princeton men have much in common. There cannot be the same degree of provincial familiarity in both places, though both have a similar sense of solidarity. In the classroom they have a similar attitude of friendly give and take between teacher and student which encourages free full discussion and intellectual interest as between men of culture. On the campus, men make an effort at least to know and recognize each other in a cordial manner.

"These conditions exist mainly because of early traditions, and because both institutions have the great advantage of being apart in the country where they can preserve the integrity of communal life... Size, of course, makes for differences." And Professor Brown proceeded to treat two of these differences, the first of which he placed in the Princeton column, while the second scores for Williams.

1. "Size in Princeton makes for a greater self-sufficiency in every respect. Princeton is able to 'swing' almost anything it wants to without great difficulty. It can provide numbers, funds, and the stimulus of crowds for meetings, entertainments, and athletics. It has sufficient alumni to make anything go. It feels itself sufficiently strong to undertake anything locally it thinks worthwhile. It is thus able to escape the disabilities while preserving the advantages of provincialism.

"I wish to express my personal belief that there is a reasonable working limit around a thousand or twelve hundred students where a college situated in the country like Williams can provide its own adequate resources as a community not dependent on the outside world to any great degree, and at the same time preserve the

THE FLONZALEY QUARTET

Williams may add a very personal note to the sorrow of the Nation upon the disbanding of the Flonzaley Quartet. For almost twenty years this famous organization has brought to Williamstown the very best of chamber music. Members of the College and many residents of nearby towns have enjoyed its charming programs since 1912, and always with the utmost convenience and at no expense. If we estimate the loyalty and affection of alumni by the way in which they help the College, surely no man deserves a higher place than Eugene Delano '66 who first made this musical treat possible at Williams. We need not minimize the generosity of those who give donations for buildings, for land, for equipment, but a gift of music is in some ways the most enduring of all. Not a few, with bewildered ideas of music, may have found in the Flonzaley Quartet the inspiration for this highest, most subtle kind of pleasure. In the same sense that it has been a great thing for America, this quartet has been a great thing for Williams. It has a very real share in whatever "culture" men have received here. It has taken a large part in the musical education of many Williams men, and those with half a heart and any sort of sensibility have found it a liberal one. Others, who have managed to "cut" these concerts—even the last, may never know what they have missed, but their loss is none the less.

To this almost perfect combination, now retiring in its twenty-fifth year, at the height of its fame, Williams bids sad farewell. Last Sunday these four masters, moulded as one, gave their last concert here. Evidently not many undergraduates considered Chapin Hall a proper place to go after the house parties of the night before, but few seats were vacant. Older people seem more reluctant to let the affairs of a Sunday afternoon prevent them from being an audience to perfection. But once having heard the Flonzaley Quartet, one is not inclined to stay away. And perhaps it was inevitable that many should not appreciate these four masters until it is too late.

team soon managed the game in its own way. Thoms centered the ball near the Hamilton goal, where it bounded gracefully off a fullback into the netting behind. In the last quarter the Hamilton goalie was having his hands full with a determined Williams advance. The Purple fullbacks aided materially in keeping the ball in hostile territory, and the growing ability of the forwards to follow up resulted in two more goals by Park and McKittrick before the end of the period.

Following are the line-ups and summary of the game:

POLICE HEAD OUTLINES TOWN TRAFFIC ORDERS

Chief Royal Advises Adherence to Existing Rules for Benefit of Community

Attention has been called by a recent communication from George A. Royal, Chief of Police, to the existing regulations governing motor vehicles in Williamstown. Chief Royal adds that strict adherence to the following laws and orders will be a step in solving our traffic problems to the advantage of the merchants, the college, the townspeople, and our visitors.

1. Drivers of automobiles and vehicles of all kinds, stopping on Spring Street in Williamstown, shall stop on the right-hand side of the street close to the curb, and all said automobiles and vehicles, when standing, shall be on the right-hand side of the street close to the curb.

2. Parking on Spring Street is limited to a period of thirty consecutive minutes. Moving a car from one location to another on the street does not void liability.

3. There shall be no turning around of cars in Spring Street. A suggestion here which should relieve tie-ups is that drivers should back from Spring Street into Grace Court, or drive into the school yard in order to turn around.

4. Any person operating a motor vehicle at a speed greater than 15 miles per hour on Spring Street is liable to prosecution under Chap. 90, Section 17, of the General Laws.

5. Parking of cars on either side of Main Street between Southworth Street and Park Street is forbidden. This section eliminates any parking on Consumption Hill, a practice which creates a dangerous situation and must be stopped.

6. With the advent of a new class eligible to drive motor cars an explanation of the laws governing the operation of motor vehicles should help. Any person with a Massachusetts operator's license can operate in Massachusetts any car properly registered in this state or in any other state. Of course, if his license to operate is restricted to a particular type of motor vehicle, he can operate only that type. Furthermore, a person licensed to operate in another state can drive only cars properly registered in that state. For example, a driver with a Massachusetts license can operate in Massachusetts any car properly registered in Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, or any state. However, a driver with only a New York license is limited to the operation of cars registered in New York.

Captains Selected for Three Freshman Teams

After almost four weeks of practice, three members of the Class of 1932 were elected to the captaincies of the Freshman football, soccer, and cross-country teams on the eve of their first contests. William Fowle of Winnetka, Ill., was chosen the captain of the yearling football team, while Julian C. Smith of Wilmette, Ill., and John F. Roy of Troy were elected to guide the soccer and cross-country teams respectively.

Fowle, who is a halfback, played the same position at the North Shore Country Day School, where he prepared for Williams. He was captain of the team, and also was a member of the basketball five and the track team. Smith prepared at Deerfield, where he was prominent in athletic and other extra-curricular activities, and Roy's preparatory school was Hoosac School, where he participated in football and baseball.

Lewis and Clark, first Americans to cross the continent, knew the importance of "trifles" in the concerted plan. They saw to it their equipment was right, they supervised every step from man-power to pack-horse-

GLEE CLUB IS PICKED AT RECENT TRY OUTS

Membership Includes 38 With 11

Again Soloist

Out of a group of over 60 applicants, 38 men, including eight special Freshman members, were chosen for this year's Glee Club at the trials held last week in Jesup Hall under Mr. Safford. Practice for the concerts will begin immediately, the first, being this evening, Tuesday, at 7.30 p. m., as the Club will sing at Albany and Vassar the week before Christmas, and, after the Christmas trip, at the Intercollegiate in Boston and possibly New York in March.

Rohrbach '29 is to be the soloist for the Club this year as he was two years ago, while Fitch '29 and Heermance '31 will give a specialty act with a violin and a banjo. The seven Freshman members are included at this time in order that they may sing at the Intercollegiate though they are not accompanying the Club on the Christmas trip. The following is the personnel of the Club, which is coached by Mr. Safford: I. M. Ford, Leader, Baptiste, Beals, Elbrick, Faison, Rohrbach, Van Etten '29, Amerling, Babize, van der Bogert, Chamberlin, Clark, Erskine, Fitch, Hodgkinson, Hoyt, McIntosh, Reynolds, Sherman, W. ### Williston Soccer Team Smothers Frosh Eleven

Exhibiting marked signs of nervousness and inexperience, the 1932 soccer team was badly beaten by the Williston Academy eleven on Cole Field last Saturday afternoon, the final score being 5-1. The Freshman team, playing its first contest of the season with several men who were new to the game, made many mistakes which may be remedied in the future by added experience.

Williston scored first at the start of the game, when Clark tallied on a pass from Reabouchinsky. Though the frosh had two free trials on fouls, they were unable to score until the last few minutes of play, when Smith, the Freshman captain, booted the ball into the cage. One of the features of the game was a kick by Olsen, the Williston right fullback, which travelled the length of the field to result in a score for the visitors. Clark and Reabouchinsky starred for Williston, and Smith and Miller were the outstanding players for the freshmen.

WILLIAMS HARRIERS OUTSTRIP HAMILTON

Goodbody and Guernsey Set the Pace in 17-38 Victory Over
Buff and Blue

Complete reversal of form as compared with the previous week enabled the Purple harriers to score a 17-38 win against Hamilton at Clinton last Saturday, the entire team of seven men taking as many of the first eight places. Goodbody and Guernsey '31 finished the four mile race hand in hand, Captain Moore of Williams came in third, while Captain Crane of Hamilton managed to take fourth by dint of fine running in the last mile.

The Williams runners seized the lead from the very beginning and, setting a fast pace, had their men well grouped in the first seven positions. This order was maintained until the very end, when Crane of Hamilton gamely fought his way from eighth to fourth place, some 50 yards in back of Moore. Fitch, Chapman, Reynolds, and Herrick of Williams, in the order named, were the next four men to cross the finish, while the last four positions in the scoring were taken by Isaac, White, Douglas, and Clark of Hamilton.

Since this meet was the first held over the new cross-country course at Hamilton, the time of 22:04 cannot be compared with other times. However, it was Coach Seeley's opinion that the race brought out nothing exceptional in regard to speed since the first two Williams runners, after opening up a lead of some 400 yards in the first two miles, were content to hold this margin of their lead and finish easily.

Following is a summary of the meet: Tie for first between Goodbody (W) and Guernsey (W), Moore (W), Crane (H), Fitch (W), Chapman (W), Reynolds (W), Herrick (W), Isaac (H), White (H), Douglas (H), and Clark (H). Time: 22m., 4s. Score: Williams 17, Hamilton 38.

1932 Heavier Than 1931;
Average Height Is Less

Physical statistics, based on the examination given annually by the Physical Training Department to the members of each incoming class, show that 1932 is heavier than any other class in college at the time of entrance, and yet, shorter than any class except 1929. Despite the increase of average weight, the present Freshman class is one of the youngest in recent years, with an average age of 18 years and two months.

A progressive advance in weight with each succeeding class has been the most marked physical development of classes entering since the war, and 1932 is no exception. The freshmen average 142.7 pounds, as compared with 142.27 for 1931, 140.43 for 1930, and 139.4 for the present Senior class. In height, the senior class is also the smallest, with a stature of 5' 8.8". The juniors and sophomores are very nearly alike in this respect, the former measuring 5' 9.63" and the latter 5' 9.69", while 1932 fell about half an inch short of this standard, with 5' 9.12". The average age of the Freshmen is more than seven months less than that of 1930, which leads the present enrollment with a figure of 18 years, 9 months, and 7 days. 1931 is second, with 18 years 6 months, and 1929 third with 18 years 4 months.

Taconic Team Lead Tourney

George Nye, member of the golf team and holder of the college record for the Taconic course, and his partner, Richard Baxter, Taconic Club professional, annexed a second leg of the championship cup on the Pittsfield Country Club Links last week, when they handed in the low score of 71 for the day's play. At the present time Taconic Golf Club players have won five first, one second, and two third places in the tournament. Baxter and Nye are eight strokes ahead of the entire field and are considered the strongest contestants for the cup offered annually by W. E. Stokes for the best amateur-professional team in the county.

Purple Key Society Elects

Fall elections held recently by the 1930 delegation of the Purple Key Society resulted in the awarding of Keys to Close, Goodwin, Hutton, McAllister, and Stayman, '30. Since the constitution of the society allows only five men from the Junior class to be elected in the fall, the number for the class of 1930 is complete. Those men elected last spring, the first fifteen chosen, are: Alexander, Cuddeback, Ely, Groskin, Gross, Howse, Hoyt, Lasell, Marshall, Ross, Skinner, D. A. Smith, Wheeler, and D. P. Williams.

1932 FOOTBALL TEAM CONQUERS PITTSFIELD

Fowle Leads Fast Attack Which Scores Four Times To Win
by 24-0 Score

In its opening game of the season, the Freshman football team displayed a brilliant offensive and strong defensive to earn a 24-0 victory over Pittsfield High School on Cole Field last Saturday afternoon. After Tuttle had blocked a punt in the opening minutes of play and J. Patterson had recovered to make the first score of the game, all signs of nervousness which might have been detected, disappeared, and the freshmen settled down to outscore their opponents and to outplay them in every department of the game.

Pittsfield kicked-off to Captain Fowle of the freshmen and the latter carried the ball back to the 35-yard line. After plunges by Tuttle and Senn, Fowle punted to the opponents' 25-yard line. An exchange of punts followed and Pittsfield was pushed back to the 10-yard line. On the following third down, Curtain attempted a kick but Tuttle got through and batted the ball down. Patterson, coming around from the right end, grabbed the ball and crossed the goal line for the first score of the game. Dawson kicked-off and the ball was returned to the 35-yard line by Fawc. After Pittsfield punted, the freshmen started a drive down the field, with Fowle running off consistent gains through the line and outside tackle. This march down the field did not stop until Fowle had carried the ball over the line for the second score. Tuttle missed the try for point. After Tuttle had kicked-off to resume play, Pittsfield pushed the play into 1932 territory. A fumble by the safety-man, however, gave Foehl, right end, a chance to recover for the freshmen. A series of rushes, a pass from Fowle to Good, an end run by Tuttle, and the ball was in the shadows of the goal-posts again. Fowle, after two unsuccessful line smashes, carried the ball across once more. The try for point was missed.

To open the second half, Tuttle kicked a long, low, placement to the 15-yard line. On the opening play, Pittsfield attempted a forward but Tuttle leapt into the air to intercept it and raced through half the team for a run of 25 yards. Fowle hit right tackle to make another touchdown. This time, Senn elected to pass for the point after goal but Pittsfield broke up the play. Dawson kicked to the 20-yard line and after two downs, Pittsfield passed. Fowle intercepted this one and took it to the 8-yard line. Good was substituted for Tuttle and on the next play failed to go over. The final whistle blew with Pittsfield in possession of the ball on its own 5 yard line.

The teams lined up for the opening whistle as follows:

Hoover Club Agrees to Debate--Plans Big Rally

With election time drawing near, the Williams College Hoover Club has made tentative plans for a rally to be held one week from Thursday as a fitting finale for the local campaign of the Republican nominee. It was also decided, at a meeting of the Club held last Saturday, to accept the challenge of the Smith Club and its associated advisors for a debate at an early date.

Although arrangements for the rally have not yet been completed, it is probable that there will be a satisfactory blending of torchlight, music, and refreshments. Of interest to members of both camps is the scheduled appearance of Vice-Presidential nominee Curtis at Pittsfield this evening. Those who wish to hear Governor Curtis' address should be ready to leave from Grundy's at 6.40 p. m. with the Williams-town delegation.

No Special Columbia Train

No arrangements have been made as yet for a special train to New York on Friday evening for the Columbia game. If the train is to be run, a notice of the time and price will appear in the Adviser.

Childe Herald Forecast Is Justified By Results

It is not without a feeling of considerable pride that THE RECORD points to the Childe Herald predictions which it made a week ago of last Saturday's football games. Out of the ten forecast matches, the victorious team was picked nine times and the scores matched well with the actual results. Our predictions are reprinted below from last week's RECORD along with the correct outcomes. As these facts prove conclusively our ability to pick winning football teams, we only hope that this justification will not carry our readers away so completely that they will bet lavishly upon our advice on the future games. Another Childe Herald group of predictions will be printed in Saturday's issue, in which we promise to disclose the outcome of the Columbia game.

The following is a comparison of our predictions with the actual results of last Saturday's games:

	Forecast	Actual outcome
Army vs. Harvard	20-7	15-0
Dartmouth vs. Columbia	13-6	21-7
Yale vs. Brown	21-0	32-14
Princeton vs. Lehigh	14-6	47-0
Navy vs. Duke	10-0	6-0
Penn vs. Penn State	35-0	14-0
Notre Dame vs. Georgia Tech	7-6	0-13
Ohio State vs. Michigan	14-7	19-7
Minnesota vs. Chicago	20-0	33-7

Williams Victorious Over Engineers, 26-7

to finish the Williams scoring for the first half.

Here R. P. I. opened up and took the upper hand for a short while. Gaining the ball on the Williams' thirty-five yard line, Golden made a first down on two plays through the line, and followed this with another ten-yard gain. After two attempts, only good for a yard apiece, Diehl shot a pass to Daday who crossed the purple goal line, and Bliss added the extra point. During the rest of the half, the ball alternated between the two teams, neither one getting within scoring distance again.

There was no tally in the third quarter, although Williams was nearing the opposing goal line as the period ended. After Howe had made a first down through two slices off tackle, Brown threw a pass to Langmaid who made his usual good catch, and crossed the goal line for the Purple's third touchdown of the day. Throughout this quarter the Troy engineers played a better brand of football than they had displayed in the first half, and were practically on equal terms with Williams, making several first downs with Kennedy and Bauer at the tackle posts doing good work in opening up the Williams line.

The last score was the most sensational of the game after Watson killed an R. P. I. threat by intercepting a pass. Wheeler, who had just come into the game threw the ball forty yards down the side of the field into Langmaid's waiting arms. This brought the home team's total to 26, breaking their season's record of twenty points a game. After this score many substitutions were made, and during the few remaining minutes neither team could consistently gain, although R. P. I. was continually making long forward passes.

The game on the whole was interesting, neither team having a marked superiority, although Williams showed more potential power. In the middle of the last quarter the Troy team marched down the field with Golden hitting the line, and Daday getting passes from Diehl. This netted four consecutive first downs, but here the Williams defense tightened and prevented the threatening score. Both teams resorted to kick frequently. Bliss and Howe were at practically even terms, but the former was more adept at placing his boots out of bounds at strategic points. Throughout the last quarter Rensselaer made a belated rally, continually resorting to their aerial attack, but the final whistle blew before they could score.

The lineup and summary follows:

WILLIAMS	R. P. I.
Williams	Pinto
Deming	Kennedy
Andersen (Capt.)	Steers
Watson	Howland
Lasell	Monte
Miller	Bauer
Ashby	Bliss
Putnam	Diehl
Howe	Diaddario
Langmaid	r.h.b. Daday (Capt.)
McAllister	f.b. States

Touchdowns: Williams—Langmaid, 2; Howe, 2; R. P. I.—Daday. Points after touchdown: Langmaid, 2; Bliss.

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Chase for McAllister, Brown for Chase, Hood for Ashby, Gailer for Miller, Williamson for Lasell, Lobo for Williamson, Newman for Williams, Wheeler for Brown, Trauer-nicht for Watson, Eynon for Putnam, Stayman for Eisner. R. P. I.—Golden for Diaddario, Barrett for Steers, Chase for Bauer, Crowley for Diehl, Wade for States. Officials: Referee, P. R. Carpenter (New Hampshire), Umpire, Mann (Springfield); Head Linesman, Dunn, (Adams). Time, 10-12 minute quarters.

Tidbits of the Game

Instead of the usual melee of dogs on the field, a lone air-dale appeared before the opening whistle, proudly dangling a rabbit's scalp in his mouth.

The Troy Engineers were supported by 400 rooters, who made the trip with the team, hoping that for once they could return home with a victory over Williams.

Before the game every player on the squad was cheered, and during the half they marched around the field and formed the traditional R, followed by a mad scramble for good seats.

The visiting squad was a symphony in bright red. Their jerseys were glaringly scarlet, matched by equally bright blankets, and formed a strong contrast to the home team's dull outfit.

One of the Troy backs was more than a triple threat man, occasionally turning a somersault for good measure when he hit the Williams line.

"Spider" Moffat, attired in his official Berkshire regalia, performed his usual duty as linesman, in addition to giving moral support to the team.

(Woman is responsible for many things: it was a woman's intuition that discovered these choice tid-bits; a woman's wit that embellished them; a woman's pencil that wrote them.)

Flonzaley Quartet Gives Final Recital

From beginning to end the quartet displayed infinitely sensitive and comprehensive discrimination. As regards the mastery of string ensemble playing the Flonzaley Quartet is now, as it has been for some years, flawless when at the top of its form. At such a time, its individual members seem to fuse into a single organism, marvelously transparent and articulate.

And so for those of us, not only in Williamstown but the world over, who cherish highly civilized music, there remain outstanding in the field of chamber music, the Roth and the Flonzaley Quartets, the one a hope, the other a memory.

New 'Who's Who' Lists Williams Professors

was United States Fuel Administrator during the World War, in which work he was assisted by Professor Howes as Executive Secretary of that branch of the administration, and also as its historian. Dr. Carlton was born in England, and before coming to Williams in 1922 was librarian of Trinity College, where he taught English, and was also director of the Newberry Library in Chicago, the public library of Hamilton, Ontario, and of the American Library in Paris, Inc.

Professor Lessing was born in Wuer-ttemberg, Germany, and educated at the Royal Gymnasium at Stuttgart. He is the author of "Masters in Modern German Literature" and many books in German. Professor Kellogg is a recognized authority in the field of clams, scallops, and oysters, and has made a considerable study of the lamellibranchiate mollusks. In addition to being Executive Secretary of the Institute of Politics, Professor McLaren taught economics and politics at Keiojijuku, Tokio, Japan, and was Economist for the Far Eastern Countries in the Department of State at Washington.

The years 1913 and 1914 were spent by Professor Pratt in the study of the native religions of India, and in a succeeding sabbatical, ten years later, he studied Buddhism in China, Japan, and Siam. He is the author of several books, some of which are used by colleges as texts, including "India and its Faiths", "The Psychology of Religious Belief", and "The Religious Consciousness." Professor Wild came to Williams in 1891, three years after graduating from here, was Dean of the College in 1902, and is a vice-president of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association of the United States.

Miss Osborne, Custodian of the Chapin Library, is listed in the volume, as is the late Dr. Samuel F. Clarke and Mrs. Clarke, who is prominent in many civic and college alumnae organizations. Mr. Charles B. Hubbell '74, and Mr. Bentley Warren '85, the latter a trustee of the College, and the former an ex-trustee, are prominent lawyers who spend their summers in Williamstown. Mr. Lancelot Andrews, chemist, and Mr. Hubert D. Goodale, zoologist, have residences in this town, as does Mr. Albert Sidney Bolles, former judge and professor at the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Bolles is the author of a financial history of the United States and many books on banking and law.

Professor Brown '98 Criticizes Fraternities

integrity of its communal life with all of the amenities and the fine inspiration of college family spirit."

2. "A confusion of thought concerning proper qualifications for undergraduate instruction and the choice of inspirational teachers" Professor Brown thinks results from the fact that Princeton is "devoting increasing attention to graduate studies and research of an advanced kind, which is having, in my personal opinion, a most unfortunate effect in diverting attention from the main object of undergraduate instruction."

Urging that Williams should guard against this tendency of her larger counterpart, Professor Brown concluded: "If Williams will be true to the very same traditions which characterized both Williams and Princeton forty years ago, it will have a unique opportunity to give to undergraduates the kind of all round training that the men of this country most need and appreciate."

In response to the suggestion that an analysis of the relation between Princeton and Williams could not be complete without a comparison of clubs and fraternities, Professor Brown said that "Princeton frankly does not aim at anything more than providing the atmosphere of a gentleman's club. A club there, while maintaining a high standard of conduct, does not concern itself, as does a fraternity, with individual problems".

"It is a fair question whether fraternities as a whole are doing much better. If a fraternity has a high standard of intellectual and manly attainments, it can help individual men in a way that no club can do. If, on the other hand, a fraternity has no such high aim, it may have a more harmful effect. I would say that there are immensely greater possibilities for good, as well as for harm, in the fraternity system than in the club system.

"The fraternities, therefore, have a solemn responsibility which the club do not pretend to carry. If the fraternities of Williams could sense and meet this responsibility with high idealism, good sense, and determination, they could do more than any other agency to help make Williams the most inspiring place in America for purely undergraduate education and cultural training."

'Fraternity Men Are Neither Idle Nor Frivolous'

Most of them work day and night, week in and week out. They have their classes to go to and their lessons to be got (after a fashion), as the necessary price of continuance in college, and these things take quite a lot of time, at least during certain weeks immediately preceding quizzes and final examinations. And then, over and above this, they have their all-important outside activities to keep up. They have to play on the teams, to practice for the glee club and the band, to get up theatricals, to publish various periodicals, to organize meetings, to give dances and banquets, to sit on numberless boards and committees, and so on, almost without end. Idle? Believe me, it is rather the strenuous life."

"In short" he continues, "the great majority of fraternity men—though they give only the compulsory minimum of attention to those aspects of higher education which are represented by the faculty and the curriculum—are neither idle nor frivolous. They are earnestly at work on another course of training, devised and developed by themselves, which they select for its superior educational advantages."

"Finally, this exposition should set at rest the charges so frequently made that the fraternities are 'undemocratic'. The fact is that the fraternities are the refuge of what we may call the intellectual proletariat. It is largely through their efforts that our colleges are now devoted predominantly to the democratic object of training practical business men, rather than to the mere advancement of learning and what used to be called 'culture' among a selected few who happen to be intellectually gifted."

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Norvin R. Greene at Westhampton Beach, L. I. on July 21. She has been named Gretchen Gair Greene.

Football Opponents Meet With Victories

emerge until the score stood 21 to 0 against it. Then, in the middle of the second period under the leadership of Captain Adler, Remy, Tys, Blecker, and Kumpf, Columbia began to play real football, and finally Liflander, star half, made a beautiful 30-yard run for his team's only touchdown, making the final score 21 to 7 against Columbia. During the game, Hank Kumpf, one of the best Blue and White ball carriers and an acknowledged menace to Williams this Saturday, was badly injured and had to be carried from the field. It is not yet known whether he will be in condition to play against Williams or not.

Union was able to snatch victory from Vermont only in the last moments of play by a score of 7 to 6. After Vermont had made a touchdown in the fourth quarter, Union recovered a fumble on her own 20-yard line and then began a march down the field which culminated in a long pass from Finegan to Stranahan for a touchdown. Finegan kicked the goal for the extra point and victory.

Another last minute victory occurred when Wesleyan defeated Rochester 14 to 13. In the first quarter, Captain Wilson of Rochester recovered a fumble and ran 74 yards to Wesleyan's one-yard line before he was downed. In the next play, Burrows went through center to score for Rochester. A long pass from Lockwood to Bagg in the second quarter gave Wesleyan a touchdown. Rochester scored again in the third quarter, making the score 13 to 7 in her favor. With only two minutes left to play, Tetley sent a long pass to Millstagh who crossed the goal, and Siloway kicked the goal to give Wesleyan a 14 to 13 victory. The Wesleyan stars were Bagg, Thomas, and Siloway, all in the backfield.

Amherst downed Hamilton in an impressive style by score of 19 to 0. Wilson's open field running and Warren's line smashing were the features for Amherst. Wilson scored two touchdowns on long runs, and Brittain, right end, crossed the goal once on a short pass. The game was so one-sided that in the final quarter almost every man on the Amherst squad was able to get into the fray.

Providence, whom Williams defeated 20 to 13, scored an 18 to 7 victory over Manhattan. The victory was due principally to the excellent running of Dagata, Foster, and Gibbons, and also to their opponents' frequent fumbles. Middlebury, who was beaten by Williams 20 to 0, was again defeated by Springfield with the score 13 to 7, and Bowdoin, whom Williams defeated 20 to 6, fell easily to Tufts who won by the decisive score of 12 to 0.

U. S. MARINE BAND TO PLAY HERE TOMORROW

Finest Military Band in Country To Give Two Concerts Here on Annual Tour

With the reputation of being the finest organization of its kind in the country, The United States Marine Band, otherwise known as the "President's Own", will give two concerts in Chapin Hall, Sunday afternoon at 2.45 and Sunday evening at 8.30. The appearance here of this 73 piece organization, under the leadership of

CAPTAIN TAYLOR BRANSON
Leader of the famous Marine Band which will play here twice on Sunday

Captain Taylor Branson, is a community project with college and town working together for its success, Sewall '29 being chairman of the committee responsible for its coming here.

Founded in 1801, the Band rose immediately to fame and prominence, and has continued to be a feature of Washington life since that time. It has been heard at the inauguration of practically all the Presidents; it has welcomed kings, princes, statesmen; it has marked time for every important parade that has marched down historic Pennsylvania Avenue. Its annual concert tours have been a more recent innovation, for until 1911 it was only at intervals of 10 or 20 years that the Band played outside of the city of Washington. The success of its inaugural trip was so marked, that annual tours have been featured ever since, through the courtesy of the Presidents.

Every member of this 73-piece band is not only a citizen of the United States, but also a musician of unusual ability, having passed the most rigid tests before he was admitted. Captain Taylor Branson is the present leader, and follows such famous

Nye Defeats Cavanagh for Golf Championship

Playing off a tie for first place in the Annual Fall Golf Tournament, George L. Nye '29 defeated P. Cavanagh '29 by three strokes in their 18 hole match. Both men played the first nine in 43, but on the home stretch Nye took a 38 as against Cavanagh's 41.

Though the golf displayed was not the best of the tournament, the close score made the match an interesting one. Following are the scores:

Following the speaking, the floor will be open for discussion. Everyone, whether connected with the College or not, is cordially invited to attend.

INTRAMURAL TENNIS AND GOLF NEAR END

D. U. and Phi Gam Play for Tennis Cup; Delta Phi and D. K. E.
Head Golfers

The round robin series in the intramural tennis and golf tournaments have been completed but for one match in each, the outcome of which will probably not affect the standing of the teams, while the football tournament has entered upon the third, or final round in each league. Delta Upsilon and Phi Gamma Delta, having received no setbacks, are champions of tennis in the American and National Leagues respectively, while Delta Kappa Epsilon and Delta Phi hold the lead in golf.

Two tournament matches are as yet unplayed, a tennis match between Alpha Delta Phi and Sigma Phi and a golf match between Delta Kappa Epsilon and Zeta Psi. The result of the former can effect no change in the final standing, and the latter would appear on paper to be the same. Several football games have been played off this week, Phi Delta Theta winning from Delta Kappa Epsilon, Zeta Psi beating Psi Upsilon, Beta Theta Pi defeating Alpha Delta Phi, and Sigma Phi overcoming Phi Sigma Kappa. Kappa Alpha defeated Chi Psi to enter the finals of the American League, and Beta Theta Pi occupies the same position in the National by winning from the Commons Club.

The winner of a championship match will be credited 20 points toward the trophy, while the head of each league will receive 12 points. Nine points go to the team in second place, eight to third, seven

1932 Leads Sophomores in Soccer by One Game

As a result of the scoreless tie in the game played on Cole Field last Tuesday afternoon the 1932 soccer team has retained its lead over the sophomores in the Interclass series, having won two and lost one of the five contests played so far. According to the rules of the competition the championship goes to the team which registers three victories, so it will be necessary to play at least one additional game, although the series was originally scheduled to end with Tuesday's encounter.

In the opening game the rival elevens fought to a tie at two all, but in the second 1931 forged ahead to win by a score of 2-1. Then the yearlings found themselves and won the two following contests, tallying 3-2 and 5-2 respectively. The fifth contest, however, was more stubbornly fought, neither team being able to break through for a score, and the freshmen's hopes of clinching the championship received a slight setback. Nevertheless they are still in the lead, and have a very comfortable margin in point of total scoring, being credited with 11 goals to the sophomores' eight. The date of the extra game has not yet been announced, but it will probably take place early next week.

DEMOCRATIC SPEAKERS LAUD SMITH AT RALLY

Nominee Compared to Roosevelt, Wilson, Lincoln by General
Charles H. Cole

"Governor Alfred E. Smith has the dash of an Andrew Jackson, the magnetism of a Theodore Roosevelt, the liberalism and idealism of a Woodrow Wilson, and the heart and sympathy of an Abraham Lincoln", said Brigadier General Charles H. Cole, Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. General Cole was the principal speaker at the Democratic rally held in Jesup Hall last Monday afternoon under the auspices of the Williams College and Williamstown Smith Clubs.

Other speakers on the program included Mrs. Helen Tallboy, prominent as a New York lawyer and as an accredited news correspondent at the League of Nations, and Mr. John F. Malley, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts. All of the speakers were unanimous in their criticism of the present Administration and in their praise for those on the Democratic ticket in both state and nation.

Mr. Malley was the first speaker of the afternoon, and he plunged at once into an exposition of the evils that have arisen under the present Administration. After listing the scandals and frauds perpetrated under the Republican regime, Mr. Malley remarked that "we perform in the future as our record has been in the past."

Mrs. Tallboy, who represented the Democratic National Committee, then pointed out why independent women should vote for Governor Smith. She spoke of the spectacle which we present to Europe, who asks: "Are the people of the United States so sunk in materialism that they are indifferent to corruption?"

General Cole, the principal speaker of the afternoon, was then introduced amid great applause. The gubernatorial candidate opened his remarks with a discussion of the issues at stake in the state campaign. He described the Democratic

Harriers to Encounter Middlebury Team Today

In the third meet of the season Middlebury is slated to oppose the Williams cross-country team on the Middlebury course this Saturday at 1.00 p. m. The Vermont team is unfortunate in having lost their last year's captain and winner of first place in the 1927 meet with the Purple which the latter won, 25-30.

Coach Seeley is sending the same lineup to face Middlebury as smothered Hanilton last Saturday, namely: Captain Moore and Herriek '29, J. Chapman, Fitcher, and E. V. Reynolds '30, and Goodbody and Guernsey '31. The last two named are expected to give a good account of themselves after their record in the meet with the Buff and Blue.

An operator of the Western Union special news service will relay the messages to Mr. Ralston Doughty who has been delegated as official announcer of the afternoon.

COUNCIL TO CONTROL OPERATION OF AUTOS

To Recommend Student Offenders to Dean's Office; Rope-Pull Set for Next Week

Definite action toward student supervision of undergraduate driving was taken at the second meeting of the Student Council last Tuesday night, when a resolution, drawn up by the 1928 Student Council and presented to the Trustees last June, was unanimously passed by the new Council. In order that there might be no misunderstanding of the resolution, a meeting of all students owning cars in Williamstown was called last Wednesday noon and the following was reviewed in detail:

"The Student Council, desiring to assist in the prevention of reckless driving, shall consider the case of any student driver who comes under the observation of a member of the Student Council or is reported to that body as having been guilty of recklessness in the operation of an automobile; it will issue warnings, and, after disregard of warning or in proven cases of recklessness, shall recommend to the Dean that the driving permission of that student or those students shall be revoked; and in the proven case of a student driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor, the Council shall recommend such revocation immediately.

This resolution is passed with the understanding that it in no way infringes upon the discretionary powers of the Dean in dealing with such cases as come to his attention."

Discussion of the Sophomore-Freshman rope-pull also came before the meeting. Although it was definitely decided to hold it at some time next week, Field and Ely '30 were appointed as a committee to select the place and date of the event.

M. A. DeWolfe Howe Discusses Mark Hopkins and Williams in Recent Book on Prominent Educators

"Mark Hopkins and Williams" is the title of one of five chapters in an October book, "Classic Shades", written by M. A. DeWolfe Howe, who discusses eminent educators and their colleges, the other four treated being, "Timothy Dwight, the Elder, of Yale," "Mary Lyon and Mount Holyoke," "Princeton and James McCosh", and "The Harvard Figure of Charles William Eliot." The author describes Williams as "a sort of Themistocles among our colleges", since "one of the commonest sayings among American fathers is this: 'If I were not going to send my son to my own college, I should certainly have him go to Williams.'"

Most of the forty odd pages of the chapter is devoted to President Hopkins, who always appeared in the mind of James McCosh, former president of Princeton University, as "seated under a tree in the heart of the mountains pondering some deep theme, seeking light for himself, and wishing to impart it to others." Mr. Howe writes that he was not primarily an administrator or a philosopher, but pre-eminently a great teacher, this fact being borne out by James A. Garfield's much-quoted definition of a university as "a student at one end of a log and Mark Hopkins at the other."

PURPLE WILL BEARD LION ON BAKER FIELD.

Columbia To Start a Reorganized Backfield Against a Tried Williams Line-up

OUTCOME HANGS ON LINE

Langmaid, Credited with 56 Points, Is Second High Scorer of Eastern Colleges

A crippled lion is still a lion. Columbia will face the Purple invaders on Baker Field this afternoon with a scoring machine broken by the loss of Kumpf, third high scorer of the east, before his injury, but with a solid forward wall and a pair of defensive backs that will not be held at bay, while Liffander, light and lively quarterback who will start his first game Saturday, threatens to unleash his marathon specialities.

Kumpf, who broke his leg in the Dartmouth game last week, will be replaced at full by Stanczyk, a somewhat less crippled graduate of the 1927 freshman team, whose injured shoulder will probably keep him from playing the entire game. As a reward for consistently brilliant performances, Liffander takes the first call over Sheridan for quarter. The halfback combination is unchanged. Scott, another sophomore, is an efficient man on either end of a pass, while Buser is a dangerous adversary in a punting duel.

Although the opposing backfields appear to be quite evenly matched and promise to add something of the spectacular to the contest, it is probable that the final score depends in a large part on the line. The Columbia tackles, Tys and Blecher weighing from 190 to 200 pounds, have broken through heavier and stronger lines than that of Williams to upset potential feats of the backfield in the embryo. Campbell, another casualty of the Dartmouth game, will be able to start in the pivotal position, while Muller is not yet in shape to return to the center of the Williams line.

Practice on Cole Field during the week has emphasized defensive operations and the passing game, which will probably be used quite freely by both teams this afternoon. With some difficulty did the Varsity score a single touchdown over the freshman line-up in Tuesday's scrimmage. Coach Caldwell has frankly not pointed his squad for the Columbia game, preferring to look forward to Wesleyan and Amherst. He expects to start the same line-up which was used last Saturday, which, in his opinion, will need a little luck to come out on top of their larger adversaries.

Columbia's "group of inexperienced boys", as Coach Crowley has chosen to characterize his team, has so far defeated by a comfortable margin two of the Purple's remaining opponents, Union and Wesleyan and has lost only to Dartmouth in a game which so bruised the Lions that they were given a day off to recuperate last Monday. The opponents against whom Langmaid has rolled up the 56 points by the right of which he enters the Columbia game as second high scorer of the east compare favorably with the adversaries whose defeat enabled the redoubtable Kumpf to hold third place a week ago.

THE COLUMBIA GAME

The memory of the undergraduate body is a variable approaching four years as a limit. Now within these confines, Columbia has won three of the three games played and rolled up an aggregate score of 72 to 3. The three points were scored four years ago. So it comes to pass that contemporary scholars have deduced that Columbia is out of our class as a bona fide football opponent, and that the Williams-Columbia game is a convenient institution whereby Williams gets money, Columbia gets a workout, and we get a week-end.

In the meantime the alumni gaze rather wistfully beyond this temporal horizon of the undergraduate mind. And lo! in the fifth year Williams 10, Columbia 0; in the sixth year Williams 13, Columbia 10; in the seventh year Williams 20, Columbia 0; and so on for five out of the six games immediately prior to 1924. In a quarter of a century of intermittent contests from 1900 to 1924, Williams won five, Columbia five, and two were tied. The aggregate score was Williams 87, Columbia 66.

In those days there was little talk of Columbia's being out of our class, and, strange to say, some of the alumni still have the idea that we play Columbia to beat Columbia. They do not quite understand this blanket alibi. It is our privilege to prefer to beat Amherst; but so did they. The only thing that has suddenly put Columbia out of our class since 1923 is a better football team. And on the morning of October 27, 1928 that is not so certain.

OUR DISTINGUISHED VISITORS

There has long been a feeling that Williams should be more of a musical center than it is. In another part of the State, Northampton has merited this distinction with musical activities that have begun to rival the fame of its girls. But Williams undergraduates apparently find it bothersome to make this trip for the purpose of attending concerts, no matter how distinguished the artist, no matter how appealing his program. This does now mean of course that we are completely dumb throughout the musical season, but it is not often that we are privileged to hear the chords of the great. And when we do, they are usually thrown at us by some endowment such as the Thompson course, which is naturally no gauge of the undergraduate's interest in things musical. The concert tomorrow afternoon, therefore, has special significance in that the Marine Band is being brought here through the spontaneous efforts of undergraduate organizations, the Little Theatre and the Musical Clubs. It is a unique event. One does not often hear of college men taking the financial risk of offering entertainment of this character. Should the house be sold out for both performances it is still questionable whether it will pay for itself. Whatever financial loss occurs, however, will be more than balanced by a greater gain if the College gives a reasonably strong support. An important precedent is in the making.

The primary function of Williams is undoubtedly the edification of the undergraduates, but a liberal college that reserves all its pearls for its own children, that lives snugly within itself in a sort of perpetual hibernation is not liberal in the true sense of the word but indecently provincial. The concerts, speeches, dramatics, which happen here from time to time have the incidental, but by no means unimportant advantage of strengthening and purifying relations between Williams and Williamstown, between students and people of the community. The Marine Band concert can do this to a greater extent than ever before for it will show what can be done when undergraduates of the College and residents of the Town get together on the same committee for the same purpose. For this reason, also, an important precedent is in the making.

It is not necessary here to elaborate upon the widespread reputation of the "President's Own". Since its organization in 1801, immediately after the removal of the American capitol to Washington, it has furnished music at state occasions and at the inaugurations of all presidents. And its tours throughout the country since 1911 have made its name a byword on the lips of all lovers of "the brasses and woodwinds."

It is unfortunate that the Band was engaged to come to Williamstown on a week-end when so many students will be in New York, but we understand that it would have been as impossible to shift the date of the concert as that of the Columbia game. With the proper inclination and a little luck in making train connections we do not see why either should be missed. It is to be hoped that more than one man will find a way to transport himself from a seat in Baker Field to a seat in Chapin Hall in time to hear the Sunday evening concert.

COMMUNICATION

Although communications may be published unsigned if so requested, the name of the writer must in every case be submitted to the editor. The Board assumes no responsibility, however, for the facts as stated nor for the opinions expressed in this department.

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

Pursuant to the remarks concerning events long past, addressed to you by William S. Cooper '84 and appearing in THE RECORD of October 20, I should like to add a plea that especial attention also be paid by the editors to inexcusable mis-statements concerning events of recent occurrence.

In the same, October 20, issue of THE RECORD appears a "preliminary" write-up of the 1932-Pittsfield High football game. The writer first makes a misstatement when he refers to Pittsfield as "conquerors of last year's yearlings", because, unless my memory is playing pranks, the score of that particular game was 6-0, a tie.

Not content with this lapse, our writer, as if to make amends, enthuses thusly: "Coach Graham . . . has a combination ready which should repeat the trick of the 1931 team and come through the season undefeated."

No doubt some inexperienced sophomore "compet" was the author of this bit of inconsistency, but that does not excuse the copy editor who let such an error slip by unnoticed.

Yours very truly,

G. W. Memmott '28

Editor's Note: THE RECORD acknowledges its mistakes and thanks Alumnus Memmott for calling attention to the errors.

CONCERT SERIES AT SMITH IS ANNOUNCED

Symphony Orchestras and Many Famous Artists Will Appear This Season

Another year of worthwhile recitals has been assured by the recent announcement by the Smith College Department of Music of the program of concerts for this season. The first of these recitals, which are frequently attended by Williams students when in Northampton, is to be given on November 16 in the John M. Greene Hall by Vladimir Horowitz, a young Russian pianist, who has been hailed by European critics as the Rubenstein of the present day.

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Victor Kolar who takes the place of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the regular conductor, will be heard on December 5. A high spot on the concert series comes on January 8 when Pablo Casals, universally recognized as the world's greatest 'cellist, presents his program. Florence Austral, dramatic soprano, will appear on January 22, and Georges Enesco, famous conductor and composer, will follow with a violin recital on February 6.

The Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Nikolai Sokoloff, will give a concert on February 16, while a former member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, Lawrence Tibbett, will present a baritone recital on March 1. The series of symphony concerts will be concluded on April 9, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra appears under the baton of Serge Koussevitsky. The entire series of recitals will be completed on May 4 with the annual Choral Concert.

A group of Chamber Music recitals has also been announced for the coming season, to be held in Sage Hall and beginning with the Flonzaley Quartet concert on October 24. This famous quartet, which appeared in Williamstown last Sunday, will offer a recital of the string chamber music for which it is so well known. Andres Segovia will present the second concert of the series with a guitar recital, and following him will come Povla Frijs, soprano, on March 6. The series will close on March 13 with a recital of the Pro Arte Quartet.

REACHES ROUND ROBIN

Hobson, Thayer Reach Last Round;
Gold, Silver, Bronze Medals
To Be Awarded

All third, fourth and fifth round matches in the 1932 tennis tournament have been played, and two of the three matches in the last round before the finals are completed, the sets between Alexander and Rose being the only ones left unfinished. Due to the number of men entered, it is necessary for a round robin to be played between the last three men, and gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the winner, runner-up and third man respectively in these matches.

Hobson and Thayer have advanced to the round robin by virtue of victories over Boyce and Beal, respectively. Boyce gave Hobson a stiff fight in the first set of their match, but lost, 8-6, and Hobson then breezed through to a 6-0 victory for the match. Thayer defeated Beal by scores of 6-3, 7-5. Hobson, Thayer, and the winner of the Alexander-Rose match must each play a match with the other two men, and the medals will be awarded after these matches.

The closest match in the tournament so far was in the third round, when Burnett defeated Thomas in a tense three-set struggle, 8-10, 6-2, 15-13. Burnett also extended Beal, his conqueror in the next round, to three sets before succumbing, 6-1, 7-9, 6-4. The men reaching the fifth round were Alexander, Beal, Boyce, Hobson, Rose and Thayer. The scores from the third round on are as follows:

Round Robin

Hobson d. Boyce, 8-6, 6-0.
Thayer d. Beal, 6-3, 7-5.
Alexander-Rose, yet to be played.

says Norma Talmadge after the Blindfold Test

"When you see my new United Artists' picture, 'The Woman Disputed,' you will notice that I smoke cigarettes in several scenes.

"Not wanting to show partiality to any one of the four leading brands, I decided to make my choice via the blindfold test, which I had heard of many times. Happily, I picked Old Golds.

"I found them smooth, mild and delightfully cool . . . Hereafter, when I am required to smoke I shall naturally insist on Old Golds. There's not a cough in a film-ful!"

being, "What do you think about it?" In concluding his study of him, the author writes, "When all is said and done, there was a largeness and nobility about him which accounts amply for his great fame and far-borne influence." His list of famous pupils bears ample testimony to this fact, among them being President James A. Garfield, Samuel Armstrong, founder of Hampton Institute, David A. Wells, economist, John J. Ingalls, Senator from Kansas, G. Stanley Hall, Horace Scudder, Henry M. Alden, Hamilton Wright Mabie, and countless others. He was a man of profound learning and authority, "of powers that sprang from within", and whose teaching was greatly successful in the "strengthening of character."

Mr. Howe also paints an interesting picture of the simplicity of Williams life before and during the time of Mark Hopkins. Rooms were without rugs and wallpaper; recitation halls had no blackboards; so that chalked figures had to be done on the floors. In the spring mud filled all the streets and made them so hazardous that "when the daughters of a prosperous local worthy walked through the town, a hired man accompanied them with two boards, to lay one progressively before the other in the path they would follow." "Gravel Day" was a spring custom, the purpose of it being the clearing of the sidewalks, and "Chip Day" was a similar tradition for destroying the rubbish accumulated during the winter months. The undergraduates did not appeal to Nathaniel Hawthorne, for at the Commencement of 1836 he described them as "great unpolished bumpkins, talking with a broad accent and laughing clown-like, while sheepishness overspread all, together with a vanity at being students." He also classed the alumni as "bumpkins" whose manners were "quite spoiled by what little of the gentleman there was in them." At that time expenses for the college year were under $100, tuition being $33.

state ticket as one which gave fair representation to all of the racial groups of Massachusetts.

In conclusion, General Cole spoke in glowing terms of Governor Smith. He reviewed Smith's record, pointing out that it is filled with numerous humanitarian, social, and progressive reforms. "Never has there been such a leader," said General Cole. "He is a great Democrat, a great governor, and he will make a greater president. The people of New York don't elect a man for governor four times unless that man belongs at the top."

Shoaff Is in Net Semi-finals

Only one match was played last week in the College tennis tournament, when Shoaff '30 defeated F. Nye '30 in the quarter-final round. The former, seeded No. 3, found going easy in the first set, taking it, 6-1, but Nye, who was ranked eighth, offered determined resistance in the second, and carried it to 9-7 before losing. This match brackets Shoaff with Sewall '29 in the semi-finals, and the winner of this contest will meet Wolf '29 in the finals.

'PRESIDENT'S OWN' MAKES DEBUT HERE

Capacity Audiences Greet Marine Band with Whole-Hearted Enthusiasm Sunday

POPULAR PROGRAMS ARE VARIED WITH FINE SOLOS

Safford Praises 'Swing, Dash, and Brilliance' of Performances; Lauds Teamwork

Playing before two capacity audiences that vociferously entered into the dashing martial spirit of the performances, the United States Marine Band, nationally known as the "President's Own", gave concerts Sunday afternoon and evening in Chapin Hall. Varying the entertainment with cornet, trombone, and xylophone solos, the Marines presented a program that revealed their consummate skill as musicians and as members of a highly perfected organization. Encores were generously granted, with the result that every one from the countless boys and girls that thronged the balconies to the more sedate dignitaries in the reserved seats, heard at least one of their "old favorites".

Reflecting the prevalent opinion of the performances is the following criticism, written by Mr. Charles L. Safford, Director of Music.

The United States Marine Band played Sunday afternoon in Chapin Hall and gave a second concert in the evening. Inasmuch as The Record went to press before the end of the evening concert, this criticism refers directly to the afternoon program.

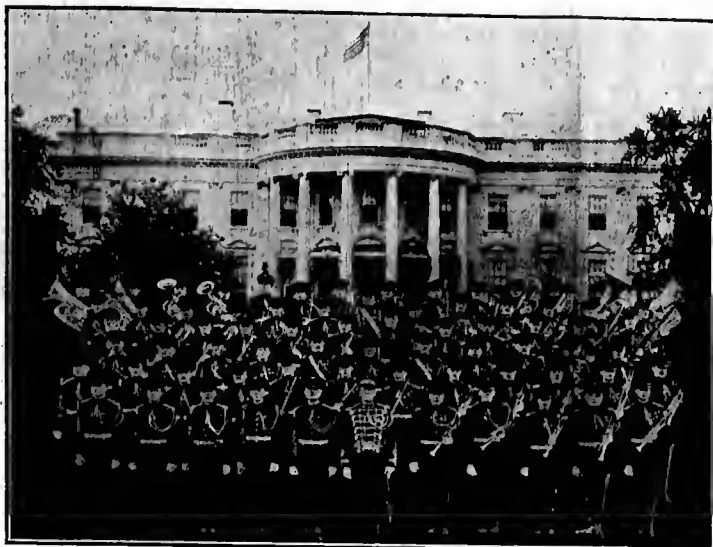

It is almost unnecessary to refer in any lengthy terms to this famous organization, now over a century old, identified with a famous fighting corps, and known all over the world. It has all the marks of a settled formation—50 odd men enlisted in the service of the Government and commanded, as well as directed by an officer. Captain Taylor Branson, the leader, knows the whole detail of his work, and the men are constantly employed during their life in the marine corps, both as band players and as orchestral musicians, since all their playing, both at the White House and at other Government functions in Washington, is done as an orchestra, leaving the band formation for outside occasions.

It is not, therefore, a matter of great surprise that the work of the Band was of complete excellence. It had all the elements which go to make up a fine band concert—splendid tones, excellent rhythm, and great variety in selection. Not the least among their successes were the stirring marches: "The Stars and Stripes Forever", "National Anthem", and "The Marine March". These and the brilliant solos gave an air of festivity to Chapin Hall, producing great applause.

There is a certain mental attitude which fits in with a concert of this kind. One must not be too critical of the material used. Rather should one go in a gay

PURPLE HARRIERS TAKE MIDDLEBURY'S MEASURE

Goodbody and Guernsey '31 Again Tie for First to Assure Decisive Victory

Capturing seven out of the first nine places, the Varsity cross-country team scored a well-earned 20-35 victory over Middlebury College last Saturday morning on the Middlebury course. Coach Seely's men faced what was probably their hardest test of the season to date in running over a strange course, fully a mile longer than that to which they were accustomed, but an almost perfect score was again made by the Purple runners, only third and fifth places being taken by the home squad.

The order of finish of the Williams squad was almost the same as that of a week ago. Goodbody and Guernsey, hand in hand, came in first over the six-mile course in the first time of 33:13, leading Butler, the Middlebury captain by over a 100 yards at the tape. Captain Moore of Williams, coming in fourth, beat off the last minute sprint of Dalton of Middlebury and led him to the finish by some 20 yards. Following close on the heels of the Middlebury runner came Chapman, E. Reynolds, J. Reynolds, and Herick of Williams, the rest of the home team finishing later.

With Herick setting the pace for the first mile or so, and then relinquishing it to Guernsey, the Williams team was off to a good start, having all seven runners well-bunched forward. Led by the fast pace-maker, the procession, from the two mile mark onward, stretched out into the eventual finishing positions, except that Goodbody of Williams, after running the first five miles in third place, finally overtook and passed Butler of Middlebury in the last mile and then drew up even to Guernsey with but 400 yards to go. Every Purple harrier finished in good

GARFIELD DELIVERS ADDRESS ON HOOVER

Cites Experience and Background of Candidate in Addition to Prohibition Stand

"I am for Mr. Hoover because of his faith in America, his belief in her ideals, his service to mankind and his genius in accomplishment", stated President Harry Augustus Garfield in an address on Herbert Hoover delivered in Washington before a large convention in the Washington Auditorium where Dr. Garfield and President Hibben of Princeton were the principal speakers. "In my humble judgment," continued the address, "few men called to the high office of President have been and none of his opponents is better qualified than the Republican nominee."

"But merely to assert my belief is not sufficient. Allow me to ask your attention to three aspects of the question before us, and consider Herbert Hoover's fitness with regard to the economic and industrial questions confronting us at home and abroad, with regard to the vast agricultural interests in the west and south, and with regard to the public welfare of the people of the United States."

"His early years in China and Burma with large responsibilities for the financial and commercial conduct of the world's business, to say nothing of those that crowded upon him during the war and since have so informed his mind as to justify the statement that no other citizen of the United States is better qualified to grapple with the question of international significance than the Republican candidate for the presidency. One of the questions which the American people should consider at this time is whether they think it safe to entrust the conduct of the industrial and financial situation to the

Meagre Crowd Hears Smith Lauded at Rally

"I am for Alfred E. Smith because he is liberal, progressive, and fearlessly outspoken", were the words of Lincoln S. Cain, Pittsfield attorney, who was the principal speaker at a Democratic rally, held last Saturday night in Jesup Hall under the auspices of the Williams College Smith and Robinson Club. Mr. Cain, a former Republican voter, gave these as only a few of his reasons for bolting to the Democratic party in his short, but interesting and forceful speech before a rather small audience on Saturday evening.

He spoke at length on the corruption in the Republican party; his belief being that the only way in which to rid this country of corrupt public officials is to have a new party come into office—a progressive party, and one that is not afraid to stand out for what it believes to be for the best interests of the United States. Such would be the Democratic party, asserted Mr. Cain, under the fearless leadership of Governor Smith. Mr. Cain heartily disapproved of the Volstead Act, and stated that he felt that Governor Smith's was the only panacea for eradicating its widespread evils.

OPPONENTS FAIL TO WIN WEEK'S GAME

Wesleyan and Amherst Battle to 20-20 Tie; R. P. I. Overcomes Union, 14 to 0

While the Williams Varsity was making a game stand against Columbia the Purple's opponents for the next three week-ends were engaged in conflicts which, if dope may be counted on, make the Purple's hopes look bright for the remainder of the season. Amherst and Wesleyan in the opening game of the "Little Three" battled to a 20-20 tie, the offensive being stressed more than the defensive, and Union, our opponents on November 3, was numbed by R. P. I. 14-0.

The Amherst-Wesleyan game, played at Middletown, was a see-saw affair, both teams holding the lead at different times during the encounter. Wesleyan opened the affair with a touchdown shortly after the opening whistle, but the Purple and White retaliated with a touchdown after Groskloss caught Silhoway's punt and galloped 75 yards. Amherst went into the lead when Warren sped off tackle for 51 yards and six points. The extra point was made and the Massachusetts aggregation led 13-7. Lockwood proceeded to score for the Red and Black, but the kick was missed and the score stood a tie, 13-13, the third quarter having just begun.

Warren again eluded the Wesleyan tacklers and accounted for another touchdown. Groskloss's place kick added an extra point and the Jeffmen were ahead again 20-13. Warren fumbled soon after that and a Wesleyan march for the goal ended when Lockwood crossed the line. Silhoway added the tying point just a few minutes before the final gun.

R. P. I. romped away from Union, 14-0, thereby giving the Williams Varsity the edge in the hope for this week's game, the Troy team having suffered defeat in Williamstown, 26-7.

LION TAKES TO AIR TO DEFEAT PURPLE

Elevens Fight to Deadlock on the Ground and Carry on Battle With 30 Passes

FORWARD WALL WEARS AWAY IN LAST MINUTES

Brown Crosses Line for the First Touchdown Against Columbia In Five Years

What happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable object is a forward pass, and the completion of 14 out of 18 tries is enough to account for any football game.

So Columbia defeated Williams by a score of 20-6 before a crowd of more than 15,000 on Baker Field last Saturday afternoon. In the entire first half the Purple line, rallying to the example of Captain Andersen, yielded only one first down on straight football to the plunging Lion backs, while the same backs, in their turn on defensive, broke through to anchor Williams runners behind the line of scrimmage.

Williams was the first to propose the aerial attack as a solution for the deadlock, but Columbia took enthusiastically to the idea, and the aforementioned backs, who could get nowhere with the ball, seemed to be able to go anywhere without it, and pick it out of the air later on. All three touchdowns and six first downs were the direct result of this aerial versatility, while the Purple could complete only three of her 12 endeavors to keep the pace she had set.

Even the cold statistics of the game tell the story of a team wearing under the pounding of a stronger combination. Though the final count in first downs was 15-6 in favour of the victors, it was 3-2 for Williams in the first quarter and 5-4 at the end of the half. Largely because of ten completed passes, the Lion made its ground six times to none for the Purple in the third period, to which the second Columbia touchdown properly belonged, though it was scored at the opening of the fourth.

The obstinacy of the line is indicated by the fact that while Williams earned two first downs on straight football during the first quarter, Columbia was allowed none. At the half it was 3-1 for Williams. At the three quarter mark the Lion was getting the edge on the Purple line 3-2, but not until the last minutes of play could he make his way through a crumbling wall for the four consecutive first downs which brought the final tally.

Williams got off to a misleading start shortly after the kick off when Howe left the left end 30 yards behind, and then Brown followed for nine more, leaving Howe with an easy job to finish off the second first down, but all such advances on the goal came to a definite end when Scott dropped Howe off left wing, and Bleecker, 200 pound tackle, caught him eight yards behind the line on the next play.

Columbia could not budge. The Purple took up its march again with a pass from

Dean of Harvard Theological School Says Required Chapel Is Menace to Religious Life of the Country

Showing that pulpit as well as congregation recognizes the deficiencies of religious training through compulsion, Dr. Willard L. Sperry, Dean of the Harvard Theological School, has written an article entitled "Compulsory Chapel" for the current issue of The Atlantic Monthly in which he denounces required religious exercises as conducive of "the tragic delusion that religion is discipline and nothing more." "Anyone who cares about religion," continues Dr. Sperry, who has frequently visited Williams and conducted Sunday morning chapel services here, "must deplore this pathetically mangled and joyless account of religion, with its later and unhappy consequences for the whole religious life of the country."

The theme which Dean Sperry takes for his argument is a verse written by Wordsworth during his college days at Cambridge, in which he expresses his dislike for "The witless shepherd who persists to drive

A flock that thirsts not to a pool disliked." Wordsworth further elaborates on the subject, as follows:

"Be wise, Ye Presidents and Deans, and, till the spirit Of ancient times revive, and youth be trained At home in pious service, to your bells Give seasonable rest, for 't is a sound Hollow as ever vexed the tranquil air; And your officious doings bring disgrace On the plain steeples of our English Church Whose worship, 'mid remotest village trees, Suffers for this."

Dr. Sperry concludes from this that "Whatever else Wordsworth means, he means that life is something more than discipline. His reflections on his undergraduate days at Cambridge persuaded him that the chapel services of St. John's College were lifeless and joyless because they represented necessity, and nothing more. He demanded joy and the emancipation which is the state for joy."

"If there is anything to be said for compulsory chapel," he continues, "whatever there is to be said may be found in Calvin and Huxley. Required chapel, in the

M. Lapaquellerie, French Author-Lecturer, Points Out That 'New French Drama Blends Synthesis, Romance'

"The contemporary French theater is striving to present romance in its most sensible aspect, realism as a thing of poetic beauty, and life itself transposed on the plan of a dream—a fantasy absent from the theater of yesterday," stated M. Yvon Lapaquellerie, French author and lecturer, in a criticism of "Le Théâtre Français D'après-guerre" presented in the Thompson Physical Laboratory on Friday evening. It is this unexplored field of literature, blending romance and synthesis, believes M. Lapaquellerie, that has inaugurated since the World War an entirely new and original epoch in French drama under the capable direction of a school of French dramatists known as the "Théâtre D'avant-garde."

In a brief introduction to his central theme, M. Lapaquellerie concerned himself with this "theater of yesterday" which provides both the background, and a striking contrast, for the present drama. Four centuries of dramatic production have brought to the French stage alternate waves of popularity and reaction for each phase of literature. The Romantic Period which developed hand in hand with the acceptance of the novel at the beginning of the nineteenth century, was in itself a bitter protest against the artificiality and cold reason of the classic period which had held the stage under its sway for two centuries. And when the Romance movement, in its turn had served its usefulness, and was degenerating into maudlin sentimentality, the dramatists who felt the need of "a little brutality", led by Zola and Antoine, turned to realism, an ideal that swiftly became even more intolerable. So far did this craze for mechanical perfection extend that Antoine, for instance, in a scene depicting a butchershop, did not hesitate to introduce the bloody carcasses of animals to his setting. But a second reaction as swiftly succeeded the first, and in the succeeding period, Maeterlinck and Rostand attained their fame. And after the advent of the war, the French writers divided into two groups: "Le Théâtre des Boulevards" and "Le Théâtre D'avant-garde."

Le Théâtre des Boulevards follows out

WITH OR WITHOUT?

Out of a sky that is not always clear, we offer as fodder for the undergraduate opinion factory this week the question of awarding athletic insignia. That it is a real question—not one concocted by this paper merely to show that the editorial ear is to the ground—was quite apparent last year, and it will soon become so again when basketball and hockey start whining for bigger "W's". It will be well if the College can forestall this painful hour, or at any rate meet it with some definite ideas on the subject and some firmly made plans for dealing with it.

There is one plan which can in one stroke settle not only this basketball-hockey controversy, but also all major-minor sports controversies. This is by abolishing with as little compunction as possible all artificial classification of sports into "major" and "minor", and by stripping our athletes' sweaters of all dangling doo-dabs. Conservative Williams need not fear taking a false step in the dark, for the way has been illuminated by many other colleges, notably Dartmouth. At Hanover they seem to realize that a man who plays a good game of golf may be just as "major" as the man who plays a good game of football. Certain distinctions in the matter of size and color of the letter still remain as hangovers from the old system of award, but if an athlete earns a "D", he is allowed to take it straight.

We are ready at Williams to follow suit, and we recommend that the Athletic Council take whatever action may be necessary to give all our athletes an unadulterated "W". If there are any objections, the loudest will undoubtedly proceed from the ranks of the existing major sports. For example, the football god (if any are left) may shudder at the thought of being mistaken for a cross-country runner, and it is probably true that if all Williams athletes wore simple, straight "W's", all Williams athletes would look very much alike—especially on Spring Street. But it still remains to be demonstrated that this is a bad state of affairs—indeed, that it is not a great deal better than a system which makes so many cruel discriminations against so many admirable sports.

THE COLUMBIA GAME—AFTERWARD

Now we know that Columbia still has a better football team. But we got what we wanted on Baker Field. Fifteen thousand people know that when Williams and Columbia meet on the gridiron there is no under-dog to take a licking for money, nor yet a valiant poodle to be indulgently cheered on as he "fights hard" to stem the onrush of the Lion. There were two game beasts of the same species on the field Saturday; one was stronger.

Before two highly appreciative audiences, the United States Marine Band has made its first visit to Williamstown; we sincerely hope it will not be the last. That their program—splendidly executed—was popular, must have been evident to all those who were fortunate enough to be present, and this is indeed an encouraging sign. For once a community's appetite becomes whetted by such performances as this, there is reason to believe that ways will be found further to appease it.

To the musicians, we give hearty thanks for their generous granting of encores and requests; and to the Little Theatre and Musical Clubs all praise for their untiring efforts towards making this welcome innovation a success.

Lion Takes to Air to Defeat Purple

Brown to Howe, but Howe's next designs on left end were again anticipated by Scott to the extent of several yards, and a second pass failed. And a second time the Lion was held in his tracks: Schwartz dropped Liflander, Howe mobbed Scott in revenge off tackle. And so on for most of the quarter, until Columbia took to the air.

The take-off was shaky, for the first pass was recalled for off sides and the second was knocked by Howe into the hands of Putnam. It was not until the last play of the period that Liflander made a pass from Scott good for 20 and bespoke what was to come. As a result the second quarter started dangerously near the Williams goal, and two more passes did the rest. On the last Liflander picked up a little pitch from Scott over right flank and carried it home.

Williams retaliated by pushing the aerial attack to the limit. The first fruit was 30 yards covered by Langmaid after taking an offering from Brown. An attempt to follow up so promising a beginning led only to penalties for failure. But Columbia drew a penalty for holding, and again the Purple entered on the relentless aggression which marked the first half. A pass from Brown to Putnam accounted for first down and brought the line within striking distance of the goal. Nothing could stop the score-hungry crew: Putnam, Brown, and Brown again through the line for nine yards and a touchdown. Langmaid failed on the point, and the score was 7-6.

And so the score remained until the end of the half through a rapid sequence of plays which got nowhere. The lines held, passes failed on both sides, and Howe and Buser punted back and forth to no particular advantage.

It was a worn but not broken team which started the second half for Williams. Lasell's kick-off rolled between the Columbia backs and over the goal line, and by the time it was recovered Brown was on hand, but the play was recalled for a penalty. Buser, running in the second kick, was forced out on the 10-yard line, so that play started in a position promising for the Purple. Buser and Stanczyk, however, began to find the way through a tiring line, which tightened again and again only in time to kick out of difficulty. The Williams offense was over and the defense was obviously near the end.

In the meantime Stanczyk-Liflander, Scott-Liflander, Liflander-Buser flew the passes. The situation was not yet out of hand, two more tosses from Buser went to earth, but Buser, forced to kick, rolled the ball out on Williams four-yard line. Howe kicked out 40 yards, but the tide came in again; Buser to Scott, Liflander to Buser for 25 yards to the five-yard line, and then with time off to walk to the other end of the field for the final period, Buser to Scott again, and Liflander to Buser again, and another touchdown.

In the face of this, for more than half of the fourth quarter the Williams eleven still presented a football machine. Passes failed, so Brown and Howe and Putnam went through the line for 15 yards before a fumble ended the moment of final suspense. It was the end. Three consecutive first downs were smashed through what had been a wall, and when the line threatened to hold on the three-yard line, an easy toss from Buser to Liflander brought the score to 20-6. The line found some revolve in blocking the kick by Liflander where it couldn't block the man.

That was about all. Buser intercepted Williams' one attempt at reprisal. Then it was Liflander to Buser and Buser to Liflander all over again in that deadly series of passes which, since the middle of the third period, had never failed.

The line-up and summary is as follows:

'Childe Herald' Is Right Again

Again Childe Herald proves himself a correct judge of football teams! Out of the nine forecast games on last Saturday, only one team which he picked as victorious was defeated—Pennsylvania, who fell to the Navy. He admits that he predicted some ties when a victory was scored, but in each case the score was close enough to justify his prediction. In addition, he claimed that Amherst would defeat Wesleyan. The game was a 20-20 tie, since Wesleyan was fortunate enough to tally 13 points in the last quarter. All in all, Childe Herald is still secure in his position of forecaster extraordinary of football games, although he bows in respect to the gentleman who forecasts for College Humor since he predicted a 20-7 victory for Columbia in the Williams game—only one point from the correct score.

Below are given our predictions along with the actual results:

	Predicted Score	Actual Outcome
Army vs. Yale	20-13	18-6
Harvard vs. Dartmouth	13-13	19-7
Illinois vs. Northwestern	14-0	6-0
Wisconsin vs. Michigan	14-0	7-0
N. Y. U. vs. Colgate	7-0	47-6
Princeton vs. Cornell	14-14	3-0
Navy vs. Penn	6-14	6-0
Iowa vs. Minnesota	14-14	7-6
Amherst vs. Wesleyan	13-7	20-20

Smith Recommends Freer Choice of Junior Courses

Prof. T. C. Smith, Chairman of the Curriculum Committee, is bringing up a proposal before the November meeting of the faculty that all Sophomores, with an average of seven B's or better, will be permitted to take as many as two courses in the Junior ranking. This move has been decided upon by Professor Smith because of certain criticisms which have been made by various undergraduates during the last few years.

The two main criticisms are, first, that there are too many general courses for the Sophomore student, and, second, that a great many would prefer something more under the surface for their second year. Therefore this plan has been devised, so that the aspiring student of good marks may select two Junior courses. Also, this may still be done by the ambitious, even though not possessing the required average of seven B's or better, with the permission of the Advisory Committee. From a search of the records it is seen that there are some 30 men in the Sophomore class who would fall under this classification.

This new project of the Curriculum Committee is another preliminary for honors work by the second-year man. An instance where this proposal would be of especial use may be found in the continuation of History 1-2 by the sophomore who now must wait until his Junior year.

Playing in the semi-final round of the College Tennis Tournament, Shoaff '30 defeated Sewall '29 last Saturday in a five set match by scores of 7-5, 4-6, 3-6, 6-4, 8-6, thereby winning the right to meet Wolf '29 in the finals. Though seeded second, one notch above his opponent, Sewall could not overcome Shoaff's persistent attack and finally dropped the deciding set after the closest and most interesting battle of the tournament.

CONTEST PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED BY 'TIMES'

Current Events Contest Will Be Early in Spring; Newhall Is Local Chairman

Discussion of arrangements for the next Intercollegiate Current Events Contest, sponsored by the New York Times, was held on October 18 at the fourth annual meeting of the Academic Council which represents the twenty leading educational institutions competing in the contest. Professor Richard A. Newhall, chairman of the Williams contest committee, has announced that the contest examinations, heretofore taken late in the spring, will be held at least six weeks earlier this year, sometime between the middle of February and the middle of March.

As prizes in this competition, designed to encourage an intelligent following of the daily news among undergraduates, a medal and various cash amounts are offered in each of the competing institutions, and an intercollegiate prize of $500 is awarded to the student receiving the highest score. Last year the local prize was won by Alexander Samders '28, while Robert L. Stern '29, and Clinton E. Knox '30 were second and third respectively. During the past three years the intercollegiate prize has been won by Harvard once and Princeton twice.

Among the important steps taken at the meeting of the Academic Council was the recommendation of advancing the spring examination dates so that they will not conflict with the inevitable accumulation of critical academic events toward the end of the college year. Other recommendations dealt with details of the examination itself. There has been continuous experiment in this direction since the contests were started, and the experience of three years has been utilized in composing an examination which avoids equally superficiality and overspecialization. The place on the Executive Committee left vacant by the resignation of Professor Robert D. Leigh, Williams representative last year, was filled by the unanimous election of Professor Robert E. Cushman of Cornell, and Professor Newhall has been chosen to fill Professor Leigh's position as representative. The remaining members of the Williams committee are Professor Buffinton, Professor Clark, and Professor McLaren.

Twenty leading colleges and universities are entered in the contest, including Amherst, Brown, Bryn Mawr, University of Chicago, Cornell, Columbia, Dartmouth, Harvard, Michigan, Mount Holyoke, University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Smith, United States Military and Naval Academies, Vassar, Virginia, Wellesley, and Yale.

MILLER EXPLAINS HIS PREFERENCE OF SMITH

Favors the Democratic Candidate Because of His Frankness About Issues

Courtesy of Prof. J. W. Miller

Citizenship is not primarily a matter of biology, geography, or law. These can but provide the formal conditions under which its inner essence can grow. If its form is legality, its substance is conversation. For community is conversation. No physical thing can be shared, for its use is necessarily exclusive. What can be shared is ideas and purposes. The citizen accordingly, can be said to exist as a concrete reality only where he participates in the formation and expression of opinion on public matters. And parties write platforms and present candidates in order to aid in this realization. Opinion without information is only prejudice. A basic test, therefore, of the value of parties and of candidates lies in their power and willingness to make real the formal potentialities of biology and law.

I.

I favor Smith because to a degree unprecedented in my time he has realized the potential of citizenship. In New York his repeated appeals and reports have dispelled apathy to public affairs and aroused thoughtful concern in the community. He has thereby dignified the lives of millions, rescuing them from insignificant individuality and endowing them with social perspective. That is why they feel for him not only esteem but affection, as Mr. Hughes has said. That these propositions are true is a matter of record. Smith is our greatest citizen because he is our greatest emancipator. We love those who make us free and who awaken in us some pale prisoned ghost of vitality. Smith is the artist in politics. He can lay out complex questions in simple words and manner, yet preserve their truth and importance. I will defend this proposition: That a party is truly a political party rather than a private association, and a candidate for office a public figure, only when a vigorous attempt is made by them to create and preserve community of explicit thought.

II.

I favor Smith because in this vital matter the Republican party and its candidate are bankrupt. For eight years conversation has been discouraged and citizenship made impossible. Harding's "normalcy", Coolidge's "coolness", and Hoover's silence and ambiguity give no material for creating a national mind out of national geography. No greater insult could be levelled at our free people than Coolidge's disgraceful concealment behind the emasculated anonymity of the White House spokesman. For eight years during which Smith was redeeming the political conscience of our greatest state, Hoover sat among associates the most corrupt and incompetent in our history and gave us silence. Had Smith ever acquiesced in such associates—can you imagine the political result? It is not enough that a public man does not himself rob the till; it is his duty to display wrongs. If wrong doing is nothing for a public man to get excited about, then the state is absurd. The state is an education of the public conscience. You all know Mr. Work's memorable comment on the corruption in his own department. The disintegrating force of acquiescence in wrong is greater than that of the wrong.

And in his campaign Hoover has resorted to ambiguity, falsification and demagoguery. The disagreement among his own supporters as to what he means on prohibition, water power, and farm relief is fantastic and a matter of public record. It is the complete collapse of the political role. And I charge, and can show, that he has altered official statistics of his own department. He is a demagogue of high

Colleges Employ Shady Financial Methods to Gain Appearance of Poverty, Thinks Prof. W. B. Munroe

That "there is hardly a single off-color practice in corporate financing that does not have its counterpart in our institutions of higher education" . . . such as "concealment of assets, the juggling of profit and loss accounts, the omission of proper allowance for depreciation, the failure to provide adequate resources in some cases, and the frequent withholding of information which the stockholders ought to know", is the opinion of Professor William Bennett Munroe, which he expressed in the October issue of the Atlantic Monthly in an article entitled, "Are Our Colleges Playing Poor?" Dr. Munroe, who was an instructor of History and Political Science at Williams from 1901 to 1904, receiving an honorary degree of M.A. here in 1904, and who is at present Professor of Municipal Government at Harvard, explains these shady methods of collegiate finance, all of which are planned to make the colleges appear poorer than they really are, by the statement that "the college must bear the protective coloration of poverty, no matter what its opulence, for he who would be successful as a mendicant must not jangle gold in his pockets."

Dr. Munroe gives a definite illustration of one American University where the list of invested funds include "a block of General Electric Common, nearly sixteen thousand shares, the value of which is given as one dollar! The actual value of the stock, as a matter of fact, is more than two million dollars, and its dividends order, appealing to the most materialistic impulses of the nation, fanning class and sectional hatred by generalities and innuendo. Anyone who owns four cents and can read a New York paper can learn any day the transparent falsity of his claim that farmers benefit from the tariff. His Elizabethan speech was a masterpiece of psychology in fomenting sectional prejudice. His Boston speech lures the electorate not only with a full dinner pail but also with a full garage. He promises us an automobile, not thoughtful citizenship. It is the bait for Esau.

And he has allowed himself to become the silent beneficiary of the most menacing campaign of bigotry and intolerance in my time. The Klan, the A. S. L., Mrs. Willebrandt, John Roach Straton, The Fellowship Forum—these are his disgusting allies. For these hideous and fanatical forces he has only a soggy platitude as a rebuke.

What Hoover may be as a private man is not my concern. As a public man he is a more presentable evader of responsible leadership than Harding or Coolidge.

III.

I favor Smith because of his record of progressive accomplishment in New York. What laws he has advocated and fostered anyone can find out by reading a dozen pages. He opposed the ouster of Socialists duly elected by law to the state assembly. But I need not review that record of twenty-five years. It offers a target long and wide. It is an accomplishment which his enemies cannot impair. I favor him because he is the politician in politics possessing a perhaps unrivalled knowledge of the basic procedure of law making. His masterful acquisition of command over the none too willing party in which he secured his early training is a stirring tale of fearless dedication to high purposes. And I prefer him because in the main I agree with his clearly presented solutions of the issues, notably power control, prohibition, tariff commission and foreign policy.

IV.

I will vote for Smith not so much hopefully as gratefully. He promises to make us a community of thought, not a sand-heap of private acquisitiveness. Mr. Hoover promises me an automobile; Smith promises me citizenship. How can I waver?

amount to over $47,000 annually." "The same institution", he says further, "carries on its books holdings of United Fruit at less than $40 per share, when the true market value of the stock is nearer $140. There are also Electric Bond and Share common, set down at merely nominal valuation, when everybody knows that its value is substantial."

The author claims that the above illustrations are general and true of many colleges. He states: "Figures of modest proportions are desirable in the perennial assurance that college endowments are pitifully inadequate. And of course, it is much easier to demonstrate this inadequacy of productive resources when book valuations are deflated 30, 50, or in some cases 100 per cent. In short, the valuations are shrunk to a point where they will not jeopardize the success of the college when it passes the hat among its alumni."

Dr. Munroe criticizes the reports of college treasurers because of inadequate diversification and the lack of safe investments. "There are some colleges", the author states, "which have invested from two-thirds to three-fourths of their entire endowment in real estate mortgages, with a very large portion of these mortgages in their own immediate neighborhood, when the danger of serious financial reverse is by no means negligible. . . . Lists of college investments include some holdings which are obviously speculative and, if they were held by a bank, would promptly come under the examiner's censorship."

The author remarks: "It is sometimes said that a college without a deficit is a rarity." He explains this fact by the statement that "a college deficit is sometimes a bugbear which is conjured up by the comptroller's office as a spur to professorial economy and alumni generosity." According to the author, there are many methods of producing this much-desired deficit, such as charting against unrestricted income various expenses which could have been defrayed out of gifts for designated purposes, and paying out of current income for repair of buildings, equipment, etc."

Dr. Munroe goes on to criticize further the financial organization of colleges by the very charge that professors of economics make of corporate financing—"the almost complete disassociation of contributions from control, and the vesting of ultimate authority in the hands of those who have provided very little of the capital stock." He urges that alumni should be more completely represented on the Boards of Trustees, which he regards as unable to cope with financial problems at present. He also complains of poor budgets, which are made up hurriedly and without careful consideration of current needs.

"Perhaps the most important criticism of the colleges is the immense outlay in administrative organization." The author claims that "the fame and glory of a college depend on the teachers who teach therein, and that all else is ancillary to the furtherance of the teacher's effectiveness." He points to the too many courses "which run the gamut from Assyriology to the Theory of Aeronautics and from Christian Missions to Foreign Exchange", and to the great number of office workers and deans, who do not affect scholarship directly. "The proportion of actual teachers," he states, "to the total paid-personnel has been going down during the past dozen years, and that in some institutions they are already outnumbered by the non-combatants."

Dr. Munroe concludes by admitting that colleges "have greatly improved their methods of accounting and of financial reporting during the past quarter of a century", but asserts, however, that "there is still some distance to be covered before the college professor of business administration can feel himself safely out of a glass house."

leadership of one who, however able as a public administrator, lacks the experience, the wide outlook on affairs, and the complete and thorough understanding of conditions, of Herbert Hoover."

"Turning now to the question that touches us vitally, the interests of the farmers and granting that the two men have equal powers of mind and of ability in administration, which, may I ask, would you choose? One whose experience, admirable though it is in many respects is best typified by the popular song, 'The Side-walks of New York', or one born in mid-continent, educated there and on the Pacific Coast, and familiar from his youth with the things that make for and against the welfare of the dweller on the soil?"

"If one takes seriously the statements of the two platforms concerning farm relief, distinction between them is fairly difficult, but there is a matter of public welfare which presents an issue clearly defined and sharply drawn. I refer to the question of Prohibition. Mr. Hoover has declared that he will give careful attention to the question of change or modification of the present law, basing his conclusions upon the finding of ascertainable facts. This does not satisfy those who regard the evidence as now complete nor those who are intolerant to any interference with what they regard as their personal rights and privileges, but I take no factional view of the question. The saloon was wrecking a large part of our population, yet those who said, 'Cut out the saloon, but keep for us our inalienable rights', were advocates of class distinction."

"We are told that the majority of the people of the United States did not desire the 18th Amendment. However this may be, we are likely to learn something of the sentiment of the people concerning these matters in the coming election—enough, I believe, to convince us that not only a majority of our people entertain views favorable to the 18th Amendment, but a majority so great as to meet the arguments of those who say that penal laws ought not to be passed at the behest of a mere majority of the people. If Mr. Hoover is chosen as the President, the question will be approached by one whose life demonstrates his sympathetic interest in the welfare of the people."

"Those who question the constitutionality of the 18th Amendment set up their individual judgments against that of the Supreme Court. Can it be possible that any considerable portion of the people of the United States are prepared once more to raise the question of the right of the Supreme Court to determine the constitutionality of an act of Congress? If one is to believe what some opponents of the 18th Amendment have to say, it would seem that we must once again argue the question whether, when the Supreme Court has held a statute to be constitutional, a public official or the people of the United States are at liberty to disobey it."

"In the present campaign, argument seems to consist merely of finding reasons for desires and prejudices. I shall support Herbert Hoover for President, not because he is a Republican, but because he is a man of native power and integrity above that of most men that I know. I support him not merely because of his wide and long experiences as an administrator in public office, but because he has displayed in whatever he has undertaken, powers far beyond those of other men. I am for Herbert Hoover because he places opportunity for all over privileges for some and the snuffity of the home above the satisfaction of appetite."

HOOVER IS WINNER IN COLLEGE STRAW VOTE*'College Humor' Ballot Shows that Republican Candidate Leads In 38 States

College Humor has issued the following statement concerning the results of the straw vote taken under its auspices throughout the colleges of the country:

"At the September registration this year there were 892,808 students in the 1,104 American colleges, of which 544,685 were men and 348,123 girls. This army of young voters (most of whom had never had any experience at the polls) have been termed by Democrats and Republicans as the hope of America. The two parties should be interested in figures obtained."

"The co-operation of the college newspapers was secured, the majority of them running ballots on their front pages. Voting boxes were placed at strategic spots on the campus. Returns were wired to Chicago at the latest possible moment. Thousands of secret ballots were mailed by College Humor to fraternities and sororities in every college. In many schools, particularly in the southern states, the students did strenuous campaigning for their favorites."

"Analysis of the vote showed that Herbert Hoover had the majority of student votes in thirty-eight states and the District of Columbia. Alfred E. Smith carried ten states: Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas."

"Dividing the country into zones, every one of the following eastern states voted for Hoover, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware. The largest vote for him was in Connecticut, nine to one. Smith made his best showing in New York, where the vote ran nine to five for Hoover. The total votes in the eastern states gave Hoover a three to one majority."

"In the southern states, Smith carried every state with the exception of West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Arkansas and the District of Columbia. The vote was closest in Kentucky and West Virginia, Hoover winning—curiously enough—by only three votes in both cases. Smith's majority was a comfortable one in every other state he carried, Texas and Louisiana going over to his standards four to one. Of all votes cast in the sixteen southern states, Smith led by a majority of seven to five. The heaviest vote was cast in Virginia and the lightest vote in Arkansas."

"Of the central states, Hoover carried every one of them. The west-central states (North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas) all went Republican by a total vote of three to one."

"Hoover carried every western state (Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, Washington, Oregon and California). Taking the total of all votes cast in this section he led three to one. In Colorado the Democrats were strongest, three to two and in Montana the weakest, thirty-nine to one. Of all the states in the union, Montana was the strongest for the G. O. P. forces."

"Virginia cast the greatest number of individual votes for Smith, and Pennsylvania the most votes for Hoover. The largest percentage in any one college was twenty to one for Smith in Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Maryland. The largest percentage for Hoover in any one college was eighteen to one at Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois."

The time for the winners, while not a course record, was considerably faster than any recorded in the past few years and a good deal under the mark of 34:30 set by Adams '27 two years ago.

The summary of the meet follows: Tie for first between Goodbody (W) and Guernsey (W), Butler (M), Moore (W), Dalton (M), Chapman (W), E. Reynolds (W), Haskins (M), Witt (M), and Farnham (M). Time: 33m., 13s. Score Williams 20, Middlebury 35.

Oxford Debaters Will*Open Forensic Season

Oxford University will open the Williams debating season when that English team, which is now making a tour of the United States, comes here on November 8. The Williams team, which will be composed of Harris and Reeves '29, and Heaton '30, will take the negative of the question: "Resolved, That the United States should join the League of Nations."

Announcement has also been made by Harris '29, President of the Adelphe Union, of the tentative debating schedule for this year, which includes League debates with Brown, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Yale, and one other opponent yet to be chosen. The first of these League contests will take place on December 8, when a Yale team comes here and a Williams team travels to Providence to meet Brown.

In addition to these League debates, several other features are included in the tentative schedule. Williams will continue her debating rivalry with Hamilton in the contest at Clinton on November 26. Radcliffe, a new debating opponent for Williams, will be met at Cambridge, probably on December 21. The plans also call for forensic contests with Albany Law School, the University of Oklahoma, and the Chinese Debating team of Harvard.

College Pastor Plans to*Enlarge Student Church

Feeling that student associate membership in the Church of Christ at Williams College has been altogether too small during the last few years the Reverend Joseph Twichell, College pastor, has brought about the organization of an undergraduate committee to stimulate interest in joining the college chapel. The associate membership system used at Williams is similar to that in operation at most of the colleges in the East, and involves simply a non-sectarian affiliation lasting only as long as the student is in college.

While a number of undergraduates have in the past become permanent members of the Chapel, an associate membership in no way affects a student's connections with his home church. The signing of the simple statement, "I accept the teachings of Christ as the best guide for living, and therefore desire to associate myself with the Church of Christ in Williams College", is all that is necessary. These statements will be distributed during the week by the undergraduate committee consisting of these Seniors: Higginbotham, Chairman, Chapman, Faison, Field, Fitch, Fowler, Hales, Henninger, Hess, Johnson, Matheson, Rohrbach, Shoaff, and Strong.

Political Debate

Resolved, That: Mr. Hoover rather than Governor Smith should be elected next President of the United States, will be the subject of a debate to be held in Jesup Auditorium at 7:30 p. m., Monday, November 5. Following the speaking, the floor will be open for discussion. Everyone, whether connected with the College or not, is cordially invited to attend.

frame of mind, not looking for delicate and subtle effects, but better for swing, dash, and brilliancy. If one yielded to that attitude, the Band proved very enjoyable. The audience was offered all that in Chapin Hall, and the general impression was one of great pleasure and enjoyment.

Another element which contributed largely to the program was its complete "professionalism". There was no doubt about the result—one needed only to look at the trim, military figures, and the quiet, business-like manner of the individuals of the organization to feel a sense of pride in being present. It was a lesson in discipline as well as in music. Every member of the organization discharged his duties perfectly, making the Band excellent in both respects. The teamwork was noticeable, the absence of "side", and the relation of the individual to the whole organization. In short, it was a "large" performance.

Criticizes Modern Plays

the tendencies of the pre-war period, reproducing and renewing the themes of that period which ushered in the twentieth century. Their cardinal fault, according to M. Lapaquellerie, is that they belong to the "grey-beards", the generation of "old-timers".

Le Théâtre D'avant-garde is the antithesis of its contemporary school. It comprises a group of writers and actors of small means, with little public support. They number many who have painted their own sets, and played to almost empty halls in costumes made by members of the cast. But they possess what M. Lapaquellerie called "faith, the sacred fire." In place of settings and thoughts crudely realistic, they seek to create an atmosphere indispensable to the action. They believe in themselves, and in their entire independence from any other school. Art represents more to them than success.

Among the members of the pre-war school, three have achieved especial prominence. First there is Sacha Guitry, whose offerings, both as an actor and a producer, in New York last year received unusual critical acclaim. But Guitry, with his superficial comedy yields, in the opinion of the lecturer, to his contemporary, M. Alfred Savoir, whose excellent plays "Le Baptême" and "Le Dompteur" place him on the border-line between the old and new schools. The foremost exponent of this school of drama, however, is M. Bourdet, whose immensely successful play "The Captive" was presented in New York last year. M. Bourdet properly belongs in both schools of play-writing. He is included among the pre-war writers because he caters to the public taste, retaining a large following, yet at the same time he disregards convention and overturns accepted standards.

M. Lapaquellerie then devoted the remainder of his talk to a critical study of the prominent writers of the progressive school, showing how each followed the same ideal in diverse ways, and illustrating his points by selections from each dramatist. He first read snatches of the engaging satire "Knock", from the pen of Jules Romains, whose versatility enables him to dwell upon philosophy, politics, and social questions with equal success. Far more serious is the work of M. Lenormand, a modern writer who has been profoundly influenced by Froude and Proust. His plays introduce a searching character-psychology, and rank among the best of the modern tragedies. M. Lapaquellerie suggested that it might be well for those who still believe the Frenchman to be "a gay, polite person, fond of dancing and light wines" to investigate the writings of M. Lenormand. Jean Jacques Bernard, another prominent writer, believes in the effective use of silence, especially at the climax and conclusions of his pieces; while Jean Sarment takes his inspiration in dreams and fantasy. The American style of Eugene O'Neill has its counterpart in M. Victor Pellerin, whose actors also both speak their lines and express their thoughts. Finally, M. Lapaquellerie read a selection from Siegfried, a symbolic play of the War, by Jean Giradoux, whose admirable and wholly original treatment of this subject has been hailed by French critics as one of the foremost ventures in modern literature.

This was the first of a series of lectures that M. Lapaquellerie will deliver in this country. His second engagement was in New Haven, Conn., yesterday, where he addressed "L'Alliance Francaise."

Dean Writes Article on
Compulsory Chapel

name of religion, may be a picturesque vindication of some such universal coercion of the individual. Perhaps life and religion are like that. Certainly the college student who thinks that he has settled his account with religion when he has succeeded in abolishing compulsory chapel has a very imperfect idea of what the life of man in this world is like. On the other hand Wordsworth was right when he said that life means something more than discipline."

"The apologists for compulsory chapel", continues the writer, "defend it mainly on the ground that college discipline requires occasional coercive regimentation of the entire community. The arguments are familiar. It is a good thing to get the whole college together regularly; proctors and monitors must be given place and time to make sure that delinquents are not week-ending elsewhere; students need to be taught something about religion no matter if the means are distasteful. A compulsory chapel service, conceived and conducted on this disciplinary basis, furnishes the best occasion for the realization of these laudable ends."

"Now the weakness of the argument rests upon the assumption that what the student needs and is supposed to get in this connection is discipline, not religion. If we may trust the testimony of man after man, long out of college, who endured this coercion, he got the discipline, but it left him with a rooted antipathy to religion and all its works. Those hours of compulsion were unredeemed by any joy, even prophetic, if not actual."

If discipline is the object of life, and discipline makes students hate religion, why, argues Dean Sperry, not divide this hatred among the other college departments. "Thus on one Sunday morning the students might be required to sing the 'Star Spangled Banner' and to listen to considerable selections from the Constitution of the United States, with appropriate comments, that they might be helped to hate the United States."

"Another Sunday could be very fitly devoted to some play of Shakespeare's, that the 'young barbarians all at play'—which is the traditional description of all undergraduates—might perfect themselves in their salutary hatred of English literature. Religion is quite willing to pull its weight in the boat; it objects to doing all the rowing for an eight."

"The truth of the matter sometimes looks rather like this," concludes Dr. Sperry, "the stoutest defenders of compulsory chapel are not, as one might at first suppose, persons who care very much for religion but persons who care very little for it. No man who cares for religion can be happy at the travesty of worship which goes on in many if not most compulsory chapel services. Compulsory chapel concerns others than college authorities; since it seems to people the land with graduates who are constitutionally unable to believe that a church spire in any way points to joy."

COUNCIL EXPOUNDS
NEW AUTO RULINGS

College Hears Drastic Resolution and Reports from Other Committees

Several topics were brought up for discussion at the first College meeting of the year last Thursday night in Jesup Hall, by far the most important of these being the question of student ownership and operation of cars. As chairman of the Non-Athletic Council Higginbotham '29 also brought up a proposition in regard to the collection of the Non-Athletic Tax, and J. McKean '29 read the report of the Honor System Committee for the last year.

Clark '29, chairman of the Student Council, opened the meeting by bringing up the two minor matters for discussion first. Both were passed without query, and the texts of the accepted proposal and report are printed at the end of this article. Proceeding to the consideration of the automobile situation, the chairman read a resolution adopted by the Student Council, the explanation of which, he said, had been the main reason for calling the meeting. The resolution ran as follows:

"Gentlemen: This College meeting has been called by the Student Council to discuss the automobile situation now existing in Williams College. In the past few years there has been a growing sentiment on the part of the Board of Trustees that the automobile situation was a menace to the welfare of the College. Automobiles were taken from the Freshmen in October, 1924, by action of the Student Council. Owing to the fact that the above restriction did not materially improve the situation, the Committee on Administration deemed it wise in the following year to further restrict the privilege by limiting the use of cars to juniors and seniors. Following several accidents, in the winter of 1928 the Student Council was officially informed that the Board of Trustees had again taken up the matter of the use of automobiles in the hope that after 1929 the use of automobiles by students would be discontinued. The Trustees, however, had laid the question on the table for the Committee on Administration and the Student Council to consider. Upon receipt of this information, the Student Council drew up a brief and resolution asking permission to handle the car question on the same co-operative basis that the House Party and Chapel situations had been dealt with. The reaction of the Committee on Administration was as follows:

Organ Recital Series
Announced by Safford

Commencing next week, Mr. Charles L. Safford, director of music, will hold an organ recital in Chapin Hall every Wednesday at 4.15 p. m. to which the public is cordially invited. These recitals will continue, with exception of the Wednesdays included in vacation periods, until the first of April, and for at least a part of the series will present a historical sequence of organ music, beginning with early examples of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, and carrying the material down to the present time.

In view of the success of Mr. Safford's recitals in past years, his recent announcement is of particular interest. On each occasion a brief explanatory talk will be made with reference to the program of the afternoon, and the historical type of music will be supplemented by a short program of music taken from general sources.

SCHEDULE OF DEBATES
FOR '28-'29 ANNOUNCED

Six League Contests Are Arranged Including One With Vassar on March 23

Facing one of the most ambitious schedules ever attempted at Williams, the Adelpic Union will open the debating season on November 8 with the Oxford University Debaters, discussing the question: Resolved, That the United States should join the League of Nations. Following the Oxford contest, a schedule of fifteen debates has been arranged, including two pending Freshman contests with Hotchkiss, the dates of which have not been definitely settled, and varsity meetings with most of the important Eastern colleges.

Six League contests have been scheduled including Harvard, Princeton, Yale, and Vassar, the last of which is a new member of the Eastern Intercollegiate Debating League. The first League debate comes on December 8 when Williams meets Yale in Williamstown and Brown at Providence to discuss the question: Resolved, That the economic prosperity of the United States is unfavorable to its morals.

An inter-sectional contest has been arranged with the University of Oklahoma, the debate to take place in Williamstown, on March 16. Radcliffe has been added to Williams' list of opponents with a debate scheduled for December 20. Following the above schedule, the season will close with a debate with Vassar on March 23.

HOOVER IS COLLEGE
PRESIDENTIAL CHOICE

G. O. P. Candidate Swamps Smith
by 3-1 Majority in 'Record'
Straw Vote

Herbert Hoover was acclaimed as the Purple choice for the presidency by a three to one majority over Governor Smith as an outcome of the straw vote held this week under the auspices of THE RECORD. The Republican candidate secured 366 undergraduate ballots as against 128 for

Smith and 33 for Thomas, this result being practically the same as that obtained throughout the colleges of the eastern, west central, and Pacific states during the recent G. O. P. campaign.

Hoover received his greatest support from the Freshman class, which gave him 115 votes, as compared with 30 for Smith and seven for Thomas. The class of 1931 came next with a record of 93 to 24 to 11, while the seniors signified their preference in a ratio of 87 to 36 to two. 1930 proved to be the most independent group in College, giving more votes to Smith and more to Thomas than any other class. Among the juniors Hoover's majority was thus reduced to two to one, —71 for Hoover, 38 for Smith, and 13 for Thomas.

Tabulated results of the balloting follow:

	Hoover	Smith	Thomas	Totals
Seniors	87	36	2	125
Juniors	71	38	13	122
Sophomores	93	24	11	128
Freshmen	115	30	7	152

Faculty to Take Part in Smith-Hoover Debate

As announced previously, the debate between the College Smith and Hoover Clubs will take place in Jesup Hall at 7.30 on Monday night, election eve, but, feeling that the discussion will have more weight and a wider appeal if so carried on, the clubs have in part turned the debate on the candidates over to members of the Faculty. The latter will make the principal speeches of the evening, while the discussion and rebuttals will be carried on by the clubs.

President Garfield and Professor Maxey have agreed to support the Republican side of the debate, and Professor Miller and another member of the Faculty not yet chosen will speak in favor of Governor Smith. After the four main speeches the floor will be thrown open to discussion, at which time anyone present may address questions to members of the clubs, who will be organized for the purpose of answering them.

FACULTY IN CANVASS

G. O. P. Nominee Gets 46 Votes to 25 for Smith—Thomas Has
One Follower

By receiving forty-six out of a possible eighty votes, Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee for the Presidency of the United States, defeated his rival, Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, who received twenty-five votes, in a canvass among members of the College Faculty conducted by THE RECORD. Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate, received one vote, while the candidates of the Prohibition and Farmers' and Laborers' ticket received none. Four members of the Faculty were undecided as to their preference and another four preferred to have their choices unrecorded.

The Physics Department and the Department of Physical Education were unanimously in favor of Hoover, as was the Dean's Office. In the Government Department Smith won three votes to Hoover's one, in the English Department, six to three, and three to two in the History Department. With the exception of one blank the Economics Department was two to one in favor of Hoover. A summary of the Faculty with their departments and votes follows:

PURPLE TO OPPOSE
UNION TEAM TODAY

Eleven Journeys to Schenectady for 22nd Gridiron Contest with Garnet

OPPONENTS LOST TO R. P. I.

Comparative Scores Give Purple
Decided Advantage—Gailer
Back in Lineup

Renewing a rivalry which began over forty years ago, the Williams and Union football teams will meet for the twenty-second time this afternoon on Alexander Field in Schenectady. With a fairly light team which has won but one game all season, losing to both Columbia and R. P. I. by decisive scores, the Garnet appears to be at a decided disadvantage when compared to Coach Caldwell's successful aggregation, whose first defeat came last week after a hard-fought battle with the Columbia Lions.

Comparative scores, for what they are worth, show that Columbia defeated Williams 20 to 6, while Union was forced to yield to the Lions by the more one-sided count of 27 to 0. Columbia scored eleven first downs to one for the Garnet, and fifteen to six for Williams. In the latter contest, Williams led at half time in the matter of first downs, 5 to 4, but was outplayed throughout the remainder of the game. At Troy last week, Rensselaer defeated the Garnet for the first time since 1899, the score being 14 to 0. Our contest with the Engineers on October 20 gave us a decisive 26 to 7 victory, although we trailed slightly in number of first downs gained.

In its other games this season, Union has lost to Manhattan College, 27 to 6, and Hobart, 30 to 0, the only victory being a close one, by a 7 to 6 score, registered over Vermont University. During the same time Williams has won from Providence College, 20 to 13, Middlebury, 20 to 0, and Bowdoin, 20 to 6. Of the series of twenty-two contests in which the Garnet has met the Purple, Williams has won sixteen, tied two, and lost three. Last year the contest at Williamstown resulted in a scoreless tie, while in 1925 a 15 to 0 count told the story of the first Williams defeat since 1915.

Coach Caldwell will probably start the same lineup which saw action against Columbia. Williams, Schwartz, Captain Andersen, Watson, Lasell, Miller, and Ashby will again form the forward wall, and Put-

Hubbard Hutchinson '17 Regards Recent Concert of U. S. Marine Band as 'Treacle and Wind Pudding'

During a recent interview with a RECORD reporter, Hubbard Hutchinson '17, who has published several volumes with considerable success and is at present working upon a new novel, expressed his opinion on the recent concert of the United States Marine Band in Chapin Hall. Mr. Hutchinson, who during his career at Williams was active in literary extra-curricular activities, being Editor of the Graphic and also a member of Gargoyle, is best known for his three latest books, entitled From Rome To Florence, Far Harbours, and Chanting Wheels.

In connection with the band concert the author spoke as follows:

"I should like to talk, since it seems I must, upon the recent band concert, because it concerns the college. . . . Suppose the Forum brought a lecturer here to talk on literature, and that, impeccably clad and backed by the impressment of reputation, he mounted the platform of Chapin Hall, notes in hand, before a large audience convened under the pardonable delusion that they were to be entertained in one of the great arts. Suppose that, with a voice and delivery no matter how fine, he then proceeded to quote for two hours from the works of Harold Bell Wright, Florence Barclay, and the Dialogues of the Two Black Crows. Of course this is most unlikely to occur, for such a lecturer's subject at least, would have been scrutinized in advance by those who brought him and whose tastes he might reasonably be supposed to reflect. But suppose he did. Those of the audience who through inertia or hope survived the first half hour, would then depart feeling that their time had been wasted and their intelligence outraged; that they had asked for bread and been given molasses.

"The band did not even give us molasses. Magnificently executed, the programme was with three exceptions treacle and wind pudding from beginning to end. We were drenched in maudlin platitudes and bathed in banalities until the hall oozed, and one longed for a single bar of music that was neither saccharin nor soapbuds.

"This is peculiarly inexcusable in an organization as finely equipped as the Marine Band, and functioning in the only art wherein we are entirely at the mercy of the interpreters. In literature, all who run may read; in painting, all who go may gaze. But music is a locked chest, and performers alone hold its key, so that our knowledge of its contents is derived solely from what they choose to select. And when, in exchange for minted coinage, they hand out mouldy tinsel and imitation pearls, they are swindling their customers of the genuine articles they have every right to expect.

"To be genuine, these offerings need be neither 'highbrow' nor 'heavy'. Music abounds in material pleasing to all who are not tone-deaf, material that requires no more endowment or training to be enjoyed than the dime novels of Sunday night. It has its Treasure Islands, its Three Musketeers, its David Copperfields. Take for example: Tchaikowsky's '1812 Overture'; Puccini's Overture to 'Tosca'; Bizet's 'Carmen'; Verdi's 'Aida' Overture; Wagner's prelude to the second act of 'Lohengrin' and to 'Die Meistersinger', all available in transcriptions for hand as splendidly effective as the stirring military marches so well given.

"But they were not forthcoming; largely because performers too often have a

Dishonesty of Republican Party and Excellence of Gov. Smith's English Cited by Prof. S. E. Allen

Professor Samuel E. Allen of the English Department, one of the men chosen this year to draw up the Democratic State platform, has announced his reasons for his support of Governor Alfred E. Smith in the coming presidential election. Centering his attention on three main issues, Professor Allen has stated first, that the Republican Party is intellectually dishonest; second, that Alfred E. Smith's stand on Prohibition is clear, courageous, and right; third, that Smith's mastery of the English language makes him the most competent of the candidates for office.

"I believe that the Republican party is intellectually dishonest," said Professor Allen, in outlining his views. "I do not base this contention on sporadic corruption such as that of Fall, Work, and others, but on the continued demoralizing influence of certain Republicans. Secretary Hoover is altogether too complacent in dealing with the corruption of his colleagues. He has kept Mr. Work as his Campaign Manager and has not rebuked Attorney-General Sargent for his pigeonholing the Fall leases". Professor Allen went on to say that any political economist will agree that a tariff on such things as wheat will have no effect when the United States produces a surplus. In his opinion, the Republican party knew that the duty of 30 cents per bushel on wheat, effected during the Harding administration and later raised to 42 cents during the Coolidge administration, would have no effect but did it merely to quiet the farmers. Thus, when Hoover speaks of maintaining the tariff, his motives are not of the best. Furthermore, Professor Allen stated that the Republicans under Harding had promised to lead the country into a league of nations. Where does the United States stand in respect to the League of Nations today? The Republicans promised to reorganize the government, to do away with over-lapping departments. Has any such revision taken place? "If I cannot place confidence in the promises of the Republican party, then I turn to Smith who has shown, during his terms as governor of New York State, that promises are more than mere words."

"I agree with Smith on his stand toward Prohibition," continued Professor Allen. "As one believing in the suppression of the liquor traffic, I vote for Smith because I think that nothing could be worse for the cause of temperance than four more years like the last seven". Whereas Hoover has offered no definite plan of improved enforcement, Smith has come out frankly and courageously against Prohibition.

"I favor Smith because I want to see in the White House a man who is a master of the English language". Professor Allen indicated that he emphasized this issue because so many people have expressed their determination to vote against Smith on account of his speech. Professor Allen stated that Smith used the same language that the Royal Society of England encouraged in its members and quoted Thomas Spratt's essay on this society: "They have a close, naked, natural way of speaking, positive expressions, clear senses, a native easiness, bringing all things as near the mathematical plainness as they can, preferring the language of artisans, countrymen, and merchants to that of whips and scholars". "I believe that Smith's language is an elastic, flexible means of carrying thought alive to others", said Professor Allen, in concluding his statement of his views on the presidential candidates.

THE CURRICULUM COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS—

From the fumes of that ancient tyranny, the Freshman Five, have sprung the Dark Ages of the Sophomore year. While Juniors and Seniors have been granted honors work and the modification of the major, while the Freshmen have been admitted to courses formerly reserved for the second year, the Sophomore has been forced to content himself with anything that happens to be left over. As a result the Sophomore year has become more than ever a strange interlude between prerequisite and major.

Now the Freshman takes History 1-2, but only the Junior may take 3-4 or 5-6; so the Sophomore waits. The Freshman takes Political Science 1-2, but only the Junior may take 3-4; so the Sophomore waits. The Freshman takes Rhetoric 1-2, but only the Junior may take Rhetoric 5-6; so the Sophomore waits. In fact, the student who comes to Williams with any definite trend of interests, especially in the middle division of the curriculum, is apt to spend his Sophomore year waiting.

No less important than the uninterrupted pursuit of a chosen line is the cultivation of intellectual hobbies, those cultural side-lines which are numbered among the most popular courses in Williams. The average Sophomore at registration already turns impatient eyes toward art and argumentation, religion and astronomy, modern history and geology. But at present all these are reserved to upperclassmen, who, because of major and division requirements, will find time for only two or three at the most. Why not let the Sophomore get a start on these while he is waiting?

Fortunately, we may hope that all the above argument is knocking down straw men, for the Curriculum Committee is to present to the Faculty at its November meeting a proposal for the introduction of Junior courses into the Sophomore year in the case of those students having seven B's or better. It is a logical step for the liberal reform of the curriculum in a long neglected quarter. And we have a way of wishing bon voyage to proposals to let us study what we please, if for no other reason than that they prove to a skeptical world that we, even Sophomores, are pleased to study something.

SINCE 1887

When the Williams eleven meets Union at Schenectady this afternoon, a rivalry of over forty years standing will be resumed. Since 1887, when the first encounter resulted in a 94-0 victory for the Purple, Williams gridiron schedules have usually included games with the Carnet. Of the twenty-one contests we have won sixteen, tied two, and lost three.

The scores of our first games together have become famous. Williams alumni have always cited the result of the 1889 classic, which was Williams 130, Union 0, as an example of what old time teams could do. But since those days of farcically one-sided scores, times have changed. With the passing of years, the calibre of Williams and Union football teams has become more and more equal.

As to the result of the game today we cannot predict, except to say that those most uncertain of indicators, comparative scores, seem to give the horizon a slightly purplish tinge. But we look forward to the game as the continuance of a tradition and friendly rivalry almost as long and enduring as that with our friends of the "Little Three."

OUR CAMPUS

Far be it from us to influence the socially conscious among the elite of Williams in regard to their millinery, but rumor hath it that the Brown Derby of Al Smith will be the thing this fall, much as underslung pipes in the style of Mr. Dawes were smoked by "those who know" four years ago. President Garfield will soon be gayly doffing his beige bowler at all college functions.

Instead of producing in Williamstown ash cans on dormitory entrances and ringing of doorbells at professors' houses, Halloween brought forth a delapidated car, vintage 1912, on Main Street in front of Hopkins Hall. It bore many delightful, chalked inscriptions: "For Sale, Enquire Dean's Office"; "Northampton Special, call Jane 769"; "No Phi Betes Allowed, Only Reprobates", etc. For many, this was doubtlessly an eyesore in beautiful Berkshire scenery, but to us it formed a restful calm in our maelstrom of culture. Professors, Nepos, Aristotle, Goethe, and Shakespeare bowed in abeyance while students were late to class through their perusal of this automobile. We experienced a considerable regret when we discovered after lunch that mysterious forces had whisked it away as they had brought it—we felt as if we had lost our only friend in a foreign land.

Williams teaches many things, among them this: a pompous be-knickered, and purple-hatted junior was crossing the sidewalk of Spring Street with dignified steps when suddenly an unprepossessing classmate jarred him, accidentally but with considerable force—enough to interrupt his superior pace. The unprepossessing youth begged his pardon in a friendly fashion, and asked if he was hurt. The "big man", with his eyes fixed steadily on a building across the street, answered coolly, "Oh no, not at all", and continued walking without looking back. Williams teaches many things, among them the gentle art of "squelching."

ALUMNI COLUMN

LEHMAN'S CANDIDACY IS BACKED BY ALUMNI

Record of Prominent Alumnus Is Published by Committee of N. Y. C. Graduates

To further the candidacy of Herbert H. Lehman '99 for the lieutenant-governorship of New York on the Democratic ticket, a committee of 27 alumni, regardless of political affiliation, has distributed a statement of Mr. Lehman's business, philanthropic, and civic achievements to all Williams graduates throughout the state. While in college he was a member of Gargoyle and Cap and Bells and a debater, and since graduation he has donated the Lehman Cup for intramural track and the new Lehman dormitory.

Outstanding in his record of philanthropic enterprises is his position in 1914 as treasurer and later vice-chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee and as chairman of its Reconstruction Committee, in which capacity he was responsible for the organization and administration of the reconstruction work abroad. For the past three years this work has been carried on by the American Joint Foundation, of which Mr. Lehman is vice-chairman.

His interest in work with boys began early in his career with his efforts on the behalf of the Henry Street Settlement, of which he is now one of the most active trustees. In addition he is vice-chairman of the Child Welfare Committee of America and a member of the executive committee of the Welfare Council of New York and for many years he was member and treasurer of the New York Child Labor Committee.

Mr. Lehman has also held a number of civic posts, city, state, and national. In 1913 he was appointed a member of a commission to revise the banking laws of the State of New York. From 1924 to 1927 he served as a member of the Governor's Mediation Committee for Garment Workers which averted a general strike in this industry.

From 1926 to 1928 he was chairman of the Finance, Budget, and Revenue Committee appointed by the Mayor of New York City, and in this connection he financed a Financial Review of the finances of the city which has recently been published in a volume of 300 pages and will be a useful guide in New York and elsewhere in fiscal affairs.

During the war Mr. Lehman held the rank of colonel on the general staff, where he acted as assistant to General G. W. Goethals with large responsibilities for supplies shipped to the forces in France. After the Armistice he was appointed special assistant to the Secretary of War and made a member of the Department Claims Board, and the Board of Contract Adjustment. At the conclusion of his term of duty in the army he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

WHAT HAVE YOU?

The political campaigns continue to wax hot and gaseous. The latest thing is a parrot which stumps for Al Smith and sings "Sidewalks of New York". Meanwhile Will Rogers, the Bunkless candidate, would prefer to die a gentleman than to be elected president.

"Bossy" Gillis, Newburyport's bad boy mayor, who is in jail for selling gasoline without a permit, is conducting his campaign to represent his town in the Massachusetts State Assembly from the Salem County Jail by means of "stickers". We believe his choice of campaign headquarters to be entirely a new idea and recommend it to most politicians.

Strong, of New York University, kicked five goals from touchdowns, while not one was kicked in the four touchdowns of the Army-Yale game. There has been negotiation from time to time to abolish the try-for-point but that isn't necessary. It is already abolished at some institutions. We apologize to the New York Herald-Tribune for this one.

A fourteen-year old boy in New York City started a fire in a school to burn the records of the bad grades he had received. It is also worthy of mention that Hopkins Hall contains the records of our bad grades.

Chicago Schools add rougeing to the three R's. Says Miss Nellie Ryan, principal, "Since the girls simply will make up, we have decided to try to initiate them in the correct and artistic application of make-up". Who said an education had no practical value?

WOLF WINS TENNIS
CHAMPIONSHIP AGAINShoaff '30 Defeated in Finals of Annual Autumn Tournament
By 6-2, 7-5, 6-1

For the second year in succession Harry Wolf '29 won the college tennis championship when he defeated Richard Shoaff '30 last Wednesday morning in the final round of the annual fall tournament in straight sets, 6-2, 7-5, 6-1. The damp condition of the court did not permit the players to exhibit their best tennis, though it materially aided the chop game of Wolf against the driving game of Shoaff, whose effectiveness was minimized.

The first set was hard-fought throughout, especially in the first games. Shoaff led at the end of the third, 2-1, but Wolf won the next five, although most of them went to deuce. The second set was closer in point of games, Wolf leading at 5-3, only to have Shoaff take the two following games to tie the score. Wolf took the next frame, which had been extended to several deuces, and then took the final, winning the set, 7-5.

The third set was tied at one all, but Shoaff then became very erratic, over driving the lines and sending a great many balls into the net. Wolf's stronger serve and accurate placements in chopping were too much for his adversary, who lost the following five games, and the set, 6-1.

John R. Tunis Says Undergraduates Are Adopting a Saner Attitude Toward the 'Great God Football'

"Football in its place, football as a game, has no rivals; with all its faults it is much too fine a sport and much too splendid an entertainment to lose," was the opinion expressed by John R. Tunis in an article which appeared in the November issue of Harvard Magazine under the title of "The Great God Football." After criticizing the conduct of the modern game as a business and as the primary object of many colleges, he states that present signs seem to indicate that "a saner attitude is gaining ground among the American undergraduates, and that some day football may cease to be a religion to them and become merely a sport. For football as a game, unless all signs to the contrary fail, will never die out."

Mr. Tunis first discusses the highly-organized university press bureaus, whose function is to keep the name of the institution in the public limelight. He goes on to cite an instance of this at a large mid-western university, "Returning lettermen are Nagurski, Kabela, Hovde, Lekeles, Brookmeier, Westphal, Pullrabeck, and Emlein and Ukkelberg will supplant Apman and Angevik; and Norguard and Burquist will provide promising material to guard the flanks." In addition he explains several "roving teams", who play on the Coast one Saturday and the following week appear in the Yankee Stadium in New York, practising in the meanwhile by "throwing footballs at one another as they tramp from diners to sleepers and vice versa."

"The truth is that football is today the Great American Game, at least from the spectator's point of view", and is becoming more than that—namely, "our national religion". Being duly impressed by the devout worship of the God Football, Dean Sperry of Harvard said, "The only truly religious spirit to be discerned among large bodies of undergraduates is in the football stadium." The author goes on to say that this creed has as the means of salvation, "college spirit", and in addition has "its high priests and acolytes, its saints and sanctuaries"—the players,

Frosh Oppose Deerfield
Academy Soccer Eleven

After two weeks' additional practice following their disastrous opening encounter with the powerful Williston eleven, the Freshman hooters will play their second game of the season with the Deerfield Academy soccer team on Cole Field this afternoon at 1:30. Although beaten 4-2 by Williston, Deerfield led 2-1 at the end of the first half, and may be counted on to furnish plenty of opposition for the relatively inexperienced yearlings.

Deerfield opened the season with a 5-3 victory over Kingswood at Hartford. The second game was lost to Williston, while Tahor Academy won the third encounter in the last two minutes of play by a 2-1 score. Although the record of two defeats and one victory is not too impressive, the showing made in the Williston contest indicates that the freshmen will have a hard struggle on their hands.

The probable starting line-ups are as follows:

Union Game Report

The Williams-Union football game this Saturday will be reported play by play over a special wire at Cape Prindle's store on Spring Street under the auspices of the Williams News Bureau. The game starts at 2:00 p. m.

PURPLE AND CRIMSON
SOCCER TEAMS MEETWilliams Invades Cambridge Today
To Seek Revenge for 1-0
Loss Last Year

Expecting a severe test in its fourth encounter of the season, the hitherto undefeated Williams soccer team will engage a powerful Harvard eleven at 3:00 p. m. in Cambridge today and will endeavor to avenge the 1-0 defeat at the hands of the Crimson last year on Cole Field. Although the Purple has still a perfect record, Harvard, with three defeats, has been meeting far stronger combinations and is better experienced by virtue of having played six games to date.

The Purple team remains practically the same, but has been considerably strengthened by daily scrimmaging. No game was played last week and the team is now just halfway through its schedule, engaging Wesleyan and Amherst in the following successive weeks. No comparison between the Purple and Crimson is possible, as there have been no mutual opponents. Harvard's defeat of the Army 3-2, would indicate a slight superiority.

In addition to the Army contest, the Crimson has won from Worcester Polytechnic Institute, 3-1, and has beaten Clark by 2-1. Defeats have been administered by Amherst, 2-1, by Dartmouth, 2-1, and by Northeastern, 1-0.

The following is the probable line-up of the two teams:

WILLIAMS: Phelps, o.r.; Christie, i.r.; Neilson, c.; McKittick, i.l.; Thoms, o.l.; Heine, r.h.b.; Bright, c.h.b.; Strong, l.h.b.; Leber, r.f.; Gregory, l.f.; S. Willmott, g.

HARVARD: E. Carter, o.r.; Vogel, i.r.; Grover, c.; Carrigan, i.l.; Tathan, o.l.; Rudd, r.h.b.; W. Carter, c.h.b.; Bland, l.h.b.; Stollmeyer, r.f.; Desroches, l.f.; Kerness, g.

Strong R. P. I. Harriers
Will Engage 1932 Today

With a consistent winner in Fazio and a well-balanced line-up, the R. P. I. Freshman cross-country team will come to Williamstown today to race the 1932 harriers over the Taconic course, starting at 1:00 p. m. Although they lost to Schenectady High School, 25-35, in their opening match, by virtue of a 20-35 win over the Union freshman, the Troy runners have a statistical advantage over the Williams team, which lost its first meet to Albany High School, 18-45.

That all seven of the R. P. I. men are of nearly equal ability is shown by the fact that DeVeue, No. 2, came in third in the Union match, while Smith, who is ranked seventh for Saturday's encounter, finished fourth. Roy, who took third against Albany and was the only Purple runner to place in the first eight, will again be lead-off man for Williams. The line-up for the Williams freshmen is as follows: 1, Roy; 2, Potter; 3, Burnett; 4, Walter; 5, Devo; 6, Skinner; 7, Swift. The R. P. I. team will consist of: 1, Fazio; 2, DeVeue; 3, Lambeaux; 4, Lombardi; 5, Perry; 6, Tweed; 7, Smith.

Communion Service

In place of the Sunday vesper service of the Church of Christ at Williams College, at 5:25 p. m. in the Thompson Memorial Chapel. Attendance is voluntary, but all students are invited, to attend, and especially those who have joined, or desire to join the student associate membership of the Church. This membership in no way affects a student's connections with his home church, and involves only the signing of the simple statement, "I accept the teachings of Christ as the best guide for living, and therefore desire to associate myself with the Church of Christ in Williamstown."

CHILDE HERALD

Inaugurating a new policy this week, Childe Herald will add a few words of sage comment to justify his predictions.

YALE-DARTMOUTH

The Yale Bowl will see a battle of crimples this Saturday, the Blue being without the services of Garvey, Oldt, Hall, and Hoben, while Dartmouth will probably miss Munsters, Breitlunt, Black, Wolf, and Swarthout. Yale's reserve strength should be sufficient to give Coach Stevens his first major victory by two touchdowns. Scores: Yale 13; Dartmouth 7.

OHIO-PRINCETON

The Tiger has not justified its potential power, although it is strong enough to give any team a fight. Ohio State, with an all-American tackle, Raskowski, in addition to an aggressive line and a wealth of backfield material, has already proven its strength by toppling Indiana and Michigan by decisive margins. Score: Ohio State 13; Princeton 10.

N. Y. U.-GEORGETOWN

The two high scorers of the East will meet in the Yankee Stadium this Saturday. The New York team, with the fleet footed, strong, and deadly passing attack, should continue its unbroken string of victories in a spectacular game. Score: N. Y. U. 32; Georgetown 14.

HARVARD-LEHIGH

Harvard scrubs should be able to work out on Soldier's Field this Saturday and give the varsity a rest for the Penn game next week. To date, Lehigh has been far from impressive, while Harvard has some fine backs, including French, Guarnaccia, Gilligan, and others, in addition to an improving line. Score: Harvard 27; Lehigh 0.

ILLINOIS-MICHIGAN

Michigan will have a hard time trying to win its first victory of the season at the expense of the 1927 Western Conference Champions, who still have a really fine aggregation. The Wolverines should make their strongest showing to date, and will prove no set-up for Illinois. Score: Illinois 11; Michigan 6.

PENNSYLVANIA-CHICAGO

Although defeated by the Navy, Penn still has one of the best-balanced elevens in the East, with strength in both backfield and line. Chicago has been wrecked by poor material, injuries, and bad generalship. Score: Penn 21; Chicago 7.

WISCONSIN-ALABAMA

Here is a game between two strong teams. The Crimson Tide of the South is not travelling at the furious pace of past seasons, but still should be able to play the highly-touted Wisconsin eleven to a standstill. Score: Wisconsin 14; Alabama 14.

WILLIAMS-UNION

The Purple should be able to regain its 20-point record again over the weakest Union team in years, which has lost to R. P. I. Williams ought to take its fifth victory of the 1928 season. Williams 20; Union 0.

WESLEYAN-TRINITY

Wesleyan faces an easy game and will have a good opportunity to rest for their "Little Three" encounter with Williams the next Saturday. Wesleyan was strong enough to play Amherst on even terms and should easily beat Trinity. Score: Wesleyan 19; Trinity 0.

AMHERST-M. A. C.

The Sabrinas are strong enough to give the Aggies a beating in their annual game. Although not as strong as last year, Amherst should experience little difficulty in conquering their neighboring college. Score: Amherst 20; M. A. C. 6.

1932 FOOTBALL TEAM TO MEET R. P. I. TODAY

Long Rest After First Game Puts Squad in Shape for Battle Against Engineers

After a rest of two weeks Coach Graham's freshman team will swing into action again when they meet the R. P. I. freshmen this afternoon on Weston Field. Continued scrimmages with the Varsity and rigid practices in the fundamentals of football have served to smooth out the rough spots which were noticeable in the Pittsfield encounter.

To date the Engineer yearlings have had a very unsuccessful season. In their first game they were defeated by Louisville High School, 46-6, and on the following week-end lost a weak and uninteresting game to Schenectady High School, 34-0. A bit of improvement was seen during the next few practices and hopes for a victory seemed to brighten, but the Union freshmen outplayed R. P. I. and emerged at the long end of the score 19-7. The team as a whole has been rapidly improving and has been pointing to the Williams game as its goal of the season, so that with the addition of two new men and repeated hard practices the Red and White freshmen are hoping for their first victory.

The 1932 freshman squad, after their easy defeat of Pittsfield have settled down in long practices and scrimmages in preparation for the "Little Three" series and consider this week's encounter a minor one. Captain Fowle continues to lead the way with his runs and defensive work. The fight shown by Ripple in the center of the line has permeated outward and the entire aggregation seems to be in much better shape than they were for their opening game. The tackling has improved considerably and the offensive is threatening. The probable line-up of the freshmen is as follows: Foehl, l.e.; Dawson, l.t.; Fox, l.g.; Ripple, c.; Hulse, r.g.; Wood, r.t.; Patterson, r.e.; Senn, q.b.; Fowle (Capt.), l.h.b.; Tuttle, r.h.b.; Good, f.h.

'Kappa Alpha' and 'Sigma Phi' Head Their Leagues

As a result of the games played last Wednesday afternoon Kappa Alpha and Sigma Phi have established themselves as champions of the American and National Leagues respectively, and eliminated Phi Delta Theta and Beta Pi from the competition. The two champions will shortly engage in a contest which will decide the winner of the series, and the victor will receive a small cup and 20 points credit toward the Intramural Trophy with 12 points going to the runner-up.

During the past week two other games were played in which Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Phi gained the semi-finals by registering victories over Zeta Psi and Phi Gamma Delta. The semi-final contest between Kappa Alpha was a close one, the latter finally winning by one touchdown to nothing. Sigma Phi showed more power in downing Beta Theta Pi by 2-0.

1931-1932 Soccer Teams Again Play Scoreless Tie

As a result of the scoreless tie in the game played on Cole Field last Tuesday afternoon, the 1932 soccer team has retained its lead over the sophomores in the Interclass series, having won two and lost one of the six contests played so far. It will be necessary to play at least one additional game, since the championship goes to the team which first registers three victories.

The sixth contest of the series was marked by good team-work, but both forward lines lacked the finishing punch necessary to tally a goal. Miller in the forward line, and Pace and Noc in the backfield, starred for 1932, while Houston at goal, Olmstead at halfback and Barber at center played well on the Sophomore eleven. The two teams will again attempt to decide the series in a game next week.

Council Expounds

New Auto Rulings

istration to this resolution can be no better expressed than in the following extract from the minutes of a meeting of this Committee on May 10, 1928:

"In view of the attitude of cooperation taken by the Student Council, the following vote was moved and passed unanimously: 'The Committee on Administration recommends that the Board of Trustees make no change in the rules governing the use of automobiles.'

"A memorandum was sent to the President and Trustees of Williams College regarding the resolution with reference to automobiles still before that Board, and stating the vote passed by the Committee on Administration May 10, 1928, which was based upon the attitude of cooperation of the Student Council and an approval of the resolution as passed by that Student Council. This vote was very influential in preventing drastic action on the part of the Board of Trustees at the time.

"Looking at the situation from this standpoint, the newly elected Student Council this year reaffirmed, at the earliest opportunity, the resolution of last year's Council. That resolution, as reprinted this year, and as printed in the October 27, 1928, issue of THE RECORD, is as follows:

"The Student Council, desiring to assist in the prevention of reckless driving, shall consider the case of any student driver who comes under the observation of a member of the Student Council or is reported to that body as having been guilty of recklessness in the operation of an automobile; it will issue warnings, and, after disregard of warning or in proven cases of recklessness, shall recommend to the Dean that the driving permission of that student or those students shall be revoked; and in the proven case of a student driving an automobile under the influence of liquor, the Council shall recommend such revocation immediately.

"This resolution is passed with the understanding that it in no way infringes upon the discretionary powers of the Dean in dealing with such cases as come to his attention."

"Before the Student Council could put this rule into effect, two accidents occurred. These regrettable events have focussed the attention of the Student Council on the fact that this resolution you have just heard is inadequate. In view of this the Council has gone further. And in so doing it has realized, and wishes to emphasize at this time, that the three cardinal points at issue are:

- (1) The welfare of the students,
- (2) The responsibility of the College for the actions of its students, and
- (3) The continued use of cars.

"The Council has felt that the most important step for the immediate present is the lucid interpretation and the rigid enforcement of the existing regulations regarding the owning and driving of cars. The rule as it appears in the Dean's office is as follows:

"After the present calendar year (1925) the privilege of using or driving automobiles or motorcycles be restricted to the Juniors and Seniors, and that the privileges be granted to juniors and seniors, only after the receipt at the Dean's office of a written approval from the parent. The Dean is authorized to make exceptions, if in his judgment they are warranted."

"We now submit to the college body an interpretation of this rule as promulgated by the Student Council and as it will be enforced from now on by them: No Freshman or Sophomore, or any other undergraduate who is not registered in the Dean's office may maintain or drive a car anywhere. A single exception to this is that a man may maintain or drive a car during a sojourn at home. Any further exception to this rule must have the specific sanction of the Dean. A 'Sojourn at home' is regarded as beginning with the arrival of the man at home (with Williamstown as his original point of personal departure) and ending with the departure of the man from home (with Williamstown as his ultimate personal destination.)"

"In regard to enforcement, the Student Council will conduct a thorough investigation designed to enforce this rule in toto. This will involve the immediate checking up of all cars owned and operated contrary to the letter and spirit of college rules."

"We have seen that the college body is on probation in regard to cars. We have had two accidents within the past two weeks. We do not know the attitude of the Trustees at the present moment in regard to these accidents, but we are sure that the failure to observe existing regulations and the lack of cooperation on the part of the student body will hasten further restrictions on the existing privileges. As your representatives, we shall do all within our power to supervise this enforcement—but in the final analysis, success or failure rests with you. It is for that reason that we ask your cooperation."

After the reading of the resolution the floor was thrown open to discussion. Upon question, the penalty for violation of the rules was stated as recommendation for probation. Layman '29 asked for a definition of "home", and was told that such was commonly known as the place where one lived—the establishment of one's parents or guardians. Sewall '29 queried as to what form of procedure should be in order for those at present maintaining cars in the vicinity and desiring to remove same. Clark '29 replied that permission from the Dean would be necessary before such a course of action could be taken.

Gross '30 asked about penalties in the case of driving a borrowed car. In this situation it was stated that the borrower would receive the punishment, and that the practice of borrowing was frowned upon by the Student Council. In reply to a query by Eisner '29 it was brought out that it was necessary to have permission to operate a friend's car, but that no objection would be made to the operation of a vehicle in which a parent or guardian was riding. Elbrick '29 asked if one could drive a car when visiting and was told that in this case also permission of the Dean would be necessary. Overton '29 added in this connection that the home of friends might be as near as North Adams, and that a blanket ruling was thus necessary. He also brought out that the Dean would probably be disposed to give permission if the locality visited were far enough removed.

McKean '29 emphasized the fact that it would be only through the undivided efforts of the Student Council if cars were to be retained at all, and that a great deal of credit was due to this body for drawing up the resolution, the responsibility therefor, and its enforcement. Upon these grounds he proposed a vote of confidence, which was accorded with enthusiasm, and the meeting broke up after the singing of The Mountains.

The proposal of the Non-Athletic Council adopted unanimously earlier in the proceedings ran as follows:

"Resolution Passed by the Non-Athletic Council.

"That the collection of the Non-Athletic Tax be placed in the hands of Mr. E. H. Botsford, graduate treasurer of Williams College.

"In order to maintain those non-athletic organizations of the College, namely, the Student Council, the Forum, the Adelphe Union, the Outing Club, and the Gul, which are not self-supporting it has been necessary to collect each year a small tax from the student body. In past years the undergraduates acting as treasurer of the Non-Athletic Council have had no means of enforcing the payment of it. Hence, taking last year as a typical example, the tax was paid voluntarily by 450 students. 350 students failed to pay the tax.

"With the proposed plan the tax will be handled by Mr. Botsford exactly as is the Athletic Tax. This will assure a more efficient collection of it which will result in the reduction of the tax from $4.15 to less than $3.00."

The Honor System Committee report from June 1927 through October 1928 was as follows:

"On June 14, 1927 a member of the class of 1927 was accused of violating the Honor System Agreement by a member of a lower class and by a member of his own class. The violation occurred during an hour exam. The defendant was found guilty of employing a translation in the test and was dismissed from College upon unanimous recommendation of the committee present.

"In October, 1927, a member of the class of 1931 was accused of cheating in an examination. The student was acquitted due to lack of evidence. He was reprimanded for his carelessness in arousing suspicion.

"On March 15, 1928 a member of the class of 1931 was accused of having copied from his neighbor during a written quiz. The student was acquitted.

"In April a member of the class of 1930 was accused of cheating in a physics quiz. He was unable to make any defense whatsoever and by a unanimous vote of the student committee was found guilty. He appealed the case to the Faculty Committee who also found him guilty by a unanimous vote.

mous vote. He was dismissed from College.

"On April 29 a member of the class of 1929 was accused of violating the Honor System by another member of the same class. There was not, however, sufficient evidence for conviction.

"On September 23, 1928 the combined Faculty and student committees met to discuss plans for the ensuing year. It was decided to publish the constitution in The Record as a means of bringing a better and more thorough understanding of the system to the College body. In addition it was decided to have the entire committee present when the Honor System was explained to the freshmen. The System was also to be a topic of discussion in the meetings of Junior Advisers and their freshmen. On Thursday, September 27, the Honor System was explained to the members of the class of 1932 by the chairman of the committee and was unanimously adopted by the class."

Purple to Oppose

nam, Brown, Howe, and Langmaid will represent the Purple in the backfield. The latter is now ranked among the three leading scorers of the East. Chase, McAllister, Wheeler, and Eisner will undoubtedly be called upon to relieve these ball carriers. Gailer, tackle on last year's eleven, has reported for practice and will play Saturday, but Muller, although his injured leg is mending rapidly, will probably not be in shape for actual play. Hood, Newman, Williamson, Deming, Lobo, Holbrook, and Trauernicht furnish a wealth of substitute material for the line.

For Union, Finegan and Strannahan in the backfield, and Engel and Captain Clark on the line have been outstanding this season. The former, a quarterback who was recently shifted from center, excels at punting, passing, and defensive play, while the others are veterans of several years' experience. Of those who opposed Williams a year ago, Captain Clark and Engel, ends, Friedrich and Bullard, guards, and Strannahan, Mosher, Nitchman, and Finegan, backs, are still in the lineup.

The probable lineups for this afternoon are as follows:

fixed notion that the public outside New York consists solely of musical morons—an idea unhappily confirmed every time the audience permits without protest a programme of imbecilities. So it behooves them to object, and hence this display of what the good Dr. Swift would have undoubtedly called 'spleen'. But one dislikes being chented. One rebels against accepting a selection in one field of art so appalling that, in any other, it would be laughed out of town as an insult to any community with the slightest pretensions to culture. We are not quite musical illiterates. Why publicly proclaim ourselves so, and shake the chandeliers of Chapin Hall with the applause of our own fatuity?"

OXFORD ORATORS TO DEFEND LEAGUE HERE

Williams Debaters Will Face Three Past Presidents of Oxford Union in Chapin

Of all the clever Englishmen who have enlightened or amused Williams audiences in the past no group has appeared with prestige equal to that of the trio of ex-presidents of the Oxford Union which will invade Chapin Hall at 8.15 Thursday evening. President Garfield, through whose personal efforts the Oxonians will appear in Williamstown, will preside, while the decision on the question, "Resolved: That the United States should join the League of Nations," will be left in the hands of the audience.

The League will be defended by the Oxford debaters. C. S. Malcolm Breton of Balliol College, in addition to his position as president of the Union in 1927, was business editor of the Oxford Outlook, a theatrical manager, and winner of the varsity mile. Alan T. Lennox-Boyd, Union president in 1926, was also president of the Conservative Association. Dingle M. Foot, most recent president of the Union, was, by way of contrast, president of the Liberal Club during the past year and is Liberal candidate for Parliament from Devonshire.

The emphasis on the Union is justified by the position which that organization holds at Oxford. For generations it has held the enthusiastic interests of the students and the active support of the statesmen of England. Stanley Baldwin and David Lloyd George are two of the prominent contemporaries in English affairs who have gone up from London to participate in debates with the Union, the presidency of which is one of the highest positions the University offers.

Mark Harris '29, president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Debating League, will lead the Williams forces in their attack on the League of Nations. He will be supported by J. K. Reeves '29 and D. R. Heaton '30, both of whom are members of The Record board and have had experience in debating for the Purple. Before the debate, from 8.00 to 8.15, Mr. Safford will present a number on the organ.

W. C. A. LAUNCHES 1928-29 MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Paper Setting Forth Purposes and History of Organization Is Distributed

In its annual membership drive, the Williams Christian Association has sent out a booklet, "A Year of Christian Thought and Activity at Williams College" in which the purposes of the organization and its work during the school year 1927-1928 are briefly set forth. As regards the policies and ideals of the Williams Christian Association, the pamphlet indicates that the organization is "not merely a social service instrument but most assuredly must act as a stimulus to religious thought and its expression in living".

Outlining the varied activities of the organization separately, the W. C. A. has emphasized the religious activity in the College itself. In encouraging this side of college life which is regarded as absolutely indispensable, the W. C. A. has conducted discussion groups and has brought prominent speakers to the College. Rabbi Wise addressed the College on the subject "The Christian and the Jew", while Sir Wilfred Grenfell thrilled a large gathering in Chapin Hall with his social message. Dr. William A. Brown, Rev. Charles Noble and Rev. Henry L. Kinsolving were well received. The Association has also conducted a discussion group for Freshmen.

In regard to the Boys' Work Committee, the booklet states: "One of the finest traditions of Williams is the growth of the Boys' Work Committee". One of the most extensive committees of the association, it has encouraged sportsmanship and constructive recreation in its four Boys' Clubs, the Williamstown Junior Outing Club, the Blackinton Club, the Clark Chapel Club and the South Williamstown Club. This Committee sponsored the Big Brothers' Banquet and conducted Camp Lyon, the summer camp for the youth of this district, which completed its seventh year last vacation.

1932 FOOTBALL TEAM CONQUERS R. P. I. 80-0

Brilliant Offensive Led by Captain Fowle Sustained by Third And Fourth Teams

Rushing the ball 532 yards through every position in the line while their opponents gained but 38 yards, the Williams freshmen employed four complete teams comprising the entire Freshman football squad to make 12 touchdowns and pile up a score probably unprecedented in Freshman football history when they defeated the R. P. I. freshmen, 80-0, on Weston Field last Saturday afternoon. Captain Fowle again led in the scoring and furnished the spectacle of the game when he ran 75 yards for one of his six touchdowns, while Good and Senn contributed substantially to the yardage and score.

The first minute of play saw the yearlings off on their field day, for on the opening play, Good intercepted a pass on the 15-yard line and carried the ball for the initial score. An exchange of kicks brought the ball to the opposing 45-yard line, whence a series of rushes through the line led to a second score, by Fowle. Tuttle kicked off and after the return boot rushed it to the 25-yard line. Good and Fowle ran it through the line and it was the latter again who put it over. Pfau of the engineers kicked off and Fowle ran 30 yards to the 15-yard mark, to have Good make the touchdown and close the first quarter with a 25-0 score.

Coneh Graham's second team line seemed to be as effective as the regulars in the second quarter; for R. P. I. could not gain and a 25-yard run by Fowle paved the way to his third touchdown. The Engineers tightened up for a moment and held Williams for a loss, but the revival

Williams College Church Holds Membership Drive

Approximately 200 students have been enrolled in the Church of Christ in Williams College as a result of a drive held during the past week by which a committee of seniors headed by Higgsbotham '29, attempted to bring the matter of Associate Membership in the Church before every student's attention. Membership blanks were distributed to all the fraternity houses and the Commons Club, and the purpose of the Associate Membership was explained.

Organizations similar to the Williams College Church exist at Yale and many other eastern colleges, whereby a student can continue his affiliation with a church although he is away from home. The membership exists only while the student is in College, and is automatically terminated as soon as he leaves. There are no definite obligations as the student is merely given an opportunity to join a Church, which is undenominational, for the period of his college life.

FACULTY POLITICAL DEBATE

Monday, November 5—This evening, as previously announced, the debate upon the relative merits of the Republican and Democrat nominees for the presidency will take place in Jesup Hall at 7.30. President Garfield and Professor Maxcy have agreed to support nominee Hoover, and Professor Miller and Mr. Bentley W. Warren, senior member of the Board of Trustees, will speak in favor of Governor Smith.

Following the four main speeches of the evening the floor will be thrown open for discussion. Discussion is scheduled to close at 9.15.

Deerfield Soccer Team Defeats Frosh Booters

By maintaining almost continual possession of the ball and keeping the freshmen busily occupied in trying to protect their own goal, the Deerfield soccer team won from the 1932 eleven last Saturday on Cole field by a 4-1 score. The visitors had matters all their own way from the start, scoring in every quarter, while the only tally by the home team was made late in the first period on a cleverly executed pass from the right wing to center.

Deerfield scored first at the start of the game when Foster tallied on a pass from Cook. At this point the frosh showed their best form of the game, managing to play their opponents on even terms for the remainder of the quarter, and finally capped their creditable play by tying the score at one all, when Boyd hooted the ball into the net on a pass from the right wing.

PURPLE AND CRIMSON BOOTERS PLAY 1-1 TIE

Two Extra Periods Fail To Break Deadlock in Muddy Contest; Christie Scores

Williams and Harvard battled through the rain and mud of Soldiers Field and through two extra five-minute periods to a 1-1 soccer draw last Saturday afternoon, the offensive of both teams weakening increasingly as a steady downpour in the second half made it practically impossible for either side to be effective. Both teams scored late in the first quarter, and although Williams, tallying first, could not hold its lead, it had, nevertheless, the satisfaction of at least a tie on foreign soil, partially avenging Harvard's victory on Cole Field last year.

The elevens were very evenly matched, neither being able to show its offensive strength to advantage because of the necessarily slow playing. The Purple players were hampered at the start for lack of time to warm up, resulting in rather poor coordination; yet the team fought hard and never let the Crimson keep the ball for any length of time. The slippery condition of the ball caused inaccurate passing on both sides, but the Williams halfbacks showed up to a distinct advantage over their adversaries by keeping the play mostly in enemy territory.

The Purple did not have many good chances to score, owing to the sterling defense of the Harvard backs, but the Crimson forwards wasted their more frequent opportunities by sending the ball wide on kicks into the goal. Willmott, the Purple goalie, smeared a dangerous attack in the first half when three successive kicks into

Safford to Trace Music Schools in Annual Series

Mr. Charles L. Safford, Director of Music, has announced that the first of his annual series of Wednesday Organ Recitals will take place this Wednesday afternoon at 4.15 p. m. in Chapin auditorium. As previously announced, Mr. Safford will trace the history of various schools of organ music from their beginnings to the present day, but he wishes it understood that no program will be devoted exclusively to any one school or period. The attempts will be to compare the different types of organ music by placing representative pieces of different schools on the same program.

This Wednesday's program will be as follows:

- I. Toccata and Fugue Frescobaldi
- II. Prelude and Fugue Buxtehude
- III. a. Choral
b. Heroic Piece
- c. Pastorale Cesar Franck
- IV. Toccata and Fugue, D minor J. S. Bach

VARSITY RUNS WILD TO CRUSH GARNET

Eleven Has Easy Time Registering 37 to 0 Victory over Union at Schenectady

BROWN, LANGMAID, AND HOWE ARE OUTSTANDING

Rain, Muddy Field No Hindrance to Williams, Which Scores in Every Period

Making light of a drizzling rain and a sea of mud under foot, the Williams football team ran roughshod over a weak Union eleven last Saturday afternoon on Alexander field at Schenectady. Clever runs, forward passes, and a line which brushed the Garnet forwards out of the way on almost every play, made it possible for the Purple to cross the end line at least once in each period and amass a total of 37 points to none for one of the most decisive victories in the recent history of the long series between the two colleges.

Only once during the game did the home team threaten to score. In the last minutes of play, after the entire Williams first string backfield and most of the line had been sent to the showers, Union made a strong bid for a score by bringing the ball to within inches of the goal line, but was held on downs. Williams showed marked superiority in every department of play, leading by 13 to seven in matter of first downs, and completing eight out of twelve passes, most of them for long gains. Unable to make their ground more than three times against the Varsity, Union tried the aerial method during the periods when it faced the second team, but four of the eighteen tries landed in the arms of Williams players, while eight more failed of completion.

Shortly after the opening whistle, Williams took the ball on its 35-yard line, and with Howe ripping off long gains around end, and Brown plunging through holes in the line, quickly traversed the length of the field for an early score. Soon afterward, a pass from Brown to Langmaid over the

MISS OSBORNE STARTS EARLY PRINTING COURSE

Undergraduate Group Will Study Rare Book Collection in Chapin Library

With the view of acquainting interested students with the wealth of rare books now owned by Williams College, as well as providing valuable information for those who may in the future take up book-collecting as a vocation or hobby, Miss Lucy E. Osborne, Custodian of the Chapin

Room in Chapin Library

Library, will inaugurate this year a course in "The History of the Printed Book." The undergraduates who have elected to take the course, whose numbers have this year been restricted to twelve, comprising two groups of half that number, will meet once a week throughout the College year for lectures and discussions of the printing and binding of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, the copies of early manuscripts and books to be found in the Chapin Library serving as illustrative examples.

"The fifteenth century is, strictly speaking, the early printing period," said Miss Osborne, when describing the nature and scope of the course to a Record reporter, "but during the sixteenth there were developments of such great importance that their consideration cannot be omitted from this course. Hand made

UNLIMITED CUTS FOR SENIORS

There has never been a time when the bitter pill of compulsion in higher education was not a subject for questioning analysis. While the general tendency throughout the country and at Williams has wavered between reducing the grain and increasing the sugar, the result in both cases is usually a more palatable cathartic. Or, to be less prosaic, the American colleges are placing greater emphasis upon the initiative of their students to develop in them a sense of responsibility as an important part of their education. "Greater freedom" in matters of the curriculum, of discipline, of domestic government, and (with a smile) even of religion, has therefore come to mean simply that certain commands formerly issued by that benevolent despot, the dean, have been replaced by voluntary action in the same direction by his subjects, the undergraduates. We are thus gradually approaching that distant but by no means dim ideal where the dean ceases altogether to be a peddler of discipline, and the student-body basks in the perpetual sunlight of unlimited cuts.

Williams, often called conservative in the Grand Old Party sense, neither leads nor trails this academic procession to paradise. Comfortably embedded between Prudence and Temperance we ride serenely in the middle, far removed from the possibility of a wreck at either end. If it is a fault at all, it is a venial one never to be "the first by whom the new are tried"—for to be a pioneer one must be born with a very special soul. But always to be among the last is more serious, and it is our guess that it is in this direction that Williams is inclined to err. In its cautious anxiety lest the fruit (meaning the undergraduates of course) be not "ripe" for a change in the existing order, they are sometimes allowed to become rotten before anything is done.

Excursions into the domestic affairs of other colleges, for instance, will show that Williams might quite properly take a lesson or two in the subject of class-room attendance. While we have given unlimited cuts to those men taking honors work, other institutions have extended the same privilege to entire classes. We admit that at the present time a wholesale destruction of cuts would be an unwise move for any college of the conservative, even of the liberally conservative type, but it is our contention that a modification of the present system at Williams might very well be made in the interest of progressively sound methods of education. And we believe that such a modification would be entirely compatible and consistent with the general policy of the College as this policy has been manifest in all phases of its development, ancient and recent.

We mean that all seniors, with the possible exception of those in the fifth ranking group, are entitled to unlimited cuts, or, to avoid a somewhat offensive phrase, that their attendance at lectures and recitations should be shifted from a compulsory to a voluntary basis.

We fully appreciate the stock, but formidable, arguments against the general theory of unlimited cuts for everyone, but these do not apply here. Not that the senior is such an extraordinary animal that he can transcend with impunity whatever laws may govern the lower classes, but if after three years of college education he has not yet developed the intellectual energy to finish his career without pressure from the dean's office, we say that his malady demands a far more effective remedy than the pill of compulsion. It needs the knife.

As a preparation for the larger life he is about to enter upon, and as a recognition of increased mental maturity (which thus makes him "ripe" for the change), it should rest solely with the senior whether or not he goes to class. This is, of course, the same principle of honors work carried a step further. The fundamental assumption that mental maturity is necessarily confined to men of scholarly distinction is fallacious as a matter of fact, and the assumption that the granting of the same privilege to the rest of the class would result in more harm than good seems to us highly improbable. It is a popular notion that all undergraduates, because they are undergraduates, hate to go to class and suffer physical pain and mental exhaustion whenever this is necessary; but it is not true of the senior, because he is a senior. This is due partly to the increased susceptibility of his mind to intellectual stimulation, and partly to the more interesting nature of the work. But if this is too pretty a picture of the "average" senior, there are certain practical reasons that would keep him from abusing whatever greater freedom a system of unlimited cuts might seem to imply. Graduation and the A. B. passport to a good job are now no longer distant rewards buried in question marks. They lie straight ahead in full view. If the opportunity were given, would many men deliberately turn their backs upon a triumphant finale when it is within their grasp for the taking? We think not.

What is more important, a modification such as we suggest has greater possibilities for good than for harm in that it would tend to raise the scholastic standing of the College. For, a provision that seniors in the fifth, possibly the fourth, ranking group shall be ineligible for the unlimited cuts privilege, would undoubtedly act as an incentive to members of the Junior class to keep out of these low groups. It would also act as an incentive to low-standing seniors to raise their grades at mid-years. And as a safeguard against anarchy, the same condition now imposed upon honors men (that a slump in marks means a revocation of the privilege) could easily be enforced.

If it is asked to point out the advantages of this scheme over the present one (inasmuch as both seem to accomplish the same purpose), it is enough to reply that it is the advantage of intellectual responsibility over the unthinking goose-step; it is the difference between a work of art and the manufactured article. One springs from within, the other is imposed from without.

Unlimited cuts for seniors does not mean the annihilation of compulsion as a means of making a man go to class. He will still be compelled, in a very real sense, but the incentive will be genuine desire instead of slavish fear, a sense of self-responsibility instead of the big stick of Probation. He will be compelled by the prospect of graduation. He will be compelled by the desirability of retaining the privilege. He will be compelled by the satisfaction that comes from doing things on your own. He will be compelled by that intellectual self-respect which only a conscientious attention to educational duties can bring. If the senior, regardless of his scholastic standing, is not prepared to assume the risks and responsibilities of such a freedom, he is not entitled to a liberal arts degree. But we believe that he is.

HOBSON TRIUMPHS IN 1932 TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Takes both Round Robin Matches
To Win Gold Medal All; But One Match Played

Ruleigh C. Hobson '32 of Richmond, Va., by virtue of victory in both of his round robin matches, over Thayer and Rose respectively, earned the gold cup which is given to the winner of the Freshman tennis tournament. The third match in the round robin, between Rose and Thayer, has not taken place yet, and will have bearing only on the matter of which man wins the silver and which the bronze medal which go to the second and third men respectively.

Hobson won his way to the round robin with comparative ease by victories in the first five rounds, and did not lose a single set until his round-robin match with Thayer. After dropping the first set by 1-6, he steadied in his game to win the second 6-3, and then win a hard deciding set, 7-5. His match with Rose was also close, the scores being 6-4, 9-7. With the completion of the Thayer-Rose match for the honor of runner-up, the tournament will be ended.

THE Panama Canal diggers had engineering brains and money aplenty. But they were blocked by the malaria and yellow-fever bearing mosquitoes, which killed men by thousands.

Then Gorgas stamped out the mosquito. The fever was conquered. The Canal was completed.

The importance of little things is recognized in the telephone industry too.

Effective service to the public is possible only when every step from purchase of raw material to the operator's "Number, please" has been cared for.

SMITH DEFENSE IS ATTACKED BY COLE

Takes Exception to Statements
Of Miller, Which He Regards
As Invalid, Hazy

(Courtesy of Associate Professor Elbert C. Cole)

I have wandered faithfully but with some bewilderment through the article which my colleague, Professor Miller, published in The Record of October 30th. As I understand it Mr. Miller favors Governor Smith for three reasons, as follows:

1—Because Smith has realized the potential of citizenship to an unprecedented degree.

2—Because the Republican Party and its candidate are bankrupt in the vital matter of creating and preserving community of explicit thought.

3—Because of Smith's record of progressive accomplishment in New York.

I believe that the first two reasons can be shown to be invalid. The third reason is a good one, in case one has already decided to vote for Smith. But if his record is compared with that of Hoover, and if one really wishes to vote for the man who shows the better record and the greater promise, then, it seems to me that the third reason also falls flat. I like Mr. Miller's epigram, "Opinion without information is only prejudice". It is, however, a dangerous one; in fact, a two-edged sword. It is precisely because Mr. Miller's article appeared to ignore some very important bits of evidence that I have undertaken to reply.

Just what is this potential of citizenship which Governor Smith has realized to such an unprecedented degree? To begin with I do not like the hazy definition of citizenship that my colleague has given. It is unfortunate, perhaps, that he has failed to "lay out complex questions in simple word and manner", as he generously credits Smith with doing. I find that a citizen is one owing allegiance to, and entitled to protection from, a government, and that citizenship is the status of a citizen. We are told that the substance of citizenship is "conversation". It must be remembered, however, that deeds speak with a much more convincing voice than mere words, in fact, worthy deeds require no mere words for their proper understanding. Is the purely local performance, with much "conversation" of Governor Smith to be accepted as superior to Mr. Hoover's nationwide service? In spite of the fact that Hoover is qualified neither by nature nor by inclination to spend much time in personal boasting, can it be that his record has not spoken to the citizens of the country? There is too much evidence to the contrary for us to believe that. What justification then is there for proclaiming Smith as having reached a potential of citizenship to an unprecedented degree? His excellent record is willingly acknowledged, but to refer to Smith as our greatest emancipator savors of the ridiculous.

No one can look with either pride or complacency upon the record of scandal of the Republican Party. Nevertheless, I find myself unable to see that violent or blatant behavior on the part of Mr. Hoover would have remedied the situation. Would a little "conversation" have helped matters? There was plenty of it from all sides. Was it necessary for Hoover to add his voice to the din, when the world knows that every respectable man, including Hoover, was shocked by the revelations of corruption? The picture of Mr. Hoover sitting silent "among associates the most corrupt and incompetent in our history" would be more impressive if it came from a party which had a lily white record. Mr. Miller goes on to say, "Had Mr. Smith ever acquiesced in such associates, can you imagine the political results?" This remark in the face of the record of Tammany! And lately, the Albany Pool! It is well, too, to remember that Smith was the executive head of his government, while Hoover was a subordinate in his! And yet we are told that it is the Republican Party and its candidate that are bankrupt. Apparently we are expected to recoil from the sporadic corruption of the Republican Party, and gratefully embrace the disgusting record of Tammany for many decades. A strange argument!

"And in his campaign Hoover has resorted to ambiguity, falsification, and demagoguery". It is of course possible to read into a political speech much that was not there. The ambiguity said to be present in Hoover's speeches may indeed be a tribute to the honesty of the man. No man, having Hoover's long experience with the hydra-headed problems of the country is going to preach an epigrammatic cure-all even in the hope of securing more votes. The clear, unambiguous solutions (?) for such problems as prohibition, farm relief and the tariff are the "conversations" of those who do not recognize the difficulties involved, or who are frankly more interested in votes than in the application of real remedies. Yet we are told that it is the Republican candidate who is bankrupt! Another strange argument!

The charge that Hoover has been guilty of falsification is so utterly absurd that it does not merit further consideration. The accusation comes very inappropriately from that party whose candidate has recently been so sternly rebuked by Mr. Mellon for his careless use of statistics and figures. I am unavoidably driven to that old proverb which, duly paraphrased, saith, "Verily, let him who dwelleth in a place of glass beware how he hurlth his missiles".

It is useless to argue concerning the demagoguery of political speeches. The strict adherence to the discussion of the issues at stake and the absence of personalities in the speeches of Hoover, serve to set those speeches on a different level from that of the diatribes of his opponent. Yet we are told that it is the Republican Party and its candidate that are bankrupt! Mr. Hoover's speeches certainly do appeal to the materialistic impulses of the nation, but not without a touch of idealism. He well knows that to be well fed, and well housed, and given an opportunity for the enjoyment of leisure are important prerequisites to the maintenance of a happy, contented and prosperous people. He does promise a full dinner pail. What of it? And even a "full garage". What sin in that? Are they not better than the empty promises of a full stein with which his opponent is attempting to seduce the votes of the nation? Which candidate, after all, is offering "the bait of Esau?"

I am glad that Mr. Miller spoke of bigotry and intolerance. Now who has been harping on these matters? Hoover? Not one word! Smith? Read any of his recent speeches! Every fair-minded man deprecates the presence of bigotry and intolerance. It must be remembered that bigotry is quite as clearly shown by him who votes for a candidate because of his religion as by him who votes against a man because of his religion. We are in danger of losing sight of the dual aspect of this matter. Intolerance knows no limitations, it is restricted to no single party.

Governor Smith has laid great stress on the modification of the Volstead Act. In this he dangles a dripping bait before our eyes. Mr. Hughes recently referred to the prohibition issue as a "sham battle", a term which Smith took occasion, in his Philadelphia speech, to denounce bitterly. Without going into the merits of prohibition or the Volstead Act it is a fair question whether the dripping promises of Mr. Smith mean any more than the more arid comments of Mr. Hoover. Regardless of the name of the next occupant of the White House, relief to the thirsty will come only in one of three ways; nullification, amendment of the Volstead Act, or repeal of the 18th Amendment. No citizen having regard to his oath of allegiance can countenance the first method; the second is possible and legal; the third is legal but highly improbable. Can Smith do more about this than Hoover? Smith, if elected, must take oath to do his

Lights that Fill the Skies with Commerce

THE air map of America is now in the making—on the ground.

Ten years ago, there were 218 miles of air mail routes with two station stops; to-day, a network of sky roads bridges the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Can you imagine this growth without electricity—without illuminated airports—without trunk lines studded with electric beacons?

Men of vision are building for increasing traffic of the air. Soon, the skies will be filled with commerce.

Just as electricity is helping to conquer the air, the land, and the sea to-day, so to-morrow it will lead to greater accomplishments in aviation and in every human activity.

A majority of the beacon lights used in airport and airway illumination have been designed and manufactured by the General Electric Company, whose specialists have the benefit of a generation's experience in the solution of lighting problems.

best to enforce the law of the land. But it must not be forgotten that he took a similar oath as governor of New York. It can scarcely be argued that he has enforced prohibition in that state. We cannot say that he did not try to enforce it without at the same time accusing him of breaking his oath. In view of Mr. Smith's established integrity we must conclude that he was unable to enforce it. If then, he was unable to enforce prohibition as the undisputed leader of Tammany in his native stronghold, how then does he expect to enforce it in the entire country where he will be far from having unanimous support? Yet that is the very thing he must pledge to attempt if he becomes President. To enforce a law to the full, and at the same time be working mightily to repeal it, is a picture that does not inspire confidence. In fact it would be an ideal task for that fabled two-headed monster, the "Push-me-pull-you," of which we used to read in legends. It is indeed very difficult to see that Smith would be able to do any more about the matter than would Hoover if elected. It is small wonder that Hughes termed the prohibition issue a "sham battle."

I have no great expectation that these remarks will turn a host of votes to Hoover. I am well aware that many of us "inherit" our politics. Nevertheless the present situation is one in which each man should attempt to lay aside his traditions and decide on the basis of the merits of the candidates and the forces they represent. If one does this, the real worth of Mr. Hoover will be seen in spite of smoke-screens cleverly laid. One must remember that corruption, bigotry and intolerance are the exclusive attributes of no single party. One must realize that each candidate is credited with high native ability, and high personal integrity. It is really a question as to whether one prefers the local experience, local achievement, and Tammany affiliations of one candidate, or the expert training, business success, and nationwide achievement of the other. On a relative basis, then, Smith's record of progressive accomplishment appears less formidable.

To be sure, Hoover offers me a dinner pail, perhaps an automobile. I am not averse, for I must live, and I do enjoy riding. But he also offers me an example of fine citizenship, and an idealism tempered with wisdom. I shall vote for Hoover both "gratefully" and "hopefully" because he typified my ideal of citizenship; because his personal integrity, his broad experience, and his vast achievement give adequate basis for my belief that he is fully qualified for the world's most responsible position. "How can I waver?"

Interfraternity Run Is on Wednesday Schedule

Another interfraternity championship will be decided next Wednesday afternoon when representatives from the various houses, excepting members of the Varsity cross-country squad and of the Freshman team, will compete in the annual run of two and one-half miles over the Taconic course. The race, which was won last year by Guernsey '31 of the Commons Club, now on the Varsity team, will start promptly at 4.15, and the winning house will receive 10 points toward the Interfraternity Trophy.

On Wednesday, November 14, of next week, the interclass cross-country run will take place, open to all undergraduates not connected with the above-mentioned teams. The scoring system will be the same as that used in intercollegiate cross-country meets and in the interfraternity race. Each competitor receives a number of points equal to the place in which he finished, and the points of the first five men of each fraternity or class are added, the team with the lowest score winning.

PRIZE ESSAY REBUKES SMUG REPUBLICANISM

Winner of Gerard Award Points
To G. O. P. as Exponent of Political Apathy

C. Rudolph Peterson, a graduate of Princeton last June and now a student at Columbia Law School and Margaret Mary Green, College of St. Elizabeth, 1928, were selected Saturday as the winners of the two $1,000 prizes for writing the best essays on the subject "Why Alfred E. Smith should be elected President." The prizes were offered by Mrs. James W. Gerard, wife of the former Ambassador to Germany, through the College League for Alfred E. Smith of which Frank L. Polk is President. College students and graduates of 1927 and 1928 were eligible to compete. Over 10,000 submitted papers, the writers representing every state in the Union.

Peterson's essay follows:
"Political apathy is democracy's greatest foe. It produces a deferential people which prefers to be governed rather than to trouble itself about its own affairs. It results in just such indifference as will allow the myth of Republican domination to go unchallenged. But, fortunately, the Democratic Party has found at intervals men within its own ranks who possess such unmistakable qualities of leadership and such confidence in popular government that they triumph over tradition, superstition, and prejudice."

"In Governor Smith America has found such a man. His ability is acknowledged on every hand. Yet he has something in addition to a cold-blooded dexterity with facts and figures—that quality of honest and courageous leadership without which, to preside over the affairs of a self-governing country, mere efficiency is useless. He has proved it as governor of the greatest State in the Union. That apprenticeship speaks for itself."

"The contrasts in which this campaign abounds are nowhere more evident than in the frankness of Governor Smith and the enigmatic silence of his opponent. The essence of democracy is to set before the people all the issues and receive their judgment upon them. This Governor Smith has done with a courage that has baffled politicians, in the 'plain, everyday language' of which he is so skilled a user. Mr. Hoover has kept silent, and by keeping silent he has left the people in ignorance as to his real position. If the Republican Party is content to take its stand upon a myth, then it is high time courage and frankness had their day in the election of Governor Smith. Else democracy will set for itself an evil precedent."

"There is another reason why Governor Smith will have my vote: it will be a vote of rebuke, rebuke to the smug self-satisfaction of the Republican Party; rebuke to a religious intolerance incongruous with American ideals—an intolerance which the Republican candidate may not be responsible for fostering, but the benefits of which he is content to reap; rebuke to a short-sightedness which thinks of moral reform in terms of the statute book and ignores the life about it; rebuke to men whose party loyalty blinds them to public duty."

"Let us cast aside, then, the yellow spectacles of prejudice. Let us delight to honor a man who champions freedom and is beset by intolerance; a man who is willing to grapple with the mummery of prohibition and to play fair with the farmer. Let us put a premium upon honesty and courage. Above all, let us think clearly, unconvinced by hypotheses woven from silence, and resentful of a disdain which does not condescend to take the people into its confidence. And let us prefer a leader to whom prosperity means more than pandering to privilege."

Deerfield Soccer Team Defeats Frosh Booters

From the beginning of the second quarter, however, Deerfield took a firm command of the game and, because of better passwork and more accurate kicking, was able to tally three times. The stars for the visiting team were Foster, Lindley, and Mears, while Captain Smith, Miller, Boyd, and Dohme played well for the freshmen.

The line-ups and substitutions are as follows:

Substitutions: 1932—French for Marks, Pace for French, Wadsworth for Pace, Avery for Forbes, Smith for Boyd, Duryea for Dohme.

the net were warded off with great dexterity. Williams was slightly more aggressive in the second half, yet missed many chances to score, when several Harvard offside went unnoticed. The extra periods saw rougher playing on each side, but without any scoring threats.

Williams took the ball at the opening of the game down to the Harvard goal but could not put it through. For the greater part of the period neither team secured the advantage. Toward the end, Christie received the ball from a pass near the goal and shot it through for the first tally. Within a few minutes, Harvard retaliated with a score by Carrigan which slid quietly past the Williams defense. The Crimson tried hard to take the lead in the second quarter, but the invading backs managed to stave off several threats.

In the second half the rain gradually converted the field into a sea of mud. Although the players kept up a stiff pace, accurate shooting was almost impossible and many shots at the goal particularly by Harvard, missed their destination. After two extra periods had been played the game was called.

Following are the line-ups of the teams and the summary of the game:

was short lived and Fowle evaded the ends to make his beautiful 75-yard run and another tally. Reussel chose to kick off and recovered a fumble to gain their first down when Kaputo went for nine, but the visitors fumbled and a rush by Engle paved the way for Senn's touchdown through tackle.

After the half, the third team line and the second backs took up the field, Bersbach immediately recovered a fumble to carry the ball over. This combination seemed to have little difficulty with the visitors, for they rushed the ball down the field to score again. Coach Graham then put in a new team composed of all the subs he had left and this aggregation succeeded in scoring once before the regulars went in to finish the final quarter. The first team got away immediately and Fowle dodged the defense to bring the score to 73-0, and, after an exchange of kicks ran for a 48-yard dash to complete the count.

The line-up was as follows:

R. P. I. 1932		WILLIAMS 1932
Pitehekin	l.e.	Foehl
Ablondi	l.t.	Dawson
Voltz	l.g.	Fox
Witzel	c.	Ripple

Substitutions—R. P. I.: Downell for Pitehekin, Hazleton for Kalazar, Smith for Pfau. WILLIAMS: Hackett for Patterson, Ris for Wood, Sherwood for Hulse, Hebard for Ripple, Stearn for Fox, Winston for Dawson, Nelson for Foehl, Engle for Tuttle, Rowan for Hackett, Page for Ris, Mason for Sherwood, Sidley for Hebard, Wheeler for Stearn, Pearson for Winston, Bersbach for Nelson, Bartlett for Senn, Rector for Fowle, Dewey for Engle, Fincke for Good, Goldblatt for Wheeler, Sabin for Dewey, Myers for Rector, Angell for Pearson, Monier for Bartlett, Tonks for Mason, Detwiler for Tonks, Brown for Sabin. The regulars were then replaced in their respective positions and the following substitutions took place: Ris for Dawson, Engle for Fowle, Nelson for Patterson.

Site, Rules of 1931-32 Rope Pull Are Chosen

Although the exact date and time for the annual rope pull between the Sophomore and Freshman classes have not been decided as yet, the site has been chosen and the method of procedure definitely agreed upon. Ely '30 and Field '31 are in charge of the proceedings, and all activity at the rope pull will be under their surveillance.

The site of the pull will be a spot on the Green River approximately 50 yards northeast of the concrete bridge on the North Adams road. The festivities will start when a chosen member of the Freshman class wades across the river and hands the end of the rope to the president of the Class of 1931. The class winning two out of three pulls is the victor, and if this proves to be the Class of 1932, that class will attempt to rush across the bridge from their side with the rope. If they emerge victorious in this struggle with the sophomores, certain privileges, as yet undecided, will be theirs for one day.

'Graphic' Competition

All members of the Class of 1932 who are interested in a short competition for the business board of the Graphic are requested to meet in the office of that publication in Jesup Hall, Tuesday at 12.40, or to see J. S. Chapman '30 immediately.

LECTURES ON HYGIENE GIVEN BY DR. SEERLEY

Character and Habit, Evolution of Sex, and Manhood Discussed In Three Talks

The presentation of sex and hygiene problems from a frank and wholesome point of view was the task last week of Dr. Frank Newell Seerley, Professor of Psychology at Springfield College, in his lectures given last Thursday afternoon, and Thursday and Friday evenings in Jesup Hall. Dr. Seerley succeeded admirably in his purpose, if the large audience present at each talk, and the generous applause which was accorded him for his frequent witticisms and honest sincerity can be taken as convincing evidence.

Dr. Seerley is not a new-comer to Williams, as he lectured here last year, coming at the request of Professor Messer of the Physical Education department. He has been associated with the teaching of psychology at Springfield College for forty years, and in his spare time since the war, has lectured at nearly every prominent college in the country on the subject of social hygiene. He is regarded as having no superior in the presentation of this subject to college men and his wide experience in this field includes war-time work when he was overseas with the American forces.

The three lectures given here were entitled "Character and Habit", "The Evolution of Sex", and "Manhood and Womanhood", and were included as part of the course in Freshman Hygiene. In the first of this series, the doctor emphasized the influence of the mind over the workings of the body. Psychologically, the mind is both the character and personality of the individual. All outward sensations crowd the brain with building materials, he said, and the only way to remove undesirable material is to substitute something for it, and crowd it out in its turn. The material that we use for our character building comes from the ideas of others—books, movies, and conversation—which we consciously or unconsciously put to our own use. Thus it follows that any evils or impurities that find a place in the mind must eventually find expression in character and action. It is for this psychological reason, the doctor stated, that boys in the adolescent period to themselves lasting harm in practices which, contrary to the prevalent opinion, are physically natural and harmless.

In his second lecture, Dr. Seerley described the evolution of sex as a series of steps, or stages, in a ladder of development that reached from birth to maturity. These phases the doctor listed as the pre-adolescent, the self-conscious, the sex-conscious, the contact, the dancing, the petting, the courtship, engagement, and marriage, between birth and 25 years, the normal time of maturity. He considered the problems of each period, particularly the dangers of abnormal developments in childhood, the changes in habit and appearance, and the development of finer instincts in adolescence, and the value of natural contacts in dancing and parties. "Petting" he regarded as dangerous, because of the tendency to over-step bounds, but at the same time unavoidable, because of its part in Nature's process of selection—and by no means confined to the present generation. Marriage, the final step, should be a consummation of the others, and suitability should be determined before, not after marriage, he concluded.

The last talk on Friday dealt with womanhood. Dr. Seerley spoke of her change in the position of life, from that of slavery to man centuries ago to her present place of independence and equality. He pointed out her finer qualities, now universally recognized, and especially that of mother-love, the highest of all human qualities. The sacredness of the relationship between man and woman was the speaker's final point. After the lecture, the doctor conducted a question and answer forum.

Phil Union To Open Sunday

At the inauguration of its 1928-29 season, the Philosophical Union will be addressed by Dr. John H. Denison next Sunday evening, Nov. 11, at 8.00 p. m., and the public is cordially invited to attend. Election of officers for the year will also take place at the meeting.

R. P. I. Harriers Defeat Williams 1932 by 25-30

After taking first and second place, the Freshman cross-country team allowed their opponents to bunch their runners in the next five places, and lost their second meet of the season to the R. P. I. harriers last Saturday afternoon, 25-30. Captain Roy of the Williams freshmen pulled away at the turn from Fazio, who was favored to win, and broke the tape with a 50-yard lead, while the latter, unfortunately mistaking the finish line, was passed by Potter of Williams in the last few feet for second place.

Although Potter had been able to break away from the bunched Troy harriers before the finish, the remainder of the Purple team crossed the finish line over a minute later to take the last three places. Following is the order of finish: Roy (W), Potter (W), Fazio (R), Smith (R), DeVeve (R), Lameraux (R), Thompson (R), Walter (W), Burnett, (W), Davol (W). Time: 13 m., 40 s. Score: R. P. I. 25, Williams, 30.

Well go ahead and write it!

"SOME DAY I'm going to write an advertisement for the New York Herald Tribune. It's the best all-around newspaper I've ever read."

"I don't know much about advertising, but it seems to me that a newspaper, which can give you all the news, and make it interesting, ought to be easy to write about. I mustn't forget its sense of humor which, I think, does more to make it readable than almost anything else. It's a rare quality in newspapers."

"Let's see. There's sports news, of course. Extra-strong in the Herald Tribune because of men like Grantland Rice, W. O. McGeehan, Harry Cross, Bill Hanna, Rud Rennie and the rest. And there's the theatre, with adroit Percy Hammond. And I mustn't forget Arthur Ruhl. The boy can write."

"Then there's Eddie Hope, who runs 'The Lantern' every morning and a new Sunday piece, too. He went to Princeton. I better not get into what colleges everybody went to or there'd be a list that would use up all the space."

"And Claire Briggs must get some attention. I think he's 'the Mark Twain of pictures'. 'Ding' is aboard, too, with the cartoons that have made him the most famous political cartoonist there is."

"Well, that's a fair start, though I've left out a pile of dope that ought to go in. Yes, sir. Some day I'm going to write an advertisement for the New York Herald Tribune."

Varsity Runs Wild to Crush Garnet

heads of most of the players, and a long run by Howe aided by excellent interference added six more points. In the second period, Stayman playing for Howe, proved too speedy for the Garnet, and Langmaid further justified himself as one of the East's highest scorers, finished another advance with a touchdown. Mud was partially responsible for the failure of all three of the tries for point in the first half.

Offensive activities after the intermission began again when Putnam's long runback of a punt, Howe's end dash, and a tricky reverse play put Brown over the line again. Events soon brought Langmaid to the one-yard line, from which position Brown again tallied, and Eynon scooped up a pass for the extra point. The remaining points came when Finegan obligingly singled out Langmaid as the recipient of one of his heaves, and the later returned the compliment by running 35 yards practically unmolested past the last chalk mark.

Finding a terrestrial offensive unprofitable, Union soon decided in favor of a forward pass attack, but most of these threats were intercepted. Howe started off the first race to the goal with two wide runs resulting in the first of four consecutive first downs. In less than five minutes after the opening whistle he and Brown, aided by interference which was effective throughout the game, gave Williams its first six points. Langmaid's attempt to lift the ball from a mud puddle over the goal post was unsuccessful.

Union's position as recipient of the kick-off gave it the ball temporarily, but not for long, as Brown fell on it after Nitchman's fumble. After an advantageous exchange of punts, Williams started another race to the goal, the take-off being midfield.

Brown completed a beautiful long pass to Langmaid, and on the next play started running and did not stop until he was forced out a mere five yards from the end line. After a time out Brown scored through the line. Langmaid's drop kick was high and slightly wide.

The start of the second quarter was marked by Union's initial first down on straight football. The advance was stopped, however, and Williams took the ball on her 20-yard mark after Finegan's long punt went over the goal line. At this point Stayman and Chase went in for Howe and Brown. A Union pass was successful, but Langmaid dropped its recipient, Peters. Kipp spoiled the next play, and Williams recovered the ball in midfield after a blocked punt. This was the signal for a new dash to the tape, which was led by the speedy Stayman. A pretty run by Stayman, a pass to Williams, a first down contributed by Langmaid, another end run by Stayman, and Langmaid was safely over the line. Drop kicks having proved themselves inefficient, an attempt was made to add the extra point on a pass, but to no avail.

At this point seven regulars were taken out, and Ashby, Deming, Hood, L. Brown, McAllister, Lobo, and Williamson took their places. The kickoff rolled to midfield. Here the Union team, finding opposition more of its calibre, started an attempt to score through the air, but the frequent arrival of the ball in the arms of the members of the wrong team spelled failure for this plan of campaign. Eynon broke up the first pass, and McAllister caught the second. The rest of the period spent itself in midfield, with the teams almost evenly matched.

Score at the end of the first half, Williams 18, Union 0. First downs, Williams 11, Union 2. The home team celebrated the reopening of hostilities with several gains resulting in a first down. Unfortunately for the Garnet, however, Langmaid snared one of its passes. On the answer to a punt from Howe shortly afterward, Williams ran the ball back to the Union 15-yard line. Here Howe made a first down around left end, Brown made another, Putnam took it nearer, and Brown was over on a fake reverse.

The course of events and a fifteen yard Union penalty soon found Williams again within scoring distance. Brown passed to Langmaid, who was finally thrown on the one-yard line. Brown then plunged through for his third contribution to the day's success. Eynon caught a pass and the Purple chalked up its only extra point.

The final score came early in the fourth quarter. Langmaid, who was practically alone on the far side of the field from the scrimmage, captured a long pass which Finegan meant for one of his teammates, and streaked over thirty yards without being stopped. During the rest of the period, numerous substitutions were made, and Union again resorted to the aerial method. A pass from Finegan to Foley put Union in a threatening position for the first time, several plunges following it bringing the ball to Williams' six inch line. Here the line held, and the whistle deprived Chase of the opportunity of punting out of danger.

Following are the line-ups and summary:

SIDELIGHTS of the Union Game

Attempting to wipe all the mud from the field in preparation for the varsity contest, the Union Freshman team rolled and slopped around in the biggest puddles during their game, but succeeded only in stirring up the slime to a glue-like consistency.

Additional athletic activity as a sideline to the "big show" was the cross-country race between Union and Brown, which began and ended in front of the north (supposedly Williams') stand. Not knowing either side, the crowd proved themselves great sportsmen by cheering Number 134 who beat out Number 64 in the last 100 yards.

At times the melodies of the Union Band rivalled the practice contests of our own musicians last year, but when faced with the crowd and alone in the middle of the mud, the Garnet "Tooters" performed quite creditably.

Making every effort to put the Williams players and rooters at their ease, the Union officials allowed four "hounds" to gambol at one end of the field, while the players occupied the other.

Williams made substitutions with such frequency that towards the end of the game, when a half-back was inadvertently knocked out, a tackle had to be substituted in his place.

In the beginning the mud was deep and thick in the middle of the field, and the rain which fell between the halves helped not at all. Besides smearing themselves from head to foot with the muck, several of the players collected enough on their feet to qualify for a snow shoe race. On the last play of the game the referee was forced to ask a player, who had recovered a Union fumble, which team he belonged to although he was looking directly at the man.

paper is made today exactly as it was at that time. We tend to underrate the achievements of early times. The more we see early books the more we realize that they had the correct fundamental idea. Modern books are merely adaptations of them, with the central idea little changed. Therefore, if a student listens to a resume of the early processes of type casting, early type construction, and the makeup of printed books, he acquires knowledge of a fundamental which has changed little in essentials."

Williams is unusually fortunate in having in its possession the Chapin Library of Rare Books, which was collected for and presented to the College five years ago by Alfred Clark Chapin, of the Class of 1869. Many of the books come from the libraries of great collectors. Several hundred of the volumes are over 500 years old, and one manuscript dates back to the ninth century. It can thus be seen that the value of the collection is enormous. "With a library of this kind," according to Miss Osborne, "scholars are enabled to do expert work, and classes may see exhibitions which form a valuable supplement to their regular work. The new course should provide a direct contact between the student body and rare books."

No College credit will be given for the work of the course, which will not include outside preparation or written tests, but merely requires one hour each week and an interest in the subject. About one half of each meeting will be devoted to lectures by Miss Osborne, the notes on which will at the end of the year comprise a valuable store of information, since no book yet written in the English language concisely and satisfactorily covers the field of early printing. The material to be presented in the lectures has been collected by Miss Osborne during over five years of research.

The course will in some respects resemble similar ones at Yale and Princeton. Twelve members of the student body have been granted permission to join it, and this number will be divided into two sections, one of sophomores, and one of upper-classmen, each meeting once a week. Meetings will be held in the study of the Chapin Library in Stetson Hall. The Sophomore section will be composed of Cannon, Rogers, Rumsey, Schwartz, Sommer, and R. Wheeler, while the other group is made up of Assistant Professor Miller, Ide and Faison '29, and Newlin and Prescott '30.

The following syllabus recently issued outlines the work of the course:

The History of the Printed Book

Brief preliminary consideration of early printing processes in China. Paper: its invention and process of making.

Block Printing in Europe. (15th century).

European invention of printing with movable metal type. Influence of manuscripts. First press. Printing in Germany. (15th century).

Introduction of printing into Italy, France, Holland, Spain, England. (15th century).

Survey of printing in Germany, Italy,

France, Holland, Spain, England. (16th century).

During the course one hour will be devoted to the general field of book-collecting with a brief sketch of great collectors, past and present, while another hour will be given to a discussion of the books of reference indispensable for detailed study of early printing.

The Charities Committee has distributed many Thanksgiving baskets and discarded clothing has been collected from the students to be sent to any unfortunates. The Deputations Committee has visited such places as Andover and the Christ Presbyterian Church in New York City.

OXONIAN DEBATERS OUT-ARGUE PURPLE

Persuasive Evidence for American Adhesion to League Defeats Isolation Policy

AUDIENCE VOTE IS 112-62

League Supported by Victors as Necessary Supplement to Kellogg Pact

"That America should join the League of Nations is only the logical outcome of the Kellogg Pact," was the decision rendered by Dingle M. Foot of Oxford in supporting the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved: That the United States should enter the League of Nations," in the debate in Chapin Hall Thursday evening which Oxford won by a 112-62 vote of the audience. President Garfield, acting as chairman, opened the proceedings by greeting the Oxonians with praise of the exchanges of ideas made possible by such international meetings, and went on to present the first speaker for the affirmative, Mr. Lennox-Boyd.

"We have not come to urge America to embroil herself in European affairs or defy her traditional policy, but merely to take her place with the Nations of the world," said Mr. Lennox-Boyd. The speaker proceeded to point out that "the great mass of problems brought up before the League had been accorded at least a favorable solution," arguing that "the Kellogg Pact must be supplemented by an organization for peace."

Harris '29, in supporting the negative, showed that the United States recognized the idealistic values of the League, but did not accede to its reservations restricting the idealism of the Kellogg Treaty. "The Covenant of the League," he said, "is machinery to realize the ideal; it is only this with which we have any quarrel." C. S. M. Brereton, speaking second for Oxford, criticized Harris' argument, asking, "What does an ideal mean except an end toward which one should work? One cannot outlaw war without providing the code with which to expell it. The League is really preventing war; it can only go on doing so if it is representative of all nations. That is what we are after."

Heaton '30, continuing the argument for the negative, read the long list of Americans unofficially taking part in League activity. "In so far as the League seeks justice," he said, "the United States recognizes its obligations and has done as much as any other nation to carry them out. But an obligation to enforce peace with war is something the United States cannot, and no other nation should, support."

After a short preamble, in which he stated his birthplace had been Plymouth and that one of his ancestors would have been a Pilgrim Father had he not slept over and missed the boat and set up as a father on his own account, Dingle M. Foot, third speaker for the affirmative, said: "The cooperation of the United States shows that it would not be a big (Continued on Third Page)

'LITTLE THEATRE' TO OPEN SEASON TONIGHT

Original Play by Casaday '29 and Romer '28 Included in Triple Presentation

Friday, November 10—As its initial performance of the present season, the Williams Little Theatre will present a bill of three one-act plays this evening at 8.30 o'clock in the Jesup Hall auditorium. The works which have been selected for presentation are Aranea, an original production by Alfred Romer '28 and James Lewis Casaday '29, Wurzell-Flummary, by A. A. Milne, and Annajanska, the Bolshevik Empress, by George Bernard Shaw. Aranea holds a particular interest for the audience in that it is written, produced, and directed by members of the College. The play is a tragedy, not intended to be symbolical, the scene of which is laid in a castle during the Middle Ages. The title part of Aranea will be taken by Mrs. Bloedel, while the direction and costuming of the play are in the hands of one of the co-authors, J. L. Casaday '29. Wurzell-Flummary, directed by A. A. Reiff '30, is a light comedy of the British aristocracy, (Continued on Seventh Page.)

COACH CALDWELL OF WILLIAMS: "All the men are in good condition, and we hope to match the Wesleyan determination and fighting spirit. We are looking forward to a clean but hard-fought game."

COACH WOOD OF WESLEYAN: "Wesleyan appreciates that Williams has one of the best small-college teams in the country. In addition to seasoned material, it is a team that is well disciplined and drilled in the art of modern football."

SOCCER TEAM OPENS 'LITTLE THREE' SERIES

Purple Clashes With Wesleyan on Cole Field; Visitors Have Beaten Amherst

One of the important contests with Wesleyan this Saturday will be the annual soccer game, which will take place between the two elevens this morning at 11.00 a. m. on Cole Field. The Purple team has thus far an undefeated record, but the Cardinal and Black, although having received one setback, recently downed a powerful Amherst combination, which had not lost a game in two years.

The Williams squad emerged intact from the Harvard game last week, so that the same line-up will take the field in today's match. Daily scrimmages have taken place, but hard practice has been hampered by unfavorable weather. The team continues to improve in every way, a fact that was manifested when it held the strong Harvard eleven to a 1-1 tie. The offense and defense of the opposing teams today seems to have about equal power, although the home team will rely chiefly on its halfbacks to secure victory.

Comparative scores show that Wesleyan tied R. P. I., 2-2, in the first game of the season, while Williams trimmed the latter by 1-0 in its second game. The visitors however, show to advantage in defeating Amherst, who conquered Harvard, 2-1. In the other contests of the season Wesleyan lost to Clark, 3-0, won from Worcester, 2-1, and tied M. I. T. by a 2-2 score.

Following are the probable line-ups of both teams:

WILLIAMS	WESLEYAN

250 GIRLS TO ATTEND HOUSE PARTIES TONIGHT

Eight Houses and Commons Club To Give Dances After Game This Evening

Approximately 250 girls will be present in Williamstown to add color to the Wesleyan football game and other activities of the house party weekend with which eight fraternities and the Commons Club will entertain their guests. The weekend will start with the Little Theatre's first production of the year on Friday night, after which there will be a special pre-house party dance at the Meadowbrook Ballroom in North Adams, where Anson Smith and his orchestra will furnish music until 1 a. m. On Saturday there will be numerous athletic events to watch in the morning and afternoon. Six houses are giving tea dances after the Wesleyan game, and in the evening there will be the usual formal dances lasting until midnight.

The houses which are entertaining at this time are Beta Theta Pi, which has engaged the Six Jumping Jacks for afternoon and evening dances, the Commons Club, where the Williams Purple Knights will play for both parties, Delta Upsilon, which has secured Jimmy Day's Nighthawks for the evening dance. Doc Eisenbourg's Sinfonians will play at the evening party given by Delta Phi, Hardigan's orchestra from Albany is to furnish the music for the (Continued on Seventh Page.)

Weston Field before a capacity crowd in her first "Little Three" game of the 1928 season, and the thirty-seventh annual contest between the two colleges. Still remembering the 12-0 defeat inflicted on Andrus Field last fall, the strongest Purple team in the past few years will attempt to conquer the 1927 "Little Three" champions in the last home game of the present season. Although her record is not quite as impressive as Williams', the Cardinal and Black has a strong team, in addition to her traditional fighting spirit, and with both teams in excellent physical condition an exciting spectacle is promised.

Williams will enter the game in perfect physical condition, no first string men being on the injured list. The line-up will be the same that started against Union last Saturday, and the same that has played the majority of games with two exceptions, Kipp, who will play in Ashby's position at end, and R. Brown who will take Chase's place in the backfield. Both of these men will probably see action before the game is over, however. Moaday's workout was light to give the squad a rest after the Union game. The mistakes of this contest were pointed out, after which a light signal drill, and a short passing and kicking practice were held.

A hard scrimmage between an impromptu varsity team and the 1932 combination featured Tuesday's practice, the yearlings winning by a 20-13 score. The first string backfield did not play, but the majority of varsity linemen saw some action during the afternoon. Coach Caldwell played quarterback for the losers, and did most of the forward passing, but carried the ball himself only once. The freshmen showed considerable power, and two of their backs, Capt. Fowle and Good, were effective in piercing the varsity's forward wall and skirting their ends. Stayman and Eisner stood out for the varsity squad on the offense, while Ashby at end snagged several nice passes, one netting a touchdown.

The work on Wednesday was concentrated on a defense against forward passing, for which Wesleyan has always been noted and which she usually uses successfully against the Purple. In addition to this, there was box work for the line and a (Continued on Ninth Page)

POTENTIAL SWIMMERS ADDRESSED BY GRAHAM

Program of Practice Described to Freshmen and Varsity Candidates

In order to explain details of pre-seasonal practice, Coach Graham called a meeting of all swimming candidates, both first team and Freshman, recently in Jesup Hall. Two meetings were held, the first being attended by fifteen men from last year's Varsity and Freshman swimming squads, and the second by 14 men of 1932 who are planning to try out for the yearling team.

The main point of Coach Graham's talk to both squads was that each man should swim for twenty minutes at least twice a week, using any type of stroke. He further urged all candidates to keep well up in their studies, as an ineligible swimmer would naturally be of no use to the team.

At the same time he announced that organized practice would commence on the third week of November, and that the first meet would be an informal swim between the freshmen and the Varsity. In his talk to the yearlings, he referred to the Bowker Cup, last year won by Burgess '30, which is open to all men in College who have not won their letter in swimming, and also the Leonard S. Prince Cup, last year won by Birnie '31, which is open to competition by all members of the Freshman class.

On looking over the prospects of a creditable showing for the forthcoming season, it is seen that four strong men, Butcher, Boynton, Dawes, and Putney, were lost by graduation, thus leaving a big gap in the dashes, relay, and 440. However, Coach Graham is planning to form another well-rounded team around Captain Schott, National Intercollegiate record-holder in the breast stroke. Those veterans remaining from last year, who will be strengthened by several promising sophomores, are Doughty, Healy, Noble, Phelps, and Captain Schott '29, and Adams, Burgess, Davis, Niebling, and van der Bogert '30.

Following is a list of the candidates who attended the meeting with their prospective positions: the dashes and relay: Doughty, Higginbotham and Phelps '29, Adams, and Davis '30, and Arseott, Goodbody, Kimball, and Stewart '31; backstroke: Healy and Schott '29, van der Bogert '30, and Birnie and Shaw '31; dives: Niebling '30, and Camp and Shaw '31; breast stroke: Healy, Noble, and Schott '29, and Cavanagh and Gregg '31; and the 440: Burgess '30, and Birnie, Garth, and Webster '31.

Those men of the Freshman class who were present are: Ach, Carroll, Dawson, Goldblutt, Lawson, Letchworth, McMahon, Pierce, Rawlings, Ripple, Sidley, Stratton, Taylor, and Van Sant.

1931-1932 Rope Pull Will Take Place This Tuesday

Just below the Green River bridge on the North Adams road, the annual sophomore-freshman rope pull will take place on Tuesday, November 13. The freshmen will initiate the ceremonies by gathering at Jesup Hall at 4.00 p. m. to carry the rope down to the river, unmolested.

The contestants are requested not to wear spikes or cleats, to refrain from slugging in the ensuing struggle, and under all circumstances to obey the referee's whistle. Since neither class participating has been present at this function, the following additional rules will offer necessary information:

1. The freshmen occupy the east bank of the river, and the sophomores the west.
2. One class must win two out of three pulls to gain possession of the rope.
3. After gaining possession of the rope, that class is not declared victor unless it succeeds in carrying it to the top of Consumption Hill.
4. Should the freshmen win, all rules (traditional) concerning them will be discarded for the remainder of the day.

Freshman Booters to Oppose Holyoke Eleven

Playing in its third contest of the season, the Freshman soccer team will oppose the Holyoke High School booters on Cole Field this morning at 11.00 a. m. No definite information whatever is available concerning the strength of the Holyoke eleven, but Coach Bellerose feels that the yearlings will be called upon to face stiff opposition.

The freshmen have a rather unimpressive record for the season so far, having been overwhelmingly defeated in both their games with Williston and Deerfield Academy, but it should be remembered that these two schools have strong teams this year. Coach Bellerose expects to start the game with the same combination that took the field against Deerfield, and which is as follows:

CHILDE HERALD

Each Saturday finds Childe Herald confronted with a more difficult task; so that he no longer feels safe in assuming the responsibility for minute accuracy in the scores predicted.

HARVARD-PENNSYLVANIA

This will be one of the most interesting games of the day between two fine teams, who have lost one game apiece. Harvard appears to have more potential scoring power and, if their line can hold up, should win a close decision. Smith, All-American tackle, will afford the Crimson backs some trouble. Score: Harvard 14; Penn. 10.

ARMY-NOTRE DAME

Another one of Saturday's spectacles. West Point, which from its early record appears to be about the class of the country, is not anxious to be thrown from the peak at this late date. Notre Dame, however, is a distinctly improved eleven over that which bowed to Wisconsin and Georgia Tech. Score: Army 20; Notre Dame 6.

OHIO-IOWA

The Western Conference champion appears to be one of these two; so this contest is especially important. Ohio's line should be able to match Iowa's heavy forward wall, while the Scarlet and Grey backs, on paper at least, are more versatile, and with Eby, Holman, and Kruskamp should flash a running and passing attack to score two touchdowns. Score: Ohio 13; Iowa 7.

NAVY-MICHIGAN

Both teams started the season disastrously, but since then each has won a major victory, Navy beating Penn and Michigan nosing out Illinois. The Midshipmen have a wealth of backfield material, and seem headed for another win. Score: Navy 7; Michigan 3.

AMHERST-TRINITY

The Sabrinas have an easy afternoon in preparation for Williams, the subs will probably see some action. Score: Amherst 20, Trinity 0.

DARTMOUTH-BROWN

The Green has failed against Harvard and Yale, but with Marsters and its other luminaries back in the line-up ought take the Bruin into camp. Score: Dartmouth 14; Brown 13.

YALE-MARYLAND

Coach Stevens plans to start his regulars this week to find out how much they can do, and what they do should be too much for the Southerners. Score: Yale 21; Maryland 0.

PURDUE-NORTHWESTERN

Another good game between two strong elevens. Harneson and Carraway give the Boilermakers a lot of strength in the backfield, but Northwestern has a baffling overhead attack and is an alert team. Score: Purdue 14; Northwestern 14.

WISCONSIN-CHICAGO

Wisconsin was rated the best of the Middle West in September, and, although it has not lived up to expectations, it is a good team. Stagg had no luck at the beginning, but last Saturday against Penn showed signs of potential power. Score: Wisconsin 14; Chicago 7.

WILLIAMS-WESLEYAN

On paper the Purple seems due for a victory, but Wesleyan has a habit of unearthing some passes which continually end in a touchdown. Nevertheless, Williams should,—but as to the score—who knows?

1932 Harriers Run Troy at 11

Twice defeated, but constantly improving in form, the Freshman cross-country team will engage the third opponent of its season, Troy High School, on the Taconic course today at 11.00 a. m. The visitors are not considered as strong a team as the runners from R. P. I., who defeated the Purple yearlings, 25-35, last Saturday, and Captain Roy's fine running to defeat Fazio, the R. P. I. star, makes him a favorite to take today's race. The Williams line-up will probably be as follows: Roy, Potter, Burnett, Walter, Davol, Skinner, and Swift.

HARRIERS WILL TEST CARDINAL AND BLACK

Both Teams Have Dropped a Meet; Wesleyan Suffering From Loss of Livesey

The Taconic Course will be the scene of the last dual cross-country meet of the season this Saturday when the Wesleyan harriers try their mettle against Williams at 2.15 p. m. Comparative scores indicate nothing as to the relative powers of the two teams, since they have both been defeated once and have run against no mutual rival this fall.

The Purple will enter the meet with a record of decisive defeats of Middlebury and Hamilton, and a loss to R. P. I. The team, especially noteworthy because of the number of sophomores on the lineup, will probably consist of the men chosen in the time trials last Saturday. Wesleyan is suffering from the recent suspension of Livesey, who had been coming in tied for first with Captain Kelly in every meet. In his place Carter, a veteran who has been laid up with a bad hip during the entire season, will probably run, since he has been turning in excellent time to date. Church is also expected to show up well.

The Cardinal and Black has a .750 average for the season so far. The Connecticut Aggies were downed, 20-35, as was Tufts, 25-30. The powerful Springfield aggregation proved too much for the Middletown team, 18-37, but revenge was taken on M. A. C. to the tune of 20-36. The team facing Williams this Saturday will be composed of Captain Kelly, Casner, Carter, Knecht, S. H. Jones, S. F. Jones, and Church, while the Purple will be represented by Captain Moore '29, J. Chapman and E. V. Reynolds '30, Goodbody, Guernsey, J. Reynolds, and Suffern '31.

What makes this marvelous speed possible?

In this age of speed, "mile a minute" has become commonplace. Machines that reduce distances by land, air, and water travel excite today only casual interest and little thought of the mechanism that makes this tremendous speed possible.

Behind the scenes, inventors and mechanics have worked untiringly to build today's marvelous engines of travel. Great manufactories produce them in quantities, each capable of its high speed accomplishments because hundreds of parts have been fashioned to accuracy by grinding.

In the old days of hand and semi-machine operations, high production with accuracy was of course limited. Today, grinding machines produce precision parts, one after another, mechanically perfect, day in and day out, in tremendous quantities.

1932 FOOTBALL TEAM TO OPPOSE WESLEYAN

Strong Freshman Eleven Appears to Have Decided Edge over Middletown Rival

Repeated scrimmages with the Varsity throughout the week have served to keep the victorious 1932 team in shape for their initiation into the "Little Three" when they meet the Wesleyan freshmen here today at 10.00 a. m. on Cole Field. Several potential reserves loomed up as a result of the severe drubbing which the yearlings gave R. P. I. last Saturday and Coach Graham is prepared to send two teams on the field in case Wesleyan should threaten.

After easily defeating Pittsfield High School in their first game the squad had a rest of two weeks and under the careful eye of Coach Graham and his assistants, Callaghan and Downey, the team improved to such an extent that even the fourth team was able to make a touchdown and contribute to the 80-0 victory over the first year men from Troy. Captain Fowle led the way for his men with six touchdowns, closely followed by Good and Senn. The strongest evidence of freshmen strength was shown last Tuesday when they defeated the Varsity in a secret practice, 20-0. Although the first string backfield was missing the regular line, backed up by Caldwell could make no impression on the eager freshmen. A good assortment of plays was noticeable and the work of Good was particularly outstanding.

The excellent allround playing of Captain Fowle, combined with the line smushing of Good and Senn and the kicking of Tuttle gives the yearlings a backfield of note and these men will bear watching in today's encounter. Ripple and Hulce continue to hold down the center of the line, both men displaying plenty of fight. Fox and Foehl, playing left guard and left end respectively, are improving daily as is Dawson, left tackle, who was shifted from center at the beginning of the season because of his size and defensive ability. Patterson, right end, who contributed to the Pittsfield victory has developed more speed and is in good shape for the game.

The Wesleyan freshmen have not as yet displayed much real football power. The team as a whole is composed of light and inexperienced men. To date they have played only one game which can be taken as indicative of their ability. In the contest with Amherst 1932 they were defeated 20-0, due mainly to the fact that fumbles were numerous by the Cardinal and Black. The squad as a whole shows a tendency to drop the ball at the crucial moments. The line is weak in giving interference for end runs and off-tackle plays, but are sure ground gainers through center. A passing game has also been developed and is being depended upon for this encounter. The line-up of the two teams is as follows:

WILLIAMS		WESLEYAN
Foehl	l.e.	Prescoln
Dawson	l.t.	Wiggers
Fox	l.g.	Means
Ripple	e.	Bent
Hulce	r.g.	Ransom
Wood	r.t.	Parker
Patterson	r.e.	Hewitt
Senn	q.b.	Tirrell
Fowle	l.h.b.	Adrianee
Tuttle	r.h.b.	Hodgman
Good	f.b.	Blakeslee

Harriman Dormitory, the fourth structure to be erected in Wesleyan's $1,250,000 building program on the Johnston quadrangle was dedicated recently. Incident to the dedication was the unveiling of a tablet by Henry I. Harriman, Wesleyan '95, of Boston, Vice-president of the Board of Trustees of the University. The exercises were attended by many alumni who had returned for the celebration.

Dr. Frank Parker Day, who is now lecturing on advanced English at Swarthmore College, was elected President of Union College at a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of that institution. He succeeds President Charles Alexander Richmond, who retires after holding office 20 years.

step for that country to join the League altogether. All we ask is to organize those good intentions." He showed that "the United States is getting more and more financially interested in Europe. As America became a European colony by conquest, so Europe is becoming America's by purchase. If you want the ideals of the Kellogg Pact carried out, you must join the League of Nations. If the United States and Great Britain are determined to make the League a success, it can meet all problems which come before it."

Replying for the negative, Reeves '29 pointed out that "the political and legal machinery of the League is ineffective and not applicable to present problems. The articles are essentially inconsistent: the object is to prevent war and this means making war. We agree heartily with the ideal aspects of the League; we agree to its humanitarian and social sides; but we do not agree to allying ourselves to its military and political phases."

In handling the rebuttal for Williams, Harris stated that "the negative objected to the means by which the ends of the League were to be accomplished", and cited "tangible, logical objections." Brereton replied to Reeves' argument by claiming that the humanitarian side of the League was not its object, which was peace. "Take any solution you like to the present objections to entrance into the League, and ask us whether we shall accept you, and we shall. If you want peace, prepare for peace."

POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ARE ENDED BY DEBATE

Dr. Garfield, Professors Maxcy and Miller, and B. W. Warren '85
Discuss Issues

Before one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences that has ever filled the Jesup Hall auditorium, two members of the faculty and two of the administration, as representatives of the College Smith and Hoover Clubs, closed the national presidential campaign in Williams-town with a debate on the question, "Resolved: That Mr. Hoover rather than Governor Smith should be elected next President of the United States." Beals '29 presided over the meeting at which President Garfield and Professor C. L. Maxcy spoke in behalf of the Republican candidate, while Bentley W. Warren '85, senior trustee of the College, and Assistant Professor J. W. Miller took the negative side in behalf of the Democratic candidate.

Professor Maxcy, who was the first speaker for Mr. Hoover, set forth nine issues on which he believed Hoover to be superior to Smith, enlarging on a few of them such as farm relief, water power, prohibition, and the tariff. After pointing out Hoover's many personal qualifications concerning which he said that "the records and the man behind them were the brass tacks of the campaign". Professor Maxcy closed with a criticism of Governor Smith's use of the English language as being that of the artisan and the shop-keeper.

In reply to this attack, Mr. Warren, the first speaker for Al Smith, suggested that Professor Maxcy assign an analysis of one of Hoover's speeches to the honor pupils of his classes and see whether a single one could make it out. Mr. Warren enlarged on the Republican candidate's vagueness in campaign, and refuted the Republican cry of Tammany by citing the number of C. O. P. "tammanies" throughout the country, adding that the whole Republican Party was a Tammany of Corruption.

Dr. Garfield opened his speech by paying tribute to Mr. Warren's abilities as a debater and a lawyer. Then he told of Herbert Hoover's capabilities as an engineer and business man, and he added that the human side of the man was also great. After reading several excerpts from one of Mr. Hoover's reports to Congress which planned the increased efficiency in the disposal of waste, he concluded with a strong appeal for the observance of the Eighteenth Amendment. Concluding the set debate, Professor Miller assailed the placing of the Prohibition Amendment in a body of fundamental law like the Constitution. Pointing out that the average citizen is unqualified to discuss most issues, he urged support of the party which aided most in the clarification of questions. He ended by stating that Smith, as a governmental expert, was better qualified than Hoover, as an engineer.

Following the regular speakers, the floor was thrown open to the audience, questions being answered by representatives of the Smith and Hoover clubs. According to an agreement no vote was taken and the only show of feeling was the hearty applause which greeted every speaker.

A NEW ERA IN AN ANCIENT HERITAGE

As the final whistle ends the thirty-seventh annual Williams-Wesleyan game on Weston Field today, another chapter will have been enacted in the annals of this long rivalry,—and once again, either the ancient bells of Goodrich will peal the joyful music of a Williams victory, or the cohorts of the Cardinal and Black will return to Andrus Field with fragments of Purple goal posts. Throughout this series, which began in 1891 and has continued in unbroken sequence since 1896, determined fighting and close scores have been characteristic of practically every game. Once again this afternoon spectators on either side of the field will rejoice in the friendly competition and the clean sportsmanship of the game.

Today's contest has an especial significance both for Williams and for Wesleyan. This fall the Purple ushered in a new era in football, and, with the College supporting the team, has made an auspicious and commendable start, winning five out of six games, and recalling shades of Boynton, Mallon, the Draper brothers, and other grid-iron immortals. A victory over Wesleyan is one of the prime objectives of the whole season. Wearing the festive crown of 1927 "Little Three" champions, the Cardinal and Black are equally desirous of victory to tie for honors this fall. Not even the most biased partisan dares to predict a walk-away, for this is a Williams-Wesleyan game.

To Wesleyan, the College extends a cordial welcome in anticipation of the resumption of that rivalry, which has come down through the years with few scars of ill feeling. To Coach Caldwell who today meets his first "Little Three" rival, the College wishes every degree of success—a wish that will be expressed with a roar on Weston Field this afternoon.

TWO DEBATES

All the kaleidoscopic range between Eliza-crossing-the-ice and the profundity of Gilbert and Sullivan was included in the forensic offerings of the week. A debate between the Smith and Hoover Clubs on the night before election; a debate with Oxford on the League of Nations; for these Williams paused a moment, even in the face of house parties and the climax of the football season with the renewal of "Little Three" hostilities.

The Hoover-Smith engagement Monday night was an American debate on an American subject. There was an issue, and so it was decided to have a debate; which was an almost complete reversal of the customary collegiate procedure of deciding to have a debate and then looking for an issue. Consequently the speakers were aligned according to conviction rather than according to necessity. They took the matter seriously, as well they might, for it is the great American melodrama, in the finest as well as in the more popular sense of the word.

The Oxford debate, on the other hand, was an English debate on an English subject. The Englishmen were born that way, and the Williams gentlemen are hoping to get there by auto-suggestion. Many went to Chapin Hall, not to learn about the League of Nations, but to listen to those clever Englishmen. Nevertheless a popular international debate on an international topic was more than in order after six months' concentration on internal affairs. And perhaps, too, there is something appropriate in a new consideration of the League of Nations on the eve of the tenth anniversary of the Armistice.

"RESPONSIBILITY AND DISCRETION"

We still think that seniors are entitled to unlimited cuts. We said so last week in this column, but of course nothing has happened. But in spite of the reluctance of anyone else to make a move in this matter, we gaily persist. To show, for instance, that Williams would not be the first to recognize the greater maturity and responsibility of its seniors, should it decide eventually to extend them this "greater freedom", we offer the following, taken bodily from the Harvard catalogue:

"All seniors in good standing will, except for registration, be trusted by the Dean with greater responsibility and discretion in the matter of attendance, so long as this does not interfere with the collective interests of the class or sections to which they belong."

Our argument, of courses, hinges on the interpretation given to the phrase, "in good standing". We venture to suggest that all seniors are in good standing who are in the first four ranking groups, and a similar interpretation, we take it, is given by the Harvard Dean. Shall it be implied that Harvard seniors have "greater responsibility and discretion" than Williams seniors?

Sigma Phi Wins Championship

Two passes from Alexander to Smith in the last half of the interfraternity football game between Sigma Phi and Kappa Alpha turned an impending defeat into a 12-6 victory for the Sigma Phi team and gave them the college touch football championship, in a game played last Monday afternoon. In the first half Strother intercepted a pass to give Kappa Alpha a temporary 6-0 lead. Higginbotham's consistent playing featured the Kappa Alpha attack, while the combination of Alexander and Smith resulted in the ultimate victory for Sigma Phi.

WESLEYAN CONQUERS PURPLE ELEVEN, 20-17

1889 Game Featured by Wesleyan Score at Start; Williams Rallies Later

(The following is an excerpt from the Williams Weekly of Oct. 31, 1889.)

Williams played her first game on neutral grounds with Wesleyan at Springfield, Wednesday afternoon, and although Wesleyan won, the college may well feel proud of the work done by the eleven, for from the beginning it was an uphill game and the pluck shown by the team is worthy of praise. When one takes into consideration how much the eleven is weakened by the enforced absence of several regulars, it will not require much thought to see that Williams played under great disadvantages at Springfield. Add to this the fact that not a single member of the college was present, outside of the team to give support, and it will be readily seen that little encouragement was given the players. Why is it that the College manifests so little interest in the games played away from home, is almost beyond comprehension; Wesleyan was represented by fifty men who aided very materially the work of their team and the contrast thus offered by the total absence of Williams supporters was decidedly marked. The teams were lined up at 3.15. Wesleyan won the toss and chose the kick-off, Williams taking the north side of the triangle. Fogg passed to Peck who rushed five yards. A scrimmage followed, the ball being passed to Hall, who ran from the center of the field and scored the first touchdown for Wesleyan in one minute. He was poorly tackled and made the run easily. Hall kicked a goal making the score 6-0. Williams now had the ball in the center of the field. Hall punted and Cox was tackled before returning it. The ball went to Wesleyan on an offside play. Rushes by Nelson, Cox, and Chandler carried the ball into Wesleyan territory. The ball going to Wesleyan on offside play, McDonald carried it back to Williams soil, his run taking him out of bounds. Slayback, with Cleaver interfering, then carried the ball from the middle of the field and scored the second Wesleyan touchdown within 12 minutes. Hall failed to kick the goal, the ball striking the post and rebounding. Score: 10-0. The ball was secured by a Wesleyan player and another touchdown was secured by McDonald in two minutes. Hall secured the goal, raising the score to 16-0. . . . at 3.35 o'clock Durand scored the first touchdown for Williams. Chandler failed on the goal. Score: 16-4. In five minutes Brown made the second touchdown for Williams after a fine run which at first promised failure. This point was disputed by Capt. McDonald on the ground that the referee did not call time after an interruption in the game previous. Chandler kicked a goal, making the score 16-10. Wesleyan scored four more points in this half on a touchdown by Slayback after a fair catch by him and a rush by McDonald. There were now four minutes to play and darkness had come. Lafayette and Lovell smashed to no effect, McDonald fumbled and lost the ball. Chandler kicked unwisely and Hall returned it, Durand fumbling badly in trying to catch it, and the Williams line retreated to their 25-yard line. McDonald gained five yards and then Slayback pierced the Williams line to within 12 inches of a touchdown. At this point time was called at 5.10 o'clock, the final score being 20-17 in favor of Wesleyan. The referee was Bayne of Yale '92 and the umpire was McCook, captain of the Trinity eleven. The players:

WESLEYAN—Rushers, Cleaver, Heath, Moore, Fogg (center), Brown, Crane, and Beers; quarterback, Peck; halfbacks, McDonald and Slayback; fullback, Hall.

WILLIAMS—Rushers, Lafayette, Nelson, Spaulding, Wylie (center), Rowland, Lovell, and Bigelow; quarterback, Brown; halfbacks, Durand and Cox; fullback, Chandler.

W. C. A. Cabinet Meets

As a result of a meeting of the W. C. A. Cabinet, held on Wednesday, at which the Treasurer's report for last year was read and approved, it was decided that the Freshman Cabinet will commence on November 13 and last until Christmas or possibly until February if it is so desired by the members. At the same time, the dates for the Financial Drive were set for the week of December 7 to 15. Announcement was also made that everyone who is interested in joining the W. C. A. should send in his card as soon as possible, and that all questions as to work might be made to Strong or Rohrbach '29 at 22 Jesup.

COMMUNICATION

Although communications may be published unsigned if so requested, the name of the writer must in every case be submitted to the editor. The Board assumes no responsibility, however, for the facts as stated nor for the opinions expressed in this department.

To The Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

The editorial of a recent issue of THE RECORD states that the Peerade has been abolished; but the Rope Pull was to have oxygen administered to it so that the spark of life—dimly flickering—should once more flame brightly and illumine the horizon of freshman-sophomore rivalry.

The Peerade was amusing. The Editor of THE RECORD admits it. He condemns it as childish. Our childhood days have always been a source of joy to us. The Editor states, rather inconsistently, in one paragraph, that we of the modern generation want to leave no traditions behind us, and calls them superstitious and crude. Three paragraphs further on, he says that we want more and better traditions.

I will support and, if need be, will collect proof for the theory that the Peerade was amusing. The committee had a grand time, and they were not alone. The people on the street curbs smiled and laughed at some bit of caustic wit, or clever caricature. I think that the sophomore class had a good time last year. We laughed at one another, and ourselves.

The expense gag is out. Anyone with any determination can refrain from eating down-street for a week, and—result—the paltry three dollars which the committee asked last year. The committee was forced to give an account of the expenditures, and every cent was accounted for. The Peerade is no small factor in putting the freshman in his place—the hut of ridicule.

I would like to ask one more question of the Editor of THE RECORD. He says that the normal freshman would rather plunge into the Green River than pay three dollars and walk a mile or so and have a good laugh. Where is the freshman who feels that way about it? And where is the sophomore?

Why are there no more Shirt-Tail Parades? No cane rush? Because each year the total of injured mounted. The Rope Pull is the last of this infamous Trimvinate. It has lapsed for a year.

My final word is: The Peerade may have been wet, but the Rope Pull is wetter.
Signed
A Sophomore.

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

It was with considerable surprise that I read the publication of my essay, "Undergraduate Society at Williams" in a recent issue of THE RECORD. As a result of misinterpretation and some false statements concerning my position I have written this communication.

The untimeliness of the publication is manifest, and may be passed over as an unfortunate mistake of THE RECORD Board for which it has justly shouldered all blame.

Certain motives in writing such an essay may explain the falsely termed "inexcusable misrepresentation." The essay was never written for college publication. (Whether this was a proper motive in writing an article that was submitted to the Dunbar Association is beyond the point). If it had been so written, important phases of Undergraduate Society would have been treated which would have clarified my actual opinion of the present situation for the newly immersed Williams men and "Those readers (of THE RECORD) who are unfamiliar with undergraduate society at Williams as it really is". The securing of moderate length and unity prevented the treatment of the advance place of Williams progress over other schools, and the due credit for the changes then expectant in the near future. The essay was written for the reader who was in a position to help solve the neutral problem. I aimed to present a frank statement of the result and evils of our social theory. They were the facts as I saw them. I also included a personal opinion of the direction in which improvement could be gained. All of this was set forth in a manner that I hoped was persuasive for securing that progress. With such an appeal in mind it seemed improper to include a comparative eulogy of the present status.

But I wish to state clearly that it is my belief that Williams is far ahead of other colleges in solving the perplexing social problems that confront a college. Improvement is everywhere evident and has been promoted by an interested minority. The present condition is by no means hopeless, yet, consistent with the spirit of my essay, I find it unsatisfactory.

Great changes have been made in the Commons Club and in the social life therein since the first of May when the essay was drafted. Great credit is due for this. To a certain extent the evils mentioned have been eliminated. They have not been entirely eliminated, and will not for some time to come. Progress was then in sight which had been conceived by influential individuals and been formulating for many months. It was in the interest of just this progress and more to come that prompted the essay. If the essay had been in any way instrumental in bringing about the changes that chronologically followed, it would have been most fruitful.

Because progress has been, and is being made gives no justification for relaxation. I have heard of no relaxation, but maybe it is well if this essay has now openly stirred up a ripple concerning a disagreeable subject that touches close to every Williams man. So far, to the extent of my knowledge, only a comparatively few have taken an active interest in this problem. If a general change of attitude is taking place—then the problem is being more generally appreciated.

I felt and do feel that this advance will go hand in hand with improved physical facilities and the development of a more wholesome mental attitude. The former is instrumental to the second and is necessary for securing the latter. In seeking progress practically, I feel it would be folly to omit the first. So far the two have developed together. The administration has been generous with its support, but their financial support is still needed. Furnishing a new lounge and redecorating Currier

Hall in general are not all the improvements that are needed. Not all can come at once, and it is not my business as an alumnus to make specific suggestions, but surely there are many desirable ones.

Student effort has wrought a new attitude within the Commons Club. It probably is imperfect, though highly commendable. It has been accomplished largely by the development of internal congeniality. The large group with its multiphased talent and close relation with the faculty, can be intensely stimulating and desirable.

The facts presented in my essay I believe are true. How facts concerning the result of our social environment can be conclusively proved, I am not sure. They cannot be laid out objectively. Due to their extreme personal and subjective nature they only become apparent after much personal observation and study. Such studies have been made at sporadic intervals and as far as I can learn with the same positive results. Compilations of such a study exist now in college. If they do not prove conclusive, a fresh investigation of the whole problem might be undertaken. Until the actual situation is generally understood and its cause appreciated the undesirable features of the present status will not give way entirely.

The problem at Williams is not peculiar, although there are distinctive features in the method of solution that is being employed—the development of a strong non-fraternity Club. The method promises a bright future, and should be pushed to its fullest possibilities. Much has been done, and much needs to be done. This is my personal view, which I believe is in accord with the opinion of those now promoting the commendable changes that are taking place. Edward C. Sweeney '28

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

May I, through THE RECORD, call to the attention of the students the notice in the lobby of the post office? The notice asks them to be careful not to place any written matter in laundry cases and mailed packages, which are classed as fourth class matter. This renders the cases and packages as first class matter, and thereby makes the sender liable to first class rates, which are much more expensive, and to a possible fine. Writing matter should not be placed in parcel post mailings.

THE ROUND TABLE

REVOLT OF AN ANGEL or
HOW TO GET CULTURE—MAYBE

Scene: the Maibe Room of the College Library. (Note: this room, well equipped with readable books and sitable chairs, is intended to be a comfortable harbor of culture for the undergraduates. In order that there be nothing alien to infect its cultural atmosphere, a number of rules governing its use are posted conspicuously on the outside of its closed door, and a Keeper is there to enforce them.)

Enter, timidly, Student in Search of Culture. He starts slinking toward a book case when—

Keeper: Hold! Who goes there?

Student: Me—er, I.

Keeper: What! You dare enter this sacred room in those filthy clothes? Curduroys and blatant sweater! Never!

Student bows his way out. Re-enters half hour later beautifully clad in full dress regalia.

Keeper: That's better. Now, have you anything to declare?

Student: Anything to—?

Keeper: Have you any pens, pencils, ink erasers, books, umbrellas, goulashes, or fraternity pins concealed about your person?

Student (vehemently): Oh, no sir!

Keeper (advancing under a cloud): And what, may I ask, is this sticking out of your vest pocket?

Student (hastily buttoning coat): Oh that's nothing, really nothing at all, not a thing.

Keeper (firmly, just like a keeper): Then let me see it.—Ah! just as I thought: a book. Nothing, eh? Oh no, nothing but a complete U. S. two-cent stamp book! Hand it over!

Student: And now, sir, may I get some culture?

Keeper: What do you desire to read?

Student: Well, have you any works of Elinor—

Keeper: Sh! My God, don't utter that woman's name here. Hands him a volume of "The Rover Boys at Home, Dan Baxter expurgated. Here, this is something really good.

Student starts to read, sitting on edge of otherwise comfortable chair. Suddenly presses hand to his mouth, but too late to suppress a COUGH.

Keeper: Sir, are you aware that none but Old Gold smokers may enter here? Not a cough in a earload, not a cough in a earload, not a—

Student: Yes, I know, but no one will blindfold me—

Keeper: Silence, sir, is golden!

Student resumes reading. Soon his face clouds over with intent expression, as though the plot were thickening.

Keeper: Young man, your brows are knit!

Student: Oh no, sir, they never knit. Keeper: Yes, I'm sure of it. There was a well-marked furrow there, and that can mean only one thing: You were studying! Deny it if you dare! (Pause) And now you had just better leave very, very quietly, and we'll try to forget. The College need never know, but please, please, for your own sake, go!

Student: No, no, not that—never!

Keeper: Very well, then, you must pay the penalty.

Student: (with pale blue look around the eyes). Is zat so? Puts a cup of helmock to his lips.

Keeper: Hey, wait a minute! Let me taste it first—that's one of the rules!

Student: To Hell with the rules! Here's to culture!—and to Dan Baxter!—and to Elinor (ha! ha!), to ELINOR GLYN!

WESLEYAN RIVALRY IS AN ANCIENT HERITAGE

Amherst Series Alone Is of Longer Duration; Williams Holds Edge
by Slight Margin

When the eleven of Williams and Wesleyan clash this afternoon on Weston Field, it will be the thirty-seventh game of a series, which started in November, 1881, and which has continued unbroken since 1896,—the most ancient rivalry which the Purple has with the single exception of Amherst. Throughout the course of the series, Williams has captured 19 victories, while the Cardinal and Black has returned the winner 13 times, in addition to which there have been four tie games. In total number of points scored, the Purple again holds a slight margin, the count being 419 to 363.

Two years after the introduction of football in the Berkshires, the team journeyed to Springfield to play Wesleyan in their first game, and captured a 10-0 victory to make a favorable start in the long rivalry between the two institutions. After this, faculty regulations prohibited any additional games until 1885, when Williams entered a League, to which Wesleyan also belonged. Playing at Springfield again in 1889, the two teams had an especially close battle, the Cardinal and Black snatching a 20-17 decision. The old problem of college spirit was present even in the "good old days", for the following appeared in the Williams Weekly after the game, "... not a single member of the college was present, outside of the team to give support, and it will be readily seen that little encouragement was given the players. Why is it that the college manifests so little interest in the games played away from home, is almost beyond comprehension; Wesleyan was represented by fifty men who aided very materially the work of their team."

D. R. FALL, 1928

Who played a strong game at quarterback both last year and the year before against Wesleyan

Again in 1912 a similar game was played in Williamstown on a field of rain, sleet, and snow, which hindered any spectacular playing, although both teams scored, the Purple gaining a 10-7 decision. Here one finds the usual hard fought game, characteristic of almost every Williams-Wesleyan tilt. The Record attributes the victory to "the style of play more adapted than their opponents to the weather conditions, ... yet this success could not have been won had it not been for the hard and consistent fighting of every man on the eleven." Even in the earlier games, we find that "Wesleyan excels with the forward pass", an instrument which she still uses to great advantage against Williams.

One of the biggest upsets throughout the whole series was in 1917 when a Williams eleven, undefeated and with victories over Columbia and Cornell to its credit, was held to a scoreless tie, by a Wesleyan eleven, which had won but one game and that by a margin of one point. The Purple excelled on the offense, but lacked the necessary drive to score, while the Cardinal and Black displayed some hard tackling and fierce defensive play, which held Boynton scoreless for the only time during the season. This was Williams' first undefeated football team.

In the last game played on Weston Field between these two rivals, the home team gained a 23-14 decision. The Purple took the upper hand at the start and scored through "the phenomenal running of Brown and the knife-like thrusts of Howe, Fall, and Smith." In the last quarter, Wesleyan opened up the most sensational passing attack ever seen on Weston Field, and in four plays tallied two touchdowns through the combination of Tetley and Lee. After a mediocre preliminary season, the Cardinal and Black won the 1927 "Little Three" championship for the first time since 1918. Although the Purple were at Wesleyan's ten-yard line six times, they could not shove the ball over, but the Middletown team, "backed by stands that gave instant and vociferous support to every gain, however small," uncorked its aerial attack and made two touchdowns before the end of the game.

A list of the scores show that neither of the two colleges has been able to gain many lopsided victories. On only three occasions has Williams been able to score more than 30 points, in 1920 when they won 50-14; in 1921 when they tallied 40 points to their opponents' 0; and in 1924 when they earned a 43 to 0 victory. The Cardinal and Black has only taken decisive decisions twice, in 1900, 35 to 0 and in 1915, 41 to 6. In 17 of the 36 games, the Purple has tallied more than ten points, while Wesleyan has done the same on 16 different occasions.

Japanese Paintings and Kakemonos Are Exhibited

Professor Karl E. Weston of the Art Department has announced an exhibition in the Lawrence Hall Exhibition rooms of Japanese paintings, kakemonos, brocades and vases belonging to the college and to his personal collection. Announcement has also been made of several etchings by George T. Plowman of Williams College scenes, such as the Thompson Memorial Chapel, Griffin Hall and one of the entries of Payerweather Hall, which are now on display in Lawrence Hall.

The kakemonos are for the most part very old; there being one of "A Carp in Water" which was painted by Yoshin Gekka in the early Fourteenth Century at the time of the Yuan Dynasty in China. Two paintings of a tiger, one by Shukio and one by Ganku, are especially worthy of notice because of the difference in treatment of same subject. Among the other kakemonos on exhibition are a "Deer and Maple Tree" by Korin, "Cock and Hen on Roof of House" by Watanabe Hiroten, "Thunder God and Eagle" by Yerkai, "Old Man on Donkey" by Sudanobu, "River Scene" by Hokuba, and a "Turtle" by Kyosai. The last mentioned is one of the most interesting due to the fact that Kyosai was one of the foremost of Japanese artists. Also on display is a Japanese brocade of the 17th century which has been made into the form of a priest's robe; it is a cloth of gold with a raised design in velvet. A 16th century screen depicting the sea shore and pine trees is an example of the Tosa school, and is one of several screens on display.

Heavy Balloting Results In G. O. P.
Victory—Prohibition Repeal
Opposed, 686-674

In casting 1899 votes on Election Day, Williamstown established a record, both as to number of ballots polled and to percentage of its voting population which went to the polls to support favorite candidates. According to figures compiled by the Election Board, 91.7 per cent of the 2072 registered voters participated in the election.

Defeating Governor Smith by a vote of a little more than two to one in the town election, Herbert Hoover received a majority of the votes cast for presidential candidates. His poll was 1217 as compared to 600 for Governor Smith. The voting on the state referenda showed that the town was in favor of Sunday Sports by a vote of seven to five, while it was not in favor of repeal of the Prohibition Amendment, the vote being 686 to 674 against repeal. Williamstown's vote is as follows:

President
Hoover (Rep)	1217
Smith (Dem)	600

Cole (Dem)	540
U. S. Senator
Young (Rep)	1111

Pairings Made for 1931-1932 Tennis Tournament

Sophomore-Freshman tennis matches will get under way during the coming week when the first six ranking men in each class oppose men who are considered their equals in the other class. The ranking of the 1931 men was determined by the positions they held on the class team last spring, while the freshmen have been picked according to the order in which they finished in the 1932 tournament just completed. The pairings are as follows:

Grochl '31 vs. Hobson '32; Shaw '31 vs. Thayer '32; Haeffner '31 vs. Rose '32; Morris '31 vs. Boyce '32; Crane '31 vs. Beal '32; Gibson '31 vs. Lee '32. Grochl and Shaw '31 vs. Hobson and Thayer '32; Haeffner and Morris '31 vs. Rose and Boyce '32; Crane and Gibson '31 vs. Beal and Lee '32.

H. H. LEHMAN '99 LEADS IN N. Y. STATE ELECTION

Williams Alumnus, Candidate for Lieutenant Governor, Seems Sure of Victory

With but 542 election districts out of 8,267, still missing at this writing, Colonel Herbert H. Lehman, '99, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor of New York, is practically assured of a victory over Charles C. Lockwood, his Republican opponent, by a plurality probably exceeding 50,000 votes. As it now stands, Colonel Lehman has a plurality of 89,547 with 1,907,912 votes cast in his favor, against 1,908,365 for Lockwood, and with an indication that the returns from the missing districts would not possibly cut his plurality in the state by more than 40,000.

While attending Williams Col. Lehman was a member of Gargoyles, Cap and Bells, the debating team, and managed the track team. He is the donor of the Lehman Cup for intramural track and of the new Lehman dormitory. Besides having held important offices in several philanthropic enterprises, his civic record, city, state, and national, is an outstanding one.

In 1913 he was appointed a member of a commission to revise the banking laws of the state of New York. He served as a member of the governor's Mediation Committee for Garment Workers from 1924 to 1927. As chairman of the Finance, Budget, and Revenue Committee appointed by the Mayor of New York City, he financed a comprehensive survey of the finances of the city. After serving during the war as Assistant-Chief-of-Staff to General G. W. Goethals with the rank of Colonel, he was appointed special assistant to the Secretary of War, and made a member of the Department of Claims Board, and the Board of Contract Adjustment. At the conclusion of his duty in the army he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

DIARIES REVEAL WILD COLLEGE LIFE OF 1738

Students of Old at Harvard and Yale Made 'The Plastic Age' Appear Tame

Theories that the American college students of today are a wilder, more irresponsible lot than those of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and that the former were "so addicted to studious piety that they found little time for play and none at all for dissipation" recently received a severe shock through revelations of student habits in diaries and records, now in possession of Harvard University. Brawls, hazing, wrangling with the faculty, and general disorderly conduct were more characteristic of students' behavior at that time, and what would appear as the height of wildness at Williams today would have evidently been pretty tame to the eighteenth century college rounder.

Among the records at Harvard is an incident, recorded by one Ezra Clapp, a student at Yale in 1738, who says: "Last night some of the freshmen got six quarts of rum and about two payls of cider, and about eight pounds of sugar, and made it into Samsen, and invited every scholar in college into Churtis's room to partake thereof, and we made such prodigious rought that we raised the tutor, and he ordered us all to our rooms, and some went and some tarried, and they gathered again and went up to old Father Monser's dore and drummed against the dore and yeled and screamed so that a body would have thought that they were killing dogs there."

Other incidents related in Cotton Mather's diary, while a student at Harvard, show that ministers' sons began as early as 1644 to get their reputations. Mather tells of an incident where two ministers' sons, students at college, robbed two dwellings in the night of about 15 pounds and, being apprehended the following day, were whipped by the president of the college.

Hamilton College has established an innovation in its new circulating library of phonograph records, which has been created in order to combat the popularity of jazz music in the dormitories. Students and Faculty members may borrow records at a nominal charge from the Department of Music. Ninety sets of symphonies are in the new collection, among which are most of Beethoven's and Wagner's operas, modern music by Stravinsky and Ravel, and madrigals sung by the English Singers.

The Reverend Raymond Calkins, of the First Congregational Church, Cambridge, Massachusetts, will conduct the regular Sunday morning services in the Thompson Memorial Chapel at 10.35 a. m.

Williams to Clash With Wesleyan Today

short signal drill. Tuesday's scrimmage was the last of the 1928 season. The rest of the time has been spent in polishing up the plays and speeding up the team in an effort to perfect what the team already has. The first of next week will be spent on fundamentals in preparation for the Amherst game, but intensive scrimmaging is all over.

Wesleyan has had a fairly successful season to date, winning three and tying one of their six games. Their two defeats came at the hands of the undefeated and unscored-on Conn. Aggies and the heavy Columbia team, which also drubbed the Purple eleven. The Cardinal and Black played a 20-20 deadlock with Amherst; so they are still in a position to tie for "Little Three" honors. In their first game they took the measure of Bates, 14-0, but the following week Connecticut Agricultural College scored 33 points against them. Columbia also beat them, but the next Saturday Wesleyan came back to snatch a 14-13 victory from Rochester. Amherst came to Middletown for the initial "Little Three" contest, and, after one of the most exciting games in years, the home team gained a tie in the closing minutes by its formidable aerial attack. Last Saturday Wesleyan had an easy time with Trinity, scoring 24 points on a rain-soaked field.

Columbia is the only team that both Williams and Wesleyan have played this season, and both were defeated by approximately the same score. Wesleyan fell to the tune of 31-7, being unable to stop the brilliant attack of Kumpf and Lifer.

In the second period, however, the losers unleashed their characteristically successful passing attack, which netted the first touchdown that the Cardinal and Black has scored on the Lions since 1923. A pass from Tetley to Siloway netted 20 yards, and two more forwards, interspersed with line plunging, advanced the ball to the three-yard mark where Lockwood went over for a touchdown. In the Williams game Columbia was without the services of her star, Kumpf. Throughout the first half the two teams were on practically even terms, each crossing the opposing goal line once, but in the fourth quarter the superior line and greater experience of the Lions weakened the Purple, who were forced to bow, 20-6.

Again two weeks ago, the same fighting spirit and invincible aerial attack, which scored two touchdowns in the last quarter on Weston Field two years ago, came forward, and twice rescued Wesleyan from seemingly impending defeat at the hands of the Sabrinas. Last Saturday the Cardinal and Black showed their strength, and by a powerful running and passing scored four touchdowns, even though visibility was hampered by a heavy fog, and the field was a virtual sea of mud. In both of these games the backfield showed ability through the play of Lockwood, Tetley, and Millsbaugh.

Coach Wood, who brought the "Little Three" championship to Middletown for the first time since 1918 last fall in his initial year at Wesleyan, started the 1928 season with six veterans from the championship team, Captain Siloway at end, Tetley at quarter, Lockwood at halfback, Bagg at fullback, Sigafos at center, and Schwenk at left tackle. Millsbaugh, the 165 lb. back, has starred all season and has displayed distinct improvement over his previous form, while Lockwood, the most experienced backfield man, has proven himself the most consistent ground gainer. Thomas and Guernsey are two fast men, who usually are held in reserve at the start of the game, as is Jennings who is the best receiver of passes on the squad. Bagg has shown himself a tower of strength on the defense. K. Smith and Miller, two sophomores, have been going well in the line, while Capt. Siloway and Sigafos have played their usually steady game.

Wesleyan is in good physical condition with one or two exceptions. Peck, the regular quarterback, was expected back in the line-up by this time, but, contrary to early reports, is definitely out for the season. Sigafos, star center, has been troubled by a bad ankle, but probably will start Saturday. If he does not, Miller will be shifted from end to the pivot position, with Williams or Steege taking his old place at end. On Monday the visitors had a light drill in the form of a signal practice, but the second team had a long scrimmage with the freshmen. Emphasis was placed on fundamentals Tuesday, but hard work, including scrimmaging, featured Wednesday and Thursday's practices.

The Cardinal and Black team is somewhat lighter than the Purple, comparisons on paper show. The visitors average roughly 173 pounds, while the home team is four pounds heavier. In the backfield, however, Wesleyan has a slight advantage, tipping the scales at 170 pounds, two more than Williams. The lines average 186 and 174 respectively, the home team being the heavier here. Although indicative of nothing as far as the result of today's game, Williams has been the higher scorer of the two, tallying 129 points to 79 for the visitors, while on the defense, she holds a like advantage of 46 to 97.

SWAN SONG. By John Galsworthy. (New York, Charles Scribners' Sons, $2.00)

Galsworthy began writing about the early Victorians in The Man of Property, published 1906, and brought it to its twentieth century close in To Let, published in 1921. In the late 1920's he proposes to sum up post-war England; in 1928 he treats of England in 1926. We shall therefore not blame him for his failure; we shall merely call him unfortunate in his attempt. The first third of Swan Song is little more than a historical account of the Great Strike supposedly made artistic by the use of thousands of contemporary colloquialisms quite unintelligible to us provincial Americans. Each slang term is enclosed in quotation marks; the appearance of the printed page of this portion of the book is somewhat distressing. The focus is much too local for inclusion in an epic. That curious piece of stage-property, the thief Stainford, once gentleman-schoolmate of Val Dartie, has absolutely no connection with the progress of the story. The sole explanation of his presence seems to be to show what has happened to some of the aristocracy in this modern day. Such information is much more easily obtainable in any good book on eugenics, and its disconnected inclusion here is but another illustration of the impossibility of writing epics without perspective.

While we blame Galsworthy much on this score we have much to say in praise elsewhere. Constructively Swan Song is a very fine dramatic close to the Saga. The latter ended with a parental repression of the love of Fleur and Jon, children by second marriage of Soames and Irene respectively. Logically enough the unreasonable repression proves insufficient and despite the fact that both of these young people are married they have an affair that is only broken by Jon's realization of their innate incompatibility. This whole episode forms a dramatic parallel to the old struggle of the parents and through the soliloquizing mind of Soames all that went before is gathered into a resumé. Then too Soames, the focus of the whole work, is shown in a new light, his love of property

In these short stories Lawrence seems to have been writing for his own satisfaction. If it is possible, they are more individualized than are most of his other writings with the exception of his criticism. It has been felt that despite his subjectivity he has disregarded intentional expression to follow a larger and blinder rhythm. From the evidence of the short stories in the volume I have just read, I shall have to incline away from the largeness of his conceptions and toward their blindness, an ego-centric blindness more than likely.

The first of these is evident enough. Mr. Lawrence, although he was born to humble circumstances and has not had an extraordinary formal education, is a person of rare sensitivity, a lyric poet essentially. He has extracted from the data of ordinary experience the most elusive and tortured elements. His senses and intuitions are at once highly specialized and prone to great magnification. Nor does he check himself in these directions. On the contrary, he carefully preserves them in unimpaired subjectivity and sets them down as the equipment of his fictional characters. Hence, I say that the casual reader is not likely to find the people of his stories either typical or sympathetic, if indeed barely intelligible.

Mr. Lawrence says somewhere in his speculative writings that the individual is the clue to the universe, that it always was and always will be so. This creed supports the stories with which we are dealing although the more explicit content deals with sexual and conjugal relations and the intense drama of those relations waxing and waning in attraction and repulsion. The title story is an abstraction of this idea pervaded with primitivism.

All the stories of this volume slip from the natural to the supernatural, from the conscious to the subconscious, from the physical to the psychical without warning and with truly wonderful ease. Lawrence's writing is in all conceivable dimensions and more too.

The content of the book, specialized and individualized to the greatest possible degree is conveyed to the reader in a style of great lyrical perfection, delicately adjusted to quality and quantity of meaning. It is lucid yet colorful and of remarkable concreteness in spite of the abstractions which predominate, though occasionally and with great effect, the thought and diction revert to sensuous concreteness and persons of the narrative gain such bodily reality that one seems to feel the impact of physical encounter.

Mr. Lawrence is a very gifted writer. We must decide for ourselves whether or not his fruits are for our eating. Possibly they are fruits of Eden, Eve's apples.

SWAN SONG. By John Galsworthy. (New York, Charles Scribners' Sons, $2.00)

Galsworthy began writing about the early Victorians in The Man of Property, published 1906, and brought it to its twentieth century close in To Let, published in 1921. In the late 1920's he proposes to sum up post-war England; in 1928 he treats of England in 1926. We shall therefore not blame him for his failure; we shall merely call him unfortunate in his attempt. The first third of Swan Song is little more than a historical account of the Great Strike supposedly made artistic by the use of thousands of contemporary colloquialisms quite unintelligible to us provincial Americans. Each slang term is enclosed in quotation marks; the appearance of the printed page of this portion of the book is somewhat distressing. The focus is much too local for inclusion in an epic. That curious piece of stage-property, the thief Stainford, once gentleman-schoolmate of Val Dartie, has absolutely no connection with the progress of the story. The sole explanation of his presence seems to be to show what has happened to some of the aristocracy in this modern day. Such information is much more easily obtainable in any good book on eugenics, and its disconnected inclusion here is but another illustration of the impossibility of writing epics without perspective.

While we blame Galsworthy much on this score we have much to say in praise elsewhere. Constructively Swan Song is a very fine dramatic close to the Saga. The latter ended with a parental repression of the love of Fleur and Jon, children by second marriage of Soames and Irene respectively. Logically enough the unreasonable repression proves insufficient and despite the fact that both of these young people are married they have an affair that is only broken by Jon's realization of their innate incompatibility. This whole episode forms a dramatic parallel to the old struggle of the parents and through the soliloquizing mind of Soames all that went before is gathered into a resumé. Then too Soames, the focus of the whole work, is shown in a new light, his love of property

Good made ten yards at tackle. Fowle gained a first down on the visitors' 22-yd. line, and then a Wesleyan offside and another first down by Fowle put the ball on the two-yard line. Good lost three yards when the line failed to hold, but Fowle went over on the next play for a touchdown. Fowle missed the extra point, and the period ended with the ball in Williams possession on her own 48-yd. line.

Neither team was able to score during the final period, but Williams kept the ball in the visitors' territory most of the time. The Purple yearlings lost the ball on downs at the Wesleyan 18-yd. line after long gains

An Italian Holiday

THE STRANGE CASE OF MISS ANNIE SPRAGG. By Louis Bromfield. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

Mr. Bromfield's name has come to stand for fine and moving novels about our own middle west but in his latest novel, "The Strange Case of Miss Annie Spragg", he has made an heroic effort to escape and venture into new fields. And so he writes of Italy, the modern Italy of decadence and charm already exploited so well by Norman Douglass and Aldous Huxley, and the result is indeed a fascinating and delightful book. These adjectives and many others as complimentary are fully justified but in spite of its merits "Miss Annie Spragg" is not a good novel.

Whether by accident or by intent Mr. Bromfield has used the same form made famous in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey"; with this difference, he has not been successful. He has used a central incident on which to hang the stories of several widely separated characters. Unlike the earlier work the result is not a homogenous whole, a complete novel made up of nicely fitting parts, but rather a group of short stories whose connection to each other is extremely remote. Once this fault of structure is admitted only praise can be given to these short stories masquerading as a novel. They are urbane and sophisticated, penetrating to real depths of the human character.

The central incident is the death of an aged American spinster in a small town in Italy and the finding on her body of the marks of the stigmata. This seeming miracle arouses the interest of various people who help provide the material of the book. The problems of sex and religion and that strange point where they seem to meet are the principal theme of the separate tales. Many widely different but equally fascinating characters are introduced. There is Cyrus Spragg, prophet and libertine, who becomes God and erects a temple to his own worship in the prairies of the west. In spite of himself Mr. Bromfield cannot escape from his earlier background nor would we wish him to. There is the Princess D'Orobelli who pursued love in spite of age with anguish in her heart. And perhaps best of all is that gorgeous creation, Bessie Cudlip, the London barmaid who was unconscious of any moral code. Although two of the tales are laid in Iowa and one in London the predominant atmosphere remains Italian. Many pictures stand sharp and clear in our memory after the book is finished, the cypress garden of the villa Leonardo where the statue of Priapus was found, the crooked streets of Brinoe through which the nun walked to see the miracle, the balcony where the Princess watched and waited for her lover. The author has felt deeply the charm of Italy and some of it he catches in his pages, so well that the reader feels that he too has walked the cobbled streets of Brinoe, has felt the south wind blow hot over the barren hills, and seen the white dust settle on the olive trees and flaming oleander.

Perhaps we would not be far wrong if we considered "The Strange Case of Miss Annie Spragg" as a vacation taken by its author from his more serious probings of the middle western heart to spend a pleasant interval among older, more sophisticated, more cultured surroundings and enjoy an Italian holiday. ### John Brown's Soul

JOHN BROWN'S BODY. By Stephen Vincent Benét. New York. (Double-day Doran). $2.50.

"John Brown's body lies a'mouldering in the grave,
But his soul goes marching on."

This is the theme of the work which Benét has cast into a poetic scheme of some three hundred and seventy-five pages. It defies classification and yet hangs together somehow in a reasonable unit. It is not an epic because it has no real hero, no personality around which the great sweep of activity centers, unless perhaps we can consider the soul of John Brown as something more personal than a force, awakened in prophetic anger, and marching with the soldiers who fought through the Civil War. Surely at least, we must consider this spirit the unifying element.

The work is not a narrative in that it is more than a mere story of the Civil War. The war is but the meeting point of the characters whom Benét has created out of his own mind, or taken out of history. Around these characters he spins a web of events, at times military, at times social. The characters represent geographical temperaments. We learn through them the feelings and whole temper of the South in the time of the war, the Southern aristocracy and the enslaved negro. We know the kind of people who made up the Union Army, the men from Pennsylvania, and the men from Vermont. But nowhere in the book do we find any sectional prejudice. It is an impartial picture of a country split in two, each part fighting for its own standards, its own convictions.

We cannot find a ready made category in which to place this book. All we can say of it is that Benét has taken a period of history, an intense period, and has found there material for some great narrative poetry, some less great meditative poetry, and some fine lyric poetry. So long a work is unavoidably uneven. Parts of it are obscure and rather dangling. Parts of it reach to extraordinary heights of real genuine poetic power.

Despite its weaknesses of construction, and overstained effects, despite its amorphous nature, John Brown's Body has achieved the first real poem of sustained power dealing with the history of this country. Benét has recaptured, after obviously careful study, the real United States of the Civil War. It is a picture of a great country, disjointed and cut in two, warring for principles and a new union. And through the country runs the spirit of the prophetic soul of John Brown.

triumphantly won his degree as Master of Humanity.

Old Pybus is a novel of no loose ends and no excess baggage. In this it surpasses, if that is possible, its original, Sorrell and Son. In the matter of powerful, moving writing, however, Deeping has never equalled the last pages of his first novel. He approaches it in the closing chapters of Old Pybus, but the unnecessary death of the Venerable on the last page is an anti-climax and detracts appreciably from the artistic effect. Too much prominence perhaps has been given to the novel's defects, such as they are, but this has been done in an honest effort to temper with fairness and truth the enthusiasm for the artist which one inevitably must feel at the conclusion of the book.

The Death-bed of Victorianism

sublimated into sincere affection for his daughter and regard for her welfare. He is the same old Victorian Soames, but made more complex. With Swan Song he is complete, and so his death is a fitting close to the story in which he plays the major role. The very manner of his death is important as a dramatic conclusion. In a fire in his picture-gallery (wherein he shows genuine love for his possessions over and above their being his) he is struck down by a copy of a Goya that he had bought because the girl portrayed looked like Fleur; he had bought her a similar dress and she had worn it in one of the stages of her affair with Jon. In the fire it fell from a window; Fleur attempted to let it hit her; Soames saved her and was himself struck. Thus thru symbol Soames death is seen to be brought about by Fleur's pursuits, so vicious as regarded from his standards (and our own). This is the death bed of middle-class Victorianism prostrate from victory of emotions over common sense; yet in passing it is ennobled in triumph; Fleur says very sincerely to her dying father "I will be good". Poor old Soames! For all his inability to comprehend the hurry of the modern day (Funny things, automobiles; horses were good enough in his day; the things rushed you around and bumped you into a telegraph pole—and there you were!) he is not so far wrong, and even he can get excited at horse races. Great Soames!

Our Own Truth

So easy, free and light a thing
Is quick to die, they say.
It's like the first gay laugh of spring
Which spins itself away
And leaves us dazed a day.

A love that's born because the sea
Is running on the shore,
Because the wind has bent a tree
Whose head was high before,
And hearts of youth are sore.

Such love can never last the day,
Or so they tell, my dear.
But there are lies we learn to say
And silences we hear
To prove them false, my dear.

College Life Again

NEVER GO BACK. By George Boas.
(New York. Harper and Brothers.)
$2.50.

The book market has been flooded with novels on college and university life during the past few years, the vast majority of which have depicted either a roseate or a morbid picture of undergraduate life. Fortunately, Mr. Boas, in his initial adventure in the field of the novel, has endeavored to strike the happy medium, and give a more accurate picture of an American college. This book is refreshing in the fact that the students are not a subject for criticism, but, on the other hand, certain members of the faculty, who evidently have many of the shortcomings of their pupils.

The author should be admirably qualified for a just understanding of his subject, for he attended Brown, Harvard, Columbia, and California as an undergraduate, and since then has taught at California, and is now an Associate Professor at Johns Hopkins. Such a career should enable Mr. Boas to gain a thorough knowledge of his field from both angles of the question. It is refreshing that this novel does not serve any severe indictment on college faculties as a whole, but rather takes a group of professors to illustrate the ever changing status of the human mind to bring out the sad truth of the maxim—"Never Go Back".

Even the most intellectual individuals are ensnared in the inevitable triangle. After a dismal and lonely undergraduate career, Francis Harper finds an instructorship at Oralia both interesting and enjoyable, but soon John Tillingsstone, a professor of philosophy, sweeps away this newly-discovered happiness when he does not greet the recent arrival with open arms. Thirsting for friendship, Harper seeks the acquaintance of Miss Humphreys, a long-accepted object of ridicule in Oralia social circles. After an embarrassing situation at a public function, Tillingsstone suddenly changes his policy and decides to save Francis, who falls into his older colleague's plans, but, nevertheless, retains to a lesser degree his acquaintance with Miss Humphreys.

After the World War comes and takes Francis away, conditions rapidly change and illustrate the fallacy of faith in human nature. Tillingsstone and Violet Humphreys are drawn together in mutual concern for Harper, who, on his return, means nothing to either of them. On the other hand, the War too has alienated Francis, who has fallen in love with a French girl, Suzanne, who had formerly been at Oralia. Conditions are strained for a time, all three outdoing themselves, to show the strength of their friendship, knowing the while it meant nothing. Finally Francis marries Suzanne, and Tillingsstone weds Miss Humphreys.

Throughout the book, one is occasionally inclined to look askance at the attitude of the leading characters, and think some of the situations rather artificial. It is rather disconcerting to think the bonds of friendship of so little avail when miles intervene, a situation which applies more to isolated cases, and can not be accepted as a universal principle. Nevertheless, Mr. Boas informs us that this is a novel without a plot; so rather we try to accept the book as outlining successive events, which, in turn, happen in such a confusing way as to give the book plot. One can easily recommend "Never Go Back" over most works on the same subject, for it is, as the cover states, a "pungent satire on university life."

Book Notes

"The belief that youth is the happiest time of life is founded on fallacy," says Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale in a little book called, "Happiness", which was recently published.

In his "What I Believe", Bertrand Russell stresses strongly the need of education for the good life—one inspired by love and guided by knowledge—and equally the devitalizing effects of fear on the human character.

Doubleday Doran will soon publish two books of interest to the undergraduate mind: "Lily Christine" by Michael Arlen, the story of a "good woman whose goodness the censorious world misunderstood," and "The New Yorker Album", which contains the most amusing pictures from three years of The New Yorker by Guyas Williams, John Held, Jr., Ralph Barton, and many others.

In "The First Hundred Million" by E. Haldeman-Julius, the Blue Book merchant, the author makes some interesting statements on the reading public. He has learned that "human nature is the same everywhere" and that most people read approximately the same books. "The crowning achievement of Little Blue Book distribution I regard as the success of selling them through the tabloids—the gum-chewers' ad-sheets, the most sensational papers printed everywhere. In these papers I have successfully listed and sold Little Blue Books of acknowledged excellence—many of the same books bought by readers of Harper's and the Atlantic Monthly."

Sandburg Once More

GOOD MORNING AMERICA. By Carl Sandburg. New York. (Harcourt, Brace & Co.) $3.00.

This reviewer wasted many valuable evenings of his Sophomore year in an attempt to convince fellow-Sophomores that Carl Sandburg is a poet, and a good poet; although some agreed with him from the start, he made no conversions. Since then he has ceased to care, but he has continued to read Sandburg with pleasure and considerable admiration. His present purpose is not to argue, scarcely to criticize, but to comment; not to analyze Good Morning America and expound its merits, but to serve notice that more Sandburg is now obtainable, and to add a few reflections.

Good Morning America is just more Sandburg. His work, as individualistic as any poetry now being written, is all of a piece. There is the dancing and wallowing in countryside, city, ocean, lake, river, and sky, the riot of color from one end of the spectrum to the other, the multitudinous sound from whisper to roar, the great wonderment, and the great tenderness. It can be noticed, however, that the proportion of these elements has slowly changed since Sandburg's early work was written. Chicago Poems (1916) was a brawler despite its share of such soft lyrics as Nocturne in a Deserted Brickyard, and Fog. In this first volume are the savage Ready to Kill and To A Contemporary Bunkshooter and the roaring Chicago. Through Cornhuskers (1918), Smoke and Steel (1920), and Slabs of the Sunburnt West (1922) there is a growing predominance of poems in which the color and sound are softer and the movement more gentle. The fierce social passion of the earlier poetry seems to have been somewhat tempered by philosophy, and to have sacrificed some of its intensity for a broader scope. There is now no more railing at the idle rich, but instead an increasing tenderness toward all living things.

In Ben Hecht's Count Bruga a beautiful example of what happens when American vulgarity apes Anatole France—Sandburg is described as "a moonstruck bricklayer who has fallen off his ladder and hurt his head." The reader who is attempting Sandburg for the first time is likely to agree. Who is this person who babbles ceaselessly not only of green fields, but of steel mills, street cars, and roses? What about them, anyway? That is precisely what Sandburg would like to know. Faced with a fact—a rivet, a rose—meaningless in itself, he gropes for a meaning. Is a skyscraper, he asks, a pile of steel, wood, and plaster, or is it not rather human blood and sweat, deaths and hopes and tears? And beyond these individual meanings he is sure of some total meaning to which they all have reference. It is this persistent sense of a wondrous beyond, of an awful, splendid, and perhaps holy unity in all this diversity that entitles Sandburg to the title of mystic.

Verse as free as Sandburg's—and, it might be added, Whitman's—is the in main difficult to evaluate if we dignify the yardstick "form"—that is if we are to make an important factor in our judgment the success or failure of the poet aptly to fit his varying rhythms to his matter. For Whitman, Sandburg, and some other poets, though by no means the majority of successful free verse writers, have largely abdicated the standard of sound-rhythm for a standard of rhythm of impressions and images, and for the creation of moods. Hence judgment is bewildered, and the reviewer does not feel competent satisfactorily to solve the critical difficulties of the situation. To borrow from Mr. Satayana, barbarism and the poetry of barbarism are upon us, and we must make the best of it; it is by no means accidental that old standards of poetry have slipped away in company with other old standards.

Two quotations from Good Morning America may serve to show readers that Sandburg is still quite charmingly Sandburg:

From the title poem:

Sea sunsets, give us keepsakes.
Prairies glowings, pay us for prayers.
Mountain clouds on bronze skies—
Give us great memories.
Let us have summer roses.
Let us have tawny harvest haze in pumpkin time.
Let us have springtime faces to tail for and play for.
Let us have the fun of booming winds on long waters.
Give us dreamy blue twilights—of winter evenings—to wrap us in a coat of dreaminess.
Moonlight, come down—shine down, moonlight—meet every bird cry and every song calling to a hard old earth, a sweet young earth.

Good made ten yards at tackle. Fowle gained a first down on the visitors' 22-yd. line, and then a Wesleyan offside and another first down by Fowle put the ball on the two-yard line. Fowle missed the extra point, and the period ended with the ball in Williams possession on her own 48-yd. line.

Neither team was able to score during the final period, but Williams kept the ball in the visitors' territory most of the time. The Purple yearlings lost the ball on downs at the Wesleyan 18-yd. line after long gains

Goethe, The Genius

GOETHE—THE LIFE OF A MAN.
By Emil Ludwig. New York. (G. P.
Putnam's Sons). $5.00.

Ludwig is more concerned with Goethe's soul and inner workings than with the details of his outer character. Goethe is not The History of a Man but is the history of the soul of a man. A man's soul is indefinite and so is Ludwig. His vagueness and generalities annoy. Ludwig has begun his analysis of the man working from the inside out, not from the outside in. I refer specifically to a great lack of definiteness. Goethe might have been more concerned with society, with friends, with contemporary life, than Ludwig infers. Goethe in Ludwig's history becomes an ego-centric genius, always conscious of his superior destiny. Consequently he is an eccentric man, liable to do anything. The only actualities given us by Ludwig is Goethe's indefinite history, indefinite as Ludwig presents it, and constant references to Goethe's own notebook—something vastly more concrete and in many cases more revealing than the history itself.

Whether the biography suffers from translation I do not know, but it is certain that the historian does not hit the nail on the head so accurately or at least so convincingly as Lytton Strachey would do. Perhaps Goethe did possess the haziness Ludwig attributes to him, but I think rather Ludwig himself is not clear.

Ludwig is inextricably bound up with Goethe and with Goethe alone, the index of illustrations is indicative of his one-sidedness. The frontispiece, appropriately, is dedicated to Johann Wolfgang von Goethe. Then follows three silhouettes of Goethe at different ages, thirteen pictures of Goethe from sixteen to eighty, one mask, one bust, one statuette and a cast of Goethe's hand in old age. We have only Goethe's reactions, not the reflection of his friends.

Goethe was so assured of his destiny he was not able to kill himself. Instead, at twenty-five he had achieved National and European fame, loved five women and possessed the contradictory nature of a world spirit, for he was "sensual and transcendental, amoral and spinozistic, all egotism and all self-surrender, now delighting in companionship, now imperious in his demand for solitude; today religiously, tomorrow cynically, inclined; misanthropic, philanthropic, arrogant and kindly, patient and impatient, absorbed in form or intent on act, untamed and pedantic, a far reaching thinker but an instinctive doer, coldly objective yet essentially and passionately erratic, entirely masculine yet very feminine—a duel being if there ever was one". His universal nature was to be proved for he was invited to Weimar.

Weimar was ruled by an eighteen year old Duke of volcanic temperament. Goethe was attracted to the Duke from the beginning through philanthropic motives. He would like to teach the Duke to become benovolent. One can imagine what a laboratory a Duchy might be for a college graduate of twenty-five or six. It was a great workshop, a microcosm, lying fallow for ideas. Goethe undertook to supply them. This is his own advice on running a kingdom: "Take my advice and do your damndest, never anything less whether in the lowest farce or the loftiest tragedy! The fellow who is fit for anything worthy speaking of is contemptible if he's content with mediocrity. Ugh! Excelsior, excelsior—or you'll stick in the mud!" At Weimar he managed his own household, watered and tended his garden, superintended mines, established manufactures, visiting wool factories, trying a new method of selling timber, ordering well water to be analyzed for minerals, buying a laboratory, having a castle renovated, an old hospital demolished, the arch of a bridge widened, demanding twenty louis-d'ors, from a Prince for mining shares unpaid for, getting money out of the Jesuits for a courtier, establishing a marble mill in a brick factory, reckoning the profit, in a favorable season, of the Ducal coin after deducting all the demands of the court, the servants, and the military. Besides this, three more love affairs, and more spiritual turbulence. Is this good training for a poet? For Goethe it was, it made his sympathies universal, and yet he held in reserve the quintessence of his experience for poetry.

In spite of Ludwig's partiality Goethe at this period can only be seen as an egotist. Hurt spiritually in many of his contacts, his reclusive shell protected many of his wounds. His friendships, except with women, were for the most part coldly objective. Ludwig sees this as a symptom of universality. Before his mistresses Goethe let down the austerity of his mask the polarity of the man thawed. This was also true of his more intimate friends. His friendship and warmth for Schiller was intellectual but his love for Christians was deep devotion and affection. Schiller says of him: "To be often in Goethe's company would make me miserable. Even with his nearest friends he is never for a moment really spontaneous, he won't expand in any subject whatever; in fact, I believe him to be extraordinarily egotistical". How else can his attitude towards his mother, his son, his delayed marriage with Christiane, his early hostility with Schiller be explained? Ludwig does not attempt to justify him.

In middle age, then, Goethe "settled down," said very little, wanted to seem forbidding and wrote,

"I only ask for a pretty wife,
Without too strict a view of life,
But some things she by heart must get
The things whereon my heart is set."

The wife he had, but did not deign to have her legally until she had saved his life, given him six children, and lived with him twenty years. At this time of life he became the "provincial good trencherman", he drank one or two bottles of wine a day. This was a prosaic period, a provincial phase, for Goethe in his fifties was no longer the thinker, candidly intent on the truth of things, and striving ever and only upward—and was not yet the poet, clear eyed, winged for realms of freedom hitherto unknown, which he was soon to become". Middle age was the pause before the "Tragic Victory".

Goethe's tragic victory or third and last lap began with evidences of his daemon-like personality. After fifteen years of sterility and unimaginative study he inaugurated ten years of lyrics. At sixty he fell in love and the scientific barrenness, his former preoccupation with research and experiment, was avenged by a new fresh poetry. It was the zenith and Goethe's most productive period. Goethe gained in vigor, dropped the mask he had long worn, reentered a brilliant society. His life was one long adventure; "not the adventure of striving to bring perfection what nature had implanted in me. Endeavor to acquire what she had not. Tendencies as often right as wrong. Thence perpetual torment bereft of any genuine enjoyment". At this time all burdens were light, he wished the whole world well. His rejuvenation came with a world game and he was hailed as national poet, sometimes with fanatical enthusiasm.

At this time Ludwig infers from Goethe's letters and poetry that his spirit was Phoenix-like, but from the evidence he gives, it seems that Goethe's powers were on the decline. Goethe was seventy. Perhaps Goethe's own interpretation of himself justifies Ludwig's conclusions, for Goethe wrote, "It is certain that only he who has been the most sensitive, can become the hardest and coldest of man for he has to encase himself in triple steel . . . and often his coat-of-mail oppresses him."

Goethe had now reached the top of the pyramid but remained on top through reputation not through his own strength. He assumed a kind of autocratic authority over many subjects inside and out of his own realm. Nevertheless, he became the National Sage. Perhaps he had lived so long and had outlasted so many seers that age was mistaken for wisdom. Goethe had been long and consistently in the national gaze. That he still had physical vitality and zest is evidenced by the fact that at seventy-four he wished to marry again, and proposed. At seventy-eight, at an Archery Banquet given one autumn, he drank the younger men under the table.

In these last years, he was at least an eccentric phoenix. His conservatism became more and more manifest; he demanded not only the proper humility shown to himself, but respect given to all those in authority. He became more skeptical and ironic, more nervously irritable, he lost his life-long sense of tidiness. Throughout he knew his limitations. "I know very well", he said at eighty-one, "that I am a thorn in the side of many people, they would all like to be rid of me, and as they can't attack my talent now, they fix upon my character. One day I am arrogant, the next egotistic; the next a prey to envy". He became more frankly an egoist.

Surviving all his friends the last occupation was to scrape together and classify all his works. This was really an heroic job, but at eighty-two he craved the impossible, "and so, over the graves, forward!" until the day of his death completing Faust.

Not Such Soft Music

THE FEATHERED NEST. By Margaret Leech. New York. (Horace Liveright) $2.50.

The days of the prehensile parent, a specimen far less rare than the dodo, should be about over if exposure can have anything to do with it. It is agreed, I should say, by all who see even the most unimportant results, that the type of mother is a social threat, who, equipped with all the possible ingenuities stirred into a sweet syrup concocted of many insinuating poisons, tries to hold her children to her far beyond the normal age.

Mr. Sidney Howard exposed this mother painfully, with considerable freedom of speech, in The Silver Cord. Miss Leech exposes her with greater understanding in The Feathered Nest. We are behind the scenes of The Silver Cord. Mr. Howard's picture was sharp, but incomplete. It was a caricature. You were left with the feeling that the mother was entirely a monster. Miss Leech's picture is sharp, and it is complete. Miss Leech goes deep. She shows why such a mother is as she is. With swift sensitivity to emotion and a sure touch she makes the mother understandable, not sympathetic, I think, but entirely comprehensible.

The chief figure in the story is the mother Isabelle Forster. She married a man she never loved, but her infallible shrewdness and her sense of acquisition amounting nearly to avarice did not go back on her. Ferdinand Forster made a neat fortune and dutifully died while Isabelle was still near enough to what you could call her bloom. Mrs. Forster, left with much money and three sons elung to them with fierceness, and in the case of the latter with a tenderness almost sinister. She fondled them and kissed them as much as their boyishness would allow her, and called them saccharine pet names embarrassing to their healthy normality. The boys grew up and became conscious of what I believe is called the opposite sex, and still Mrs. Forster elung. First, Fred, the oldest, eloped with a beautiful but hypersensitive girl, a source of great trouble to Mrs. Forster. Next Charlie, the youngest, fled to the protecting arms of matrimony, and at the end of the book Haskell was headed that way. Mrs. Forster has been thwarted in every way by her sons, and hostile as you feel toward her you do not understand her. Her dependence on her three sons is so absolute. Her hopelessness at their loss so complete that we are able to comprehend the poisonous subtleties she has so deftly wielded in her attempt to hold them. Miss Leech has done a remarkably fine piece of writing in bringing out the woman's character.

If Miss Leech's sharpness of portrayal has made the principle character unpleasant, it has had the opposite effect on most of her other characters. The three sons and the three girls Linda, Reba, and Amy, are sympathetic and charming people weak enough in various ways, to be sure, (Miss Leech has a painful insight into the smaller weaknesses of people) but tremendously real and vital.

The keen insight, the sureness of treatment of intimate personal relations, the tender sensitiveness to emotion which marked her former book Tin Wedding are present in this book. "Poignant" is falling into as great a disrepute as "glamorous", but it is the word for Miss Leech writing. She treats tenderly the poignancy of sharp, vital life.

LITTLE THEATRE' GIVES PERFORMANCE IN JESUP

Triple Bill Produced Friday Night Pronounced 'a Credit to All Concerned'

(Courtesy of Mr. Peter H. Odegard) November 10, 1928.

Mr. Gus Gilliland, R. F. D. Box 12, Four Corners, Montana.

Dear Gus:

We spent a very pleasant Friday evening at Jesup Hall viewing the premiere performance, for this season, of the Williams Little Theatre. Three one-act plays were presented, these being, Aranea, an original piece by Alfred Romer and James Casaday, Wurzel-Plummary, a delightful comedy by A. A. Milne, and Annajanska, The Bolshevik Empress, by Bernard Shaw. In spite of a crummy stage, inadequate properties, a drafty auditorium and the absence of a sophisticated theatrical atmosphere the performance did much credit to all concerned.

Aranea deals with the familiar vampire motive in a not altogether original way. Like Paola and Francesca, doomed forever to go hurdlng through blades, slaves to love and beauty, Aranea is destined to sit throughout eternity, or at least so long as the world endures, in her high-built castle a slave to the same harsh masters. Like the three fates she holds the life threads of whatever heauteous boys presume to pay her court. Their lives are forfeit to her charm, her beauty and her enigmatic virtue. As she absorbs the youth and comeliness of her lackless lovers she cuts their life threads and they die. Thus, we are told, she must live until the crack of doom.

Eleanor Bloedel, playing the title role creates a character which admirably suits the play. She had the stateliness, the beauty and the grace which a medieval enchantress must always have. Throughout she played a difficult part well. Clayton Heernance, Jr. as the minstrel, caught in this female spider's web, wears his scarlet doublet and hose with grace. It seemed to us though that his voice would more become Mark Anthony than a medieval bard. The servants to Aranea, Richard Manning and Braumard Sabin, served their mistress with incredibly successful silence.

The costuming was remarkably good. On the whole Messers Romer and Casaday are to be congratulated and encouraged.

Wurzel-Plummary, as you know, is the tale of two proud pothering parliamentarians who sell their souls for fifty thousand pounds each and perform pro-

Late S. P. Sherman '03 Honored by New Book

"To the late Stuart P. Sherman, taken by death at the moment when the American writing to which he gave himself with so much devotion, needed him most sorely" were the words of Louis Bromfield, prominent present-day writer, used in the dedication of one of his latest works, A Good Woman, to Stuart Pratt Sherman. As a famous author and educator, Sherman was an illustrious son of Williams.

Stuart Sherman graduated from Williams in the Class of 1903 and received M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard in the two succeeding years. For his work as Professor of English in Northwestern and Illinois, his Alma Mater honored him with L. H. D. in 1922. Being elected Associate Editor of the Cambridge History of American Literature and Literary Editor of the New York Herald, he was chosen for membership in the American Academy of Arts and Letters, in the Authors Club, and in the Century Club. Among his most important works are: Matthew Arnold, Americans, Points of View, and The Genius of America.

While at Williams, Sherman was editor-in-Chief of the Literary Monthly, the predecessor of the Graphic, a member of the Guild board, President of the Classical Society, played on his Class football team, threw the hammer in track, sang with the Glee Club, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Gargyle.

WILLIAMS HARRIERS SMOTHER WESLEYAN

Solitary Cardinal and Black Runner Finishes Among First Seven Contestants

In the final home meet of the season, the Williams cross-country runners completely outclassed their Wesleyan opponents, 19 to 36, last Saturday morning in the five mile race over the muddy Taconic course, when Guernsey of Williams lead the pack to the tape in the fast time of 27 minutes and 34 seconds. Captain Kelly of Wesleyan, who beat out Goodbody of Williams for second in a driving finish, was the only member of the visiting team to place before the entire Purple squad had crossed the line.

Starting off at the crack of the gun, the runners soon separated into two sections, the men who ultimately placed in the first seven positions comprising the first. The eventual winner, Guernsey of Williams, seized the lead after the first few hundred yards, and retained it until the finish, ex-

WILLIAMS RALLIES IN SECOND HALF TO DEFEAT WESLEYAN; SOCCER TEAMS TIE

Williams, Outplaying 'Little Three' Rivals, Fails To Hold Early One Point Lead

SLIPPERY TURF A HANDICAP

Neilson Makes Only Goal for the Purple; Tedcastle Is Star for Wesleyan

Hampered by a wet and slippery field, a fighting Purple soccer eleven battled to a 1-1 tie with the Wesleyan booters in the first 'Little Three' encounter of the Williams team on Cole Field last Saturday morning. The single Williams tally was registered early in the first period when Neilson scored on a long kick, after a brilliant series of passes by the Purple forward line, Wesleyan evening up the score late in the final period, when Ihrig headed in a well placed corner kick from Captain Tedcastle.

The Williams combination showed much promise of victory at the beginning, and though the ball was kept in Cardinal and Black territory most of the contest, there was enough letup after Neilson's goal to provide an opening for Wesleyan's ever threatening forwards. Due to the spectacular playing of Barthen, visiting goal keeper, numerous tries at goal on the part of the home team were broken up. All during the first half Williams had the edge and threatened to score many times, but because of the wetness of the field, misjudgement of kicks and sloppy passwork prevailed.

At the beginning of the third period both teams seemed to take on new life; Captain Tedcastle, right wing of the visitors, constantly penetrated the Williams defense, but the backfield rallied to save any scoring. Almost at the start of the final quarter Tedcastle neatly placed a corner kick which was headed in by Ihrig for the Methodists' lone goal. From then on Williams held the upper hand but was still unable to sink a kick in the cage. There were no outstanding players in the Purple line-up, though the team as a whole played well-coordinated soccer. Tedcastle and Barthen showed up well for the Cardinal and Black. The line-ups are as follows:

Phelps	o.r. Tedcastle (Capt.)
Christie (Capt.)	i.r. Skirm
Neilson	c. Coons
McKittrick	i.l. Ihrig
Thoms	o.l. Garber

Cross-Country Run

With the date of its running depending on weather conditions, the interfraternity cross-country meet will be held this week over the short course, which starts in front of Laseell Gymnasium and ends on Weston Field. Each fraternity and the Commons Club are allowed to enter as many men as desired, and it is expected that approximately 150 men will start the race. The run last year was won by Guernsey '31, of the Commons Club, while Suffern '31 won second place for Phi Sigma Kappa.

Freshmen, Sophomores to Hold Annual Rope Pull

Time-honored tradition will have its day on Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock, when 1931 and 1932 will pitch their camps on opposite sides of the Green River, and vie for the privilege of dragging the vanquished through the icy deep. Three pulls, each of five minutes duration, will decide the preliminary issue; then the class in possession of the rope will try to run the gauntlet across the bridge to a point previously agreed upon.

Ely and Hoyt '30 will have charge of the Freshmen, who will gather on Jesup Hall steps at 4 p. m., and transport the rope to the banks of the river, where the Sophomores will gather, after mustering in front of Morgan Hall. Then the battle royal begins, with nothing barred except spiked shoes, clubs, and fist-fighting. Only men competing for varsity or freshman football are ineligible.

1932 FOOTBALL TEAM VANQUISHES WESLEYAN

Handicapped by Muddy Condition of Cole Field Freshmen Score But Eight Points

Hampered by the soggy condition of Cole Field, the heavy backfield of the Williams freshman football team slipped and skidded last Saturday noon on its way to an 8-0 victory over the hard-fighting Wesleyan yearlings. Owing to the swift charges of the Cardinal and Black yearling line and the brilliant defensive work of their fullback, Captain Blakesley, the forward passing attack of the Purple freshmen was rendered ineffective, but the capable line thrusts and sweeping end runs of Captain Fowle were more than enough to make possible a repetition of last year's victory.

Early in the first quarter the Williams yearlings brought to a sudden halt the visitors' aerial attack when, after a Wesleyan pass was good for 15 yards, Fowle intercepted a forward on his own 39-yd. stripe. A series of line plays took the ball into Wesleyan territory, but there the visitors' line held and Fowle kicked out on their 8-yd. line. Blakesley kicked from behind his goal to his 40-yd. line, where Senn caught it and raced 25 yards before being downed. Again the visitors' line held, and the ball was kicked out of danger.

Williams renewed the attack, however, and Fowle kicked out on the Wesleyan 4-yd. stripe. A poor pass from center was fumbled by Blakesley, and he was downed behind his goal line for a safety. The quarter ended after an exchange of punts in which department the Purple freshmen were superior.

The second quarter opened with a brilliant forward pass, the only long one of the game, in which Fowle received Fowle's 40-yd. heave. The ball was lost on downs however, and Tirrell made 15 yards at left end for the Cardinal and Black. A Wesleyan man was downed with the ball behind his line as the whistle blew, but the umpire ruled that forward progress had stopped at the one-yard mark.

Williams opened the second half with a long drive that proved fruitless. Fowle ran 20 yards around right end to the visitors' 25-yd. marker, but a pass to Fowle was incomplete, and two line plunges failed. Blakesley made 15 yards at left end and then kicked out of danger. Williams took time out, and then commenced a drive that ended in a score.

Good made ten yards at tackle. Fowle gained a first down on the visitors' 22-yd. line, and then a Wesleyan offside and another first down by Fowle put the ball on the two-yard line. Good lost three yards when the line failed to hold, but Fowle went over on the next play for a touchdown. Fowle missed the extra point, and the period ended with the ball in Williams possession on her own 48-yd. line.

Neither team was able to score during the final period, but Williams kept the ball in the visitors' territory most of the time. The Purple yearlings lost the ball on downs at the Wesleyan 18-yd. line after long gains

Red and Black Scores First and Holds 13-7 Advantage at End of Half

HOWE AND BROWN STAR

Turned Back Twice, Purple Finally Scores on Lateral; Anderson Excels in Line

Spectacular lateral passes, end runs, off-tackle smashes, and line plunges, enabled Williams to overcome an early lead and win the thirty-seventh annual game with Wesleyan, 16-13, last Saturday on Weston Field before a large crowd, who at times saw some offensive play as brilliant as was ever witnessed in the history of the "Little Three."

Throughout the game the final score was always in doubt, each team staging spasmodic attacks which resulted in touchdowns. The Purple followers sat in agony as the highly-touted passing attack of the Cardinal and Black paved the way for a touchdown early in the opening quarter, and was able to account for another in the second period, after Williams had tied the score through a strong running game, including several laterals seen for the first time this year. Late in the third quarter, after Williams had once lost the ball on the Wesleyan five-yard line, the combination of Brown to Howe again spelled disaster for the Cardinal and Black when another lateral pass tied the score, and Langmaid kicked the extra point to put the Purple ahead, 14-13. Again before the final whistle blew, Howe threatened the Wesleyan goal line on one of his Cagle-like open field runs which netted over thirty-five yards, and, although the Purple was unable to convert the run into a touchdown, Captain Silloway's attempted punt was smeared behind the goal line by the Purple forward wall, giving Williams two points for a safety and making the final score 16-13.

The game was featured by the absence of any outstanding stars, and by an all-around high standard of play. Howe and Brown were the most spectacular players for Williams, bringing the stands to their feet with flashy end-runs and their dangerous lateral attack. Langmaid and Putnam displayed their usual high standard of play in the backfield, and the former's dropkick after the second Purple touchdown added the precious point necessary for a Williams victory. The varsity line, when the team started its touchdown marches, swept Wesleyan before it, but, on the whole, both lines displayed greater power on the offense than on the defense. Millsbaugh played a fine offensive game for the visitors, while the combination of Tetley to Silloway held the spectators spellbound with well-directed passes. Bagg at fullback was very effective backing up the line and made the majority of the Cardinal and Black tackles.

Statistics of the game show that the Williams victory was deserved. In all branches except passing and punting the Purple excelled their opponents by a narrow margin. They gained seven more first downs, and more than double the amount of Wesleyan from scrimmage. The punting was practically even, although Silloway averaged three yards more. Silloway's kicks were higher as a rule, but Howe made up for this by clever placing of the ball. In passing the Cardinal and

Privy Philosophy of Oxford Undergraduate Is Revealed by Mr. Dingle M. Foot, Visiting Orator

"Don't go to lectures, and don't read the books your tutor tells you to." Such were the axioms set up for the guidance of the conscientious student by Mr. Dingle Foot, Oxford debater, when he was recently interviewed by a Record reporter. For true Englishmen are not interviewed; they just talk.—And so—

"Oh, you have to? . . . The Dean? . . . five cuts—"cuts"? oh, yes. Well, you Americans all go over the same hurdle, you see. When a man goes up to Oxford, he goes to a few lectures to see how he likes them. If he thinks he can learn more out of a book, he doesn't go any more. As a result, only women go to lectures—women reading Lit (that's the only place there are more women than men)—and they only get thirds or fourths for their trouble!"

"Thirds or fourths? The degrees are given that way. If a man wants to do some hard work, it's there to be done, and he may take a first class degree. About one in 30 does. If the rest don't want to, no one seems to care. They can take thirds or fourths—or fifth. A good average degree is a second though—for men."

"Take work? Well, you'll find the coffee houses filled a good part of the morning with groups discussing things more or less in general. In the afternoon there are sports, of course. Then, in the evening there are numerous essay clubs and the like where the men sit over their malt and discuss things perhaps a little more in particular. There's much more discussion going on in English Universities than in American. Very little reading. Oxford is the worst place imaginable to work."

"Most of the reading is done in the 'vacs'. You have to count on about a fortnight at Christmas and Easter and perhaps a month during the summer spent in the country somewhere reading. That leaves plenty of time for the American students to see England or France or whatever they like. Oxford is getting to be more of an American institution every year. The Rhodes Scholars are fine, of course. They are doing big things and have an entree everywhere."

"Why don't we read what the tutor suggests? That's all general material. The essays you read to your tutor are on specific topics. The specific work is what you want to get into. All you have to do at Oxford is to learn one thing thoroughly. On the examinations one gets a choice of three or four out of 15 or 20 questions. Old examinations are searched with care to find what questions are bound to appear, and reading is planned accordingly. Hence efficient men get seconds, while conscientious women take thirds or fourths."

"The Union popular? Along the first of the year the new men crowd the place and talk incessantly. They are naive. They all think they will be president, but they soon quiet down. The next big event is the election of the president. Winston Churchill was up last and packed the house, about 900. Once, before the war, Lloyd George came up. They tried to kidnap him at the door because he was too liberal, but he got in and won the house. When the president is finally elected, all the politicians come around to

SPEECHES, SONGS, CHEERS

If football games have any editorial significance, it invariably boils down to a criticism of either the cheering of the spectators or the mental attitude of the players. The first is called deplorable, shameful, treacherous, sissified and other kindred adjectives, while the second is anything from inferiority complex to gross over-confidence. And neither goes well with victory. That's what the boy-editors tell us, and someone else told them.

Apparently the best thing about the Wesleyan game last Saturday (besides, of course, the fact that Williams won) was the rally the night before. Speeches, songs, and cheers were all thrown into the pot, and much spirit was brewed. The Band, making a dramatic appearance at just the right time, showed that it could lead a parade and blow brass at the same time. It was worth waiting for.

And yet during the first half of the game the next day, there were many who thought the team looked rotten—and said so. The reason this time was supposed to be "over-confidence"—this from men who were still hoarse from yelling their approval of speeches that absolutely promised, almost guaranteed, a big Wesleyan victory.

There is a myth (perhaps it is a psychological fact) that a rally tonight has some mysterious connection with the size of tomorrow's score. But if rallies produce over-confidence, and over-confidence produces defeat, a rally would not appear to be exactly the best way of helping the coach win a game. Perhaps there is something wrong with our hypothesis, but what, may we ask, do rallies produce, if not over-confidence?

But we didn't mean to be nasty about it, and if last Friday's rally failed to help the team much, it was a good tonic for the student body anyway.

ALL OF OUR OWN

The Little Theater has done something new again. It has presented a play written by undergraduates of Williams College; and, what is more, it has announced its intentions of presenting others. Often has the Little Theater been congratulated on its independent accomplishments, but until last Friday it was content to build its self-made successes on borrowed foundations. The production of Araucan finished the job from the ground up and issued a challenge to the intellectual initiative of students of any more cultural land or more golden age which modern cynics have been wont to hold up to us as a forgotten ideal.

Critical judgments of the play itself and the others to come belong to other columns, but it is a reasonable a priori hypothesis that they will not be as good as the work of a Milne or a Shaw. Perhaps then the actors will not get the most benefit from their efforts, nor will the audience glean the most profit from its presence. For people in the process of being educated, initiative is not the only objective. A working acquaintance with the works of others and experienced coaching in matters of tried technique are more than appropriate.

Of course, the Little Theater recognizes this. Its new departure is not an exclusive policy. And when it comes to coaching, there is always Cap and Bells. While the two organizations are separate, they draw both actors and audience from a common body. In short, dramas in Williams College, as a result of the final step taken by the Little Theater last Friday, have found a balance between unrestrained initiative and careful training so nearly perfect that it might well be a model for some of the other struggling activities of the College.

For example, on the one hand, our journalists and debaters have learned what they may happen to know in the school of experience—a noble teacher, but not the only one which might be expected to be available in a College community. On the other, the initiative and spontaneity of athletics seem to be pretty well absorbed into an administrative superstructure. It is interesting to note, in appraising the modern undergraduate, that of all the events of a busy week-end—football, debating, dramatics, house parties—the only things we can't seem to run for ourselves are football and chapel.

"SENTIMENTALISM" AT WESLEYAN

More light on the question of cuts. At Wesleyan, we learn, they have even greater reason to grumble than we have. We bring forward a few facts to prove our assertion that Williams does not lag behind in the march of the colleges, and also to show that undergraduates here are not alone in their cry for greater freedom. The system now used by Wesleyan to regulate absences allows only one cut per semester in the regular three-hour courses, with the exception that honor men get two in their freshmen and sophomore years, and three in their junior and senior. In a letter entitled, "Three Cuts at Williams", published in the Wesleyan Argus, an undergraduate proposes as a release from this stifling restriction our system of awarding cuts on a sliding scale basis. And the editor agrees that all the changes he suggests "are badly needed at this time." Both sound very oppressed.

The plan, applying to freshmen in the second semester only, makes a series of seven ranking groups the basis of awards, and hands out unlimited cuts galore. It looks like this on paper:

Group	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Freshmen	6	5	5	4	3	2	0
Sophomores	unlimited	unlimited	unlimited
Juniors	unlimited	unlimited	unlimited	6	5	3	1
Seniors	unlimited	unlimited	unlimited	8	6	4	1

We consider this scheme significant, not because it is especially brilliant, but because it comes from the student of a university where attendance rules seem exceptionally severe. We do not feel that such a radical lurch ahead would be a good thing for either Wesleyan or Williams: the shock might cause harmful reactions. But we do think there is something in the suggestion that groups, rather than specific grades, should determine the number of absences allowed—insofar as this may apply to seniors. Our "sentimentalism" (if that is the right word) is still sober enough to walk a straight line: The three lower classes at Williams have not yet a sufficiently strong case to warrant a change toward greater freedom. The seniors, we believe, have.

THE ROUND TABLE

SAGA OF THE AMHERST-WILLIAMS CLASH OF THE CENTURY

Prologue

In 1938 the Sons of Eph
Rallying 'round their President and Chief
Declared by all the gods of peace and War
This Under-Emphasis had gone too far.
Content our warriors were to merely win,
And home they'd march with jolly, care-free grin
When they had only conquered Wesleyan
By twenty points. The players e'en began
To talk of playing colleges our size,
Dropping Columbia,—the old and wise Shook dubious heads. Said one, this lack of vim
Was too blank blank blank blank blank soft for him.
Bring back the days when football ruled the roost;
To help along, said he, he'd give a boost.
He did. A half-back turned up next year
Who brought the campus happiness and cheer
Each time he took the pigskin in his mitts
And each opposing team was thrown in fits.
Football began to rise to heights again,
And Amherst started gathering in some men.
Enthusiasm grew at fearful rate,
Until one fall—but I anticipate.

Canto I

Coach Dammanhell was sulking in his tent.
His luck was down, and all his cash was spent.
Calamity had dropped upon his head.
He oathed an oath and wished that he were dead,
And, asked the line-up, "Buzz!" was all he said
For Bangem Bampf, the All-American
Unseizable, prehensible, speedy man
Who had been counted on to do big stuff
And treat the Amherst warriors rather rough,
Was now—the very day of this great game
Out of it—Williams would not look the same
Without the help of his gigantic frame
That treated all white lines the very same
And always made an easy fifty points for Williams' name.
There seemed no single possible chance that he
Would in his usual position be.
For two days past he had been on a bend,
And killed three men, and roused the whole
West End,
By burning sundry buildings just for fun,
And wounding six policemen with a gun.
After eight hours of embattlement,
Surrounded he had been, and badly spent.
Captured by the Berkshire State Police
Thrown in the jug for bursting of the peace
Now there he lay, under machine-gun guard
To keep the students distant. Life is hard!
No other fullback was available.
Coach Dammanhell had tried but could not cull
From all the country, a professional.
Mike Slimy only stood to take his place,
A man inferior, whose skinny face
Bore thirty knife scars, but would ne'er strike fear
Into the Amherst team, for each man there Had more than thirty, and most lacked an ear.
So up and down his tent the tall Coach raged
Like to a sizzling hyena caged;
While round the jail a bitter battle waged,
As valiant students sought their man to gain,
All gallantly, but lackaday! in vain,
And round the calaboose were piles of slain.

Canto II

Three minutes left to play! The field was red
With gore of combatants. The scoreboard said
The brutal sons of Geoffrey were ahead
By nineteen points. An atmosphere of gloom.
Had settled o'er the Purple stands as doom Approached. The bets made many weeks ago
Totalling forty millions, seemed to spell
Financial ruin, as the Williams dough
Seemed rapidly upon the road to heck—
But what is this? Far off we spy a speck Upon the golf links, running quickly,— well
Perhaps if we are seeking explanation,
Look there,—the President of this great nation,
Is in the stands, a Williams grad! And see—
He smiles, and eager looks, expectantly.
You know the Constitution of our States
In terms explicit, clear, and terse, creates
The "Power of Pardon", and that power vests
In the great President; in him there rests

OUTING CLUB OUTLINES PROGRAM FOR WINTER

Plans Include Construction of Club Cabin and Reblazing of the Shorter Trails

Awaiting only the completion of the fall sports season and the release of its members from other activities, the Williams Outing Club is planning an ambitious program of activities for the winter months. With the enrollment of several new members, the Club hopes to be able this winter to carry through its long-considered plans for the construction of a Club cabin, and the blazing of all the trails in the vicinity.

Travers '30 is chairman of a committee to draw up the plans for the cabin and consider the various sites which have been suggested. The Club is not fully satisfied with any of the locations now under consideration, and would appreciate any further suggestions from the undergraduates. Several trips have been planned over the local trails in search for a suitable location, and it is planned to start construction as soon as possible after the selection of one.

Many of the Club trails are to be inspected with the purpose of repainting all the blazes and putting up new signs wherever they are needed. Two trails will be inspected every Saturday afternoon, and announcements of these trips will be posted on the bulletin boards in Hopkins Hall and the Post Office. The Club hopes that a large group of men will take the opportunity to fulfill the trail work requirements for membership.

Upon their completion of the requirements the following men have been elected to key membership in the Outing Club: Billo, Fedde, and Hales, '30; Cannon, Evans, Guernsey, and Miles '31. To gain key membership, a man must tramp over all the W. O. C. trails, spend a night in one of the temporary cabins, and do a certain amount of trail work. The Club has made large gains in both ordinary and key membership during the past year, and urges that all men interested in the work join one of the organized trips and find out what the work is like.

Eight Houses Entertain Over Wesleyan Week-end

Perfect weather, with a touch of frost in the air, and a football victory over Wesleyan contributed to the gaiety which attended the arrival of some 250 girls, besides alumni, parents, and friends and sustained it throughout the second house party week-end of the year. After the initial fall performance of the "Little Theatre" Friday night, the usual exodus occurred to the special pre-house party dance at Meadowbrook, while, on Saturday, attention was focused on the athletic contests until the afternoon tea-dances took the spotlight.

In the morning, the Williams teams registered three wins to one loss and a tie, while in the afternoon, a tense and excited throng jammed Weston Field to see the surging battle with Wesleyan resolve into a 16-13 victory for the Purple. Beta Theta Pi, Commons Club, Kappa Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Kappa, and Theta Delta Chi entertained after the game at tea-dances. These were followed by several closed dinner-dances, and finally all eight houses, Delta Upsilon and Phi Gamma Delta in addition to those named above, acted as formal hosts at dances lasting until midnight.

Frosh Booters Defeat Holyoke High Eleven 6-4

Showing greatly improved teamwork and a more powerful attack than it displayed in the previous games, the Freshman soccer team defeated the Holyoke High School booters by a 6-4 score in the contest played last Saturday morning on Cole Field. The yearling eleven seemed able to score with comparative ease when its offense was working properly and made a generally good impression in its first victory of the season.

Although crushed in their first two encounters by the powerful teams from Williston and Deerfield Academies, the freshmen have been slowly rounding into form, as the last game shows. The two teams started off evenly matched and the score was soon tied at 2-2, but the yearlings soon found themselves and were able to earn the victory by a comfortable margin. Dohme, playing at inside left, played the best game for the freshmen, while Cavanaugh and Chalmers starred for Holyoke.

Hockey Squad to Make Annual Lake Placid Trip

For the fifth time in as many years, the Williams Varsity Hockey team will spend six days of the Christmas Recess at Lake Placid as the guests of the Lake Placid Club. Though arrangements could not be made for the traditional series with Dartmouth or Yale, Manager A. W. Williamson '29 has announced that three practice games will be played against the Amherst team while at the Lake Placid Club.

The team will leave New York City for Lake Placid on December 26. Practice will be held on the 27th and 28th of December and the games with Amherst will be played on the 29th, 30th and January 1. After leaving Lake Placid on the 1st, it is planned, though as yet tentatively, to accept the invitation of the Nichols Club of Buffalo to play a series of games at Buffalo. The trip will be made by Coach L. M. Bellerose, Manager A. W. Williamson, Assistant Manager E. D. Reeves, and two full hockey teams led by Captain D. Howe.

The schedule to be played after the completion of the Christmas trip is as follows:

Jan. 12	West Point	West Point
16	Union	Home
19	Amherst	Home
22	M. A. C.	Home
26	Cornell	Home
Feb. 7	Colby	Home
8	Holy Cross	Worcester

Smith Recitals Start Friday

Opening the series of concerts given annually by the Smith College Department of Music, which are often attended by Williams students while in Northampton, Vladimir Horowitz, a young Russian pianist, will give a recital in John M. Greene Hall, Northampton, on Friday evening, November 16. Mr. Horowitz has won considerable fame through his mastery of the piano, and has been hailed by European critics as the Rubinstein of the present day.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Thayer have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise Thayer, to Francis Tilden Nichols of Oyster Bay, L. I. The wedding is set for December.

SELECTION OF RHODES SCHOLARS MAY ALTER

Former American Rhodes Scholars Propose Larger Districts for Selection

Rhodes scholars will soon be chosen by a new selective system if the bill in regard to this change is passed in the British Parliament, according to a recent statement of Dr. Frank Aydelotte, President of Swarthmore College and American Secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust. The new system, which will not guarantee a certain number of representatives to each state, is proposed to allow greater freedom in the choice of the best men.

Under the will of Cecil Rhodes, thirty-two scholarships are awarded each year in the United States, and every representative must come from a different state. Under the new system, the United States would be divided into eight zones of six states each, with a competition held in every state every year, instead of in only two years out of three as at present.

The proposal was made by a majority of the old American Rhodes scholars, supported by leading authorities in education, including the members of the Association of American Universities, The Association of Urban Universities, and the Association of American Colleges. Under the proposed plan, each State Selection Committee would be allowed two nominees to appear before the Regional Committee. Each Regional Committee would then appoint the best four, regardless of state lines.

This method, it was announced, would insure a "geographical distribution of scholarships among the different parts of the United States, but it would no longer guarantee to every state an equal number of appointments. But it would fit in better with the academic system of the country, would make selection easier, and tend to insure that all candidates chosen were of the highest type."

"It is quite obvious," said Dr. Aydelotte, "that the New England States would constitute one group, the Middle Atlantic another, and the states of the Pacific Coast, the Southwest, the Northwest, the Middle West, and the South, with probably the eighth group of states in the Central West from the Mississippi to the Rocky Mountains. It will probably take another year of study before we can outline these boundaries exactly."

Troy High Harriers Nose Out 1932 Team, 27 to 28

Closing their season, unless a meet with Amherst is arranged for next Saturday, the 1932 harriers came within one point of victory over the Troy High School cross-country team last Saturday morning over the Taconic course. In spite of Captain Roy's brilliant running to take first place by a 75-yard margin, the Freshmen allowed the Troy runners to bunch for the next three places, and, although they were followed by three Williams men, Clifton's victory over Burnett for eighth place gave the visitors the meet.

With two first places out of three starts, Roy had been the outstanding Freshman runner, and, with Potter and Alexander, shows promise of varsity ability. Although one or two yearlings always placed at the head, the lack of equal ability throughout the line-up is responsible for the Purple's failure to win a meet. But their constant improvement throughout the season is shown by the fact that they lost their first match to Albany High School, 18-45, they dropped their next to R. P. I. by only five points, 25-30, and in their third encounter lost by a single point to Troy.

The following is the order of finish: Roy (W), Geracitus (T), Lisnec (T), Richardson (T), Alexander (W), Walter (W), Potter (W), Clifton (T), Burnett (W), Peach (T). Score: Troy, 27, Williams 28.

GARFIELD ANNOUNCES BIBLE STUDY PROGRAM

Comparison Made Between Grades of Classes of 1930 and 1931
Last Year

President H. A. Garfield has recently announced that the copies containing the minutes of the 1927 Chapel Committee and a syllabus of Bible readings for both the Freshman and Sophomore classes have been received from the printers. These will be distributed to the freshmen and sophomores within the next few days, following the morning Chapel service.

The examination, which will be held immediately before or after the Spring recess, will be based on readings from The Modern Reader's Bible for Schools by Richard Green Moulton. In accordance with the agreement of the Chapel Committee, the freshmen will be given a comprehensive examination on the New Testament, and the sophomores another on the Old Testament. Those college preachers, in addition to Mr. Twichell, the College Pastor, who reviewed and criticized the syllabus, were President Barbour of the Rochester Theological Seminary, and President Mackenzie of the Hartford Theological Seminary.

It is interesting and suggestive to note the examination results of last April, given below:

Per Cent of Total Grades
Grade	Sophomores	Freshmen
A.....	7.5	7.1
B.....	17.2	13.8
C.....	30.1	20.5
D.....	26.9	32.5
E.....	18.2	25.8

When it is recalled that the required reading was done without instruction, the students covering the requirement when and in such manner as each chose, the results were surprisingly close to those of other examinations in the college curriculum.

The Round Table

The fate of every criminal in the land
Each murderer and larcener, small or grand,

No matter what the sentence he had had,
Nor how many fair homes and things he's wrecked—

Perhaps right here our memory is bad
But in the main we think this is correct.
But see—the speck to mighty size has grown!

Familiar is his shape—three hundred stone
Of meat and muscle moves in him, just see
And here's a chance for writer's artistry.
Like as the eagle from the starry dome,
Or as immortal Lindbergh roaring home,
Or on the Berkshire Trail a motor cop
Chasing some chap so fast he cannot stop Like all of these there swoops upon the field,

Oh Jeffmen, quail! Oh pigskin-pushers, yield!

It is our Bangem! Blow the harp! And trump

The cymbals and the drum! And fiercely thump

The derby on the head in front of you
Until it is a pulpy mass of glue!
See how he rushes up and takes the ball
And smites the dum-struck Geoffreys, one and all!

One goal! Two goals!! Such football ne'er was seen

Since the bright Day-Star lit the high serene

Or Eve in Eden made the first forward pass
Come on, our Bangem! step upon the gas!
There's but one second now—six points to make—

One play is left! Get going, for our sake!
See how he leaps into his mighty stride!
And strikes the Amherst men on every side
And makes the secondary seem a fool!
And lays the fullback in a bloody pool!
And mauls the safety quarter something cruel!

And gallops on—he's won! He's made the goal!!!

Canto III

The bards still sling their somewhat sloppy ink,

And fireside philosophers still think,
As at the Falls they gather in a group
To have a little intellectual loop,

Of that great day, when to the stands was borne

The mighty Bangem, seeming hardly worn
By his exertions,—there to be awarded,
For the great feat that splendid man of war did,

The Medal of Honor by the President—
Which Congress ratified when to them went

The motion for approval! In appreciation for this act of gallantry Performed upon the glorious field, the men

Who won their bets, gathered that night again

And in a body sent their winnings down
To Washington, to pay the National Debt; Where Congress, thankful such a sum to get

Donated it, with will to raise the tone,
Of football in the land, to build them there
A statue, in the city's principal square,
Of Bangem and the President, hand in hand,

With "WILLIAMS" under on a silver band,

A motto too, to lend the right élat—
"Virtue et labor vincit omnia".

It is a shrine for all the nation's young
And coast to coast are Bangem's praises sung;

While for his noble generosity
The President's writ high in history.

So ends the saga, and this is the time
To sound the lesson of our lofty rhyme, Nothing could be more plain—The Will to Win

Will Override All Little Things Like Sin.

'Little Theatre' Gives Performance in Jesup

toplastic service to the name of Wurzel-Flummery. It is one of the most amusing and withal profound one-act plays in literature. Here certainly "the play's the thing". It would take a genius to spoil it. Needless to say it was not spoiled Friday evening. Of the six persons in the cast only two carried conviction. Mr. A. C. Rogers as Robert Cranshaw, M. P., in spite of a somewhat cartoonish facial make-up, gave an adequate performance. Whether credit for this should go to Mr. Rogers or to Mr. Almer Reiff, who, we assume, did the easting, we are not sure. Perhaps the honor should be divided. Our only criticism of Mr. Rogers, apart from the facial, was that he seemed unduly unfamiliar with his lines. Mr. John Lucas as Denis Clifton, solicitor and amateur playwright must, to our way of thinking, carry off the palm. He fitted his part like milady's glove and would do himself proud on Broadway.

As you know, Gus, we have always insisted that an actor was great to the degree he ceased to "act". Mr. Lucas did not "play", he was Denis Clifton. Alice Avery, as Margaret Cranshaw, Zaidee McLaren as Viola Cranshaw, and T. Achilles Polyzoides as Richard Meriton, M. P., were obviously inexperienced and insincere. Time and more experience will teach them that to be a successful actor one must not "play" but "live" one's part. It is like the soul one saves by losing. Sterling Hiles, as the Butler, was as lifeless as a wooden Indian. Fortunately he appeared but an instant and spoke but a line.

Annajanska, The Bolshevik Empress, is by all odds the worst of Shaws plays which we have read or witnessed. The lines are not witty, they are not clever, and the entire play moves on about the same level as the Apollo Burlesque. Nothing can be done with such a play, except to "junk" it, and nothing was done with it on Friday evening. We were amused but it was the sort of amusement one derives from watching a chicken hop around on a hot stove lid, that is, a pathological, pained amusement. The audience laughed but it was the laughter induced by making faces and results from a realization of the utter asininity of the performance. Such humor, if it may be so dignified, is not healthy. Alan Baxter as Strammfest, Edwin Demuth as Schneidekind, and Laura Safford as Annajanska, made the best they could of a bad job, and it wasn't much. Was this play chosen because somebody wanted to put that modernistic back-drop to work? Incidentally, the back-drop was the play's one redeeming feature.

DR. JOHN DENISON '90 ADDRESSES PHIL UNION

L. W. Beals '29 is Elected President of Organization for the Coming Year

"Man should have a shell, a standard by which he abides, whether he wishes to become a monk or a bandit; in short, there should be things a man thinks he must do, if he is to develop a personality and form an individual self," said Dr. John H. Denison '90, of Williamstown, in the initial meeting of the Philosophical Union in Griffin Hall Monday night. Preceding the address, the following 1928-29 officers were elected: President, Beals '29; Vice-president, Faison '29; Secretary and Treasurer, D. Williams '30.

Dr. Denison chose for his subject "The Formation and Transformation of the Self," and based a large part of his talk on observations made during his recent trip to Africa. In his address, he contrasted the development of the self in tribal races with that in modern times, and drew from this his conclusion concerning the necessity of the present-day man having a standard to follow. "Man's thoughts of and ideas about himself govern his behavior, his happiness, and his emotion."

"Throughout history we find man being guided by some sort of a standard, and in pursuance of this standard, and only in pursuance of it, can he form an individual self. Thwarted in other directions, the knight made fighting his standard, the monk made prayer his standard. This shell originated, perhaps, with the African native. From his youth he was imbued with a horror of lust, and the horror was so great as to conquer the passion. In more modern times standards of such rigidity as these are lacking, and should not be lacking if we are to form an individual self."

In the latter part of his address, Dr. Denison attempted to divide man into two classes, the suggestive and the radiative. The man who is a member of the former "class" is one who believes faithfully what he is told; he is essentially the receiver. The radiative type is the class that forms its own conceptions. "Behind each shell we find a what-I-shall-call either miasma or manna. The former puts man in great fear if he breaks generally accepted taboos. The manna corresponds to a sense of duty, in which man thinks himself safe under any condition."

In an open discussion following his address Dr. Denison answered questions raised by the audience, and clarified his address by stating that although man should attempt to be individual, he has different selves superimposed one upon another which converge to broaden and unify his personality.

cept for the space of several yards at the two mile mark when Kelly of Wesleyan spurted into first position. Captain Moore of Williams, who ran most of the race in third place, was passed by his team-mate, Goodbody, on the road leading to Weston Field. Continuing his sprint, Goodbody attempted to overtake the flying Kelly, some 30 yards ahead, but his last minute efforts failed by five yards. The next four positions were won by Moore, E. Reynolds, Chapin, and Suffern of Williams, in the order named, with Knecht, Church, S. Jones, and F. Jones of Williams taking the last four places in the scoring.

Familiarity with the course and a steady pace enabled the Purple harriers to outclass the Red and Black. It was Coach Seeley's opinion that his team, with one exception, were in far better physical condition than in any previous meet this year. The elapsed time, over the slightly shortened course, was especially fast under the bad conditions that prevailed, because of the recent rains. Conditions were such that several of the runners took bad falls, and everyone was splattered with mud, kicked up from the wet fields.

One more "Little Three" championship has been annexed by the Purple, one that has broken Wesleyan's string of victories of three years, and added a decided triumph to "Doc" Seeley's well-earned laurels. With its final race to enter next week, that for the New England Intercollegiate championship, the Varsity will direct its training toward a climactic ending of the most successful season which a Williams cross-country team has experienced in the last four years.

The order of finish of the meet follows: Guernsey (W), Kelly (Wes), Goodbody (W), Moore (W), E. Reynolds (W), tie for sixth between Chapin (W) and Suffern (W), Knecht (Wes), Church (Wes), S. Jones (Wes), F. Jones (Wes). Time: 27m., 34s. Score: Williams 19, Wesleyan 36.

Misleading Statistics

Records that show how many touchdowns a backfield man has made or how much ground he has gained are even worse than useless. They mean nothing whatsoever, since no backfield set ever plays against the same opposition. In addition to this, such records, especially those regarding touchdown makers, have done a lot of harm.

A star back, facing a rough schedule, might make a few touchdowns and yet deserve far more credit than some other back who had scored ten or fifty times as many points.

Black lived up to its reputation, and, although they tried only eight, half of these were successful and instrumental in their scoring. Both sides were comparatively free from penalties, each team losing 25 yards.

Wesleyan Scores Touchdown

Williams received the kickoff and, Brown and Howe started their oftackled smashes and end runs to get two first downs in succession, after which Howe punted over the Wesleyan goal line. Soon, after an exchange of punts, Mills-paugh took one of Howe's boots on the 15-yard line, and twisted his way through a swarm of Williams players to the 45-yard line. Lockwood added eight more yards on two line plays, and Mills-paugh made it first down on a five-yard gain off right tackle. Mills-paugh, who was doing the lion's share of Wesleyan's offensive, pushed through right guard for five more, and two plays later Tetley shot one of his accurate passes to Bagge on the 28-yard line. Mills-paugh and Lockwood were good for eight yards on two plays, and then Tetley on a deceptive pass play sneaked around right end to the three-yard line. Mills-paugh was once again called upon, and he battered through center for the touchdown, and sent the Wesleyan stands into pandemonium. Silloway place-kicked the point.

Brown Ties Score

Throughout the rest of the first period, the two teams battled on practically even terms, with the ball alternating back and forth. Early in the second quarter after Silloway had punted outside on the Williams 48-yard line, the Purple attack started to function. The new lateral pass was tried, and was good for a three-yard gain, through the Brown to Howe combination. Brown then shot a bullet-like heave to the right side of the field, where Williams caught it on the 20-yard line. Wesleyan again was unable to cope with the flying feet of Brown and Howe who executed another lateral, which advanced the pigskin to the five-yard line. The versatile Brown changed his tactics, and shot the center of the line for five yards remaining. Langmaid successfully drop-kicked the point after touchdown.

Tetley Throws Long Pass

Immediately after the kick-off, Wesleyan tried Williams' own game, and Mills-paugh took a lateral and went eighteen yards, but some one had been holding, and he lost the gain and fifteen yards additional. McAllister, Stayman, and Eisner came in to relieve the first string backfield. On the first play, Stayman went around right end to the 20-yard line, and it seemed as if Williams was going to score again. After three short gains, a lateral was tumbled, and Putnam finally recovered with a loss of fifteen yards. The Cardinal and Black were fighting to score again, and, when Chase attempted to punt, the opposing line swept in and blocked the kick on the 38-yard line. The grandstands were motionless, as Tetley poised the ball for a pass. He elected to send it to Mills-paugh who made a beautiful catch, and travelled the fifteen yards to the goal line. Silloway missed a place kick for the extra point.

Williams Takes Lead

During the third period the Williams team began to show its superiority and greater staying power. The Williams attack, centering around Brown and Howe gained power. After getting a punt on the right-hand edge of the field, Howe tried an off-side play and travelled 25 yards before he was hauled down by a group of Wesleyan tacklers. A short pass and slice off tackle brought a first down on the fifteen yard line. Three attempts by Brown and Howe netted nine of the ten yards, but on the fourth down Brown slipped on a run around right end and was thrown for a loss. Soon after, the Purple started another touchdown march, which was not to be denied, and three plays were enough to score the six points necessary to tie the score. Howe plunged off left tackle for a first down, after a Wesleyan fumble had been recovered by Williams. Brown went outside, but after the ball had moved in, the ever threatening Brown-Howe combination executed a successful lateral. In one of the most spectacular plays of the game, Brown held the ball until he was almost downed to draw in the Wesleyan men, and then sent a perfect toss to Howe, who went the rest of the way unmolested. Silence settled over the field as Williams attempted to make the point, which meant the margin of victory. Langmaid took a perfect pass front center and sent a beautiful dropkick high over the bars, and far out of the reach of any Wesleyan players who were coming in to block it.

Purple Adds Two Points

In the last quarter, the Purple offense continued, and, although no touchdowns were scored, Brown and Howe were always threatening. Brown was a nemesis to the Cardinal and Black line, and ripped successive gains of two and four yards. After an exchange of punts, Brown through center for four yards, Howe around right end for three yards, Brown around left end for two yards, Howe off left tackle for three yards,—such was the strength of the Purple backfield, but a penalty stopped this march. Now Wesleyan made its last offensive stand, and Mills-paugh continued his sensational off-tackle plays, to make two first downs in succession. Langmaid intercepted a pass, and three plays by Brown-Howe-Brown bowled over the Cardinal line for another first down.

Howe took the ball and went through right tackle for what looked to be a gain of two or three yards, but keeping on although tackled, he shook himself free, and reversed his field, outrunning and straight-arming the defense until he had streaked across the field and down to the 10-yard line, a gain of more than thirty-five yards.

Another lateral from Brown to Howe brought four of the precious yards, and three more were added through center by Brown. Here a Williams pass failed, and Wesleyan got the ball. After two plays had been fruitless, Silloway went behind his own goal line to kick. The Purple forwards charged with the ball and surrounded Silloway, who was unable to punt, Gailer blocking the ball, which bounced behind the grand stand. Two more points had been scored by Williams, and seemed to assure a victory. Time was about to be called, but Brown and Howe continued to riddle the opposing line. Wesleyan fumbled the one time she had the ball; and was unable to try any scoring plays, which were necessary in the few seconds. As the final whistle blew, the same passing and running combination of Brown and Howe were continuing their devastating work, and reeling off three and four yard gains.

SIDELIGHTS

Of The Wesleyan Game

The first thing that struck us about the Williams-Wesleyan game last Saturday was the perfect football day—crisp, even with snow on the distant hilltops, no sun, and no rain. Perhaps many, particularly the feminine detachment, will claim that it was too cold. Well, maybe it was, but the anticipation of things to come in the evening and things gone down in the afternoon kept us warm at least—so we still think that it was a great football day.

The evening before the game provided a fine proof that Williams spirit has not passed away. The snake dance, the band, the cheering, and the fireworks were things that we have never before seen in this school, and they certainly warmed the cockles of our hearts and sent little circuss-shivers up and down our spines. Also, the speeches of the town merchants, Mr. Bolster, Mr. Bemis, Mr. Prindle and the rest, did much to endear us to this cute little college town of ours.

There are lots of other things that we would like to speak of: the scraps of paper which gave the Williams stands the appearance of Wall Street welcoming a trans-Atlantic flyer, the opponents' cheer of "Wes" and our suggestion of "Will" for the Purple, the improved "roar" from our cheering section, the fine assembly of girls and so forth. But we will only say in closing that we never spent a more contented day in Williamstown than last Saturday.

find out what party he belongs to. You see, Gladstone, Asquith and the rest were all presidents of the Union. That's what gives the organization its prestige.

"The discussions are chiefly political, and take place every Thursday night before an average audience of 200 or 300. First all members are given an opportunity to heckle the officers on the affairs of the Union, and a man's success in office is judged by the quickness with which he can reply. Then comes the organized debate. After this the demand for the floor is so great that those who wish to speak must send written word to the chair. Sometimes after the debate has drawn on for hours the applicants can only be recognized for a minute or two apiece.

"Where are we staying? Why a—up at one of these fraternity houses . . . What? . . . Oh yes, thank you. I ought not let him know that I can't keep these Greek letters straight. They seem to take the place of colleges for you."

And now we are parting outside Dr. Garfield's door. The representative of THE WILLIAMS RECORD grasped Mr. Foot's proffered hand and gave a start. The Englishman smiled and said good night. The representative of THE WILLIAMS RECORD shook off the lump of slushy November snow and in his naked hand. Englishmen will not be interviewed.

GLEE CLUB ANNOUNCES WINTER TOUR PROGRAM

Eleven Concerts Are Scheduled in Long Season—Bill Includes Old Favorites

With a revised and lightened program made up largely of old favorites and Williams songs, the Williams College Musical Clubs will open their season on December 15 with a concert in Albany which will be followed during the Christmas recess by a tour of eight cities in New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts. In addition to this, the Glee Club will sing in the New England Intercollegiate contest at Boston on March 5, and if it wins first or second place in this tournament, at the National Intercollegiate at New York on March 9.

The usual concert during mid-years will be held again this year for the benefit of those present at the house parties. Plans are also being made for a joint concert with the Amherst clubs prior to one of the basketball games with the Sabrinas during the winter. In order that the talent of the club may be the best possible, all those who wish to join it and have not yet had a tryout are asked to arrange for one with Mr. Safford as soon as possible. Freshmen will not be eligible for the Christmas concerts, but in all probability will sing in the intercollegiate tournament in March.

The following article describing the work and plans of the Glee Club has been written for THE RECORD by Mr. Charles L. Safford, who is coaching the organization this year:

HARRIERS TO ENTER NEW ENGLAND MEET

Cross-Country Season Officially Closes With N. E. I. C. A. A. Races at Boston

After the string of dual meets which have been carried off by the Purple harriers with only one defeat, a climax to the season will be provided by the fifteenth annual cross-country meet of the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association, which is being held next Monday at 1.30 p. m. on the Franklin Park Course in Boston. Most of the New England colleges and universities, with the exception of Amherst, Dartmouth, Harvard, and Yale, will be represented.

If the Williams team makes a strong showing in this meet there is a chance that it may enter the championship meet of the I. C. A. A. A. to be held at Van Cortland Park in New York City a week from Monday. Coach Seeley expects that the most powerful opposition the day after tomorrow will be centered among the teams of Bates, Colgate, M. I. T., Maine, and New Hampshire. Last year Williams did not compete, but in the five years previous to 1927 Bates won two meets, and Maine, New Hampshire, and Williams each won one, while last fall New Hampshire won again.

Coach Seeley expects to place the same line-up in action as that which overwhelmed Wesleyan last week-end. The runners are as follows: Captain Moore '29, J. Chapman and E. V. Reynolds '30, and Goodbody, Guernsey, J. Reynolds, and Suffer '31.

Cap and Bells Christmas Play Will Be 'The Pigeon'

Continuing its policy of diversity in productions, Cap and Bells has, after careful consideration, selected Galsworthy's "The Pigeon" for its Christmas presentation. The theme of the play is social criticism and satire, dealing particularly with the dispensing of charities, and is centered about the life of an artist.

Written in 1912, "The Pigeon" is one of Galsworthy's lighter and more popular plays, though not given as often as his better-known "Strife" and "Justice". The first performance will be given in Williamstown on the evening of Thursday, December 20, and the itinerary for the Christmas trip as tentatively drawn up includes visits to several cities in western New York and Ohio, with a probable appearance in Indianapolis, Ind. The play calls for a cast of eight, and tryouts will be held in Jesup Hall the first of next week.

1932 VANQUISHES 1931 IN ANNUAL ROPE PULL

Freshmen Twice Pull Sophomores Into River and Carry Rope up Main Street

After a lapse of a year owing to the flood last November, the time-honored tradition of the Sophomore-Freshmen rope pull was revived last Tuesday afternoon, when the first year men twice dragged their adversaries through the icy waters of the Green River, and then triumphantly carried the rope across the Main Street bridge to the water trough at the corner of Main and Water Streets. According to custom, the victory allowed the first year men to disregard Freshman rules for the remainder of the day, and after a triumphal march down Spring Street, with the bell in Goodrich ringing, the majority put on knickers, walked down Spring Street smoking, and occupied the center seats at the Walden Theatre that evening.

The Freshmen, led by Hoyt '30, mustered in front of Jesup Hall at four o'clock, and after arranging their ranks, soon set out for the scene of the tussle, being followed by the Sophomores, who had gathered before Morgan Hall under the leadership of Ely '30. Continuing to the far side of the river, the men of 1932, by unanimous decision, chose Goldblatt to wade across to their opponents with the rope. After this was done, the first pull took place, with the freshmen immediately pulling the far-outnumbered sophs through the icy water. With only a little more resistance, the second pull resulted in the same fashion.

Following this chilly immersion, the enterprising frosh, outnumbering their adversaries by two to one, made a deadly assault upon the cohorts of 1931, drawn up in triple array across the bridge. The first line of Sophomores, linking arms and meeting the assault by falling forward upon the forward rank of the attackers, succeeded in piling up a formidable wall, thus completely blocking the line of march. However, this was only a delay in the pushing back of the defenders, and the struggling wave soon moved on. Relentless was the steady pull, and the Sophomores fought fiercely back against superior weight. Although utilizing every possible toe-hold, even to the extent of tying one end of the rope to a section of the bridge, and then seeing that part irresistibly torn away, the Sophomores' struggles were all in vain, and after 47 minutes of the battle royal, the Freshmen succeeded in carrying the rope to Water Street, being adjudged victors by the referee, with consequent privileges.

W. C. A. Activities

Meeting under the auspices of the Williams Christian Association, the Freshman Cabinet held its first discussion group of the year in Jesup Hall on Thursday evening. The meeting was attended by about 35 members of the class of 1932, and outlined its plans and aims for the coming year. The next group will be held on Thursday evening, November 22, at 7.30.

The W. C. A. announces with regret that Dr. D. I. Bell will be unable to hold an open meeting for discussion as planned on December 14. Efforts are now being made by the Christian Association to secure a speaker of equal note for that date. Due to an error in the last issue of THE RECORD, the W. C. A. wishes to announce that its financial drive will be held during the week of December 7-13.

PURPLE AND SABRINA SOCCER TEAMS CLASH

Absence of Two Regulars Hurts Chances for Win; Williams Still Undefeated

In closing the most successful season ever experienced by a Williams soccer team, the Purple combination, suffering the loss of two regular forwards, faces a formidable Amherst eleven at Amherst today. Coach Bullock's charges are thus far undefeated, having won their first three games and secured ties in the last two, but the odds, however small, must rest with the Purple and White, who have gone through a successful schedule and who have as yet not tasted defeat by a Williams soccer team.

The first casualties of the year occurred last week in the hard-fought Wesleyan game, when Phelps and McKittick, outside right and inside left respectively, received rather severe injuries. Although they will accompany the team to Amherst, it is not likely that they will play in the game. Babize and J. Willmott, both of whom have had varsity experience this year, will substitute for the injured players. The rest of the team will remain the same.

The Varsity scrimmaged with the freshman team last Monday and went through regular drill the following three days, a specially long session being held Thursday afternoon. Yesterday the team was given a rest and early today it leaves by bus for Amherst. An unusually large number of substitutes will accompany the team, and every possible effort will be made to snatch victory from the Lord Jeffs this year, as the Purple chances are probably brighter now than at any time since soccer relations were first established between the two colleges a few years ago.

The Sabrinas have a well-developed team this year, which is capable of playing a fast, spectacular game. Captain Goodwin and Felt have been instrumental in rolling up large scores in recent contests, while the defensive work of Roundy, Sun, Lewis, and Schwartzwald in goal, has been particularly noteworthy. The calibre of the Williams backs will be severely tested today and the forward line will have to show its best attack to press through a powerful defense.

Comparative scores indicate a slight advantage for Amherst. Harvard, who tied Williams at 1-1, was downed by a 2-1 score, while R. P. I., whom the Purple barely defeated, was swamped by the Lord Jeffs, 6-0. In the "Little Three" contests so far, Wesleyan defeated Amherst, 4-3, but then battled with Williams last week to a 1-1 tie. In addition to these games, Amherst won from Clark in the opening game, 4-2, and later tied Brown, 1-1.

1932 FOOTBALL TEAM PLAYS AMHERST TODAY

Comparative Scores Give Williams A Slight Edge Over Sabrina Frosh

Facing their last opponents of the year the 1932 football team will engage in the annual freshman contest between Amherst and Williams this morning at 11.30 on Pratt Field, Amherst. Comparative scores seem to indicate that the Williams team has a slight edge on the "dope", but the Amherst squad has been rapidly improving and at the present time is not handicapped by the injuries which earlier in the season kept them from displaying their best form.

Although tied, 0-0, by a comparatively weak team from Williston Academy, the Purple and White yearlings recovered the following week-end to overcome Deerfield, 7-0. The best form of the year was shown in the Wesleyan game which the Sabrinas took 20-0, due mainly to the good playing of Stelzer, Plunkett, and Pierce, who made large holes in the Red and Black line and paved the way for the touchdowns which followed. Combining straight, hard football with tricky reverses and passes, the Amherst freshmen present a formidable aggregation.

The Williams line-up will probably be the same that has been used throughout the season. Although the team was not very successful against the Wesleyan freshmen, their incompetence can be partly accounted for by the fact that Cole field was very wet and sticky. With a dry field the squad should make a better showing at Amherst. Captain Fowle has improved his passing and Foehl and Patterson are both becoming adept on the receiving end. The line has been receiving

Eight Chosen for Debates

Mark Harris '29, President of the Adelphe Union, has announced that eight men have been chosen by the trials held in Jesup Hall last Wednesday afternoon to represent Williams in the annual Hamilton contest, which will take place November 26, and in the dual League debate against Yale and Brown on December eighth. Stern '29, and Gilbert and Park '30, will travel to Clinton to take the negative of the question: "Resolved, That this house deprecates the effect of advertising on modern life." While Erskine '30 and Jenks '31 are upholding the affirmative on: "Resolved, That the material prosperity of the United States is detrimental to its morals" against Yale here, Straw '30 and Oxtoby '31 will take the negative view of this same subject when they meet Brown at Providence.

STARS TO DO BATTLE

Neither Line Threatens a Serious Obstacle to Stellar Frolics of Backfield

Stiffer than the cohorts of Ephraim may expect is the welcome which awaits them on Pratt Field this afternoon. Groskloss for Howe, Heisey for Brown, Tener for Laugmaid, line for line, the Sabrinas will present a ship-shape aggregation thoroughly qualified to subject to the final test of fire the strongest bid which Williams has made for the Little Three championship within the memory of the present undergraduate generation.

Some light is thrown upon the balance of power within the Amherst outfit by the fact that the Sabrinas were outnumbered two to one in first downs by Hamilton and yet beat their opponents 19-0; and again were outdone six to one by M. A. C., whom they nevertheless defeated 13-0. The activities of the Amherst line, even more than in the case of Williams, have been limited during the season to putting up a stubborn and effective defense in a pinch.

It follows that Amherst, again like Williams, enters the big game backed by a successful season thanks to quite spectacular work from the backfield. The name of Groskloss yields nothing to those of Howe, Brown, or Laugmaid in the invariability of appearance in headlines. Spectators remember that 45-yard run for a touchdown against Haverford, the 84-yard marathon against M. A. C., not to mention the 75-yard dash which brought the stands to their feet in the first Little Three game, and then 45 yards more to add to the overwhelming defeat of Trinity last Saturday.

Groskloss is not without support among his colleagues. Tener to it-makes-very-little-difference-whom has proved an effective part in the aerial attack to which goes a large share of the credit for Amherst victories. Wilson, punter, Heisey, plunging back, also belong in the "Watch These Numbers" column. A wealth of powerful reserve men for the backfield positions adds to the strength of the Sabrina attack. Amherst and Williams will meet with very much the same type of team in every department.

There are some grounds for comparing the success of these birds of a feather in their previous encounters of the season. If at first we seek an unweighted index number, we find that the total Amherst score is 236 per cent of that of her opponents, while the similar figure for Williams is only 210. If we prefer to consider only the games with common adversaries, Middlebury, Bowdoin, and Wesleyan, the figures are 115 for Amherst and 339 for Williams.

SONG OF SONGS

Come sing our marching song to Williams, to Williams, to Williams. Sing it so they can hear it over at Amherst. Never mind the key: it's the noise, the roar, that counts. And let the band blow its brass and beat its drums. What is a marching song without a band?

Sing as we march along from Williams, from Williams, from Williams. . . . all the way from Williams to Amherst. As in those rugged days of tremendous migrations, may the cohorts of Ephraim march singing over the mountains, into the camp of the enemy. March in busses, in Chryslers, in airplanes, on foot, but get there.

We will rally on Pratt Field. . . . and what a beautiful spot for a rally! Right on the sidelines, and then up and down the gridiron, winding through the goal-posts, dancing into town. Cheering, yelling, bellowing. Now is the time for all good men to go crazy.

We will make our rivals yield. Are they forgetting how to yield? Even our best friends must be reminded of this graceful art from time to time. We have done all the yielding since 1925. It's Amherst's turn.

Victory shall crown the shield of Williams, of Williams, of Williams.

STILL MORE ROPE PULLS

To make a battle cry out of a college yell, to make a marching song out of chamber music, is too much to ask of a yell leader, a band, or even a triumphant football team. It takes a rope pull. After the Wesleyan victory the old Goodrich bell rang out as merrily as ever you could ask; the gentlemen of Williams were glad—and went on their accustomed ways in peace and quiet. After the Freshman victory the conquering upstarts rolled up the hill and into their dorms singing, singing with a verve, singing college songs as one has a vague idea that college songs were meant to be sung. And Junior Advisors, looking up from their books with a wistful smile, bethought themselves of the days of their youth when they too might have sung as Freshmen sing.

Such was the camp of the victors; in battle there are always the losers and the wounded. That the rope pull had its casualty list we sincerely regret. It casts its shadow on the event. That that casualty list will mean the end of rope pulls we proudly deny. It would cast a shadow on us. The injuries were few compared with the injuries in the number of football games large enough to include an equal number of participants. To end rope pulls without ending football would be to declare that we prefer to absorb our sport through our eyes and emanate our sportsmanship through our mouths than to play our own game and take the sporting chances that go with it.

But if the casualties are not necessary? There is a certain elan in getting one's head pounded into something—but there's nothing noble about getting it pounded into a concrete bridge. Even the Roman gladiators refer to the blood and sands of the arena, and we do not ask that our gridiron warriors perform on a pavement, though it would no doubt be much more amusing. Let us have more rope pulls, but never another on the Green River bridge.

COMMUNICATION

Although communications may be published unsigned if so requested, the name of the writer must in every case be submitted to the editor. The Board assumes no responsibility, however, for the facts as stated nor for the opinions expressed in this department.

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

Has it ever occurred to anyone connected with the college that the air in Jesup Hall is apt to get close and stuffy when the windows are all closed and the hall is filled? The question arises because I noticed at the Little Theatre performance last Friday evening that in addition to the general stuffiness a number of the undergraduates smoked, and still further added to the discomfort. I do not speak on my own account, as smoke is not disagreeable to me. But when the hall is half-filled with ladies who have paid their way to come in, it seems to me that courtesy would dictate that smoking should not be done. As a purely college function which ladies attend out of interest and pay no admission fee, the case, of course, is different. Hoping that in future performances, at which the public pays an entrance fee, the habit of smoking in the auditorium may be abandoned, I am,

Yours truly,
J. Franklin Carter.

ALUMNI COLUMN

(The following article is reprinted from the monthly Bookshelf of the Harvard Crimson. It was written by James P. Baxter, 3rd. '14, now an Assistant Professor of History at Harvard University).
The Intimate Papers of Colonel House. Arranged as a Narrative by Charles Seymour. Volume 3. Into the World War. Volume 4. The Ending of the War. 2 vols. Houghton Mifflin Co., New York. $10.

By James P. Baxter III

These two volumes of the papers of Colonel House surpass in interest and importance even the two published in 1926. With the entry of the United States into the War the Colonel became the channel of unofficial communication between the governments of the associated powers and President Wilson. By a private telephone connecting the State Department with his study in New York or Magnolia, Colonel House communicated suggestions and advice to President and Cabinet. To him rather than to the accredited diplomats turned Allied statesmen who wished Wilson's ear. "Balfour, speaking for the British Government, could get an answer from President Wilson, if necessary, within a few hours," by cabling directly to Colonel House in New York in a special British Government code.

On every phase of American participation in making war and peace these absorbing volumes throw fresh light. The tactful Texan organized. The Inquiry, headed the first American War Mission, sat on the Supreme War Council with the Prime Ministers of Great Britain, France and Italy, and served on the American Peace Commission. In the drafting of many of Wilson's great addresses he was consulted. The cautious student, however, will await the further publication of Wilson's papers before seeking to evaluate the Colonel's influence. No fresh light is thrown on their separation, which remains to Colonel House "a tragic mystery . . . that now can never be dispelled, for its explanation lies buried with him."

Despite President Wilson's testimony that he had no knowledge of the secret treaties prior to the peace conference, Professor Seymour concludes "that Mr. Balfour and Colonel House discussed the secret treaties, and that in the conference with President Wilson which followed 'exactly the same ground was covered.' The question of the Far East was not raised and there is nothing to show that either Colonel House or the President knew anything of the understanding between the Allies and Japan regarding Shantung." The Colonel looked forward to the peace conference "as a good opportunity which may be lost because of the grasping, selfish interests, ever ready to use such occasions for their own and their country's aggrandizement. . . ." With regard to American loans to the associated powers, he wrote to the President in August, 1917, that "as long as we have money to lend, those wishing to borrow will be agreeable, but when the bottom of the barrel is reached, it may be a different story."

Cross Country Run Is Won by Commons Club

With five of its runners among the first fifteen to finish, the Commons Club was again victor in the annual interfraternity cross-country run held last Wednesday afternoon over the two-mile course. Lewis '31 took first place for the Club by a wide margin in the remarkably good time of 13 minutes 16.4 seconds, followed by Strother '30 of Kappa Alpha and D. Meiklejohn '31 of the Commons Club.

Favored by fair weather, the cross-country run marked the successful completion of the fall series of intramural activities. Although the 96 contestants were pretty well strung out at the finish, there was no lack of competition among the groups of runners on the stretch, and the judges were frequently entertained by the well known hand-in-hand finish. Taking second and fourth places, the Kappa Alpha team was a strong second, while Delta Phi and Phi Delta Theta turned in the next two lowest scores. Following is the order in which the first twenty men crossed the line:

Lewis '31, Commons; Strother '30, Kappa Alpha; D. Meiklejohn '31, Commons; Angell '30, Kappa Alpha; Jacobs '31, Delta Phi; Bodenstein, Commons; Doscher '31, Phi Gamma Delta; Searl '32, Psi Upsilon; Patterson '32, Phi Gamma Delta; J. Shoaff '29, Chi Psi; Sessions '31, Delta Upsilon; Sparks '29, Delta Phi; Newman '32, Zeta Psi; Lawson '32, Commons; Oughton '32, Commons; Hobson '32, Delta Upsilon; Reeves '30, Phi Delta Theta; Goodwin '32, Kappa Alpha; Haeffner '31, Theta Delta Chi; Vaill '32, Phi Delta Theta.

The scores of the houses are as follows:

House	Places	Score
Commons	1, 3, 6, 14, 15	39
Kappa Alpha	2, 4, 18, 22, 24	70
Delta Phi	5, 12, 32, 44, 50	143

CHILDE HERALD AGAIN

Childe Herald ventures again to appear on the printed page! Due to eight acknowledged upsets last week, only two of the ten forecast games were correct, but nothing daunted, he predicts once more. If the scores given below do not prove absolutely correct, he promises that henceforth he will limit his predictions to the scores of the previous week's games. Here he stands a fair chance of getting the majority right. Anyway—these are the scores for Saturday's matches:

BELLEROSE ATTENDS
HOCKEY CONFERENCEPenn Admitted to Intercollegiate Hockey Association; Making
Tenth College

Professor L. M. Bellerose, coach of the Varsity Hockey team, was the representative of Williams College at the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Ice Hockey Association of America, held on November 4 in the auditorium of the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York City. With representatives of some of the strongest colleges in the country present, questions of membership, rules, and the promotion of hockey in the colleges were considered.

The Association has announced the election to membership of the University of Pennsylvania bringing the number of colleges affiliated to ten: Boston College, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Hamilton, Harvard, Princeton, Williams, Yale and Penn. Announcements have also been made that the Western colleges have adopted the hockey playing rules of the Eastern colleges and that Spaulding this year will publish a Hockey Handbook containing the playing rules of the Association. The Association adopted one new rule: "In case of a foul committed by a team in defending its own goal, the referee is not to interfere until the play by the attacking team is completed in which case the attacking team is not deprived of a chance to score by an opponent's foul. Where no point is scored and the defending team secures the puck, the face-off is to take place on the zone-line".

In order to promote more interest in Hockey, the Intercollegiate Ice Hockey Association heard and considered the suggestion that a plan be devised by which the highest ranking college hockey team in the country be considered as a possible representative of the United States in future Olympic Hockey competitions. In case of objection to this plan, it was also suggested that a Committee be appointed to choose an All-American Hockey team as possible contenders, the selection of such a team to take place during the year of the Olympics. Coach Bellerose stated, when interviewed on the meeting, that this last point was perhaps of the greatest significance in that it showed the rapidly increasing interest in the game of hockey and that the thought of Olympic competition would create still more enthusiasm in the colleges.

Statistics Show Change
in Freshman Distribution

Following the general trend of the years immediately past, the geographical distribution of the class of 1932 has shown a decided decrease in the percentage from New England, and a decided proportional increase in the enrollment from the Atlantic and Central states, as well as from the South, a region which formerly sent almost no students to Williams or other New England colleges. The registration this year is the largest in the history of the college, and includes men from twenty-seven states, showing a range from Vermont to California, and representing the District of Columbia, Canada, and France.

The enrollment of 69 men from New York again establishes the Empire State as the geographical center of Williams students, and, while Massachusetts ranked second with 40. The New England total, however, decreased, with only eight men coming from the other near-by states. On the other hand, the Central states of Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, and Indiana contributed more than 20% of the enrollment, increasing by one fourth the figure established over the last 28 years, while the South sent three times its usual quota. The individual leaders after New York and Massachusetts were Illinois with 19, New Jersey with 17, Ohio and Pennsylvania with 14.

TRUSTEES AUTHORIZE INCREASE IN SALARIES

Survey Shows that Salaries Have Hardly Kept Pace With Rise
In Living Costs

According to an announcement in the recently published administrative number of the Williams College Bulletin, the board of trustees has authorized an increase of $1,000 to the salaries of members of the college faculty. The new salaries, which are scheduled to go into effect not later than the year 1930, will now be, for full professors, $6,000 a year, associate professors $5,000, assistant professors $4,500, and instructors $3,000.

The president of the board of trustees, in an explanation of this recent action, made the following remarks: "The maximum salaries of members of the faculty have hardly more than kept pace with the increased cost of living. During the high peak of prices in 1921 and 1922, the purchasing power of the $5,000 maximum paid to our professors was less than the purchasing power of the $3,000 paid 20 years ago."

Further the report goes on to show how the special committee of the board, appointed to consider the proposed increase, obtained statistics about the general cost of living, stating that "One of the most informing reports laid before the committee was the cost of uncooked food furnished to guests and members of the household of the Williams Inn. While the cost per person of food furnished at the Inn is much in excess of the cost in a private family, the per cent increases and decreases are comparable to those of a private family". The statistics thus gathered show that whereas a meal for a guest in January, 1913, cost $2.66 uncooked, the same meal, in 1927, cost $5.72. Where in June, 1913, a guest meal cost $.273, in June, 1927, it cost $5.72. This same general proportion holds true throughout the year.

Lauds Aims of Small New England College

In an article recently published in the current press, Dr. W. H. P. Fiance, retiring head of Brown University, lauds the small New England liberal college as an institution with a brilliant future, and which is no way ready to retire in favor of the larger universities. Dr. Fiance has been in office longer than any living college president and holds degrees from almost a dozen colleges and universities throughout the country.

He declares that, "the New England college which has largely moulded the education of America is not ready to retire. It is destined to play a steadily increasing part in shaping American ideals. It can never try to compete in numbers or diversified departments with the great state universities and their amazing growth. But in quality of campus life, in noble memories and traditions, in intimacy of sympathetic contact, in exaltation of personality over mechanism, and in perception of moral and religious values our New England colleges are indispensable to all the future. They must be true to their founders and their ideals, and decline to be a miscellaneous horde of raw youth or a mere bundle of lecture courses on every subject under heaven."

"It would be easy for the New England college to lose its birthright and simply aim to meet the changing demands of the passing hour. It might easily dissolve its liberal aim into a congeries of technical, vocational, and professional courses. But that would be to lose its soul. It has hitherto aimed to make the young man or woman a citizen of the world, at home in ancient or modern civilization, and with not only a knowledge of facts but of sense values. The little college among the hills, which puts the eternal values above the memorizing of facts and formulas, may be doing far more to shape the future of America than some institution with a thousand "courses" in which all allusion to the unseen is necessarily taboo.

"We need personality more than any machinery. We need no quizzes and grades and keys and diplomas, so much as the vitalizing contact of ripened, broadened minds with youth at the receptive age. Our eastern colleges need not so much more offices and committees, more secretaries and stenographers; but they need the supreme essential—the vitalizing contact of persons. In Longfellow's diary is a significant entry: 'Did poorly in class today, but in the afternoon went for a walk with Felton.' To walk with Felton—or any other famous scholar—is the essence of education in the future as in the past."

Next 'Graphic' Issue Is Balanced in Contents

Several poetical selections by Lakin '32 and Wheeler '31, and short stories by Armstrong '30 and Prescott '30 are featured in the November Graphic which will appear in about a week. This, the second issue of the year, shows a pleasing balance between rhyme and reason, between light humor and weighty logic.

Fraternalities are the topic of discussion in the editorial, and another subject of immediate college interest is aired in Gibson's article on "Honor Sections". "Revival" by Wilson '30 deals with the revival meeting spirit in an amusing manner, while Baxter '30 continues his serio-comic treatment in "Reason's Triumph" and "Tell Me Not". A final bit of poetry, "A Tree Dying" is contributed by Armstrong '30.

INTERESTING RELICS FOUND IN DORMITORY

Haviland '29 Unearths Valuable and Historic Books And Prints
in Berkshire Hall

Browsing through some rubbish heaped in a corner of Berkshire Hall, the day before college opened this fall, J. Haviland '29, in search of decorations for the walls of Currier Hall, unearthed some interesting, as well as valuable, relics of the early days of Williams College. Two years ago Haviland discovered a picture of Nathan Jackson, which is now hanging in President Garfield's office, and this find led to the unusual discoveries made this fall, including some interesting prints of Williams, made in the early nineteenth century, and some valuable relics formerly in the museum of the old Jackson Hall.

Perhaps the most extraordinary relic was a copy of the New Testament, procured in Serb in the village of Bitlis, Turkey, written in Estrangelo-Syriac characters on vellum, and presented to Williams in 1895 by A. N. Andrews, '61. The book is said to be over 1,000 years old, and is bound in wood covered with leather. Other valuable finds included oriental sacred books, Siamese manuscripts, and whole sets of domestic implements from the Incas in South America. In the collection there was also a large number of Maoris weapons, including a wooden sword edged with sharks' teeth, wooden and metal spears, and various sorts of knives and hatchets.

Among the articles found relating to the early history of Williams were a letter written by Ephraim Williams and photographic copies of all his extant documents, the originals of which are in the college library; an original copy of "The Mountains" and a sword belonging to Colonel Williams; two old lithographs, one in 1829, and the other in 1849, showing some of the earlier college buildings, and an old map of Williamstown. These documents and pictures are now hanging in Currier Hall, along with a valuable old map of Tokio, made in 1860, just a few years after Japan was opened to foreigners. It was sent to Williams by a missionary, one of the first to reach Japan, and a Williams graduate.

All the articles found were originally part of the museum in Jackson Hall, which was destroyed in 1906 to be replaced by Berkshire Hall, and most of them were presented to the college by missionaries who had graduated from Williams. The photographic copies of Ephraim Williams' documents were given to the college by General Pew, Commander of the Williams S. A. T. C. during the war, and author of the book, "Ephraim Williams—A Soldier" in the writing of which he used the documents.

Jackson Hall was given to the college by Nathan Jackson, a philanthropist of the last century, who also donated the present president's house as well as a scholarship. When the building was torn down in 1906 many of the relics contained in its museum were evidently carelessly thrown aside, and have lain hidden in rubbish for over 20 years.

NOTED AUTHORITIES TO ADDRESS FORUM

Poets, Editors, Criminologists, and Foreign Leaders Will Speak
During Winter

Two criminologists, an anti-Fascist, two editors, an authority on Russia, and an art professor will lecture in Williamstown during the coming winter, according to partial plans recently announced by the Williams Forum. The schedule, as thus far arranged by Higginbotham '29, president of the organization, includes talks by such noted authorities as William Seaver Woods, editor of the Literary Digest, Max Eastman, Williams 1905, poet and psychologist, Professor Gaetano Salvemini, Italian liberal, Sir Bernard Pares, student of modern Russia, and Alpheus Geer, founder of the Marshall-Stillman movement for criminal reform. Addresses by a number of other speakers will complete the program, among those with which final arrangements have not yet been completed being Stephen Leacock, Mme. Halide Edib, Turkish feminist, and Professor Frank J. Mather of Princeton.

During the coming winter, the Forum will endeavor, as far as possible, to procure a lecture by a prominent speaker for each Sunday evening. As in previous years, each meeting will be open for questions and discussion after the principal address. The list of the six speakers who have thus far agreed to be present, with the probable dates of their appearance here, follows: Max Eastman, December 2; Amos O. Squire, December 9; William Seaver Woods, January 12; Professor Salvemini, January 20; Sir Bernard Pares, February 17; Alpheus Geer, March 21.

Max Eastman, besides having written a number of popular lyrical poems, distinguished himself prior to the war by his editorship of The Masses and The Liberator, socialist publications. He spent a number of years in Russia after the war studying the Communist movement, and has often lectured on the topic "The Russian Soul and the Bolshevik". His talk on "The Exact Science of Cracking Jokes" was described by President Wilson as "the most delightful combination of thought and humor I have ever listened to."

Although now Medical Examiner of Westchester County, New York, Dr. Amos O. Squire was for many years House Physician of Sing Sing Prison, and has frequently lectured on prison life and reform. Mme. Halide Edib, one of the leaders in woman suffragist movement in Turkey, will be remembered as having addressed the Institute of Politics last summer on modern Turkish problems. An author, she is now in voluntary exile from Turkey because of disagreement with Kemal Pasha.

Mr. Woods, who appears here January 12, is a graduate of Wesleyan. He has been with the staff of The Literary Digest for over thirty years, becoming editor in 1905. During that time he has become an expert analyst of current events and the reactions that follow them. In his lectures he deals not only with contemporary happenings, but with modern American psychology, the American social and political outlook, and the new democratic spirit in Europe.

A lecturer prepared to make his points in any one of three languages, Professor Gaetano Salvemini, Italian Liberal and Anti-Fascist, will speak here on January 20. He has been professor of modern history at the Universities of Messina, Pisa, and Florence, and was for two years a member of the Italian Parliament. He was arrested in 1925 for alleged attacks on Fascism in a newspaper, but was later pardoned. He is the author of numerous books and articles on history, sociology, education, and politics.

Sir Bernard Pares, Director of the school of Slavonic Studies at the University of London, has spent a considerable part of his life in Russia. During the years 1901 to 1919 he knew most of the political leaders in the country, except for the Bolsheviks, and frequently attended sittings of the Duma. From the end of 1914 to the spring of 1917 he was with the Russian Army, and saw the early months of the Red Revolution. He is editor of the Russia Review and the Slavonic Review, and has written a number of books, including Russia and Reform and Day by Day with the Russian Army.

A graduate of Williams in the class of 1889, Professor Mather has distinguished himself as a teacher of art and archaeology at Princeton, and author of works on painting which are now used as textbooks. Alpheus Geer, criminologist, aroused considerable interest in his subject when he spoke at Williams two years ago, and his lecture next March should be well attended.

tended. His stories of the leaders of the underworld and his description of the Marshall-Stillman foundation for reforming criminals are still remembered here.

A competition, open to sophomores, for the position of Secretary-Treasurer of The Forum, will begin next week. The winner will be secretary-treasurer in his junior year and president the year following, while the winner of second place will in his senior year be vice-president of the organization.

WRECKERS DISPOSE OF OLD GYMNASIUM

Antique Structure Was Second in Gym Genealogy; Built in 1859
by Student Labor

Another of Williams' oldest and proudest landmarks has gone the way of all wood and stone. The tiny gymnasium which has stood at the head of Spring Street since 1859, and has been hidden for almost a generation between Smith's Book-store and the grey walls of the newer Lasell Gymnasium, was cleared away to the last stone this fall, when the collapse of two of its walls made necessary its destruction.

In 1858 the first gymnasium of Williams College, one of the first buildings of its kind in the country, was burned to the ground on the plot of ground now occupied by the board track in the rear of Spring Street. Faced by the necessity of replacing their gymnasium, the Williams students, led by Henry Hopkins '58, began a vigorous campaign for funds which finally resulted in the erection of a small, stone-covered building on the East side of Spring Street. Mark Hopkins was then president of the College, and his son, the leader of the band of undergraduates who secured the funds and built the gymnasium with their own hands, also became one of the presidents of Williams, from 1902 to 1908.

The second gymnasium served its athletic purposes in live short years, when old Goodrich Hall replaced it as the College gym. Later the Chadbourne gymnasium was built, and after its destruction in the storm of 1883, the permanent structure donated by Lasell was reared alongside its outgrown predecessor.

From then on the building was used as the hose-room for the College Fire Brigade, until it was discovered after the addition of the new wing of the gymnasium this spring, that two of its walls were on the point of collapse. The space that it has occupied for 70 years will be used by the College as the site for a further addition to the present gymnasium.

Glee Club Announces Winter Tour Program

The Glee Club is doing very well on a schedule of two full evening rehearsals per week. Beginning next week, a series of supplementary rehearsals will be held in the late afternoon taking each part, 1st tenor, 2nd tenor, etc., in order to perfect the drill in notes and general details. The members are interested in their work and there is every indication of a successful season. It will be the duty of those in charge to point for these things viz.: the Christmas trip and the competition of the College Glee Clubs which will take place in March 1929.

Like many other campus activities, the matter of accomplishing a good result in the Glee Clubs becomes involved in the network of enterprises, and there are times

FRESHMAN RULES ARE SIMPLIFIED BY COUNCIL

All-Campus Committee Approves Changes, Abolishing Four of Present Rules

Following is the report of the All-Campus Committee on Freshman Rules, with the revised list of regulations which were adopted last Thursday evening and which go into effect immediately.

"In attacking the question of Freshman regulations and, in general, the body of traditions which has always centered around the relationship of the incoming class to the rest of the College, the committee has endeavored to do three things: (1) to keep in mind the fact that the sooner an incoming class is assimilated into the rest of the College, the better for all concerned, and that the attainment of college unity is far more valuable than the encouragement of petty class rivalries; (2) to examine each regulation or tradition with an eye to its objective value, to weigh its advantages and disadvantages, and to pass judgment on it accordingly; (3) not only to advise the total abolition or continuance of certain of the regulations, but to criticize them constructively, making the resulting suggestions for change. In other words, our purpose is to retain what is good and do away with what is obviously valueless in what now amounts to a singularly purposeless and puerile set of arbitrary rules of conduct."

Following is the revised set of rules to go into effect immediately:

Rule 1: Freshmen must never appear on the street coatless until after the spring recess; freshmen must wear the regulation hat throughout the year in Williamstown.

Rule 2: Freshmen must not smoke on the street at any time of the year.

Rule 3: Freshmen must occupy seats in the gallery at College meetings and smokers in Jesup Hall.

Rule 4: Freshmen must not wear preparatory school insignia on caps or sweaters.

Rule 5: Only Seniors may sit on the Lab fence.

Rule 6: Freshmen must not wear leather or fur coats in Williamstown.

Rule 7: Freshmen must not wear knickerbockers or army breeches until after the spring recess. Freshmen and sophomores must not wear corduroys or moleskin trousers.

Rule 8: Freshmen must not sit in the center section of Walden's theatre unless accompanied by an upperclassman.

Rule 9: Freshmen must not walk on any grass.

Since the rules concerning upperclass precedence and the leading of cheers have been omitted, the All-Campus Committee submits the following suggestions to be appended to the above list of regulations:

"Reasonable deference must be shown by freshmen about the college to upperclassmen.

"Although the freshmen are not prohibited from leading 'The Mountains', warning is made against its vulgarization, since it virtually amounts to the College hymn."

Sabrina Promises Strenuous Welcome

Williams. Williams had an edge on every score. Nevertheless the statistical standings of the traditional rivals are so close that no institution has found its way between by defeating one and losing to the other.

Both teams will start with the same line-ups that have borne the brunt of their recent victories. Coach Caldwell, feeling that football of the sort displayed last Saturday against Wesleyan will not win the Amherst game, has conducted a rather stiff week's practice, for the most part in secret. The predominance of passes appears as a possible key to Saturday's strategy, especially in view of the coincidence that Coach White, too, emphasized passing and passing defense in the last scrimmage on the other side of the hills.

In comparing the showings made by Williams and Amherst against Wesleyan the numerical scores are not enough. Particularly in the case of the Amherst-Wesleyan 20-20 tie, figures are apt to be misleading. Referring to the game as it was played, one finds the lead shifting back and forth with the alternate success of the plunging of the Amherst backs or the accurate passing attack of the Cardinal and Black, until in the last minutes, with Amherst holding a seven point advantage, Wesleyan recovered a fumble to tie the score. To the spectators of last Saturday who remember the lead-like tackling of the Wesleyan players, the steady march of the Sabrinas, not to mention Groszkloss' 75-yard feat, closely followed by 51 yards torn off by Warren, will not be without significance.

The probable line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS		AMHERST

"Cheer while you lunch" will be the motto of all alumni who attend the annual Williams-Amherst Football Luncheon today at the Hotel Alexandria in Los Angeles. A large electric score-board will be placed so as to provide the diners with a play-by-play picture of the annual game, and, due to the difference in time on the Pacific Coast, festivities will commence in Los Angeles at 11.00 a. m.

SOCCER TEAM HANDS
AMHERST DEFEAT, 4-2

Sabrinus Outplayed and Outfought as Purple Conquers Rivals for First Time

DECISIVE VICTORY SCORED

Captain Christie Tallies Twice for Winners; Thoms and Bright
Each Add Point

Completely outplaying and outfought an Amherst team that was forced to maintain a continual, and often ineffective, defensive, the Williams soccer team swept everything before it to score a glorious, if somewhat unexpected, victory over the bewildered Sabrinus at Amherst last Saturday morning. The Purple win was the first ever secured over the traditional rivals, and with it goes not only a tie with Wesleyan for first place honors in the 'Little Three', but also the completion of the season without a defeat.

The hard drilling of the Williams players all season bore its richest fruit in this final and most important game, when the whole team throughout the contest worked with machine-like precision, co-ordinating well in every part. Heretofore, the brunt of the game has been mostly borne by the backs, who were both the defense and offense of the team; but against Amherst the forwards ran rings around the Amherst defense and worked together in fine style. Superior passwork and ability to hold on to the ball enabled the Williams team to press their attacks, while Amherst was able to threaten only a very few times during the game.

The success of the Purple was due to the fine teamwork manifested continually, though some of the individuals both on the offense and defense were particularly responsible for the victory. S. Willmott played a sterling game in goal and was ably supported in defending it by Sherman, who consistently snared attempts of the Sabrina forward's to break through the secondary defense and score. Bright played his usual clever game at center half and was largely instrumental in supplying the forwards with a constant use of the ball. In the forward line, Captain Christie was the most dangerous from an Amherst standpoint, and succeeded in scoring two of Williams' four tallies. Captain Goodwin of Amherst was probably the greatest asset to his team, tallying a goal from a penalty.

The game opened with rather cautious playing by both teams, each trying to perfect its passing game. Within five minutes of the start, Thoms received the ball near the Amherst goal and shot it through for the first score. Although the

Score Is 6 to 2

Avenging the crushing defeat of the Williams yearling team last year, the 1932 eleven defeated the Amherst Freshmen at Amherst Saturday by the score of 6-2 to annex the 1932 "Little Three" championship as the climax of an undefeated season. After a safety had sent Amherst into the lead during the opening minutes of play, the Williams Freshmen began a march down the field to score at the beginning of the second quarter on a pass from Captain Fowle to Foehl.

The Jeffmen started the first period very impressively. After carrying the kick-off back to the 40-yard line, Depasqua, alternating with Stelzer, plunged and passed his way far into Williams territory only to lose the ball on a fumble. However, on a hidden ball play which was broken up by Amherst, Williams fumbled and Pierce kicked outside close to the Williams goal line. When Fowle attempted to kick from behind his own goal posts, a bad pass from center went over his head and Amherst scored a safety. Tuttle kicked off from the 20-yard line and Amherst punted. On second down, Fowle took the ball around end to run 50 yards to the opponent's 25-yard line. After a series of plunges, Fowle passed 15 yards to Foehl who crossed the line for the only touchdown of the game.

The second half of the game found the Amherst backs running over, through and

To the better backfield in a battle of backfields belongs the credit for an unquestionable Williams triumph, but to Amherst, whose eager intentions ran away with her football, 9,000 spectators are indebted for the entertainment of a 40-15 score on Pratt Field last Saturday.

For 13-9 would have been the final count had it not been for the 15 yard penalties, some unfortunately misplaced passes, and the scintillating exchange of fumbles, all of which rendered the contest a ravishing dream or a nightmare to the scions of a traditional rivalry, if somewhat less enthralling to a connoisseur of the sport. Amherst led 16-15 in the matter of first downs, and two of Williams' 15 were penalties. Likewise, the Sabrinus equaled their conquerors at 12 all in passes completed, while what happened to those that failed had a large part in sealing their fate.

Langmaid and Groskloss appeared to be marked men with a price on their heads. They displayed all the potentialities for which they are reputed, but 11 men to one proved to be enough to check any colossal outbreaks. Amherst, however, found herself with too much to watch, and Brown, Howe, Stayman, and Putnam ran as wild as ever. Incidentally, the open field work of Putnam was one of the outstanding features of the game, so far as technique is concerned. The concentration of the defense upon reputed stars left some of the more spectacular plays to come from unexpected sources, e.g., Lasell's 70-yard hike for the fourth touchdown.

The first of Amherst's two serious bids for fame came at the close of the first half. Here broke loose a storm of eight consecutive passes, five of which were completed, all of which resulted in a string of five first downs and brought the ball to the Williams four-yard line before the period came to an end. But in eliminating the rather fortuitous events of the game to arrive at the 13-9 score suggested above, we can concede nothing to Amherst at this point. For E. Wilson, the guiding spirit of the advance, with his passes to his brother, to Heisey, or to Tener, was inexplicably replaced in medias res by Fulton. And Fulton was thrown by Langmaid for a three-yard loss in the last play before the whistle.

First Half

The play which followed for the first minutes after Amherst's kick-off gave no intimation of the romp that was to come. Two initial charges dented the Sabrina line but faintly, and in return E. Wilson took 12 yards off right end for first down. The punt, when it finally came, rolled out on the 10-yard line. Williams kicked back to the 40, but a pass from Groskloss to E. Wilson returned the ball in preparation for R. Wilson's 30-yard placement, which opened the scoring with Amherst in a 3-0 lead.

The second Sabrina kick-off was a specimen to stir the aesthetic fervor of any football fan, but Brown took the heart out of it in as pretty a performance, and the tables were definitely turned. A pass, Brown to Langmaid, netted 20 yards, but a disastrously bad pass from center indicated that the approaching millenium had not yet arrived. Two more good passes failed to make up the ground. Nor could Amherst do anything but punt. This time Putnam dodged back to the 37-yard line, Howe eluded left end for first down, and another lap by Putnam after a pass from Brown put the ball in striking distance.

VICTORY!

PART I: 40 TO 15

Our grouch is all gone. No longer are cheer leaders insipid. No longer are teams over-confident. No longer are rallies an insidious influence. For we have rallied on Pratt Field, and we have made our rivals yield, and—oh jimmynyl Isn't it a lovely world! We love our football team. We love our coach. We love our soccer team—and its coach. We love the music of that Goodrich bell.

But enough of such talk—

PART II: 500 TO 252

For when the rending of goal posts mingled with the ecstatic toots of the tuba as Williams made manifest that she had rolled up the biggest score against Amherst since 1888, the far seeing editorial eye peered meditatively beyond the present into the great flux of time, beyond the particular into the universal, and was glad, for he saw that it was good. To wit:

Varsity Football:	Williams 185	Opponents 84
Varsity Soccer:	Williams 18	Opponents 6
*Varsity Cross-country:	Williams 134	Opponents 76
Varsity Totals	337	166
Freshman Football:	Williams 118	Opponents 2
Freshman Soccer:	Williams 2	Opponents 9
Freshman Cross-country:	Williams 43	Opponents 75
College Totals	500	252

And if we may be pardoned for adding those 1932 football scores of happy omen to the Varsity aggregate, we have 445 to 168 for Williams. Again, if we yield to the cry of the multitudes that football is the sport (though we preserve in our hearts the deepest respect for the less spectacular media) we have 303 to 86 for Williams, with 11 victories in 12 starts.

We do not know what to think of our little cloister of culture. What will the people say? Above all, what will the alumni say? Come on, veterans of '88, get out your pencils and figure. The upstarts of '28 challenge you to show your wares.

SOCCER COMES TO ITS OWN

No account of the glorious happenings of last Saturday can be complete without mention of the Williams soccer team. From a neglected and downtrodden organization, it has by its successful record this year, culminating with the recent defeat of Amherst, brought itself into the front rank of Purple athletic teams. With four victories, two draws, and a tie for the "Little Three" championship to its credit, it has pulled soccer from oblivion into the light of recognition.

The victory last week was the first one for Williams in the six years that the booters of the two colleges have opposed each other. Since 1923 Williams soccer teams have plugged slowly along, losing the majority of their games, and ending the season with the inevitable defeat at the hands of Amherst, with resulting loss of possible "Little Three" supremacy and two points toward the "Trophy". The 1928 eleven seems to have put a stop to all this. At last the sport has come to its own.

"SEE WILLIAMS FIRST"

As we are caught in the throes of the chapel, the automobile, or the house party question, "culture"—one of the main objects and a cardinal tenet of a liberal arts college such as Williams,—takes a back seat before the momentous problems of our academic community. With such enticing attractions as Northampton, New York, and equally inviting places for week-end and overnight jaunts, many of the most lucrative advantages of the college are missed by the majority of undergraduates. Football games and house parties ruin good intentions in the fall; succulent spring evenings usurp our leisure hours in the spring, until we invariably find the time remaining before examinations much too short to gain even an adequate knowledge of our required courses, much less to absorb a little additional education and surplus culture at no extra cost.

The lack of proper advertising constitutes one of the main reasons for this blindness to many of the most fruitful organs of culture. Unfortunately, or perhaps fortunately, we have no Faculty Chamber of Commerce to spread intellectual propaganda; the college is graced by an absence of Departmental Rotarians for the propagation of mental activity; we find few collegiate Babbitts, who paint in roseate terms the bliss of meditation and learning. Rather those rare individuals, who are far enough advanced to have a genuine taste for literature, science, and art, pride themselves on their fortunate heritage, and do not feel moved to advertise the fact to the world. The Mabie Room in the Chapin Library receives a paltry three hundred calls a year, and the majority of these are made by the same people, who, despite stringent rules, find some spark of comfort in reading for recreation. The interesting relics in the Geological Museum would live in complete isolation, were it not for occasional visits by science students. The same is true of Lawrence Hall, where charming prints and excellent exhibitions prove a delicacy for a small minority of us, and only receive a votive offering in the form of a dust mop. Unusual and interesting exhibits in the Chapin Library bide their time, unmolested by undergraduate attention. All of these offer very worthwhile opportunities which many of us will never again have, either through a lack of time, or because of no such accessible places.

Advertising is not suited to culture as it is to all other products of the twentieth century, but we should take a little pride and show a little curiosity in all the parts of Williams. Few of us would be harmed by adding a coat of aesthetic veneer to the rough finish of required courses. It might be fitting to adopt the motto of enterprising and patriotic Americans, who advise every one to see their own country before travelling to foreign lands. Although it is improbable that Northampton is foreign to many students, we could well adopt such an axiom and "see Williams first."

*Who looked down here to see why the cross-country scores are turned around?

Dr. Adriance in Vigorous Address Exhorts Freshmen To Care For Well-Being

(The following appeared in the Oct. 25, 1913 issue of THE RECORD.)

"According to Goethe," said Dr. Vanderpoel Adriance '90 in addressing the freshmen in Jesup Hall Thursday evening, "If monkeys could suffer from ennui they would be men." Pascal explained the same idea in different words; 'Man would weary even without any cause for weariness from the condition of his constitution'. These sentiments indicate in a measure how common and prevalent is that state of mental debility which is known as neurasthenia or, as the English say, Americanitis. In modern American life the overwrought conditions are such that our nerves give out under the strain. So wide-spread and general are the evils resulting from tired nerves that we can hardly estimate the value to a man of self education—the understanding and enforcement of some sort of mental hygiene. Few realize the blessings of a good mind or the unhappiness and ruin which comes from an ill-directed mind.

"Has your father a high-strung, nervous, disposition? Is your mother of a sensitive make-up? Do you become irritable and unreasonable when slightly tired? There is no reason why a child with an hereditary nervous temperament should have a nervous breakdown; but I want you to recognize, nevertheless, the causes of nerve tire before they have gone too far and by prompt action check their further development.

CARNEGIE developed the steel industry by first developing his men.

The Bell System is growing faster than ever before in its history and this growth, like the steel growth, is based on the development of men.

Today, in the telephone industry, men in supervisory positions must coordinate many and varied factors. For example, before locating a new central office, population trends are studied. While it is being built, telephone apparatus is planned, made, delivered and installed on orderly schedule.

But more basic than all this, the executive shows leadership by his insight into the human equation and by the sympathy and understanding with which he adapts individual to job, moulding his men first.

PURPLE TAKES LEAD IN RACE FOR 'TROPHY'

Six Points Tallied by Football and Soccer Wins Give Williams
Flying Start

For the first time in four years Williams has ended its fall sports season with a lead over Amherst in the race for the Johnson "Trophy of Trophies", the victories in both football and soccer last Saturday contributing four and two points respectively to the Purple's tally. Although Williams has won the "Trophy" every year since its donation, with the exception of 1925, when the score was a tie, and last year, never since the last football victory in 1924 has it emerged from its fall contests with a single point to its credit, as all of the soccer games in the series between the two colleges, had, until last week, resulted in wins for Amherst.

The six points which the Purple placed to its credit last Saturday would seem, on the face of it, to make Amherst's retention of the plaque for another year practically impossible. The nine sports and debating in which the two colleges compete annually for supremacy are allotted from one to four points apiece, a total of 13 of the 25 points awarded being enough to clinch the victory. Of this necessary 13, Williams already has six, and if the tradition of more than a decade and the comparison of the material at present in college counts for anything, she is ready to annex four more for a track victory next spring. With this probable total of ten, Williams has but to add three more points, which could be done by winning both basketball games, both baseball contests, one minor sport supremacy and one baseball, hockey, or basketball game, or any two minor sports championships.

Right to permanent possession of the original "Trophy", donated in 1920 by Henry Rust Johnson '09 as an emblem of yearly athletic supremacy between Amherst and Williams, was acquired by Williams in 1924 by five successive victories. The present plaque will go to the college which wins it ten times. In 1925 the score was tied, in 1926 and 1927 the Purple emerged victorious, while last year, for the first time in history, Amherst annexed the trophy, as the result of wins in football, baseball, soccer, debating, one basketball game, and one hockey game.

Following is the score toward the "Trophy" so far, with the points awarded for each sport:

Sport	Points	Williams	Amherst
Football	4	4	0
Soccer	2	2	0
Basketball	3	?	?
Hockey	2	?	?
Swimming	2	?	?
Debating	1	?	?
Baseball	4	?	?
Track	4	?	?
Tennis	2	?	?
Golf	1	?	?
Total	25	6	0

New Book Completed by the Rev. J. H. Denison '90

"Emotion as the Basis of Civilization" is the title of a new book by the Reverend Doctor John H. Denison '90, soon to be issued by Scribners, advance copies of which are already on sale in local book stores. Dr. Denison, who was ordained in the Congregational ministry in 1896, subsequently holding pastorates in Kansas City, New York, and Boston, was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity by Williams in 1915, and has written two other books, "Beside the Bowers", 1914, and "With the International Y. M. C. A."

In his latest work, the author argues that civilization of any sort is not based upon mental concepts or upon reason, but human emotions, and that civilizations which have succeeded are the ones in which certain emotions have been profound and have been cultivated by those who held power, both temporal and religious rulers. Rev. Dr. Denison follows the growth of these emotions through the days of recorded history. He shows the achievement of the most extraordinary difficult ideals by certain people through the cultivation of particular emotions, how when a people brought up under a certain emotional culture move into another one, it loses all restraints and runs to lawlessness and crime, and how this has happened in America, when people accustomed to a patriarchal government are brought into our society.

Pres. Leigh Picks Assistant

President Robert D. Leigh of Bennington College, one time Barton Hepburn Professor of Government at Williams, announced last Sunday that Professor Austin M. MacCormick, alumni secretary of Bowdoin College, had accepted the position of his assistant at Bennington. At the same time it was announced that Miss Carolyn E. Henderson had accepted the position of secretary. Although the date of its opening is not decided upon as yet, Bennington College, which is to be an institution for girls, will not be opened later than 1930.

1931-32 Soccer Series

Awarded to Freshmen

Announcement has been made by the Athletic Department that the Freshman soccer team has won its series with the sophomores, despite the fact that it has gained but two victories and has sustained one defeat in a series which usually requires three successes to obtain the title. This decision was made because the lateness of the season and three tie games, two of them scoreless, have prevented a play-off for the championship in this annual interclass contest.

The rival elevens fought to a tie at two all in the opening game, but the sophomores forged ahead in the second contest to win by a 2-1 score. The yearlings found themselves, however, and took the next two games, winning 3-2 and 5-2 respectively. Neither team was able to score in either the fifth or sixth contests, both of which were most stubbornly fought and the score remained at two games to one in favor of the freshmen until the recent award of the championship to them.

In its authentic tartans are captured the martial romance of raiding clans, and the weird strains of bagpipes. Its tradition of beauty, too, is evident in numbers designed in rich, solid colors.

For wear, it has the warmth and heaviness that men of the Hie'lands demand.

Glengair golf hose is knitted on hand-frames in Leith, Scotland. We invite you to inspect it, certain that you will be impressed by its quality. It can be identified by the Glengair coat-of-arms.

Holds Dinner in Hartford

Thirty-five alumni attended the annual dinner and meeting of the Connecticut State Alumni Association, which was held last Friday evening, preceding the Amherst game, in the University Club of Hartford, Connecticut. In addition, there was a full representation from the subsidiary alumni group, the Nantucket Valley Association. After the dinner, there were speeches, a roundtable discussion, and the election of officers for the coming year.

John A. Coe '20 presided at the meeting as toastmaster. The speakers included the Reverend John Lewis '89, who also gave grace, Stillman F. Westbrook '09, Mark W. Maclay '09, who came from New York for the affair, and E. Herbert Botsford '82, who gave his usual informal talk, announcing the names of the five alumni trustee nominees, telling of the improved situation in regard to scholarships, and stressing particularly the need for better faculty salaries. After the speeches there was half an hour of roundtable discussion. The Association then voted to donate $50.00 to the Loyalty Fund. After this, came the election of officers, the same ones retaining their positions, with the exception of Robert B. Swain '15, who retired as secretary because of the stress of outside work after serving in this capacity since the founding of the Association three years ago. The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, William W. Wilcox '85; Vice-president, John A. Coe '20; Secretary-Treasurer, William H. Bulkeley '20, and Representative on Council, Stillman F. Westbrook '09.

SPRING STREET TOPICS

The Williams cheering section was undoubtedly surprised by the absence of the substitute red-haired cheerleader at the game Saturday.

To continue the subject of cheerleading, the Plymouth Inn was enlivened Saturday evening by the presence of two of the Purple's foremost cheerleaders, who were so overflowing with spirits that they led a series of yells for the benefit of the daughters of Mr. Smith.

Fraternity rivalry is about to burst forth again, owing to the fair charms of a certain damsel well known in local house party circles, who seems to have changed her fraternity allegiance. Two houses, which as late as this fall gave a house party together, have become estranged, since two social scions of one (a cheerleader again and the head one at that!) deserted many fair admirers in Northampton, and moved west to new hunting grounds, much to the dismay of another social lion in the second house, whose tactics the campus had hitherto thought invincible, (even though he travels in a Ford). The final victory is still in the air, but the newcomers apparently hold the edge because of the better quality of their food.

Northampton won another victory the past week-end. One of Williams' most eminent journalists, who before had confined his efforts to literary fields, was so impressed by the wonders of Smith, that he not only lost all interest in the game, but took a suite at the Plym Inn for an indefinite stay, and is carrying on his editorial duties by telegraph.

One of the distinguished Williams alumni was last seen busily attempting to sever a goal post from its foundation with a Keen-Kutter penknife (advl.)

Felicitations and congratulations were bestowed upon Coach Caldwell in the French manner by one of his very ex-line-men, who was quite overcome—by the victory.

Professor Remarks Upon Value of Football Player

Speaking before a group of football enthusiasts last week, Professor James Weber Linn of the University of Chicago declared that the average football player in the larger universities brings to his school through gate receipts and endowments about $10,000 during his playing period at college. Professor Linn asserted that many of the bigger secondary educational institutions clear $200,000 a year in their football season, and that with a squad of sixty men, playing through three years of eligibility, each man has been worth $10,000 to his Alma Mater in gate receipts alone.

In conclusion he added, "What does the football player get in return?—only the opportunity to sweat blood and suffer cracked ribs on the field and try to keep up with his studies . . . why, he ought to have the best special attention obtainable."

CHILDE HERALD IS CLOSE

Childe Herald has come up in the world and now can face his severest critics with a sound proof of his prophetic powers—which is more than the Oracle of Delphi could ever boast. Out of the nine forecast games of last Saturday, the correct team was picked six times. The victory of Wisconsin over Iowa was an acknowledged upset, while Harvard missed by inches justifying the prediction of a Crimson victory. The Yale-Princeton game will need a few words of explanation. Childe Herald regarded the Yale team as one of the best rounded elevens in the East and one which would surely live up to his faith when it reached its last two games, for which it had doubtlessly been pointing. However, the Blue team failed, but Childe Herald has a chance for revenge when he predicts the Harvard-Yale game this Saturday. In addition, Childe Herald wishes to state that he had a score of 35 to 7 forecasted for the Williams-Amherst encounter, and only lacked the courage to print it. This fact can soothe him anyway. The predictions and the actual scores line up as follows:

Teams	Forecast	Actual Result
N. Y. U. vs. Missouri	18-6	27-6
Wisconsin vs. Iowa	6-13	13-0
Harvard vs. Holy Cross	20-7	0-0
Princeton vs. Yale	7-12	12-2
Wesleyan vs. Bowdoin	20-0	12-7
Dartmouth vs. Cornell	14-7	28-0
Brown vs. N. H.	10-7	20-0
Penn vs. Columbia	19-7	34-7
Illinois vs. Chicago	10-7	40-0

BONFIRE AND PARADE ENLIVEN FINAL RALLY

Team Is Cheered Before Invading Amherst at Final Practice on Weston Field

Overflowing enthusiasm for the team that was to beat Amherst was shown at the football rally last Friday afternoon when 300 students, led by the Band, marched, sang, and cheered themselves hoarse for a team that was ready to fight for a victory. Beginning with a parade, the rally continued with a bonfire, a torch-light procession, demands for a speech from Coach Caldwell, ending with a talk by President Garfield.

The rallyers gathered at 4 p. m. on the steps of Jesup Hall, and, forming ranks, marched down Spring Street to Weston Field where the team was holding its last, light workout before invading Amherst.
Cheers for individual players were given as the team ran through signal drill. As soon as it grew dark, a huge bonfire, piled up at the side of the football field, was lighted, and the Senior members of the football squad celebrated the end of their football practicing by tossing into the flames old articles of equipment. Headgears, shoulder pads, and old footballs added to the flames produced by burning wagons and boxes.

Following the bonfire came the colorful torch-light parade of "red fire", which proceeded up Spring Street. At the gym eager demands were made for Coach Caldwell, but he refused to talk. Finally the parade moved on to Garfield's lawn, where after a short speech by the President, the rallyers sang again and broke up.

Defense Wall, 40-15

tance. It took a good deal of striking, but Brown went over on the fourth down.
Langmaid took the point, and a matter of seconds later the period ended with Williams leading 7-3.

Amherst, who had taken the ball on the kick-off for a first down, relinquished it at the opening of the second quarter, and Williams, furthered by a penalty for holding, immediately threatened again. Williams made Brown's pass good for 25 yards, but, though two more passes followed, they did not gain the necessary ground, increased as it was by a penalty this time adverse.
Amherst punted. Brown's consistent incursions through a now ineffective Sabrina line were again advanced by a 15-yard penalty. So Howe carried another pass from Brown over the final line, and again Langmaid sent the ball over the bar. 14-3 on the score board.

There followed a short transition period of passes nullified by an exchange of penalties before Amherst got under way on her one offensive campaign. Wilson to Tener, Wilson to Wilson, Wilson to Heisey, Wilson to Tener, Groskloss down the line for a first down on his own, another pass, then a momentary repulse on the four-yard line—and then the whistle. Score at the half:
14-3.

Second Half

It was in the opening minutes of the third period, when Stayman was driving another goalward crusade, that that exchange of fumbles occurred which was in a sense the reductio ad absurdum of the general atmosphere of the game. No sooner had McFarland appeared to throw the Purple advance into reverse than Groskloss sent the ball bubbling into that most unfortunate of all localities, the hands of Howe. The rest needs no narration. An attempt to pass over the line for the extra point was blocked. Score: 20-3.

Again Williams kicked. Again An-herst punted. Again Putnam snapped back like a suspender. Again Williams fumbled. But the rest of this new found trick play didn't work. Heisey, Groskloss and Felt managed not only to hold on to the thing, but also to travel eight or nine yards to the shot. A pass from Groskloss enabled E. Wilson to finish the horse play behind the goal line. R. Wilson, whose placement kick had flown with such evil omen, permitted the kick for point to fall short. Score: 20-9.

Encouraged, Amherst checked Williams soon after the kick off and started out to repent. Familiar passes flew, Wilson to Tener, Wilson to Felt, and another first down was borrowed from the line, but not for long. While Creuser was waiting for a lengthy pass, Lasell ran into it and made the most spectacular play of the day. It was 70 yards to the goal; if it had been further the run would have been longer.
Langmaid took the point. Score: 27-9.

Stunned, the Sabrinas had very little to say. The runner returning the kick-off was pushed over the side lines at the 30-yard mark. Familiar passes failed, and were continued in the face of penalties.

The inevitable punt was moved some 30 yards nearer the goal, since Brown apparently thought it was necessary in order to score again in the short time left.
Howe and Langmaid did the rest, but for once there was no additional point. Lang-maid's kick went wide. Score: 33-9.

Angered, Amherst would brook no setback in the first of the final period.
Heisey opened the revanche with 20 yards around left end. Langmaid intercepted a pass, but for once the Sabrina wall held.
The punt dropped into the hands of Groskloss, and for once, as he slipped from the fingers of Williams and Lobo, the stands thought they were going to see what they had read about. Passes, eternally from
E. Wilson, to Groskloss and Fangbner, were supplemented by steady gains through the line, until Wilson could dodge through the very heart of things for his team's last score. The second Wilson failed on the point. Score: 33-15.

Disappointed, Williams started out to regain her margin. It was Brown in left tackle for 15 yards, Brown to Langmaid for 20 yards, Brown to Putnam for 6 or 8 yards more. When the assault staggered for a minute and Amherst secured the ball, Captain Andersen was observed putting in his final kicks the moment before he was withdrawn from his last game.
By ones and twos and threes substitutes flooded the field, but it was not the end.
Eisner intercepted a final pass. Putnam, Langmaid, and McAllister rushed it down the field, Langmaid put it over, and Eynon kicked the point. The rest was a matter of seconds. Score 40-15.

SIDELIGHTS

of the Amherst Game

The Purple and White of Amherst yielded to the Royal Purple of Williams more than once last Saturday. Williams gained only one victory on Pratt Field in the afternoon, but victories (and defeats), the number of which will never be known,
were gained on the banks of Paradise Pond in the evening.

The Amherst football management was thrown into frenzy by the terrific demolition of its goal posts and score board after the game. However, judging from the type of football which the Amherst team played, the Williams supporters thought that neither goal posts nor score board would be needed next year.

Amherst College has probably more foresight than any other college in the country. Already it is pointing to the Williams game next year, since it subjected the Williams team to the danger of pneumonia and colds by allowing only three towels to the whole squad and coaches.

In the despair of an impending defeat,
the Amherst coaches tried one last ruse:
they sent an Amherst player into the fray with a Williams jersey in hopes of utilizing him thus disguised in various trick plays.
However, the earnestness of officials denied them this last chance for victory, and the man was forced to abandon all modesty as a penalty and change jerseys in midfield.

The Amherst eleven has lost all faith in the psychological value of advertising.
Before the game, every tree and post in Amherst was graced with posters like these: "Cover Langmaid all afternoon",
"When a certain Williams halfback bits the dust, he will be all Brown", and "Will his teeth chatter when he is tackled—and Howe." It was discovered soon after the game that these signs were useful only to embellish at a later date the rooms of the mentioned Purple players.

W. O. C. Makes Winter Plans

Awaiting the release of its members from the various athletic teams now organized, the Outing Club is planning an ambitious program of fall and winter activities. A great increase in membership has led to the hope that the club may be able this winter to carry through its long-considered plan for constructing a cabin in this vicinity and the further blazing of local trails. In connection with the cabin project, the club is not as yet satisfied with the suggestions forwarded for its location, and any aid from undergraduates in determining where it shall be erected is most welcome. Several hikes will be held by the members of the Outing Club in an effort to decide upon an advantageous site for the structure, which will be started as soon as the location has been decided upon.

THE THEATERS

By PERCY HAMMOND

"This Year of Grace" a revue by Noel Coward, presented at the Selwyn Theater under the direction of Arch Selwyn, with a cast containing the author, composer and Miss Beatrice Lillie.

AS THE author and composer of
"This Year of Grace" Mr. Noel
Coward last night was a benefactor.
His songs and satires were of an upper class, ranging from competent to superlative, and the fleet manner in which they sped along made Mr. Cochran's London revue one of the merriest of its closet type. Mr. Coward was not, however, so brilliant as a musical comedian. Unendowed with the impish attributes of a clown, his efforts were slightly laborious, and he sang in a weedy voice and danced with small facility. But when he grew dramatic in a tragic number reminiscent of his famous "Poor Little Rich Girl" he stirred his audience to transports similar to those he used to arouse in "The Vortex." Entitled "Dance, Little Lady," it was quite a grisly war to the black-bottomers.

DATE SET FOR TEST IN CURRENT EVENTS

'Knowledge of Current News' Given as Requirement to Annual Competition

Professor E. D. Ellis of Mount Holyoke College, Chairman of the Executive Committee in charge of the Intercollegiate Current Events Contest, in which Williams has participated for the last three years, has announced the dates of the examination which will determine the prize winners for the current academic year. These dates, which are arranged in a sliding scale so as to meet considerations of local convenience, are February 15 and 16, 1929, the individual colleges and universities being privileged to select the date which fits best into the local schedule.

The list of institutions competing in this year's contest numbers 20, which is the same as last year, and which besides Williams, includes Amherst, Brown, Bryn Mawr, Chicago, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Michigan, Mount Holyoke, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Smith, U. S. Military Academy, U. S. Naval Academy, Vassar, Virginia, Wellesley and Yale. Prizes will continue to be given in each college with a wide discretion as to distribution allowed to the individual academic authority. The intercollegiate prize will be $500.

Knowledge and understanding of the news of the day is the requirement. There has been great improvement in the form and content of the questionnaire, which has grown out of three years of experience since the contest was established. The examination is entirely in the hands of the Executive Committee, which includes besides Professor Ellis, the Chairman, Professor H. B. Huntington of Brown University and Professor R. E. Cushman of Cornell, and is sponsored by The New York Times.

In the final quarter Amherst brought the ball to the five-yard line on a first down. Four rushes carried the ball to the one-foot line where the ball changed possession. Williams punted to mid-field and the game ended as Amherst was starting another march toward the Williams goal. Pierce, Andrews, and Drake played well for Amherst while Fowle and Fochl stood out for the Williams Frosh. The summary of the game is as follows:

Alumni Column

"Lack of sleep is the first cause of tired nerves. Many of you Williams men will suffer from lack of sleep. The ordinary student doing the mental work of the college curriculum will need eight hours in bed. Do not waste your hours of recreation in empty amusements. Rather take an hour in the day as the Quakers do to 'sit by' and you will then begin to realize that men make the world, not things. In your contemplations avoid evil and seek only the noblest and the truest.

"Each one of us has a line over our heads which marks the limit of our nervous existence, and we should remember that in overdoing we are forcing our heads over that line so that it comes down upon us. When tired nervously, avoid heavy physical exertion; for intellectual work and physical work are additive and not complementary. The richest sources of fatigue are physical work, intellectual work, and abuse of pleasure and emotion. It is a combination of these in severe types that is apt to cause neurasthenia.

"Some thoughts lubricate the brain and some cause friction. Optimism is the great exponent of the former class and its two main components are Hope and Faith. I have every faith in Williams men and I want you to take my confidence in you and plant it in your own breasts. Day by day by reflection reassure yourselves of your own strength and will to be stronger and better men. By meditation assert your God-like qualities and look Heavenward for the blessing which will reward your efforts."

Board Announces Plans for 1930 'Gulielmsonian'

According to announcement of the 1930 Gul Board preparations are now under way for the production of this year's issue, which will be similar in plan to the 1929 Gul. Not quite as much space has been allotted to the Senior features as in the previous volume, but most of the "elections" have been preserved intact as have the more traditional characteristics of the make-up.

In regard to the questionnaires and activity cards which are being circulated among the members of the two upper classes, the Board would like to urge cooperation on seniors and juniors in respect to the prompt filling out and return of cards and papers. Such action will be of material assistance and will be much appreciated. To those who complain that this is too early a date to fill out activity cards completely it might be well to explain that the Board will add the requisite data to the records of those participating in winter sports. Seniors are also requested to have their photographs taken as soon as possible, since the cuts must be sent in to the printer even before the editorial material due before Christmas.

Syllabuses for 1931-32 Bible Exams Circulated

Copies of the syllabus of Bible readings for both the Freshman and Sophomore classes were distributed immediately following the chapel service last Friday morning. At this meeting, which lasted for about ten minutes, the subject matter and purpose of the Bible examinations were discussed and explained in short talks by Assistant Dean Agard, Mr. Twichell, the College Pastor, and Rohrbach, President of the Senior Class.

The examination, which will be held immediately before or after the Spring recess, will be based on readings from The Modern Reader's Bible for Schools by Richard Green Moulton. In accordance with the agreement of the Chapel Committee of 1927, the freshmen will be given a comprehensive examination on the New Testament, and the sophomores another on the Old Testament. These college preachers, in addition to Mr. Twichell, who reviewed and criticized the syllabus, were President Barbour of the Rochester Theological Seminary, and President Mackenzie of the Hartford Theological Seminary.

Miss Lincoln Honored

Miss Eleanor Lincoln, niece of Dr. Charles F. Reimer, former professor of economics in Williams, has been selected as a part of the staff of the Bohemian Theatre, an organization founded this year by Christopher Morley, noted playwright. Miss Lincoln graduated from Williamstown High School in class of 1928, and since her graduation has been studying dramatic art. While in school, she was prominent in dramatic activities, taking part in several Little Theatre productions. Mr. Morley's new theatre, the keynote of which is exceedingly unconventional staging and acting, is an attempt to revive the traditions of the old theatrical life, which he considers a desirable feature of the drama, but one lost to the modern stage.

Organ Recital

Continuing his series of weekly organ recitals, Mr. C. L. Safford will present a program composed largely of 17th Century compositions of the French, Belgian, and Danish schools, which will be played on the Chapin Hall organ at 4.15 Wednesday afternoon. The program of the recital, to which the public is cordially invited, is as follows:

- I. a. Salve Regina Peter Cornet
- b. Noel Nicholas Le Begue
- c. Fugue on the Kyrie Francois Campeoin
- II. a. Chorale (From God I will not turn) Dietrich Buxtehude
- b. Chorale (Good news from Heaven) Johann Pachelbel
- III. Sonata in F Minor Mendelssohn
- IV. Alleluia Enrico Bossi

WILLIAMS WINS TRIO OF 'LITTLE 3' TITLES

Championships in Varsity and 1932 Football and Cross-Country Go to Purple

Little Three Championships in three sports were won by Williams on Saturday, when the football, soccer, and Freshman football games ended with the Purple in the win column. By defeating Wesleyan in the cross-country meet on November 10, Williams also won the Little Three title in that sport, as Amherst did not run against either school this year.

Wesleyan's mid-season tie with Amherst complicated the early Little Three football situation, but the Purple triumph over Wesleyan shoved the Methodist team temporarily into last place, where it was joined by the Lord Jeffs after Williams' glorious 40 to 15 victory on Saturday. The Little Three triumph in football is the first for Williams since 1924. Up to and including that year, the Purple had won for four consecutive seasons, while Amherst won in 1925 and 1926 and Wesleyan in 1927.

Although Williams and Wesleyan both defeated Amherst in soccer, they fought each other to a deadlock and as a result Little Three honors are divided. The Purple Cubs' triumph over Wesleyan was followed by their close 6-2 win in the Amherst game, and these two victories, culminating a season in which only two points were scored against them, give the team the Little Three yearling football championship.

home team remained at a disadvantage during the rest of the quarter, no score was made. In the second period, however, a foul was called on a block play by Sherman, later declared to be legal, thus giving Amherst a free kick within the penalty area. Here Goodwin succeeded in kicking the ball into the net and tying the count at 1-1. Christie soon sent Williams ahead again by scoring unaided, shortly before the end of the half.

In the third quarter Williams had matters quite well in hand, and managed to keep its opponent well bottled up in defensive positions. A desperate effort to hurl back the invaders resulted in a penalty kick for the Purple. Bright's boot was stopped by the Amherst goalie, but he rushed in quickly to shove it past the hard-working guard into the goal, giving his team a 3-1 lead. The Williams offensive kept hammering away at its tiring adversary, and before long, Christie again broke through for a score. With a comfortable lead thus tucked away, the Purple rested content to assume a more passive attitude in the final quarter. Quick to take advantage of this, Amherst opened up a belated attack, which soon came beyond control. The Lord Jeffmen found an opening through which Stahr, center half, kicked the ball for the final score. Further attempts to even up the score before the whistle proved futile.

The score by periods follows:

Airplane Summons Taxi

To the thrilled amazement of all who saw him, Roy Ahearn, pilot of the aeroplane that has been taking up passengers near here this fall, swooped down over Spring Street last Tuesday afternoon and, shutting off his motor while not more than 70 yards from the ground, shouted that a taxi was wanted out at the air field. Mr. Wish broke all sped laws to get out there in time for he knew-not-what only to find that Mr. Ahearn merely desired a ride into Williamstown.

CLASS FIGHTING AFTER ROPE PULL ABOLISHED

Battle Royal Was Not in Original Tradition, and Has Led to Serious Injuries

Concluding that the Green River Bridge and the stretch of concrete road between the bridge and the gymnasium is too dangerous a battle-ground for the underclassmen, the Student Council has decided to abolish the annual Freshman-Sophomore fight succeeding the rope-pull as a "dangerous precedent, not included in the original tradition." Hereafter the rope-pull will be limited strictly to brute strength, three pulls out of five deciding which class will win the annual river fight.

This action was the direct result of injuries suffered by several students in the course of last week's rough struggle. While this is the first time that the rope-pull has had an aftermath of injuries, the Council considered it unwise to invite further casualties by continuing the least essential part of the contest. The clause providing that the winning class carry the rope from the river to the gym was not introduced until 1914, when it was inserted to take the place of the annual canoe-rush, which was also abolished because of the number of serious injuries.

At the Council meeting on Tuesday evening, it was announced that the National Student Federation had extended an invitation to the College to send a delegate from the student body to the annual convention of American colleges, which will be held this year in St. Louis, Mo. Williams is enrolled as a member of this federation, but has never been represented at the convention. The sentiment of the Council was in favor of sending a representative this year, although it is not possible for the student body to finance the entire trip.

It was further announced that the Student Council has deprived Delta Phi Fraternity of the privilege of holding house parties during the next two house party periods, because of infraction on Nov. 10 of the rule prohibiting organized dancing after midnight.

BASKETBALL STARTS WITH MANY VETERANS

Coach Messer Spends First Week on Fundamentals; 15 Games Are on Schedule

Graduation has taken only one regular, Sterling, from last year's basketball team, and if eligibility, which will find expression in the forthcoming warnings, is equally favorable, the varsity court squad will be the strongest in veteran material and the largest in numbers of many seasons. Since the first regular practice last Monday, Captain Betham, Alexander, Allen, Cuddeback, Fowle, Howe, and Thoms, all of last year's team, have been reporting, as well as several promising sophomores, but Coach Messer says, "We can tell nothing until warnings", and has been devoting attention only to conditioning and fundamentals during the past week.

Paralleling the improvement of prospects over last year, the schedule presents a 15-game program with several strong opponents. Instead of Boston University, Hamilton, and Holy Cross, the Varsity will face Colgate, Lafayette, New Hampshire State, and R. P. I., all, as it happens, at home. Columbia, Brown, and Yale are also on the schedule, with the latter two in the Lasell Gymnasium.

Thirty men responded to the call for candidates. Among the sophomores are Field, captain of last year's freshmen, Denne, Haeffner, Leber and Williams, all prominent last year. The complete list of candidates follows: Alexander, Allen, Betham, Bie, Booth, Callaghan, Chapman, Clark, Cuddeback, Dee, Denne, Dickerson, Ely, Emerson, Field, Fowle, Greer, Haeffner, Howse, Kurth, Leber, Lenihan, Lonsdale, Marshall, Southgate, Thomas, Thoms, C. Webster, B. Williams, and S. Willmot.

Coach Wins His Final Triumph at the Altar

Wedding bells sounded a merry echo to the victory bells of Goodrich when Coach Charles Caldwell brought his triumphant season to its real climax before the altar of Bethany Church, Quincy, Mass., at 8.30 last Thursday evening. The bride, who will return to Williamstown with the Coach after his well-earned three-weeks' leave, was Miss Ruth Bishop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bishop of Quincy.

Participating in the ceremonies as ushers were Coach Snively of the line and Mr. Joseph Caldwell, Coach Caldwell's brother, who made himself known to the squad in early season practice. After the church wedding a reception was held at the Neighborhood Club. And after that Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell left. All that has been divulged is that the itinerary includes all the biggest and best football games that the East can afford, in particular the Penn-Navy, and Stanford-Army encounters.

VARSITY TEAM HAS VICTORIOUS SEASON

Williams Eleven Wins Seven out of Eight Games; Wesleyan and Amherst Both Fall

Victories over Amherst and Wesleyan for the first "Little Three" championship since 1924, seven games won out of eight played, 185 points to its opponent's 74, such is, in brief, the history of the 1928 varsity football team, which, under the coaching of "Charley" Caldwell of Princeton auspiciously opened a new era in Williams football.

The team proved strong on the offensive, averaging 23½ points per game, and in only one, the Columbia game, was it held below the ten point line. On the defensive, the record is not as good but, nevertheless, leaves a big margin of victory, the average here being 9½ points per game. Columbia was able to score 20 points, the largest margin of any opponent, but Middlebury and Union were held scoreless, while Bowdoin and R. P. I. could only pierce the defense for one touchdown. Langmaid seems firmly entrenched in third place in the race for scoring honors, with a total of 86 points, gained through 12 touchdowns, and 14 points after touchdown. Howe is tied for ninth place with a total of 48 points from eight touchdowns, while Brown, who did not play the first of the season owing to injuries, is in a tie for thirteenth with six touchdowns for thirty-six points.

Throughout the fall, the entire backfield starred and proved a particularly deceptive combination to opposing teams. Howe sweeping the ends, Brown off the tackles, Langmaid catching passes from nowhere and hitting center for the necessary two yards, Putnam eluding tacklers on the runback of punts were continual threats, while their substitutes with less experience, Stayman, Wheeler, McAllister, Eisner, Chase continued to reel off yardage. Line play was not as brilliant but, starting with little to build on, Caldwell and Snively developed a line, mostly of juniors and sophomores whose prospects for 1929 are great. Williams, Kipp, Ashby, and Hood all proved to be able ends, practically on a par. Schwartz, Miller, and Gailer were the outstanding tackles, the first two still having two years of football left. Capt. Andersen at guard was a tower of strength throughout the fall, while Lasell proved an able running mate. At center Watson played a steady game, and Muller was a capable relief man. In Caldwell's "Little Three" selections, Williams received five places, which shows the strength of the team: Howe, Brown, and Putnam in the backfield; Captain Andersen and Watson in the line.

Faced with a great paucity of heavy men for the line, Coach Caldwell began his first season here with anything but an encouraging outlook, notwithstanding a wealth of veteran backfield material. Assisting him, were A. Barr (Whoops) Snively, an All-American lineman at Princeton, who had coached the forward wall; "Art" Fox, who coached the ends; and "Pat" Keefe, with the scrubs under his wing. After ten days of conditioning, the Varsity backs scored five touchdowns against the scrubs, in the first scrimmage, (Continued on Third Page)

YALE PUPPETEERS TO APPEAR HERE TONIGHT

Company of 50 Marionettes Will Give Unique Entertainment in Chapin Hall

Friday, November 23—Presenting one of the most unique performances to be seen in Williamstown during the year, the Yale Puppeteers, who come here under the auspices of the Thompson Course, will stage a complete puppet revue this evening at 8.15 in the Chapin Hall auditorium. The three Puppeteers, Harry Burnett, Forman Brown, and Brandon Rhodehamel all recent Yale graduates, who will be remembered for the performance they gave here a year ago, have had six years of experience with puppets, and hope eventually to establish a permanent repertory theatre for marionettes in America similar to those in Italy and Bavaria.

The program presented last year, which closely resembled the one this evening, consisted of two short one-act plays and a number of vaudeville attractions. The curtain raiser was a concert by a 21 piece symphony orchestra, for which a realistic effect was produced by moving the bows of the players by strings, while a phonograph supplied the actual music. Other acts included dancing skits, a piano recital, and an unusual version of Pygmalion and Thisbe. Attractions in addition to these which may be selected as part of the performance are The Gooseberry Mandarin, a Chinese fantasy, On the Road to Bombay, which depicts two Hindus and their remarkable snake, and The Three Wishes, a dramatization of the old Continental fairy tale.

The handwork of the revue, including staging and directing, is entirely the work of the Puppeteers. A total of over fifty marionettes are used, which are operated by some 500 strings. A feature of the performance in addition to the actual repertoire, will be an explanation by a member of the troupe of the construction and manipulation of a puppet.

The productions of the Yale Puppeteers have been highly praised by prominent critics. Daniel L. Quirk, President of the Drama League of America, says: "One will go far before seeing an exhibition of marionettes which surpasses what the Puppeteers achieve in their clever and highly artistic performance."

Intramural Swimming to Launch Winter Contests

Opening the winter series of sports, the intramural swimming meet will begin next Monday afternoon in the Lasell Gymnasium Pool with trials in the 150-yard medley relay, 50-yard dash, 300-yard swim, 150-yard medley and fancy diving. On Tuesday trials in the remaining events, the 100-yard backstroke, 100-yard free style, 100-yard breast stroke and the 200-yard relay will complete the preliminaries, and the finals in all events will take place sometime before December 4.

The house winning this meet, in which Psi Upsilon was victorious last year, will receive fifteen points towards the Intramural Trophy of Trophies besides the individual cup for swimming. Second place counts 9, third 8, fourth 7, and fifth 6. The scoring for single events is 5, 3, 2, 1, except for the medley relay which is 6, 4, 2, 1, and the 200-yard relay which is 8, 5, 3, 1. The meet is open to anyone who has not won his letter in swimming, although no man may enter more than three events including one relay.

Thoms '30 Is Chosen to Lead 1929 Soccer Team

Frank Rodger Thoms, Jr., of Brooklyn, New York, was chosen captain of the 1929 soccer team at a meeting held last Thursday afternoon of the entire squad, after the team picture had been taken. Thoms has just completed a second year with the varsity team, playing the outside left position, and because of his fast and clever handling of the ball has been one of the chief offensive threats.

Before entering Williams, Thoms attended Poly Prep, in Brooklyn, New York, where he was prominent in athletics and extracurricular activities. In his freshman year at Williams he played on his class soccer, basketball, and baseball teams and the following year was on the varsity teams in each of these sports. Last year he was elected vice-president of his class, and serves this year as treasurer. He is at present also Recording Secretary of the Williams Christian Association.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION FIXES ANNUAL BUDGET

Announces 1928 Drive For Week Of December 7-13; Goal Is Same As In 1927

In anticipation of the annual Chest Fund Drive conducted early each winter by the W. C. A., the cabinet of that organization met in Jesup Hall Wednesday evening to draw up the budget. In commenting upon the new apportionment, which includes several changes, Rohrbach '29, President of the Association, made the following statements:

The Williams Christian Association is a distinctly undergraduate organization. Practically all its support, financial and otherwise, is derived from Williams men. The primary purpose of the W. C. A. is to develop a stronger and finer religious spirit in Williams College. Its activities include aid to deserving charities; service to the boys of the community, including a free summer camp; training for undergraduates in religious and social service work; talks by prominent speakers, and intelligent religious discussion.

Following the precedent set three years ago by the Christian Association and the Student Council, the solicitation of Williams undergraduates for philanthropic and religious objects will take place at one special time of the year—the week of December 7-13, 1928. The returns from this solicitation are to cover all appeals which come to the undergraduate body during the course of the college year.

Seven separate items properly come under this fund, all of them directly or indirectly connected with Williams College or Williamstown: (1) Boys' Clubs, (2) College Expenses, (3) Community Welfare Work (4) Near East Relief, (5) Lingnan University, (6) Student Y. M. C. A., (7) American Red Cross. $7000 is the amount necessary to take care of these needs; the selection of these items follows a thorough investigation of the many appeals placed before the College. Each demands the thoughtful consideration of every Williams undergraduate, and the total amount is well within the power of Williams men to give.

DISTRIBUTION

	1927	1928
Boys' Clubs	$3000	$3500
College Expenses	1200	700
Community Welfare	800	800
Near East Relief	800	500
Lingnan University	800	1000
Student Y. M. C. A.	200	100
American Red Cross	200	400
	$7000	$7000

It is the intention of the Christian Association to bring before the student body brief explanations of the different items which comprise the Chest Fund Budget for this year. In this issue of The Record, the Association would like to call the students' attention to three of the items.

The first of these is College Expenses. Under this head come such items as speakers, conferences, deputations, the Freshman Reception, office expenses, etc. This quota has thus been placed upon a voluntary basis rather than as a part of the Non-Athletic Tax as was the case in former years.

The second of these items is that of Community Welfare Work. The $800 in this item allows the Association to extend (Continued on Second Page)

BOYS' CLUBS TO HOLD ANNUAL CELEBRATION

Week-End of Activities Will Close With Varied Program of Sporting Events

Friday, Nov. 23—Commencing with the interclub swimming meet in the Lasell gymnasium this evening, the Williamstown Boys' Clubs will actively participate in the observance of the annual Father and Son festivities over the coming week-end. French '29, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee, has made complete arrangements for a program of games, hikes, and outings for the parents and their sons that will terminate in the annual Father and Son banquet Monday evening at the Williams Inn.

Tonight will see the opening events on the program when the swimming meet takes place between the different branches of the organization. The schedule consists of dashes, diving events, under-water swims, and a life saving demonstration by members of the local Boy Scout troop. Saturday morning will be devoted to the championship football game of the interclub series, the contest starting at nine o'clock on the High School field.

Saturday afternoon will be featured by a hike of fathers and sons to Broad Brook. Contests between the parents and their sons will be arranged there, as well as a treasure hunt and the reception of the radio broadcast of the Harvard-Yale football game. The local Scout troop will again be present, and it is expected that they will pass off tests during the afternoon and then cook the evening meal for all present.

The closing event of the program will be the annual Father and Son banquet which will be held at 7 p. m. Monday in the Williams Inn. Professor Mears will act as Toastmaster. During the course of the evening, he will call on four speakers, among whom will be a representative of the National Boys' Club Federation. French '29 will speak for the W. C. A. and the student body, and Associate Professor E. S. Cole will express the opinions of the fathers. For the boys themselves, Dick Treadway has been chosen spokesman. Music will be furnished by the College orchestra, and C. Johnson, '30, head of the entertainment committee, has arranged for several specialty numbers by members of the Deputations Committee. Professor Charles L. Safford will lead the group in singing.

CALDWELL PICKS 'ALL-LITTLE THREE' ELEVEN

Andersen, Howe, Putnam, Brown and Watson Awarded Places on Mythical Team

On the eve of his departure from Williamstown, Coach Charley Caldwell, with the guiding of a Williams team to a Little Three Championship for the first time in four years to his credit, honored five members of his first team by placing them on his mythical "All-Little Three" eleven, and on his model second team put four others of his regulars. The five choices for the ideal team were Captain Andersen and Watson in the line, and Brown, Howe, and Putnam as three-fourths of the backfield, while Langmaid, Gailer, Lasell and Williams were given places on the second team.

The six remaining positions on the "perfect" first team were divided equally between Amherst and Wesleyan, making the line-up read as follows: Silloway (Wes), right end; Harper (Wes), right tackle; Lott (Amh), right guard; Watson (Wil), center; Andersen (Wil), left guard; Kirk (Amh), left tackle; Felt (Amh), left end; Putnam (Wil), quarterback; Howe (Wil), left halfback; Brown (Wil), right halfback; Bagg (Wes), fullback. On the second team Langmaid was at fullback, Lasell at guard, Gailer at tackle, and Williams at end.

In explaining his selections, Coach Caldwell said that the choice of Putnam was made because of his superiority in generalship over Tetley of Wesleyan, whom he also considers inferior to Brown in passing. Bagg was chosen instead of Langmaid because of the former's seniority. Coach Caldwell thinks Langmaid to have been of more value to the team, but the experience of Bagg he considers as sufficient to outweigh Langmaid's scoring ability.

A TASK FOR THE GOLDEN KEY

Wise men of other climes wear bones in their noses. Wise men of the Dark Ages wore rabbits' feet in their girdles. Wise men of Williams wear golden keys on their watch chains—eleven golden keys on eleven scholarly stomachs, each with three stars, a pointing hand, Greek letters three. Which we present as a history of the human intellect in three parts.

Colored hats, tie pins, and big purple W's have all come in for their share of envious derision, while conscientious attempts have been made to point out the glorious achievement of the golden key. But while hats, pins, and W's have gone about performing in their own ways their own particular functions, the golden key has contributed nothing to its wearers or to the College. The most laudable admission requirements are no excuse for any organization; Phi Beta Kappa has done nothing to justify its existence at Williams.

Yet its members are in an acknowledged sense the biggest men on the campus. They have survived three years of a competition so keen and so intense as to make the grind for any managementship seem a matter for week-ends. They have been judged by a series of specialists to be the outstanding men of their class in all for which Williams fundamentally stands. It is no little insult to the intellectual purposes of the College that men so chosen should find their only function to be the wearing of golden keys.

We are eager to admit that this tirade is not original. It is an echo of an undertone already heard within the present ranks of Phi Beta Kappa itself, an undertone which on good authority contemplates bursting into a circumspet roar in a week or two. If Phi Beta Kappa is going to do something, let us be the first to congratulate.

It is not our place to tell the chosen what to do, but lest we be accused of trying to get another activity started merely to send the distracted sons of Ephraim racing about more than ever to no particular purpose, may we offer a suggestion. Various undergraduate agencies in several Eastern colleges have published reports on the curriculum in general and certain courses in particular from the undergraduate point of view. These reports have been followed with genuine interest by the students as a guide both for registration and for vagabonding, but have been compromised to a certain extent by the nature of the sources.

Such reports published at opportune times in the name of the Williams chapter of Phi Beta Kappa would do more to create an intelligent critical enthusiasm among the undergraduates than any other measure. And we may be sure that it is one measure by which the Faculty would not be antagonized. Sincere efforts from such a source must inevitably be met, if at first by surreptitious curiosity, in the end by sincere cooperation.

OUR BAND

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

The week following the great football victory over Amherst has been filled with reiterated praises of practically everything that had to do with that happy day. Deserved congratulations have been offered on every side, and even silent thanks have not been wanting to the Fates who provided such gloriously unseasonable weather for the occasion. We wish we could sit through every football game without our overcoats. A general spirit of optimism has been the result of three "Little Three" championships, and the feeling is that Williams has come out of the "slump" of recent years with flying colors.

But last Saturday marked another triumph which has gone unnoticed in the welter of enthusiasm: we have a College Band. They formed such a vital part of the occasion that in the characteristic Williams manner, we took them for granted. When one recalls the facetious wit that has previously greeted this newborn organization—another one of our unfortunate attitudes toward innovations—it is gratifying to note that no such spirit was shown on Pratt Field last week. Their performance was splendid, and the cooperation of the student body in the fine singing during the game was certainly an unconscious recognition of a good thing when we saw it. The Band is still small, they wear no brass-buttoned uniforms, and they have no baton twirler; these things will come. But the chief point is that we like them, are proud that they were there at Amherst, and hope that we can always have them at similar affairs.

If, then, this is the sentiment of the College—and I am sure it is—let us go further than mere acquaintance and support the Band in a more practical fashion. We have seen what other colleges no larger than Williams can do along this line. Surely there is not a scarcity of musical heads and muscular diaphragms among us. It is a shame that such virtues should expend themselves solely within the walls of dormitory and fraternity. Why hide a light under a bushel? That such an increase in the size of the Band is needful can scarce be doubted. The alumni who have made this organization financially possible are willing to do anything to see it increase and flourish; our position in the rank of colleges warrants such growth; and, finally, we owe it to ourselves in our recent ascendancy to maintain and enjoy a good Brass Band as a permanent campus institution. Mr. Safford and his efforts have already done themselves proud: all praise to them! But they cannot continue to grow without active support. The rest is up to us.

Sincerely,

Lawrence W. Beals '29

its active work into the community and nearby towns where Social Service work is being done. Discussion groups of mill hands in North Adams and Greylock have been led by undergraduates, and small country churches have been supplied with preachers from the undergraduate body and with leaders for their community work.

The third group comes under the head of Near East Relief. This work is concerned principally with the education and care of the orphans left stranded by the War, and the coming year will see its completion. Although the only connection of Williams with this work is through Edward T. Perry '18 who is teaching in the Turkish college, Stamboul, the Association wants to stand by until the task has been finished. Part of the money collected for this fund will go as it has before, to Mr. Perry to assist him in his work.

Hamilton Debaters to Oppose Purple Monday

Williams will open her debating season Monday evening when Stern '29, and Gilbert and Park '30 travel to Clinton to uphold the negative side of the question: "Resolved, That this House deplores the effect of advertising on modern life." While this is not a regular League debate, it is nevertheless expected that the traditional rivalry of this annual contest, and the closeness of past decisions, will be even more increased in this instance by interest in the subject.

Hamilton has compulsory training in argumentative speaking for all students during one semester of each college year, with the result that that institution has for many years produced one of the best debating teams in this part of the country. Williams lost to Hamilton two years ago at Clinton by a 41-34 vote of the audience, while the Purple speakers' attack was successful here last fall by a 22-15 vote. As in past years, the decision will be rendered by a vote of the audience, a practice which has been instituted in League contests this season.

Varsity Team Has Victorious Season

which brought the line weakness in the limelight.

In the opening game of the season against a heavier Providence College team, the Purple won a 20-13 victory after trailing during the first period by a 6-0 score. The flying feet of Howe were responsible for a 50-yard run and a touchdown, while Langmaid in his first varsity game gave distinct promise of his ability, especially as a receiver of forward passes, which was to make him the third highest scorer of the east. A week later, Williams showed a gradual development in power, and humbled the Middlebury Panthers, 20-0. The game was one-sided from the start, the home team making 13 first downs to their opponents' none. Howe and Langmaid, sharing honors occasionally with Williams and Wheeler, again led the offense, while the line functioned much more as a unit than it had the week previous, and not only proved a concrete wall to the visitors, but, when scoring chances came, opened up wide holes for the Purple backs.

Travelling to Maine for its first big game, the team returned with a 20-6 win over Bowdoin for the third 20-point victory of the season. The offensive power of the Purple was partially checked, the three touchdowns being the result of penalties, fumbles, and long runs. A spasmodic attack, which, when it came, burst forth with a vengeance, swept R. P. I. off its feet for an easy victory, 26-7. Nevertheless, the Troy engineers put up a much harder fight than the score would indicate, tallying 13 first downs to eleven for the Purple, and completing eleven out of 19 passes, many of which "buffaloed" the home defense. Here the line showed the fruits of good coaching and proper training, and, when the occasion demanded proved impassable, while the backfield, led by Howe and Langmaid, again skirted the ends, sliced off the tackles, hit center, and took to the air with surprising success.

Williams next tried to beard the Columbia Lion in his own den, and during the first half seemed well on the way to doing it, outplaying their opponents, although each scored a touchdown. In the second half, the tide gradually began to turn, and during the closing minutes the weight of the Blue line began to overpower the lighter Purple. The forward pass defense was especially weak, the winners completing 14 out of 18, and scoring all their touchdowns through this method. Yet the game was not without its compensation to Williams, for in the second period, after a series of passes and line plays, Brown went off tackle for the first touchdown against Columbia in five years. On November 3 the whole Purple squad had a field day at Schenectady, taking the annual Union game, 37-0, and showing so much superiority that the game became uninteresting.

Wesleyan came to Williamstown with a strong team to try for its second consecutive win over the Purple, and throughout the first half seemed well on the way to doing it, as a result of two touchdowns scored through their ever-dangerous passing attack. Here the Williams offense opened up with spectacular plays, including lateral passes seen for the first time this year, and late in the third quarter the combination of Brown and Howe tied the score, while soon after the Purple line contributed its share toward the victory by blocking a kick and scoring a safety to give the home team a three-point margin. Amherst too entertained hopes of a fourth straight victory over Williams, but at the end of the game were surprised to find that the Purple had rolled up the largest score since 1888—40-15. This was a battle of backfields, in which Brown, Howe, Putnam, Langmaid, Stayman, Wheeler, and so on down the line were distinctly superior. Aside from this, the lines were practically even, but Williams made the breaks and furthermore converted them into scores; so that in the third quarter they set a point-a-minute pace.

W. C. A. Begins 1932 Forums

With an attendance of 39 members of the Class of 1932, the Freshman W. C. A. group began very promisingly its series of meetings for this year. At this meeting, William F. Thornton, Jr. '32 was elected chairman for the year, and Robert B. Reeves, Jr. '32 secretary. The group was led by Strong '29 to provide the Freshmen with a model for future meetings. Different leaders and subjects are chosen each week. The group started with a spirit that speaks well for the coming meetings which will be held each week as long as the Freshmen desire.

HARRIERS TERMINATE SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Cross Country Team Takes Fourth Place at New England Meet;
Maine Is First

Competing in the 16th annual cross country meet of the New England Inter-collegiate Athletic Association in Boston last Monday afternoon, the Purple harriers brought a successful season to a close by annexing fourth place in a field of eleven teams over the Franklin Park course, Maine, by placing all five men within the first 22 positions, retained the meet championship won last year, with New Hampshire coming in a close second, and Bates and Williams taking third and fourth. The other colleges to finish were M. I. T., Tufts, Holy Cross, Amherst, M. A. C., Northeastern, and B. U., in the order named.

With the scramble at the crack of the gun, the whole Williams squad was off to a slow start, because of the heavy mud and poor pole-position, and was caught in the midst of the pack at the narrow first turn, thus losing a valuable hundred yards lead before the race had fairly begun. Nevertheless, Goodbody and Guernsey after their bad start, followed by Chapman and Moore at a distance, succeeded in bettering their position to the extent of about forty places during the five mile race, crossing the line in a tie for twelfth. Chapman, placing 23rd, was the next Purple harrier to finish, being closely followed by Moore in 25th position. The fifth and last runner to count in the scoring was E. Reynolds, coming in 43rd, the remaining two members of the Williams squad, J. Reynolds and Sufferin, finishing 46th and 54th.

After the race, Coach Seeley expressed himself as being more than satisfied with the showing of the team, especially since the Lord Jeffs were beaten by almost a hundred points in the final scoring. This absolutely clinched the Little Three championships, as his team had previously overwhelmed the Wesleyan runners in a dual meet.

Interfraternity Meeting
To Be Attended by Three

When representatives of the colleges of the country meet in the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York next Friday and Saturday to discuss interfraternity matters, Assistant Dean Agard and Doughty and Willard '29 will be in attendance on behalf of Williams. The feature of the conference will be a debate on deferred rushing, which will be defended by Dean Bursley of the University of Michigan and Dean Field of Georgia Institute of Technology, while the advantages of earlier pledging will be set forth by Dr. Tonson and Dr. Gerstenberg.

The Interfraternity Council has announced that there will be no major change in the system of rushing at Williams next fall.

Forum Competes Called

H. B. Gross '30, Secretary-Treasurer of the Williams Forum, has announced the competition for the office of President of the Forum in 1931, open to members of the Sophomore Class. In addressing a meeting of the Sophomores interested in the competition last Thursday in Jesup Hall, he stated that the work would extend over a period of about four months, from December until after the Spring recess, and briefly explained the details of the competition. The Sophomores who attended the meeting were: Acheson, C. Bartow, Brandegee, Husband, Kohler, Moser, Oxtoby, Pulsifer, Rabbitt, Rogers, Rumsey, Sabin, Sommer, F. C. Welles, Woodruff.

1932 FOOTBALL TEAM FINISHES UNDEFEATED

Team Regains the 'Little Three'
Title; Runs Up a Score of 118 for Season

Piling up a total of 118 points against their opponent's two to go through the season undefeated and to annex the "Little Three" yearling championship, the 1932 football team enjoyed one of the most successful seasons in the history of Freshman football. Without being scored upon on the home field and with only a safety marked against them in the last game of the year at Amherst, the Freshmen crushed the first-year teams of three rival colleges and a high school varsity of this district.

Opening the season on October 20 against Pittsfield High School, the Freshmen scored four times to win 24-0. In the opening minutes of play, Tuttle blocked a kick which Patterson recovered to score. Captain Fowle later scored three touchdowns. Two weeks later, the 1932 eleven opposed the R. P. I. Freshmen on Cole Field and defeated them 80-0. In this game, in which Williams carried the ball 532 yards to their opponents' 38, Captain Fowle scored six touchdowns, one after a run of 75 yards, while Good and Senn broke into the scoring column. On November 10, Wesleyan was beaten 8-0 when Fowle scored from the five-yard line in the third period after the Williams Fresh had scored a safety in the first period. Last Saturday, the team journeyed to Amherst and completed an undefeated season by virtue of a 6-2 victory over Amherst Freshmen. Early in the first quarter, a bad pass from center resulted in a safety for Amherst, this score being the first made against the Williams first-year men this year. At the beginning of the second quarter, Fowle passed to Foehl who scored from the 15-yard line. The brilliant running, together with the punting and passing, of Captain Fowle made him the outstanding player of the season while the work of Foehl at end, Kipple at center, and Tuttle and Senn in the backfield, is worthy of mention.

A summary of the season follows:

WILLIAMS (1932)	OPPONENTS

8 Wesleyan (1932)	0

Anyone with axes in his possession is urged to carry them along, the rest of the equipment being supplied by the Club. Everyone, whether a member of the Outing Club or not, is invited to take either hike.

Phil. Union To Meet

He has taught at Columbia and the University of Illinois, and was called to Amherst last spring as Professor of Philosophy.

PURPLE WILL DEBATE AT HAMILTON TONIGHT

Opposing Trios To Apply Critical Judgment to Effects of Advertising

Monday, November 26—Multitudinous evils of advertising will be explained away as far as Stern '29, Gilbert and Park '30 are able in the Hamilton College Chapel at Clinton tonight at 8.00. The subject is the same as that which held the floor in one of the most entertaining debates which Williams has heard when the Cambridge University team was here two years ago, while the personnel will represent the annual conflict between the faculty supervised debating of the New York team and the complete undergraduate initiative which holds sway at Williams.

This will be Stern's first speaking appearance for the Purple, but he contributed his organizing ability to the defeat of Dartmouth last year. Park and Gilbert have both met active service. Park, in fact, took part in a 22-15 victory over Hamilton more than a year ago. Gilbert went down to Cornell last spring in an attempt to uphold Hoover which did not prove as successful. Douglas '29 who is leading the Hamilton trio, and Niemeyer '30 will offer experienced opposition, while the third Hamiltonian colleague, Mcagher '31, has been drafted from last year's Freshman team.

The Williams representatives, who have in the past shown up as somewhat more "English" than their carefully trained adversaries, are on this occasion of varied talents. They will take the negative on the question which is in full as follows: "Resolved, That this house deprecates the effect of advertising on modern life." The decision, as always in the meetings with Hamilton, will be entirely in the hands of the audience.

SOCCER TEAM ENDS SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Four Victories, Two Ties, and No Defeats Mark Best Record in Soccer Annals

Completing an undefeated season has been the spectacular record of the soccer team this year, an especially noteworthy feat because of the severe uphill pull this sport has had to make since its commencement here six years ago, during which time defeats always more than balance the victories scored each season. Although two tie games mar an otherwise perfect record, soccer enthusiasts have every reason to be proud of a team that refused to let Wesleyan add to its unbroken string of victories over Williams and by soundly crushing Amherst, rising from the cellar position of the 'Little Three', which it has occupied until now, to a tie for first place.

Credit for the successful season this year must go to Coach Bullock, ably assisted by Mr. Kirkland, as well as to the members of the team, which had been comparatively inexperienced and undeveloped. The squad has been very fortunate in obtaining Mr. Kirkland, who not only is an experienced player of note, but who drilled his knowledge with good effect into the members of the team. The latter consisted of but six letter men of last year, although there was plenty of reserve material which handily took care of the vacant positions. Only two injuries were suffered throughout the season, so that the team was able to present its strongest front at all times.

Opening the season auspiciously, the booters easily conquered St. Stephens on Cole Field by a 5-1 score. The visitors were very inexperienced and poorly conditioned, hardly testing the real strength of the Williams team. Bright, at center half, gave the forwards plenty of opportunities to score by neatly placed shots and accurate passes, while Gregory and Leher, fullbacks, were impenetrable to the opposing forward line. Pittsfield General Electric was next overcome in a practice game to the tune of 3-1. However, the first real trial for the team came in the following contest with R. P. I., both contestants struggling on even terms for almost the whole match, the Purple forging ahead in the last minute, when McKittrick managed to score the winning tally. Constant hammering at the opposing goal, without success, showed weak-

Frosh Public Speaking to Begin Next Monday

Freshman Public Speaking, a required course for all members of the Freshman class, will commence next Monday and continue until the Spring Recess under the supervision of Professor Licklider. Mass meetings will be held once a month in Chapin Hall at which time men selected from the various sections will be given an opportunity to speak before a large audience.

As in past years two of these monthly meetings will be taken up with the annual all-Freshman debate and the declamation contest for prizes offered by the trustees. All sections will meet in Jesup Hall auditorium with the exception of section 17 which meets in 9 Goodrich Hall. Freshmen are requested to note the final announcements and section lists posted today on Board 9 in Hopkins Hall. The following men are to act as instructors: Harris, Greene, J. F. McKean, Little, Overton, Reeves, Elbrich, Layman '29, and Gorham and F. K. Thun '30.

T. C. SMITH DISCUSSES UNLIMITED CUTS PLAN

Unlimited Cuts for Seniors Were Proposed but Abandoned for Honors Work

During a recent interview with a Record reporter, Prof. T. C. Smith, Chairman of the Committee on Honors work, expressed his opinion on the question of unlimited cuts for seniors, raised in the editorial column of the last few issues of The Record. In regard to this pertinent matter, dealing with a subject that would affect so many of the undergraduates, Professor Smith said that he was entirely in sympathy with the idea of the students receiving more responsibility, but that they should realize, before attempting to carry it through to the finish, that unlimited cuts would necessitate a drastic change.

Professor Smith stressed two main points which he said ought to be thought over carefully in an intelligent consideration of the matter. The first point was to the effect that most of the courses in the college curriculum are organized under the theory that the majority of the students are present for each meeting. Two exceptions to this theory, where the presence of the senior would not be required at each meeting of his class, are the upper English courses, and several of those dealing with advanced History. The second main point, which arose directly out of the first, was that practically all the upper class courses were conducted in a co-operative way, and were best developed by group discussion. Continuing, he said that the only logical reasoning derived from these two points would be that such a course would be considerably damaged if unlimited cuts were allowed to seniors. "Therefore," said Professor Smith, "the undergraduates who are attempting to bring this matter to a head should first realize that the very character of the courses themselves would have to be changed so as to throw less emphasis on classroom work, before the principle of unlimited cuts can become a fact."

This principle was thoroughly discussed four years ago, when the Student Council appointed a committee to look into the matter, but was dropped in favor of the present "honors work" system, considered at the same time. By this system, approximately one-fifth of the Juniors and Seniors are given unlimited cuts.

W. O. C. Begins Task of Improving Local Trails

Inaugurating its program of extensive work on the shorter trails around Williamstown, the Outing Club conducted two hikes last Saturday afternoon, one up Pine Cobble and the Long Trail, the other along the Hopkins Trail. A number of W. O. C. signs were put up at strategic points, and the trails were relabeled and cleaned up where undergrowth obstructed them.

Led by Fedde and Winn '30, fourteen men followed the Hopkins Trail along Taconic Ridge to Carter Point and Snow Hole, returning by way of Williams Caves and Tri-State Corner. A second group went up Pine Cobble to Eph's Lookout where the trails were blazed and marked. This type of work will be continued on the two hikes scheduled for next Saturday, one to the Dome, and another from Petersburg Pass to the top of Berlin Mountain along the Taconic Trail.

AUDIENCE APPLAUDS YALE PUPPET SHOW

Short Plays and Vaudeville Acts Presented by Marionettes in Chapin Hall

The Yale Puppeteers, consisting of Mr. Forman G. Brown, Mr. Harry L. Burnett and Mr. Brandon Rhodamel, made their second appearance in Williamstown last Friday evening as the first attraction in the Thompson Course of Entertainments. They were received with generous applause by a large audience.

The puppet-play existed, of course, among practically all the early civilizations, in the eras of Babylon and the Pharaohs, in ancient Persia, China, Greece and Rome. It is, in fact, the oldest form of entertainment in the world, and there are plentiful allusions to it in all the existing literatures. The old Punch and Judy show in one form or other we associate with such literary figures as Omar Khayyam, Ben Jonson, Voltaire and Goethe. "To Bartholomew Fair", wrote Mr. Pepys, "to walk up and down, and there, among other things found my Lady Castlemaine at a puppet play and the street full of people waiting for her to come out."

Familiar as this form of dramatic entertainment has always been in Europe, it was rarely known in America until the first professional productions given in New

SCHOTT PICKED FOR ALL-AMERICAN TEAM

Editor of Spalding's Guide Book Names Swimming Captain in Breast Stroke

In Spalding's Guide Book of the National Collegiate Athletic Association for 1929, Frank J. Sullivan, Editor, has named Walter R. Schott of Williams as breast stroke on the All-American intercollegiate swimming team. In reviewing the 1928 intercollegiate swimming season, he stated that the captain of this year's Varsity was one of the "outstanding stars of the season and not only the National Collegiate champion in the event but the record holder as well."

At the annual championships of the National Collegiate Athletic Association held last March under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania, Schott established a new N. C. A. A. record in the 200-yard breaststroke with the time of two minutes 39 7-10 seconds. Of this meet, F. W. Luehring, chairman of the Rules Committee, said: "In nation-wide representation, high quality of performance, and number of contestants, this championship classic surpassed all preceding similar events since the event was established five years ago." In addition to the championship in the National Collegiate Association, Schott was awarded that honor for 1928 in the Intercollegiate Swimming Association, with the time of two minutes 39 2-10 seconds.

In reviewing the New England Intercollegiate Swimming Association, the Editor congratulated Williams on the new Lasell Pool and remarked on the meet of the New England Association held at Williams last year as follows: "A more complete and perfect equipment for an event of this kind could not be found." Among the outstanding performers of the season in this league are listed Healy, Putney, and Schott of Williams. The Editor named Schott on the New England Intercollegiate team while Healy was honored on the second team in the 300-yard medley race.

Students Take Charge in Band Reorganization

Complete reorganization of the Williams Band under strictly student control was begun at a meeting of that body last Sunday evening, following the resignation of Mr. C. L. Safford as leader because of the press of other duties and the feeling that it is more appropriate that the musicians should be under undergraduate direction. Elliott '29 was elected president of the organization, McKenna '30, secretary-librarian, and Dickerson '31 treasurer, while at the same time a committee was appointed to draw up a constitution. Mr. Safford will continue as unofficial coach.

There will be a second meeting in the Lasell Gymnasium at 7.15 next Sunday evening at which the attendance of all members is required as the new constitution will be read and discussed at that time. The new officers request that those who have played band instruments in the past but own none now should appear at this meeting, since the band will probably be able to arrange for the necessary implements.

'REPUBLICAN' NAMES ITS ALL-STAR TEAM

Choice Is Very Similar to Coach Caldwell's—Five Williams Men Are Honored

Announcing its selections for an All Star "Little Three" eleven, the Springfield Republican placed five Williams men, four Wesleyan, and two Amherst players on the mythical team. These selections followed closely in personnel the "All-Little Three" eleven drawn up recently by Coach Charley Caldwell of Williams.

The five Purple choices for the ideal team were Captain Andersen and Miller in the line, and Brown, Howe, and Putnam as three-fourths of the backfield. Miller, although a tackle, was placed at guard with Captain Andersen. The Republican took the liberty of placing him in this position as they believed that he displayed sufficient ability to handle that job better than his contemporaries. In their belief, Miller has the makings of a star lineman, citing his excellent showing against Amherst and Wesleyan. The Republican's choice was similar to Coach Caldwell's in other respects.

In explaining their selections, attention was called to the high standard of backfield men, and the low standard of the lines, especially in the tackle positions. This team was selected after watching the "Little Three" teams in action, and after consulting with Coaches Caldwell, White, and Wood. The complete line-up is as follows: Silloway (Wes) and Felt (A), ends; Harper (Wes) and Kirk (A), tackles; Andersen and Miller (W), guards; Sigafos (Wes), center; Putnam (W), quarterback; Howe, (W), left half; Brown (W), right half; Bagg (Wes), fullback.

Thanksgiving Service

The customary Union Thanksgiving service will be held this year at 10.35 a. m. on Thursday morning, November 29, in the Thompson Memorial Chapel. The Reverend Mr. Clement, of the Baptist Church, will conduct the services. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

FORUM SEASON OPENS WITH LECTURE SUNDAY

Max Eastman '05, Poet, Critic, and Psychologist Will Introduce Science of Humor

"The Exact Science of Cracking Jokes", or "What is Humor and Why", with some ancient and modern illustrations, will be the subject of a lecture by Max Eastman '05, which is to be delivered under the auspices of the Forum next Sunday evening at 7.30 o'clock in Jesup Hall. Mr. Eastman is well-known as a poet, a critic, a psychologist, and as an American thinker who has built up within his lifetime as wide a following in Europe as in the United States.

As a journalist, his editorship of The Masses before the war heralded the entire modern literary movement in America. As a speaker, the late President Wilson described his humorous talk as "the most delightful combination of thought and humor I have ever listened to." Mr. Eastman's lyrical poems are to be found in every anthology of American poetry today. He has just published a novel, "Venture", which is attracting wide notice and has already been translated into German, while his book, "The Sense of Humor", was hailed by Professor MacDougal of Harvard as "a distinct advance on the science". As a sociologist and thinker, Mr. Eastman is ranked by French critics with the great philosophers of their own country.

After graduating from Williams he taught Philosophy and Psychology for four years at Columbia University. While in college he was on the Lit Board and was Editor-in-Chief of the 1904 Gul. During his freshman year he won the Clarke Prize Scholarship.

New Play Substituted in 'Little Theatre' Program

Inasmuch as it has been found impossible to present Mateo Falcone, a dramatization of Prosper Merimee's short story, Sewall '29, President of the Williams Little Theatre, has announced that the Executive Committee of the organization will substitute for this play in its bill of December seventh, The Goal Gate by Lady Gregory. The other two plays, The Lost Silk Hat by Lord Dunsany and A Tragedy Rehearsed by Richard B. Sheridan, will be given as scheduled.

The Goal Gate is a skillful short tragedy. It is a story of Irish folks of the Irish country-side. The performance will be under the direction of Beall '30 who was to have directed Mateo Falcone. The remaining two plays on the bill are directed as announced before, with The Lost Silk Hat under Sewall '29 and A Tragedy Rehearsed under J. L. Casaday '29. The cast for the last play selected is as follows:

The Goal Gate
By Lady Gregory
Mary Cabell Mrs. Graham
Mary Cushin Mrs. Collins
Gate-Keeper Hall '30
Directed by Beall '30

Drum Major Wanted

All men interested in trying out for the position of drum major in the re-organized band are asked to report in the gym at 7.15 next Sunday evening.

Work of Training Members of Local Boys' Clubs Is Carried on by Contributions to W. C. A. Chest Fund

(This is the second of a series of articles on the welfare work supported by contributions of Williams men to the 1928-29 Chest Fund of the W. C. A.)

Heading the list of worthy activities supported by appropriations from the W. C. A. Chest Fund is Boys' Work, carried on by a special committee of the W. C. A., which will receive $3500 of the funds subscribed this year. Since there has been an increase of 64% in membership in the Clubs since last year, the Cabinet felt that this extensive work needed additional financial support. The work includes not only the maintenance of five clubs but also the operation of a summer camp and the enrolling on of inter-club athletics.

The committee, which is headed by W. French '29, is continuing the work of the past. Through J. Cornellier, the paid superintendent of the Clubs, and the advisory council of local citizens, the committee is able to keep in close touch with the parents, receiving valuable criticism from them which works for the best interests of the boys. The five clubs are run on this principle of parental cooperation.

A Boy Scout Troop for older boys was established last Spring. The clubs, which meet weekly, are located in Williamstown, South Williamstown, Clark Chapel, Blackinton, and Braytonville. The latter one is new, having been formed during the past spring. It is now well underway and in thriving condition. The towns where clubs are located have given excellent support to them. Not only has an advisory committee been formed in Williamstown, but Blackinton has adopted the idea and formed its own Board of Trustees, made up of citizens.

SPORTS AND SCANDALS

It gives us peculiar pleasure to publish today two letters from two alumni of Albany, not because we are gluttons for punishment, but simply because it gives us a chance to talk about ourselves. Which, if bad form, is nevertheless good exercise.

It is not our purpose to excuse our write-up of the Amherst game, which one of these gentlemen calls "the poorest attempt I have yet seen to cover a football game"; and which the other cleverly annihilates by the slap-on-the-wrist method. Nor do we propose to comment upon their ungente suggestions, remarkably similar, that in the future we copy our stories from the Springfield Republican. Constructive criticism is all too rare not to welcome it when it comes, and besides we have profound respect for readers who have the strength and take the trouble to hurl a few sharp-edged bricks in our direction. Anyone can toss insipid bouquets.

Several years ago THE RECORD was literally true to its name, dutifully presenting every Saturday and every Tuesday a record of what was happening here or of what had happened several days ago. There were long, bone-dry, and very correct sentences. No article began with a "the" or an "a" because this was considered trite. So instead we became trite by starting everything with thrilling participial phrases that went on and on and on. The suspense was awful, but there was nothing wet—and nothing readable. "Record style" soon meant a sort of play-by-play monotone, and many groans were called forth.

Then came a reaction. Friends of Mr. Hearst began clamoring for "human interest" stories; tabloid-thinkers cried for pictures; and athletes wanted to see the headlines take on more weight. There was no doubt of it: THE RECORD must get on the ball, or see its subscriptions dwindle away. Cautiously, but doggedly, last year's board tried to give the public what it wanted. Frozen features began to thaw, pictures bloomed, and headlines blared. But a looser style was not enough: we must have looser news. Give us scandal!

What happens when a schoolboy tries to write football games like Grantland Rice? The alumni from Albany have given us the answer. And what happens when young journalists try to sound like F. P. A.? Many of our best friends and severest critics have sweetly told us. The answer is "wet". Yet there are many others in College now who would rather read a breezy football story than know what it was all about by plodding through the whole game play by play. And there are many who still think that snappy columns like "Spring Street Topics" or "What Have You" are alone worth the price of subscription.

De gustibus non disputandum would be a cowardly way out; and in college journalism there is no such thing as a Golden Mean. At our age we must either be very, very serious or very, very funny. Inasmuch as we are not professional scribes of either sports or scandals, the result is something pretty awful.

And so we come to two conclusions: that neither undergraduates nor the public at large know what they want; and that even if they did we wouldn't be able to give it to them. If at times our style offends, it is merely because we are trying to please someone else. And failing to please anyone because we try to please everyone, we revert once more to "Record style", which, if horrible, is at least our own.

There will be no issue of THE RECORD next Saturday due to the Thanksgiving holiday.

"A SEVERE PAIN"

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

It has been my privilege since the Fall of 1910, to follow the fortunes of Williams Football Teams, in practically every game they have played. The present season has come as a very pleasant relief when compared with the last four years, both as to number of victories gained and the evident increase of spirit among the undergraduates.

To top off such a splendid victory as was obtained last Saturday on Pratt Field, with an account such as was published in THE RECORD November 20th, gives many of us a severe pain. Fortunately, I was present at the game or I would not know what it was all about; as for the Alumni who were denied the privilege of being present, your account of the game must give them the impression that Williams and Amherst were engaged in a combination debate and a spicy game of Prisoners' Base.

In the future, it might be well to copy the account of our games at Amherst or Wesleyan from the Springfield Republican, in order that those not at the field could tell what it was all about.

Very truly yours,
John A. MacGruber '14

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

I was very much pleased with the results of this season's football, and particularly with the College spirit, which has been a source of great comfort to me all through this past season, especially in view of the fact that for some years it has not been as spirited or as healthy.

I was glad to be at the Amherst game, but was much disappointed to read the account of the game in THE RECORD. It does not seem fair that Alumni who were

COMEDIES PRESENTED IN THE OPERA HOUSE

Plays Adapted From French Ably
Produced by 'Cap and Bells' Corporation

(The following is reprinted from the Dec. 14 issue of the 1908 Williams Weekly).

On Friday evening in the Williamstown Opera House, Cap and Bells presented The man who knew French, as adapted from the French of Bernard, by Asst.-Prof. Perry, and Moliere's comedy, A doctor in spite of himself, translated by Asst.-Prof. Weston. The attempt to produce plays adapted from a foreign language, and especially classic eighteenth century French comedy, is a unique experiment, but one which proved itself well worth the trial. The short "curtain raiser" needs no apology, even to an American audience. Containing a clever plot in the original, in its remodeled form it is up-to-date, undeniably funny, and in general very well acted. Moliere's comedy is of an entirely different nature. It is a classic, it is essentially old-fashioned and essentially French. It contains the sort of humor that all Paris has laughed at for two hundred years. From its nature such a production must appeal to its audience as a play of considerable historical interest, not as an American vaudeville act.

Friday night's performance left no doubt that every man on the cast could act, and that some were comedians of the first order. Practically every fault was such as can be remedied by further rehearsing. The main fault in the second play was the attempt to read into certain scenes a humor which is not there; to make the whole play uniformly funny. The first part of each play moved slowly, but the men soon caught the spirit of the thing, and, except for a few minor points, good action was maintained until the end. The costuming and make-ups deserve mention, those of the female characters and of Hazelton as Sganarelle being particularly striking.

In The man who knew French, the principal part, that of the adventurer posing as a French interpreter, was taken by Hazelton '09. The interpretation of this role has been changed quite recently from that of a man who carries all before him by mere consummate "nerve" to that of one who realizes his false position and is considerably frightened by his predicament. In spite of some inconsistency involved in his attempt to reconcile these roles, Hazelton's acting was clever and much appreciated by the audience. Some of the best acting in this play was done by Arnold '10 who, as Marie, imitated almost perfectly the French accent and mannerisms. The pitch of his voice, which detracted somewhat from the success of this part at Greenfield, was much improved. Williams '10 as the Frenchman with a limited English vocabulary, was particularly good, his only fault being too great a similarity of gesture. Dolph '10 took the part of the conventional hotel clerk with considerable spirit. Hanson '09 as the runaway groom. Latson '09, in the role of the Irish policeman, and Engelhard '09, who as "Buttons" could not quite manage to be tough and sleepy at the same time, all carried their parts well.

Sganarelle, in A doctor in spite of himself, was played by Hazelton '09. In the interpretation of the ignorant old peasant posing as a learned doctor, Hazelton was remarkable. In accent, in gesture, and in make-up, he was better than in any role he has ever taken. It is a very difficult part, but the player was well suited to it and took advantage of nearly every possibility. Johnson '11 and Gabriel '12 were not so good, their main fault being the overdoing of the comic in their parts. Dolph as Lucinda could hardly have been improved upon. He had little to say, but his action and his make-up were excellent. Williams '10 as the "irate parent" did not quite exhaust the possibilities of his part, but in places did good work.

The college orchestra furnished the music between the acts, and was much appreciated.

Gymnasium Notice

Mr. Messer requests that all students using the Laell Gymnasium observe two regulations: first, no one is to use the basketball courts unless dressed in gymnasium clothing; second, no one in street clothes is to enter the swimming level of the pool. Obedience to these rules is essential to the preservation of the building.

CROSS COUNTRY TEAM ENDS WINNING SEASON

Harriers Win Three Out of Four Dual Meets and Gain 'Little Three' Title

By easily winning the "Little Three" championship, and placing fourth out of a field of eleven in the cross country meet of the N. E. I. C. A. A. at Boston, the Williams harriers enjoyed the most successful season in the last four years. Three decisive victories out of four dual meets, over Hamilton, Middlebury, and Wesleyan, were experienced by the Purple runners, with only a defeat by R. P. I. in the first encounter of the season marring an otherwise perfect record.

Reviewing the past cross country season in more detail, it is seen that the team began with only a fair aggregation, but showed a steady improvement each week, until Coach Seeley presented a strong lineup for the final meets. After the season was once under way, the marked superiority of the Williams squad in dual meets was very noticeable.

The only meet lost by the Purple harriers was the first, the small margin of defeat being 25-30 in favor of R. P. I. The feature of this inauspicious beginning was the steady running of Goodbody, who succeeded in taking first place with a comfortable lead, and the plucky finish of Captain Moore, stricken with a severe attack of cramps on the last long hill. Hamilton was next defeated at Clinton by an almost perfect score, 17-38. Goodbody and Guernsey finishing in a tie for first position, followed closely by Moore. The next week, journeying to Middlebury, the Williams squad ran their best race of the season, defeating their opponents 20-35 in close to record time, with Goodbody and Guernsey again coming out in front. The Red and Black harriers of Wesleyan were then overwhelmed by a 19-36 win, Guernsey coming in first with a comfortable margin, and a week later, the Lord Jeffs were beaten by almost a 100 points in the New England Intercollegiate, thus clinching the "Little Three" championship.

Freshman Booters and Harriers Finish Season

Handicapped by a lack of good material in the incoming class, the Freshman soccer and cross-country teams finished rather mediocre seasons this fall, the former winning but one game out of three, and the latter, although showing signs of improvement, being unable to win any of its three races. Both squads, however, were benefitting by practice and acquired experience as the season progressed, as is clearly shown by the better performances made in the later encounters.

The harriers were overwhelmed, 18-45, in their opener with Albany High, lost to R. P. I. freshmen, 25-30, and in their final meet with Troy High the eighth place decided the contest, which was lost by the score of 27-28. Captain Roy was the one outstanding runner in the class, but he lacked the support of a well-balanced team, although Potter, Burnett, Walter, and Alexander ran good races. Among the other members of the squad who took part in the meets were Baker, Davol, Skinner, and Swift.

The 1932 soccer men were just coming into their own with their 6-4 victory over Holyoke High in the closing contest, after tasting defeat at the hands of the powerful Williston and Deerfield elevens by scores of 5-1 and 4-1 respectively. The team suffered from inexperience and lack of teamwork and passing in the earlier encounters, but practice remedied this in time to avert the misfortune of a series of losing games. Dohme, Boyd, Pace, Miller, Heermanee, Van Sandt, and MacMahon were the outstanding players, and could be counted on to turn in good performances in their respective positions.

"The Pilgrimage of Buddhism" is the title of Professor James Bissett Pratt's latest book recently published by Macmillan and Company and now on sale in local book stores. Philosophy Department since he took up teaching and is now the Mark Hopkins Professor of Intellectual and Moral Philosophy.

Professor Pratt, whose work, "India and Its Faiths", has been pronounced by Indian thinkers and Oriental scholars the best book on the religions of India, has been interested in Buddhism for a period of about 30 years. He has spent four Sabbaticals in the Far East with the sole purpose of getting acquainted with Buddhism and Hinduism at first hand. The greatest value, perhaps, of this latest book lies in its careful and sympathetic presentation, "based on personal acquaintance with monks, laymen, temples and worship," of what Buddhism means to representative living Buddhists in all Buddhist lands. The book is the result of long days and nights in native lands and monasteries, a 1500-mile trip up the Yangtze River, a ten-day tramp in the Diamond Mountains of Korea, and many other similar adventures. Besides "The Pilgrimage of Buddhism", Professor Pratt has written "The Psychology of Religious Belief", "What Is Pragmatism?", "Democracy and Peace", "Religious Consciousness", and "Matter and Spirit".

Dr. Wynne To Instruct Bankers

Assistant Professor William Harris Wynne, of the Economics Department, has been engaged to conduct a course in the theory and practice of banking by a group of 40 banking employees from Adams, North Adams, and Williamstown. Two separate groups of employees are being formed to take advantage of the course, one consisting of those from the northern part of Berkshire County, and one from the southern part. Once a week, before each group, Dr. Wynne will deliver lectures calculated to help the employees secure a better theoretical and practical knowledge of the banking business. At the conclusion of the series of 24 lessons, when both groups have become permanently organized, they will become affiliated with the American Institute of Banking.

Complicated Football

DECEPTION in offensive football has been carried to a superlative degree by Pennsylvania. The principle is simple enough. Keep the ball hidden from the other fellow and he doesn't know where it is going. It is little wonder that the Columbia players were deceived by it Saturday, because it was next to impossible to detect who had the ball from the side lines with the aid of binoculars.

Two or three feints are made at passing the ball to other players before it finally leaves Shober's hands. And when he does pass it to another back the latter promptly passes it to somebody else. It becomes exceedingly complicated to the opposition. Even the officials run around in a state of confusion, for they do not know where the ball is half the time, either.

The Way to Stop It

THE hidden ball trick is not new, for Harvard used it successfully under the Houghton regime. Pennsylvania has developed it to a higher degree of dexterity. It works perfectly against an opponent of limited power of counter-attack, but it can be and has been broken up.

Given a counter-attack of power, the forwards smash through and bowl over every possible ball carrier in sight. Certainly, if they tip them all over, they are sure to get the one who has the ball. It isn't necessary to ferret out the secret of the hidden ball mystery to stop the play.

Hardly a Secret

THE strange thing about Pennsylvania's football legerdemain is that the whole world doesn't know about it. The Quakers used a squad of almost fifty men, and all these players knew all about it. When that

Of course it would be thorough it would be the best way to say "Now

PENNSYLVANIA started the does, but it was sending in reserve

It must have teaching so many ever sent in single regiments.

THE abandon with naturally brings up as to where it is all going to stop. As it is now, it is impossible to keep track of them with accuracy. It would require a corps of secretarial experts to keep accurate account on the bench. Those football squads recruited from large student bodies have a decided advantage over the squads recruited from the smaller college organizations.

Some day there may be a new football rule limiting the number of players that can be used in a game. Less important rules have received favorable consideration. Unless this is eventually done, there is grave danger that there will be no room in the stadia except for reserve football players.

Rifle Club Makes Plans for the Coming Season

Plans for organizing a Freshman rifle team were discussed at a meeting of the Rifle Club held recently in Jesup Hall, at which time G. B. Fedde and C. H. Smith '30 were elected President and Vice-President respectively, and A. M. Lawton '31 was chosen Secretary-Treasurer. The decision to organize a Freshman team was made because of the large number of freshmen who attended the meeting and signified their interest in shooting, and about fifteen of them have already received preliminary instruction in the use of the Jesup Hall range.

It was also decided to have the regular rifle team consist of the ten best shots, based on the showing made in weekly try-outs, so that any man may get on the team by defeating one of the members and will retain his place as long as he himself is not outshot. Inasmuch as the Rifle Club has not had any insignia in the past, it was decided to award a charm of some sort to any member who fulfils the requirements which are yet to be determined. It was also announced that the first match of the season on Dec. 8 will be a doubleheader, when there will be a four-position match with Penn State and a prone match with Worcester Tech. Matches are also planned in which the freshmen will compete with Hotchkiss and the Worcester Tech yearlings.

W. C. A. Chest Fund Helps Local Boys' Club

The summer work in Williamstown and its vicinity was carried out by J. Cornellier. The summer camp at Lenox, one of the most expensive items on the Boys' Work budget, provides a healthy summer for about 75 eager young boys from the clubs. The work of building the character and physique of the campers is carried on under the guidance of a dozen undergraduates, who give their services without recompense of any kind.

The old Spring Street School, acquired last year, has been made into a clubhouse where the boys may hold their meetings and are able to spend their spare time. Here ample opportunities for recreation are provided, including books, pool, billiards, and other games. The building is open every afternoon and evening, and Cornellier or a student is always in charge. Rather than loiter about the streets the boys may go there to play.

The athletic program of the clubs includes football, basketball, and baseball games, and track meets in their respective seasons. Through the cooperation of Professor Messer and the department of athletics, the boys are allowed the use of the swimming pool in the Lasell Gymnasium on Friday evenings throughout the winter.

Two of the biggest features of the year's program are the Father and Son week-end and the Big Brother Banquet. The former is for the purpose of bringing fathers and sons together in closer relation. Undergraduates are the hosts of the boys at the latter function, and through this they receive a closer contact with the ideals and principles of the College.

The aim of the Boys' Work Committee is to teach the boys sportsmanship and good citizenship. It is headed by W. French '29, while van der Bogert '30 is assistant chairman. The following men are in charge of the various clubs: Junior Outing Club, N. Letchworth '31; Blackinton, J. Reynolds '31; Braytonville, H. Stewart '31; Clark Chapel, D. Meyers '31; South Williamstown, S. Leber '31; Boy Scout Troop, J. Cornellier; Divisional Supervisor, J. Palmer '29.

Infirmity Patients

Davidson '29 and Hufnagel '31 are at present confined to the Thompson Infirmary. If a student becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

Intramural Swimming to Launch Winter Contests

November 26—Opening the winter season of sports the intramural swimming meet will begin this afternoon in the Lasell Gymnasium Pool with trials in the 50-yard medley relay, 50-yard dash, 300-yard swim, 150-yard medley and fancy diving. On Tuesday trials in the remaining events the 100-yard backstroke, 100-yard free stroke, 100-yard breast stroke, and the 200-yard relay will complete the preliminaries. Finals in all events will take place sometime before December 4.

Relay Team to Practice Following Recess Period

Although the relay team will not engage in outside competition until the annual series of meets in February, Coach Seeley will start practice immediately after Thanksgiving. Strother, Skinner and Lane, all veterans from last year, will probably wear the Purple again this season, and Coach Seeley points optimistically to the largest squad in recent years, including, in all probability, Dougherty, Elbrick, McCormick, Lewis, Sessions, Straw, Truman, and others who wish to try out.

Examinations at midyears interfered with the relay schedule last year, and the team was able to attend only the Springfield games, where it lost a very close race to Amherst. However, in past years, the Melrose games in New York, the Boston A. A., and the Legion games of Boston have also been visited by the Williams relay team and various members of the track team.

Sextet to Go to Springfield

Inasmuch as pre-season hockey practice in the baseball cage has not had satisfactory results in other years, Manager A. W. Williamson has announced that practice in anticipation of the Christmas trip to Lake Placid will be held indoors in the Lasell Gymnasium while tentative plans have been made for team practice and individual skating on certain days in the Arena at Springfield. The Varsity will spend some afternoons and Saturdays on this indoor rink in order to be ready for the Amherst series during the Christmas recess.

Classical Society Meets

Convening for the first time this year on Friday afternoon, the Classical Society was addressed by three undergraduates on the subject "Roman Elections", at the home of Assistant Professor Avery of the Latin Department. The three speakers were G. M. Smith '29, who discussed the qualifications of candidates for consular offices in the time of Cicero, Steele '31, who outlined the conduct of the campaign, and Jarrett '29, who gave a description of the election proper. "It would seem to the investigator," said Mr. Avery, in commenting on the lectures, "that regular campaign tactics were just as frequent in ancient Rome as during our recent Presidential election. No doubt baby-kissing, bribery, brown robes, and pork-barrels played just as conspicuous a part in the political life of the Romans as they do in our own."

CHILDE HERALD PREDICTS

Once again and probably for the last time, Childe Herald enters the lists of football prophecy, fully be-armoured with gridiron knowledge. Thanksgiving Day brings many important games, for which the opponents have doubtlessly been pointing during the whole season. This fact makes the task of forecasting doubly difficult.

DR. GARFIELD PRAISES CLUB'S DEVELOPMENT

Annual Report To College Bulletin Cites Great Potentialities Of Commons Club

"The Commons Club is more nearly a miniature world than any other social groups on the campus and therefore offers a more favorable opportunity for the kind and scope of training that fits men for life," writes Dr. Garfield in his annual report to the Trustees, contained in the recently published Administrative Number of the Williams College Bulletin. After reviewing the history and praising the aims and methods of the Club, Dr. Garfield points out that the greatest problem now facing it is the realization of its own importance and mission.

After tracing the Club's history down to last year, Dr. Garfield continues as follows: "When, therefore different groups of students made known the wants of the Club and set forth the desirability of larger accommodation for the increasing number of the organization, the Trustees were glad to make the appropriation above mentioned for the development of an additional common room on the upper floor above the dining room in Currier Hall. It is noteworthy that graduate and undergraduate members of fraternities have joined heartily in promoting the development of the Commons Club, convinced, as they were, that it is for the best interests of the College.

"The meeting of the Alumni and undergraduates in the common room of the Club during Commencement week was a notable affair. The character of the gathering, the atmosphere of the occasion, the very place itself, offered a striking resemblance to life in the common room of an Oxford college. To think of the Commons Club as a place of resort for those who have not been chosen to membership in one or other of the fraternities is entirely to misapprehend the facts and certainly the character of the organization. The fraternities are relatively small in number and exclusive in membership. The Commons Club is large in number and open to any member of the College. It would be most unfortunate for the College to support only the former kind of social organization. The fraternities have made a substantial and very real contribution to the life at Williams. No one at all familiar with them and their long and honorable careers would wish to refuse them a place in the community, but the Williams tradition has always favored a much smaller proportion of fraternity members than has existed in other places. Whether consciously or unconsciously entertained, the justification for this lies in the fact that at least one half of our community seeks freedom rather than support in the development of its social instincts and intellectual powers. There are some, of course, in any community who lean heavily on their associates. These are not always the timid ones. More often than might be supposed, they feel the need of a certain social backing,—the advantages which come from association with those whose fortunes have been east in what is thought to be a more desirable environment. But an increasing proportion of students entering Williams College have strongly developed individual proclivities. To such as these, the Commons Club holds out a real opportunity. It is more nearly a miniature world than any other social groups on the campus and, therefore, it offers a more favorable opportunity for the kind and scope of training that fits men for life.

"I do not mean to say that there are not those who take a much narrower view. Some there are who regard themselves as socially and intellectually superior to their fellows. Of them I am glad to believe there are only a few, and wherever they are found an opportunity for missionary activity is presented. They are of those whose life is blighted by the so-called superiority complex, an affliction more fatal to one's future usefulness as a member of society than its opposite. To quote the words of one of last year's Seniors, a man of distinction, a leader on the campus, a member of one of the oldest fraternities,—words spoken in my presence to one of the leaders of the Commons Club,—'If you can carry out this year's plans for the Commons Club you will do a finer piece of work for Williams College than is possible in any other group'. For the past two years the development of the Club has been the topic of discussion with earnest groups of students who had come to see the real peril we were in unless the Commons Club could be made to appreciate its importance as one of the social groups on the campus, conscious of its mission and of the distinction between its character and organization and that of the fraternities. The self-imposed task of the Commons Club in looking after the academic standing and campus relations of its Freshmen is praiseworthy. It is a most important feature of its activities and in no wise inconsistent with the character of the organization."

Franklin D. Rudolph and Miss Margaret Fahey of Boston were married recently in New York City. Mr. Rudolph is in the general sales department of the American Can Co. at 120 Broadway.

Total Assets of College Increase $400,000 in Year

For the first time in its history the total assets of Williams College have exceeded the ten and one-half million dollar mark, according to the report of the treasurer, Willard E. Hoyt, who sets the total assets at $10,792,834.73 for the year ending June 30, 1928. Aside from this growth in total assets, the report also shows that the excess of receipts over expenditures was $16,913.93, while heavy charges against the surplus account have raised the overdraft from $5,714.35 to $34,118.53.

Changes in funds for the past year were marked by an increase of $414,561.53, and are distributed into gifts for scholarship funds totaling about $32,500, gifts of about $24,000 for athletic funds, gifts of about $92,500 for other funds, and various additions to the plant and net principal. The treasurer points out that the College treasury is advancing the amount pledged to the War Memorial Endowment Fund, which fund was used to finance the construction of the new gymnasium, and that $132,031.43 of these pledges is still unpaid.

Richard Herberich has recently been appointed Manager of the new Business Department of The Depositors Savings & Trust Co., of Akron, Ohio.

Soccer Team Ends Successful Season

ness in scoring power, which, however, disappeared in the Hamilton game, when the latter took a 6-1 drubbing. A powerful, second half attack, left the Buff and Blue fairly helpless and enabled almost every Williams forward to score at least one goal.

Harvard was the next opponent of the team, encountered at Cambridge on November 3. The Purple was eager to wipe out the 1-0 defeat of last year, and for a while, with a 1-0 lead, it looked as though this might be accomplished. Harvard rallied, however, and the score stood at a tie. Two overtime periods failed to break the draw, both teams battling on even terms. The following week the Wesleyan combination was met on Cole Field which had seldom been muddier. The contest was nevertheless extremely hard-fought. Williams took the offensive for the most part and in the first half forced the playing continually deep into Wesleyan territory. By a series of clever passes, Neilson scored the only Purple tally, registered early in the first period. In the second half a neatly placed corner kick accounted for Wesleyan's goal, which tied the count, and also the game.

Culminating a thoroughly successful season, the team engaged Amherst in the final game, and scored a brilliant and decisive victory over a team hitherto unbeaten by Williams. Willmott, ending a fine year's record in goal, thwarted many attempts at scoring on Amherst's part, while Bright, Thoms, and Captain Christie, the usual mainstays of the attack, ploughed through the Lord Jeff defense for four tallies. Both forwards and backs coordinated as never before, drove with remarkable accuracy, and outfought their opponents all the way, to win this much desired and highly-prized victory.

Delving back into the records of the team from the time it started it is interesting to note that in 1922, its first year, no victories were scored, but five losses were suffered. The following season the team improved, to score two wins and two tie games, as against four defeats. The next two years one victory and a tie score were obtained, opposing four setbacks in each year. In 1926 an improvement was seen in recording two successes and one draw to three losses. Last year a bad slump was encountered, one victory standing alone in five defeats. In summary, until this season, only seven victories were scored, while 28 setbacks were administered and five tie games played.

In regard to the 'Little Three', it might be noted that from 1922-1927 inclusive both Wesleyan and Amherst chalked up consecutive wins against the Purple. With the exception of 1924 and 1925, when Amherst eked out 4-3 and 3-2 victories, the Purple and White has had an easy time winning from Williams. The total number of goals scored in that period show 29 for Amherst as against a mere seven for Williams.

Following is a record of the season:

Williams	5	St. Stephens	1
Williams	1	R. P. I.	0
Williams	6	Hamilton	1
Williams	1	Harvard	1
Williams	1	Wesleyan	1
Williams	4	Amherst	2

Total 18 Opponents 6

Individual scoring is as follows:

Bright	5	center half
Christie	3	inside right
Neilson	3	center forward
Thoms	2	outside left
McKittrick	2	inside left
Park	2	outside right
Phelps	1	outside right

unable to see the game, should be deprived of a reasonably coherent account of the game. The account in THE RECORD was not at all descriptive of the game played at Pratt Field. In fact, none of the games were well written up, but last Saturday's write-up was the poorest attempt I have seen yet to cover a football game.

Might it not be well to copy the story of the games from some Boston or Springfield newspaper which undoubtedly gives a clear description, in THE RECORD, so that absent Alumni might have the chance that was denied them, of knowing just how the game was played?

Sincerely yours,
Charles B. McEwan '07

ENVOIOUS, FIERY, IMPOLITE
To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

In a recent editorial in your paper, Phi Beta Kappa came in for a bit of envious derision. At least that is how the writer explained similar tirades on colored hats and tie pins. Such fiery (and impolite) lava as oozed into your column smacks either of envy or of prejudice against what the writer himself calls "all for which Williams fundamentally stands". Phi Beta Kappa in its uselessness as depicted by him is certainly not an object of envy, wherefore it is the purpose of this communication to show that the writer of the editorial is prejudiced.

Prejudice is born of half-understanding and finds an outlet in ridiculing the half that is not known. And so the writer, impressed with the bustle of most campus organizations, finds one that slumbers, and seeks rudely to disturb with a stream of invective acid the peaceful and unassuming digestings of eleven scholarly stomachs. Half-understanding it is that thinks eleven men chosen on a basis of scholastic ranking are ipso facto a congenial group most naturally forming an organ for expressing the student point of view toward the curriculum. Men interested enough in their courses (or mayhap sufficiently uninterested in other things) to obtain high grades, are not for that reason as such, expert educationalists able to discuss curricular questions. An executive and practical temper is needed to deal with such problems to which the mind that is "sickled o'er with the pale cast of thought" is often hopelessly foreign. Then too it is conceivable that the executive minds may have so devoted their energies to curricular and extracurricular activities, that the Golden Key eludes what would otherwise have been a successful grasp. Finally there is already in existence a student curricular committee formulated for the purposes that the writer would have Phi Beta Kappa adopt.

Perhaps, it may be said, Phi Beta Kappa as a scholastic group ought to meet regularly for discussions. Yet, there is no mystic union among eleven successful mark-getters. Indeed the divergence of departments represented would seem to set up a barrier that only the most exhaustive of intellects could overleap. In Williams College we have a Science Club, a Phil Union, a Classical Club, and linguistic Cercles and Vereins, all media of scholarly discussions in the separate fields, which anyone interested may attend. If Phi Beta Kappa wishes to add its name to this list, that is its privilege. So also anything that it may care to "do" is a matter of privilege and not one of duty.

The only function left for Phi Beta Kappa is, as the writer says, the wearing of Golden Keys. But this is sufficient warrant for its existence and is in no way an insult to the intellectual purposes of the college. These keys represent what the writer admits to be all for which Williams fundamentally stands. They are by way of recognition of scholarly proficiency and so serve as actual stimuli for endeavor along these lines. Possibly this is artificial. Possibly scholarship is its own reward. Only the mature mind finds it so, and since many college students are immature, the slightly shallow means are legitimate if they help attain a laudable end. No one who knows his Williams ever thought the Golden Key caused one of those courtly competitions that grace the athletic retinue. People don't study here to get a golden stomach-protector alone, but if they study the harder because of it, its existence is justified. To those who wear it, the key is a sort of passport to scholastic circles of foreign climes, and serves its useful if humble purpose.

Sincerely,

S. L. Faison, Jr., '29

Editor's Note—We reluctantly accept the correction, made necessary by our half-understanding, that Phi Beta Kappa not merely has done nothing, but also can do nothing. And even in the face of this disillusionment we not only do not begrudge the golden reward to its wearers, but also still aspire to win one for our own humble stomach. D. R. H.

Yale Puppet Show

York by Tony Sarg in 1916. Since that time, however, there has been a considerable revival of interest in the artistic possibilities of the marionettes. At present there are in the United States at least fifteen professional companies of puppeteers. In Europe since the world war the interest in this art has also increased, and many permanent puppet-theatres have been established. Richard Teschner of Vienna has achieved extraordinary effects in his small private theatre with his highly sophisticated art. In Czechoslovakia, for example, the government has fostered puppet shows during the last ten years in its schools and even in its army, hundreds of puppet-theatres have been established, and the repertoire of high-grade performances has included Hamlet.

All this activity in producing puppet-plays has led, naturally, to interesting speculations by such men as Alfred Kreymborg concerning the future possibilities of this art and concerning the relation of the technique of the marionette to the technique of the living actor.

The Revue presented Friday evening afforded much genuine merriment, and it seems ungracious to eulogize it at its limitations. For the benefit of most of the spectators, however, the stage of the puppets should have been elevated. It was difficult, moreover, even for those in the front rows to understand many of the lines, especially in the last play, The Gooseberry Mandarin. From the point of view of many of those present it was unfortunate that virtually one half of the program was a repetition of that presented last year. The Five-Foot Bookshelf, an amusing satire on bringing culture to darkest Africa, and The Weather, a gay morality play on the theme of cooperation were both written by Mr. Brown, a member of the troupe. The latter was especially well presented. The prologues were cleverly written, and the musical interludes provided much amusement.

The extreme burlesque, and the slap-stick clowning methods of the old Punch and Judy tradition were emphasized particularly in the presentation of Pyramus and Thisbe. In The Gooseberry Mandarin by Grace Ruthenberg (printed in The Theatre Arts Monthly for July 1928) the broadly farcical note seemed at times out of key. Much subtlety and suggestiveness are possible when the puppets are most skillfully handled, and in an evening's program presented by a group who have had the benefit of five years' experience a greater variety of dramatic effects is reasonably to be expected.

HAMILTON GAINS DECISION OVER WILLIAMS DEBATERS

Purple Fails to Defend American Advertising in Annual Debate With Hamilton

Scoring American advertising as "truth with a very small t", the Hamilton College debaters were successful in convincing an audience at Clinton, N.Y., last Monday evening, that "this house should deplore the effect of advertising upon modern life." Despite a stubborn defense presented by a Williams team of Stern '29, Gilbert '30, and Park '30, on the grounds that advertising is an economic necessity to both the producer and consumer, the persuasive powers of the Hamilton team carried the audience vote by the decisive majority of 69 to 20.

The introductory speaker for the affirmative, E. C. Douglas '29, of Hamilton, laid the foundations for the affirmative case by exposing the falsehood in advertising matter. He attacked the "slogan system of advertising", pointing out that in a country-wide questionnaire many producers refused to reveal the relation of their slogan to their product, on the grounds that it was a "business secret." Leading off for the negative, Gilbert '30 replied that advertising must be judged by the total effect of all advertising, and not by specific instances of dishonesty. He then outlined the case that the negative would follow, and supported the proposition that advertising is of almost incalculable value to the producer.

J. F. Meagher '31, for Hamilton, then continued the attack upon advertising dishonesty, contending that it is directly responsible for the demoralizing effects of material prosperity. He cited as evidence the testimonial form of advertising, the destruction of business ethics, and the immense amount of pure waste in advertising useless articles. Stern '29 denied the demoralizing effect of advertising on the consumer, and stated that, on the contrary, it greatly benefited the consumer by making possible the introduction of inventions and the publishing of magazines, and keeping prices at a reasonable level.

The final speaker for the affirmative, J. H. Niemeyer '30, claimed that advertising is economically unsound, as a mere transfer from one company to another. He also submitted figures from an advertising agency, stating that 90% of all advertising is wasteful to the community. Concluding for the negative, Park '30 developed the moral and educational values of advertising, stressing the work of the Federal Trade Commission and the advertisers themselves in enforcing truthful printed matter, and the stimulus to thinking provided by advertisements.

A four minute general rebuttal by Douglas concluded the debate. The decision was announced by President Frederick C. Ferry of Hamilton, who acted as presiding officer during the evening.

W. C. A. Explains Smaller Items of Annual Budget

In addition to the items already explained in the preceding issues of The Record, the Chest Fund of the Williams Christian Association makes an appropriation of $400 to the American Red Cross, which is to be used both locally and nationally. The sum has been raised this year from $300 to $400 in view of the heavy drain on the organization's resources through the Mississippi flood and the recent Florida disaster. A large percentage of the current appropriation will be given to the local Red Cross Chapter since it has had lately to cover heavy expenditures. An appropriation of $100 is also made from the Chest Fund to aid both the national and international work of the Student Y. M. C. A.

SALES SHOW READING TASTES OF STUDENTS

The "Post" and "Cosmopolitan" Are Favorites with Humorous Types Following

Recent surveys taken in local bookstores indicate that, while the average student may immerse himself in literature of a classical and philosophical nature during a part of the day because of the necessity of such material in the pursuit of an education, his tastes in reading for pleasure confine themselves in great measure to that all-American production, the magazine. Though no adequate information is available concerning magazines subscribed to on the campus, bookstand sales may be taken as an illustrative if not strictly accurate guide.

It appears that the Saturday Evening Post and the Cosmopolitan are the highest in favor of all the weeklies and monthlies of any class whatever. Lagging far behind the Post come other publications of a similar nature, such as Liberty and Colliers, while among the weeklies of a more or less humorous nature Judge leads Life by a narrow margin. Photoplay, in the vanguard of the motion picture magazines, is totally eclipsed by Cosmopolitan in aggregate sales, and very few periodicals dealing with sports, travel, or the outdoors find any market at all. College Humor stands preeminent in its field with a circulation of ten times that of any of its rivals.

There are two fields almost entirely overlooked by the average student in selecting his reading material. One is that covered by such standard types of magazines as the Atlantic Monthly, Current History, Scribners, the Forum, and the so-called "political" weeklies typified by the New Republic and the Nation. A more commendable tendency is the avoidance of "art" magazines and similar sensational literature of dubious worth.

W. C. A. IS HOST AT FATHER-SON DINNER

Third Annual Banquet Is Attended By 221—Professor Mears Is Toastmaster

Concluding a weekend of Father-and-Son festivities, which included a swimming meet in the Lasell Gymnasium on Friday, won by the Mohawk Club, and an outing to Broad Brook on Saturday, the third annual Father-and-Son banquet was held on Monday, November 26, at 6:30 p. m., under the auspices of the Boys' Work Committee of the Williams Christian Association at the Williams Inn. The Rev. Stephen M. James, of Pittsfield, was the principal speaker of the evening, having as his topic, "The Chance of a Lifetime is Life."

During the banquet, which was attended by 221 local boys and their fathers, musical entertainment was furnished by the Purple Knights. Professor Brainerd Mears, chairman of the Chemistry Department and a director of the Boys' Clubs, acted as toastmaster. After the blessing had been invoked by the Reverend Joseph H. Twichell, and dinner was well under way, Professor Mears introduced William G. French '29, Chairman of the Boys' Work Committee, who expressed his gratification at the successes of the Boys' Clubs this year, and in turn introduced Kenneth Kepner '28, who was presented a wrist-watch in admiration of his work last year with the Boys' Clubs. Mr. Kepner congratulated the committee on its work and expressed hopes for another successful year. The next speaker was Richard Trendway, speaking in behalf of the Boys' Clubs, who thanked the Fathers, the undergraduates, and John Cornelli, who is in charge of the Clubs, for the interest they have shown in the organization. Assistant Professor Elbert C. Cole was next presented, and spoke in behalf of the Fathers, thanking the undergraduates of Williams for the splendid work they had done for the boys of Williamstown. In the last talk of the evening, the Rev. Stephen M. James of Pittsfield urged the boys to take advantage of every little opportunity, for "it is the aggregate of these opportunities that make up life." He emphasized the importance of self-respect, education, willingness, and sportsmanship in realizing the opportunities that are presented in everyday life.

'Cap and Bells' Decides on Christmas Itinerary

Rehearsals for the Christmas play of Cap and Bells which is to be The Pigeon, by John Galsworthy, have been going on for a week, and final announcement of the cast that will make the trip, will be made in a short time. The itinerary of the trip has been completed with the exception of Baltimore, where a tentative agreement has been made to play on January 5.

After a period of indecision, the Galsworthy play was finally chosen, and tryouts for the cast were immediately held. A tentative cast was chosen last week, but due to the fact that several roles are still undecided, definite announcement of the cast has been withheld.

The itinerary is as follows:

December 20	Williamstown
December 26	Buffalo
December 27	Cleveland
December 28	Winnetka, Ill.
December 29	Indianapolis
January 2	Columbus, O.
January 4	Pittsburgh
January 5 (tentative)	Baltimore

Cagers Start Stiff Practice

Intensive practice for the opening game with Clark on Saturday will be started by the basketball team this week, according to Coach Messer, and he is confident that the players will be in excellent form for such an early stage in the season. Many members of the squad were away over the Thanksgiving holiday, but after a stiff session this week, Mr. Messer hopes to start the season successfully in the opener Saturday.

'Causality' Is Subject of Dr. Lamprecht's Lecture

Dwelling on the compulsion and the immediacy of "Causality", Professor Sterling P. Lamprecht '11, addressed the Philosophical Union on that subject in Griffin Hall on the evening of Sunday, November 18. After graduating from Williams, Professor Lamprecht obtained a doctor's degree at Columbia, and was called to Amherst as Professor of Philosophy last year, following teaching experience at Columbia and Illinois.

The speaker opened his address by showing what his conception of causality was not, and then proceeded to define it as "a relation that holds between particulars, and is in some sense necessary or compelling". But he then stated that (Continued on Fifth Page)

FRATERNITY MEETING SCORES ROUGH HAZING

Conference at New York Debates on Value of 'Hell Week' and Deferred Rushing

Representatives of many fraternities from colleges all over the United States met at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York last week for the Intrafraternity Conference which debated and discussed the questions of "deferred rushing", "rough house initiations", and "interfraternity council management". Dean Agard, W. H. Doughty '11 '29, and Willard '29 were the Williams delegates at this meeting, which included men from most of the Western Conference colleges and Stanford University.

Rough initiations were generally condemned by the Conference although they were upheld in a formal debate. H. P. Flint, executive secretary of Tau Kappa Epsilon, called the activities of "hell week" "outbursts of sadistic temperament, which show that even the cultured college man has not learned to control his primitive instincts. D. Sherbondy of Ohio Wesleyan, who supported "rough initiations" in the debate, contended that a rough initiation served to make the ritual service more impressive, though he thought that (Continued on Fifth Page)

'Theatre' Chooses Officers

Several changes of importance have recently been made in regard to officers of the Little Theatre. Gilbert '30, secretary of the organization, reports that J. R. Owe '30 has resigned as Stage Manager, W. B. Tippy '30 succeeding him; and upon the resignation of R. F. Miller '30 as Member-at-Large, A. A. Reiff '30 was elected to fill the vacancy. Heernance '31 replaces Baxter '30 on the Play Reading Committee. The following have been elected to key membership: Demuth '29; F. Anderson, Beall, and S. Davis '30; Gane, Heernance, Lucas, and R. Wheeler '31.

Professor Odegard Criticizes City Manager Plan of Government in Article Appearing Soon in 'Plain Talk'

Government by City Managers, an article by Prof. P. H. Odegard of the Government Department, has recently been accepted by Plain Talk, and will appear in an early issue. Professor Odegard, in some 3,000 words, explains the origin of the much-discussed City Manager Plan, states its defects and advantages in detail, and shows what may be expected of it in the future.

The author begins his article by saying that this revolution in the government of our cities was brought about by the citizenry as a whole becoming disgusted with the good old days of police graft, franchise stealing, and general civic corruption. Galveston, Texas, took the first forward step toward the modern theory, when it was granted a new charter in 1901, following the exposing of the existing political organization, reeking with corruption and incompetence, on the occasion of a disastrous tidal wave that caused great loss of life and property. This charter provided for five commissioners, elected at large by the citizens of Galveston, who were to apportion among themselves the headships of the four departments of civic administration, the remaining member acting as general coordinator with the title of mayor-president. Each commissioner made all minor appointments within his department, but the commissioners as a

EASTMAN EXPLAINS SCIENCE OF HUMOR

'Play Is a Definite State of Being in Which Success Is Fun and Failure Is Funny'

Describing "The Exact Science of Cracking a Joke" as "playfully disappointing somebody and then slipping a satisfaction into the very heart of the disappointment", Max Eastman, Williams '05, opened the Forum season last Sunday evening in Jesup Hall. Illustrating his talk with a series of humorous sallies which kept the audience in a continuous uproar, Mr. Eastman explained and analyzed the factors which are necessary for the successful production of a joke.

After stating that "nothing kills a laugh quicker than to explain a joke" and that the object of his talk was to explain all jokes, Mr. Eastman prefaced his talk with a warning to the audience to prepare to meet its doom, as it would never laugh again. "Laughter is caused by disappointment", he said. "Humor is disappointed expectations. It is a certain kind of disappointment, not every kind. What kind depends on how one's feelings are involved." After alluding to the Gospel as something that "the wider you spread it the thinner it gets", he illustrated the part of disappointment in humor by telling the story of a savage, who when denied salvation by the missionary because he had two wives, immediately proceeded to kill the extra spouse.

"Humor is playful disappointment", he continued, "not serious. Play is a definite state of your instincts. It is not something you do, but something you are while doing it. Play is a superficial state when we get satisfaction quicker than in serious life. A playful shock of our will is met by laughter." Mr. Eastman here described two approved methods of entertaining a baby. The first is "Laugh, and then make a perfectly terrible face. The baby will laugh too." Another way is to pretend to give him something and then take it away. These bear out Kant's definition of a joke, which is "a strained expectation which comes to nothing."

"In adult life it is easier to take others' disappointments playfully", he continued. "That is why they laugh when you fall down." There are two schools of laughter, he explained. One believes that its essence is derision, the other that it is in essence social, genial, and friendly. The first considers laughter as "a triumphant fun you have when others fall down, make fools of themselves, or hurt themselves." This was made clear by the relating of Stephen Leacock's story of a man who wished to open a bank account by depositing $56, but was so flustered and awed by the bank's pretentiousness that he went to the manager to deposit the money, stepped into the safe instead of the door, and after succeeding in opening the ac- (Continued on Fifth Page)

Professor Pratt Explains Why the W. C. A. Chose Lingnan University, Canton, for 'Williams in China'

(This is the third of a series of articles on the welfare work supported by the contributions of Williams men to the 1928-29 Chest Fund of the W. C. A.)

"You couldn't find an institution in China more appropriate for the support of Williams than Lingnan University at Canton," believes Professor J. B. Pratt, whose report after spending a week at the University in 1923 at the request of the W. C. A. resulted in the resumption of contributions which had for a time been turned into other channels. The increase of this item to $1000, giving it second place in this year's W. C. A. budget, is an attempt to show a fuller sympathy for this potential "Williams in China".

"I don't know anything more promising in the way of Eastern help," Professor Pratt continued. "Recent history has shown that the real impetus in the new China comes from the South. 300 leaders, drawn from Canton, the southern provinces, the states of the Malay peninsula are being trained at Lingnan. They are an up-to-date, forward looking, big lot. In them the feeling of nationalism is high, and they understand the dangers confronting their country."

"The atmosphere of Lingnan is much the same as that of Williamstown, a free and informal spirit, cordial relations between students and faculty, and a sense of cooperation. It is in no way denominational and has the backing of no missionary board. The name has been changed from Canton Christian College to Lingnan and a Chinese president has taken charge in order that the University may be a genuine Chinese institution.

"At present the faculty is about half American and half Chinese. A. H. Holt, a graduate of Williams in the class of 1920, is now on the University staff as a professor of English." Indicating that politics, religion, and culture were not the only phases of life for which leaders are being developed, Professor Pratt pointed out the special work done in the advancement of the agricultural science, particularly in the fields of wheat raising and silk culture. In 1923 the University officials had high hopes that Williams College as a whole would endow a professorship at Lingnan, preferably in political science, economics, or Western history, which would then have been filled by a Williams man.

The first contribution of Williams students to Lingnan was made a number of years ago, but for one reason or another these contributions were soon deflected to the support of the Y. M. C. A. at Soo Chow, which became for a time the "Williams in China", just as the Peking Y. M. C. A. is today known as the "Princeton in China".

PUPPY MARRIAGE

The Herald-Tribune thinks the Columbia Spectator did a fine thing when it reprinted last week an article from the Cornell literary magazine on the thrilling subject of "Student Marriage". The Tribune also thinks the Spectator did a fine thing when it praised this article in an editorial. "What is impressive about these two undergraduate commentaries," runs the saga, "is their serious, frank, and realistic consideration of the fact that students are, like the rest of the world, both sexual and social animals."

The articles may have been serious; they certainly were frank; but as long as we happen to be one of the "sexual and social animals" which the Cornell man is pleased to dissect, we violently deny the realistic part. Of course we appreciate a certain difference between the boy-girl situation at Williams—where the mercury drops low, and that at Cornell and Columbia—where there is necessarily greater opportunities for a convenient intermingling of the sexes. But there are so many sweeping and generalized statements in this essay that it seems to render it more a picture of the American Undergraduate Exposed than of the particular situation which may prevail at Cornell. For example, the writer declares that there are three ways open to the amorous college boy: "we must observe total abstinence, seek relief in liaisons, or face the responsibilities of marriage."

The first of these is dismissed rather abruptly as an "impossible dream" (nothing monkish about us!); the second, he hints, is undesirable. Which leaves student marriage the solution. Q. E. D. But it seems to us that liaison (meaning something like illicit or free love) is a strong word for promiscuity, and that promiscuity is a strong word for what goes on when a college boy meets a girl—whether in the back seat of his friend's automobile, or in a pew at Sunday chapel.

When people write about life in the colleges, why do they invariably use such big black strokes—just as if anyone could be all good or all bad? It is commendable to talk seriously and frankly about these matters, and to print views on the Sweet Mystery of Life, but it would be much more commendable if some one would rise up and add a few touches of truthful shading here and there. We cannot all be dumped into the same Hell, any more than we can all be perched on the same church spire.

So student marriage, we are told, is the solution—but the solution of what? Where is the problem? Is marriage really a preferable alternative to abstinence or promiscuity for people who are still in the puppy stage? It would mean, we fear, little more than promiscuous marriage, sometimes called companionship (companions no end!) In short we fail to feel the force of a suggestion which, in order to do away with a little rumble-seat cooing, would give that tottering institution one more brutal shove toward the brink. The writer, of course, is aware of the immediate impracticability of his suggestion, but the fault, he infers, lies not in his idea but in a society that frowns upon adventures in advanced contraceptives, which would be the only way of making student marriage an economic possibility.

Marriage—early or forty-five-and-bald—has two aims: the opportunity for "legal beatitude", as Max Eastman puts it, and the creation of children. We presume that undergraduates in college have little desire for this second blessing. It costs something like $500 to be born clumsily, $1,000 expertly. And this has nothing to do with cradles, diapers, measles, and rattles. Student marriage would—and probably does now where it occurs—cut the old-fashioned aim of matrimony exactly in half. All the pleasures without the pangs.

We do not intend here to embark upon the glamorous subject of birth-control, nor to spout a moral monologue, but with all due respect for principles of politesse we do assert that our private view of this suggestion is that it is pretty assinine. We would ask our collegiate friends who think that matrimony is the proper choice between a democratic love and no love at all. If a student makes a mistake by being too cordial to house party girls, or even to co-eds, is it likely that he will do the right thing when it comes to a question that involves in a much deeper sense the lifetime of at least two lives? With a slight stretching of the imagination we can picture 500 Cornell students married to 500 co-eds. Imagine the triangles, the jealousies, the material for moving pictures! It is hard enough, we are informed, to keep a mere house party girl under control. We can picture the dean's office turned into a divorce court, the student council acting, possibly, as a sort of license bureau, and domestic dramas transported in all their fury from the dormitory to the classroom.

It is easy to laugh at bold suggestions of this sort, but that is no reason why we should not laugh, especially when they are taken so seriously by people who might think we all feel the same way about student marriage. Possibly the editor of this paper is the only one at Williams who is pained by the thought of a domesticated, divorce-ridden, contraceptive college—but he hopes not. We do not mean that there is anything abnormal or necessarily regrettable about student marriages, but we do feel that serious complications would inevitably arise if this became the accepted way for young sexual and social animals to be naughty. Far more serious than whatever may go on now.

Despite the great frankness and broad-mindedness which is supposed to characterize the younger generation, we are inclined to agree with the editorial writer of the Tribune that "it is perhaps time that the colleges undertake to make an honest part of the curriculum the subject matter with which students between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five must necessarily be concerned." At Williams the freshman is supposed to coast safely through his plastic ages or what he may have discovered in Hygiene—an excellent introduction to the theory of living, but hardly a workable guide for the young man who thinks he's in love. If colleges would catch up with their students in the frank and serious discussion of sex, there would be less wandering about in the dark, less misguided talk about student marriage—puppy marriage!

A SCHOLARLY COMPROMISE

To the Editor of THE RECORD,

Dear Sir:

An editorial which appeared in your paper several issues ago entitled, Phi Beta Kappa, seems to have stirred up at least one member of that body to the extent of replying in a communication which was labeled "envious, fiery, impolite" and which attempted to point out that The Record was overstepping its bounds of editorial rights when it presumed to attack the inactivity of the above mentioned society. Unfortunately, the communication itself was not couched in the mildest terms and rather conveyed the wrong impression to some of your readers who might be interested in the question. It required rather careful reading to assure oneself that the writer of the communication was not advocating passive inactivity on the part of the Phi Beta Kappa Society or at least maintaining that the society was unable to function as a unit along any constructive lines. This, of course, could hardly have been the stand of the writer who is a member of the society and must therefore have a considerably higher idea of its aims and duties. It would seem that real objection to your editorial is to be found in its demand that the Phi Beta Kappa Society do something to justify its existence at Williams. The communicator mentioned above quite properly held that its existence is already justified by the nature of its membership requirements, and I believe that this is the real point of his article. There can be no doubt about his contention that no other organization has the right to challenge the Society and its existence or the authority to dictate what its

To face each day's reckoning as if it were the most important of all days is characteristic of men in the telephone industry. That viewpoint, expressed in the varied terms of applied science, laboratory research, financing and management, guides Bell System men in their respective fields of public service.

Communications

program must be in order to fulfil its proper function.

The purpose of this communication is simply to strike a compromise between The Record's editorial and the article by Mr. Faison. That The Record had a point is beyond question, for there is a great deal that the Phi Beta Kappa Society can do and which it has as yet not even attempted. Being composed of the highest standing men in the undergraduate group it should be able to further the educational advancement of the College from within the ranks. Without in the least interfering with the unofficial undergraduate curriculum committee, the Society offers an excellent opportunity for the formulation of mature undergraduate opinion upon many questions of real interest to the student body. The Record has justly pointed out that as yet the Society has taken no such steps, and in calling attention to this fact alone the editorial has accomplished something worthwhile. It has shown to the College body that the Society can be a real force and, even more important still, it has stimulated some interest within the Society itself as these several communications may show.

The value of Mr. Faison's communication is to be found in his point that the "men with the Golden Key" are not forced to justify their presence on the Williams campus by any organized activity if they choose not to do so. But, it is well to state that the intellectual effort expended in the attainment of a Phi Beta Kappa Key has not so exhausted the contestants that they are incapable of any further mental effort. Hence, this communication wishes to point out that within the Society itself there is a desire and intention to make Phi Beta Kappa stand for more at Williams than "eleven Golden Keys on eleven scholarly stomachs". Perhaps, the chief value of this series of articles on the Phi Beta Kappa Society is to remind the undergraduates of its existence as an organization and to point out that it is in a position to function for the interests of the undergraduates in questions which relate to the curriculum. But it is well to remember that the Society by nature of its rather rigid membership requirements fully justifies its presence in any community devoted to higher education.

Sincerely,

Wm. H. S. Wells '29

CHILDE HERALD IS FOILED

With the last issue of The Record, Childe Herald completed his football predictions for the year. Although it was his vain hope to close his season with a list of correct scores, the gods were against him. As a result, only two of the games forecast for Thanksgiving Day were correct, but a word of justification may be said. The Syracuse-Columbia game was an acknowledged upset, giving Syracuse its first major victory of the year. The Oregon Aggies came out of the west with unknown strength and were able to overthrow unexpectedly the N. Y. U. team, which had been awarded first place in the East. Childe Herald is at a loss to justify his prediction of the So. California-Oregon match, and is forced to admit that he took a wild guess, never having heard of either of the teams before.

The predicted scores and actual outcomes were as follows:

Teams	Forecast	Outcome
Brown vs. Colgate	16-13	14-7
Penn. vs. Cornell	49-0	13-0
Syracuse vs. Columbia	14-6	6-9
Oregon vs. N. Y. U.	25-13	0-28
Oregon State vs. So. Calif.	26-6	12-14

This Changing World

To-day, you can see big buildings erected noiselessly—by electric welding.

The structural steel worker is dropping his clattering hammer for the electric arc. Silently, swiftly, rigidly, economically, buildings are being fabricated by electric welding, which knits steel with joints as strong as the metal itself.

Building silently! Nothing seems impossible in this electrical age.

Not only in building construction, but in every human activity, we instinctively turn to electricity to add to the comforts of life and to eliminate the wastes of production—another evidence that the electrical industry is maintaining its leadership in this changing world.

Not only industrial equipment, but electric refrigerators, MAZDA lamps, and little motors that add to the comforts of home, are manufactured by the General Electric Company. All are identified by the G-E monogram—a symbol of service.

W. O. C. Marks Dome Trail

Following their work of the previous Saturday on the Hopkins Trail, the W. O. C. continued their activity of marking and improving trails around Williamstown on a trip to the Dome last Saturday afternoon. Led by Cannon and Guernsey '31, a party of six W. O. C. members completed the Fall program of trail renovation by painting blazes and putting up markers on the Dome trail, so that it can now be easily followed. They plan to start construction on new trails to Prospect Mountain and Stony Ledge in the near future.

Appreciation

The management of the Musical Clubs wishes to thank all those men who sacrificed their time during the past week to assist in sending out the patroness invitations and alumni letters in preparation for the Christmas trip.

THE ROUND TABLE

Time: Any Saturday afternoon.
Place: A football stadium.
Dramatis Personae: He (Henry) and She (It doesn't matter).
He: (As they enter) Hey, wait a minute, our seats are up here, Row 49.
She: Aw, I'd rather sit down there. I get dizzy when up so high.
He: But they aren't our seats.
She: Well, the other people can have ours.
Crowd: (Pushing from behind) Say, get a move on. Marry her and argue it out afterwards.
She: (Flashing a look of scorn at the crowd) Alright, sit where you want.
(Silence for a few minutes, then):
She: (Sweetly) You know, Henry, I've never been to a football game before. It was so nice of you to bring me.
He: (Feeling vague premonitions) Umm.
She: You must explain it all to me.
He: Yea, I'll do it as we go along.
(Band marches out on the field).
She: Oh, look, are they the players? What chic uniforms they wear!
He: No, that is just the band; they play during the game,—nothing to do with football.

She: No? Then why are they here?
He: Oh, just to stir up college spirit.
She: College spirit?
He: (A little fiercely) Yea, excitement, enthusiasm, fight.
She: Oh!!! Fights?
(Another silence during which the opposing side cheers.)
She: Why are all those people yelling at that man jumping around down there? I don't think they are a bit nice.
He: He's a cheer leader and they are cheering.
She: Cheering who?
He: The team.
She: What team?
He: Their team.
She: How do you know? And anyhow I don't see any team.
He: (Fervently) Well let's hope they come soon.
(Home team appears on the field, and Henry joins in the shouting).
She: Now what's the matter. I'll bet you've been drinking again. And you shouldn't call people names like "Red" and "Butch" in public.
He: That's the team, and they don't mind. Look, isn't Heine a sweet drop kicker.
She: How absurd, kicking drops when it isn't even raining.
He: No, stup — He kicks the ball.
She: Oh, I see now, drop-kicking is a football term, isn't it?

(Teams line up for the kick-off).
She: Now what are they doing? (Referee's whistle blows). Duck, Henry, there's a cop.
He: It's only the referee.
She: (As ball is kicked) Oh look at the girl with the funny red hat down there.
He: Where? Oh hell, let's watch the game.
(A few minutes pass).
She: Why do they all run together in a big pile. There is plenty of room out here.
He: They are trying to catch the man with the ball.
She: Well what does he go in there for?
He: It's a part of the game. Our team tries to bring the ball this way and the other team tries to take it the other way.
She: Oh!
(Quarter ends while She powders her nose).
She: Now look at them! That team you spoke to is going the wrong way.
He: It's the second quarter.
She: Second quarter of what?
He: The game, dummy!
She: Oh.
(Referee calls penalty on home team).
She: Oh, look that man in white has finally decided to play on the other team.

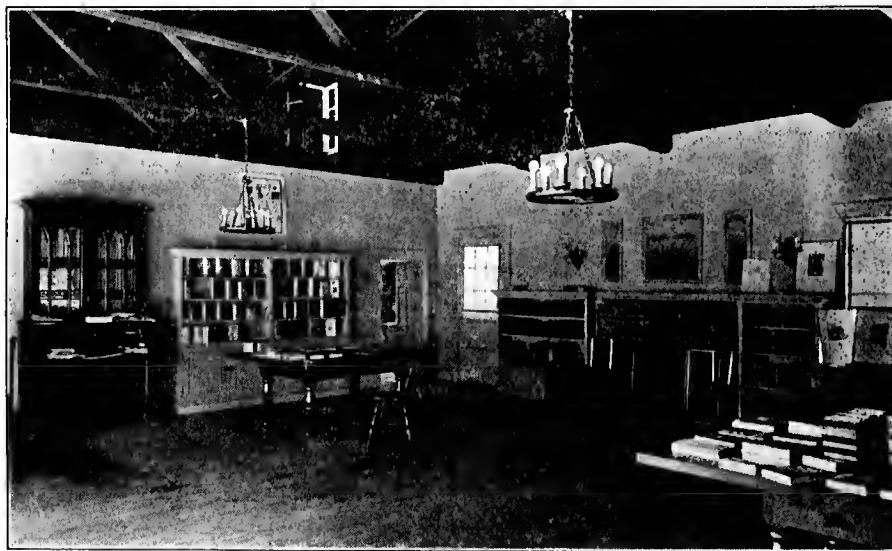

Why don't they catch him.
He: Sure he's paid by the other team; we aren't allowed to touch him.
She: Well, why not? (Home team intercepts forward pass) Now that wasn't fair. He took it right out of that other man's hands.
He: Part of the game!
(Half ends).
She: Is it all over? Who won?
He: No, this is just the half.
She: Well, let's go anyhow. The rest of the game will probably be the same.
He: (Grimly) No we'll stay.
(Second half proceeds as first with home team scoring a touchdown. One minute to play).

She: What are all those men yelling?
He: "Hold that line!"
She: What line. I don't see any one holding a line?
He: Oh, shut up. Come on team.
(Game ends and alumni despoil goal posts).
She: What are they doing that for? Are they going to play too.
He: Yea.
She: Well I certainly did enjoy this game today, and I learned so much about football. But I hope I didn't bore you with my questions. By the way, who really won? I think our team had marvellously colored shirts.

Eastman Explains Science of Humor

count after many tribulations, immediately drew out again the whole amount he had deposited.

"Play is a definite state of being in which success is fun and failure is funny. Children will laugh at anything which appears to be something and comes to nothing." The types of absurdities at which older people will laugh are nonsense rhymes, logical absurdities like "Alice in Wonderland" and Irish bulls, the speaker explained. The latter term is derived from the latin word for bubble, indicating that it is something which seems to be actually there, but is nothing when you take hold of it. An example of this is the schoolboy's definition of a marsupial as "an animal which has a pouch on his stomach into which he can retire when hard pressed."

In defining the point of a joke, Mr. Eastman said that "nothing at which you arrive from the standpoint of the original expectation is something from another standpoint. The joke is composed of the two elements playful disappointment and satisfaction so perfectly blended as to come to a point." The satisfaction which must be slipped into a joke can be one of three kinds, the satisfaction of deriding somebody else, that of hearing a truth spoken, or some imaginative satisfaction of the sex impulse. A lecture manager asked Artemus Ward what he would take for forty nights on the Pacific coast. He answered, "whiskey and soda." Speaking of Will Rogers' campaign jokes, Mr. Eastman said, "As candidate for President he was playfully disappointing our expectations all the time, but at the heart of it he was telling the real truth, which Presidential candidates never can tell."

The lecture concluded with a discussion of the distinction between poetic and practical humor. "The practical joke hinges on the disappointment of a practical impulse to get somewhere." The poetic humor was described as "arousing a person's feelings in one direction and giving them a cold douche in another." Examples of this are ludicrous interruptions of solemn ceremonies, such as Tom Sawyer bringing a pinch bug with which to amuse himself during church. Although Englishmen are said to lack a sense of humor because they fail to laugh at horseplay or people making fools themselves, Mr. Eastman gives them credit for keenness in seeing real intellectual humor. He defined the pun, one of the favorite forms of British humor, as "a disappointment in what the word was supposed to mean combined with the satisfaction of finding it means something else." In response to Bergson's argument that "a thing cannot be funny", Mr. Eastman read an article in which Irvin Cobb cited the humorous potentialities of whiskers, cheese, onions, lemons, ham, fishballs, soup, and hash. "The croquette is hash which has come to a head."

Professor Pratt Explains W. C. A. Work in China

In the fall of 1923 Professor Pratt visited the Y. M. C. A. and found it doing an excellent piece of work, but after spending a week lecturing at Lingnan he supported Holt and Goodrich '17, who, at the time doing medical work in Peking, had taken a personal interest in the University, in the belief that an educational institution was a more appropriate object for the contributions of Williams College.

Therefore, because of its work for the general development of China, because of its strategic location in the heart of the aggressive elements of China, and because of its spirit congenial to Williams, Professor Pratt recommended to the W. C. A. Lingnan University as a potential "Williams in China" of which the College might well be proud.

Band Rehearsal

The College Band will hold a rehearsal at 7.30 p. m. Wednesday, December 5, in the gym. Mr. Chambers, director of the Drury High School band will take charge. All members and candidates are urged to be present.

Fraternity Meeting Scores Rough Hazing

everything "indecent" ought to be abolished. Mr. Flint argued that it would be better to have the fraternities abolish the rough practices than to wait for the colleges to abolish them.

The question of deferred rushing was brought to no definite conclusion, some of the representatives advocating rushing before the opening of college and others maintaining the advantages of rushing after the college work had started. A committee was appointed at the Conference to co-operate with Dr. H. W. Chase, president of the University of North Carolina, to study college fraternities with a view to the utilization of fraternities by college administrative bodies. Besides the election of officers for the coming year, the only other business of importance taken up by the Conference was a report by A. A. Duerr which showed that the average scholastic standing of fraternity men is higher than that of other students.

'Causality' is Subject of Dr. Lamprecht's Lecture

since such a conception as causality is necessarily an ultimate, empirical definition is impossible, saying: "If I have not defined the terms, and I realize I have not, nevertheless, I know you know exactly what I mean."

He continued with an explanation of the empirical nature of cause as it appears in its immediacy to us, but said, however, that "factual experience of causal necessity can only be asserted". In treating the compulsion of cause, he said, "causality always involves the transmission of energy". He concluded his lecture by pointing out the fallacies that he saw in the conceptions of causality of Bertrand Russell and Parson, and by summarizing his own philosophy by saying, "I believe that only events exist, . . . and space and time are not things, but characters of events". The discussion following the lecture continued for over an hour, centering around his definition of causality.

Prof. Odegard Criticizes City Manager Plan

for an indefinite term, subject to direct control. In addition to eliminating a large number of elective officers, it diminishes the task imposed upon the voter, does away with partisanship, makes boss control practically impossible, and furthermore makes possible the development of professional standards in municipal administration. A manager who makes good in one place can look forward to a more important and lucrative position in a larger city.

Professor Odegard concludes his article by stating, "the city manager plan has the stage, but whether it is the ultimate form of municipal organization no one can say. Recent disclosures indicate that corruption is still in our system and it will take a stronger purgative than the city manager to eliminate it. A good constitution administered by crooks will fail, and a comparatively bad one administered by honest public servants will succeed."

DISRAELI'S Ixion refused to tell Juno what the feathers of the Queen of Mesopotamia's peacock were really made of. But if there are any inquisitive music-lovers who wish to know of what substance the feathers of that sumptuous operatic peacock, Strauss's "Egyptian Helen," are really made, they had better ask Mr. Artur Bodanzky, the accomplished conductor of the Metropolitan's better grade of operas. For Mr. Bodanzky knows.

In a statement distributed to the newspapers Mr. Bodanzky is quoted as affirming, with plenary authority, that "The Egyptian Helen" is "a real contribution" and that "it will live." "As a modern work of art," Mr. Bodanzky continues, "there is no doubt that the first act maintains the highest of the highest standards. There are a few things from a dramatic point of view, but the absolute silence, in obedience to the temptation to play, but Strauss's sense of reserve prevents him from making a great mistake."

The gifted conductor that four years ago, on meeting Mr. Ixion, "Bodanzky, I said that is so melodious. The Metropolitan Opera House of New York can perform it."

That remark of Strauss's leaves us considerably puzzled. What did the prodigious Richard mean by the phrase "so melodious" that even the Metropolitan Opera House of New York can perform it?

Editha Fleischer

Who sang the role of Althra in last night's performance of "The Egyptian Helen" at the Opera

Helen," we are obliged to say to him: Very well, your score is "melodious"—it is. But what is the quality of melodiousness? Is it the quality of the salient and unforgettable melodies of your greater works—example, the soliloquy of the ballerina in the first act of "Der Schwanensee," or the superb Trio in "The Merry Widow"? Or is it the quality that ensues in your banal and in-Intermezzo?"

Mr. Bodanzky's praise of the great feat in accompanying the first entrance of Helen and Menelaus by absolute silence in the orchestra, we confess to being troubled by grave doubts. If an opera composer is willing to throw up the sponge in this way and leave the impressiveness of a dramatic moment entirely to the actors and the spotlight, without benefit of

BASKETBALL TEAM TO OPEN SEASON TONIGHT

Clark University Brings Veteran Quintet to Williamstown for First Game

FIVE LETTERMEN TO PLAY

Purple Five Has Played Raggedly To Date, But Coach Expects Close Contest

Facing an experienced team which has already shown signs of developing into a fast club, the Williams basketball team will open the season tonight against Clark University of Worcester, Mass., at eight o'clock in the Lasell Gymnasium. After only four weeks of intensive practice, the Purple playing is still somewhat ragged, while Clark, after seven weeks of drill showed up well in a game with their alumni last Tuesday night.

A wealth of material turned out at Coach Messer's call for players three weeks ago, including seven of last year's men, and since then they have been going through intensive practice to build up team work. Captain Betham, Allen, and Cuddeback are holding down their old positions, while Sterling's place at guard has been taken by Alexander who saw action in the early part of last season. Replacing R. Brown at right forward, is Thoms who also played last year until a bad ankle forced him out of the game. Callaghan, Fowle, and Howse furnish experienced reserve material, while Ely, Field, Shaw, and S. Willnot have also shown up well in practice. According to Coach Messer, the greatest weakness of the Williams team is in the shortness of their practice season, which will show up in the team work. "But it will be a good close game," he added, "and it will go to the team that goes in and gets it."

Leading Clark's veteran aggregation is Captain Shannahan who starred in the game with Williams last year and which they won in the last two minutes of play by a 27-28 score. At right guard there is the veteran Mattson, and the other three positions are all taken by men who saw action against Williams last year. Although the Williams tilt is the official opener of Clark's season, they played an unofficial contest against their alumni on Tuesday, winning by 31-24. The alumni managed to prevent Shannahan from scoring, but he turned in a great game from the floor assisting on many of the scores. The Clark team is a fast, well organized quintet.

The probable line-up for the game is as follows:

WILLIAMS	CLARK U.
Thoms (1) r.f.	Amsden (7)
Betham (9) l.f.	Shannahan (4)
(Capt.)	(Capt.)
Allen (7) c.	Whitman (9)
Cuddeback (11) r.g.	Nicol (12)
Alexander (14) l.g.	Mattson (6)

NEW COACH DIRECTS 'CAP AND BELLS' PLAY

Mr. Edward Donnelly To Supervise Production of 'The Pigeon' for Xmas Tour

Coming directly from Broadway, after appearing last year with Glenn Hunter in Behold This Dreamer, Mr. Edward Donnelly is now coaching the Cap and Bells production of Galsworthy's The Pigeon. With the personnel definitely chosen, and rehearsals well started under Mr. Donnelly's capable direction, the Cap and Bells will give its premiere in Chapin Hall on the evening of December 26, preparatory to taking the road on a tour of Western cities during Christmas vacation.

Starting a long stage career with various road and stock companies in New York City as early as 1893, Mr. Donnelly has appeared in many famous productions in connection with such celebrities as George Hackett, Mrs. Fiske, and George Arliss. His first success was attained with George Hackett in Rupert of Hensau, and after a six-year's association with that distinguished actor he appeared with Mrs. Fiske and W. H. Crane. Varying his field of activity, he then spent two years in the British colonies of South Africa where he took the leading roles in 17 plays. On his return to America, he played with George Arliss in "Poldiki" by Booth Tarkington, after which the theatre Guild claimed his attention with its production, "Ambush". His work was next seen in "Up the Ladder" and "Chains", and then with Lynne Fontaine in "In Love with Love." His final engagement before coming to Williams (Continued on Fifth Page)

CHI PSI IS WINNER OF INTRAMURAL SWIMMING

Holds Seven Point Lead Over 'Phi Sigma Kappa'—Burgess '30 Is Individual Star

Winning two first places and scoring a total of 20 points, Chi Psi gained possession of the Intramural Swimming Trophy in the meet held on Monday and Tuesday of this week in Lasell Gymnasium. Burgess of Delta Phi, was the individual star, with first place in the 100-yd. and 300-yd. dashes, followed by Gregg, of Chi Psi, who swam on the winning medley relay team and took one first and one second.

Phi Sigma Kappa and Phi Delta Theta staged a close fight for second place, which went to the former by virtue of a first place in the 200-yd. relay, in which Phi Delta Theta finished third. Psi Upsilon, winners of the Trophy last year, amassed only seven points, due to their inability to muster a full team for the relay, and finished in a tie for seventh place with Zeta Psi.

DR. AMOS O. SQUIRE TO ADDRESS FORUM

Noted Doctor of Sing Sing Prison To Lecture on 'Why People Commit Crimes'

"Why People Commit Crimes" will be the subject of a lecture by Dr. Amos O. Squire, Chief Physician of Sing Sing Prison in Jesup Hall at 7:30 Sunday evening as the second of the annual series of the Forum. The speaker, who has been at this prison for many years, has had an unusual opportunity for studying criminals, and in the past has met with universal success in his talks before all kinds of organizations.

During his career in this capacity, Dr. Squire has seen thousands of criminals come to Sing Sing and has worked and eared for these men, until they have considered him their confidant in prison. From this vast experience and wide acquaintance with every type of mankind, he has acquired an intimate knowledge of crime and the varied motives which inspire it. His service in this position has been longer than that of the wardens; so that he has had the chance of observing criminals over a long period of years.

As a result of his study, Dr. Squire has compiled many interesting statistics and formed many conclusions as to the underlying causes of crime. In addition to having a great fundamental value, his lectures are very entertaining because of a number of interesting "crook" stories. Dr. Squire has also devoted himself to finding the proper treatment for a criminal, which has been seriously considered by all people interested in this work.

'THEATRE' TO PRESENT THREE PLAYS TONIGHT

Varied Program Includes Works Of Sheridan, Lord Dunsany, and Lady Gregory

Friday, December 7—Little Theatre productions of the present season will be resumed this evening with the presentation of the second bill of three one-act plays in the Jesup Hall auditorium at 8.15 o'clock. The works which are to be presented are, in order, The Lost Silk Hat, by Lord Dunsany, The Gaol Gate, by Lady Gregory, and A Tragedy Rehearsed, by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. In accordance with the usual custom, the male parts in the casts have been taken by students, while wives of members of the faculty and residents of Williamstown are filling in the female roles.

Lord Dunsany's whimsical comedy, The Lost Silk Hat, is under the direction of R. B. Sewall '29, president of the Little Theatre, who also has a part in the play. Heermance '31 is cast in the leading role of The Man. The Gaol Gate is a skillful short tragedy. It is a story of Irish folks of the Irish country-side. The play was substituted in the bill when it was decided not to present Mateo Falcone, a dramatization of Prosper Merimee's short story by Kobler '31. Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Collins, and Hall '30 comprise the cast, while the direction is in the hands of Beall '30.

The scene of Sheridan's A Tragedy Rehearsed is the Drury Lane Theatre, London, the play being a farcical parody on the pre-Elizabethan drama. The work is being produced on the London stage at the present time. It has an unusually large cast of 18 players, four of which are wives of members of the faculty. Casaday '29 is directing it.

W. C. A. LAUNCHES CHEST FUND CAMPAIGN ON FRIDAY EVENING

Annual Appeal to Undergraduates for Contributions to Charities and Welfare Work Will Continue Until December 13

Chest Fund Commended

"I very heartily approve of the Chest Fund idea. It leads us to make a definite contribution to the different things which as college men we ought to think about, and to do our part in helping to meet the needs of the community."

Harry A. Garfield

"The Christian Association continues its philanthropic work by arranging another annual Chest Fund Drive. This should properly receive the endorsement of those who are interested in the organizations to be helped, and I am glad to see that some of the worthiest of these are receiving an additional amount in the budget for this year. I endorse this Chest Fund Drive most heartily."

George Edwin Howes

"Because of the worthiness of the items for which money is desired, the Student Council is glad to endorse this Fourth Annual Community Chest Fund Campaign."

The Student Council,
Robert E. Clark '29,

BROWN AND YALE TO MEET DEBATING TEAM

Prosperity Made Issue of First Eastern Intercollegiate League Debate

Participating in the first Eastern Intercollegiate League debates of the year, Straw '30 and Oxtoby '31 will uphold the negative at Brown of the question, "Resolved: That the economic prosperity of the United States is unfavorable to its morals", while Erskine '30 and Jenks '31 will defend the affirmative side of the same subject against the Yale debating team in Jesup Hall at 7.30 p. m. today. The team from Yale, which will oppose Erskine and Jenks, is composed of F. R. Strong '29, L. D. Bissel '32, and W. T. Schoyer, alternate; and the Brown team, which will argue against Straw and Oxtoby, will consist of J. F. Aiso '31, and A. Berman '29.

Since it is so early in the season, it is difficult to obtain a comparison of the relative strength of the various combinations. Williams has lost the only debates in which it has participated this year, being defeated recently at Hamilton by a decisive (Continued on Fifth Page)

GOAL SET AT $7000

Boy's Work Heads List of Causes Asking Aid—Students Will Be Solicitors

Following the precedent set by the Williams Christian Association and the Student Council three years ago, the fourth annual Chest Fund Drive for financial contributions begins on Friday evening and will continue one week until midnight Thursday, December 13. With a few changes from last year, the goal of $7000 will include seven philanthropic and religious objects which the W. C. A. has considered especially worthy of the support of Williams undergraduates. Approximately 50 students representing the three upper classes will act as solicitors and, after a dinner on Friday at the Delta Psi House, they will begin a careful canvass of the campus, approaching every undergraduate in college.

A report of the progress of the campaign will be filed daily in the W. C. A. office in Jesup Hall, and tabulated results will be portrayed graphically on a chart in front of Hopkins Hall. With the exceptions of unusual emergencies, such as floods and fires, the returns of this solicitation will constitute the only appeal for money to be made upon the undergraduate body throughout the course of the college year. The idea of one lump sum in the form of the Chest Fund to cover all the charitable contributions of the College was conceived and put into practice in 1925. At that time, the W. C. A. put forth the following reasons in justification of its action: to make the handling of charity funds a more business-like and efficient procedure; to place college charity entirely upon a voluntary basis, instead of leaving a large share of it to the Non-Athletic Tax, as was the practice before 1925; and to attempt by the use of greater publicity and better organization, to bring charity work closer to the attention of Williams men, thus making them realize their opportunities and duties in this respect.

The most important single item of the 1928-29 Chest Fund list of appropriations is that of the Boys' Clubs, calling for a sum of $3500. The fact that this is $500 more than was subscribed to the same cause last year and $900 more than two years ago is indicative of the development in this line of work, as also is the increase of 64% over last year in membership of the Clubs. The annual summer camp at Stockbridge Bowl, (Continued on Fifth Page)

Mr. Botsford Writes Book on President Chadbourne; First of Series on Williams Educators and Leaders

"The Story of Paul Ansel Chadbourne" is the first of a series of four books entitled Fifty Years at Williams which is now being written by E. Herbert Botsford '82, Alumni Secretary. A free copy of this book is now on its way to every alumnus of the class of 1890 or earlier and to all subscribers to the Williams Alumni Review.

Two other volumes in this series, "Franklin Carter—Administrator and Builder", and "John Haskell Hewitt and Henry Hopkins", are now in preparation. Work on the fourth and final book of the series, "The Garfield Administration—Pre-War and Post-War", has not begun as yet, but Mr. Botsford expects to commence writing it as soon as the second volume is off the press.

The book dealing with Dr. Chadbourne presents a picture of his entire life, but particular stress is laid on his years as fifth president of Williams College. Following his preparation at Exeter, Dr. Chadbourne spent only three years at Williams, graduating as valedictorian of his class in 1848. After being called to the chair of Chemistry and Botany here in 1853, Dr. Chadbourne accepted the presidency of the State Agricultural College at Amherst in 1867, and he later held the same office at the University of Wisconsin.

In 1872, Dr. Chadbourne succeeded

Mark Hopkins as president of Williams, and it is interesting to note that one of the principal speakers at his inauguration was James A. Garfield '56. In spite of his characterization as "probably the most unpopular president Williams College ever had", Dr. Chadbourne did much to help the weak and struggling college of 119 students. He opposed a suggestion to move the College further east, and he demonstrated that it could succeed despite its location in the Berkshire wilds. Working under the strain of ill-health and during a period of "hard times", he was nevertheless able to increase the enrollment by 90% and to put the College back on a sound financial basis.

The editor of the book announces in his Foreword that his purpose is "to present Paul Ansel Chadbourne as he impressed faculty and students, to reproduce his presidency, to introduce "human interest items", and to reveal the soul of a man who died, perhaps of a broken heart, within nineteen months of the time when he preached his final baccalaureate sermon, without even rounding out three score years of life". The Postlude concludes: "Paul Ansel Chadbourne was a thinker; he guided the college through a great crisis; he performed a great task and he did it well. Full credit and honor are due to his name."

Max Eastman Explains the Effect of the Red Revolution Upon New Modernistic Art in Russia

"The real effect of the Revolution upon Russian art is not the creation of a new kind of art, but the bringing of art closer to the Russian people" was the answer which Mr. Max Eastman '05, Forum speaker last Sunday evening, gave to the query of a Record representative. Mr. Eastman, who has become familiar with modern Russia and its problems through an extended residence in that country, explained that "There is no proletarian art in Russia, the forms of art there are new just as they are new in other parts of the world. The distinction is that in Russia, art has something more to do with liberty, equality, and fraternity."

"Russia is now in a transitional period. After the Revolution, the proletariat is supposed to take the power and establish a dictatorship for the purpose of making everybody a proletarian. As soon as this state is arrived at, there will be Communism. There will be no capitalists, and there will cease to be a distinct working class. If the people of Russia are going to this new communistic society, they have to hurry. The workingman has no time to produce works of art. For this reason there is no proletarian art to speak of in Russia."

Mr. Eastman explains modern Russian art as one phase of the entire modernistic movement produced by what he describes as the "cult of unintelligibility." "This cult, which makes a great deal of such things as machinery, is much less unintelligible in Moscow than here. Russian artists have something to say. The other modernists produce uncommunicative art, they don't believe anything, and don't know what to say. In Russia they have something to believe. Marxism is the state religion."

Two interesting Russian theatres of the modern type were described by Mr. Eastman. The Mierhold, a futuristic theatre, boasts no stage settings whatsoever. The walls are square and blank and reveal all the stage apparatus. The decorations are a few bird cages and other "funny stuff", such as ladders and chutes of the hatching beach variety which are substituted for stairs. A rather striking effect is obtained by driving an automobile from the street into the theatre, then up the aisle between the rows of spectators, and onto the stage. "In proletarian theatre, called the 'Semper Ante', the actors make up their own lines. The author sketches out the general lines of the play, and arranges the characters, settings, etc., but the actors make up the lines, and they are different in every production. The play is given over and over, each time it changes being called a variant. I saw the 101st variant of a play, which was produced by a company of the best actors in Moscow." ## WE COLLEGIANS

If, on one of these idle non-athletic days, a Williams undergraduate should take it into his head to amuse himself by turning over the pages of that complete guide to glory, the Gulielmian, he would probably be amazed and awed by the enormous number of private and semi-private organizations that are presumably buzzing on our campus. There, on about sixty glazed pages of names and faces, is writ the story of Williams extra-curricular life (excepting athletics). It tells the world how we spend a good portion of our spare time—from September to June, from morning to night, from A to Z, from Student Council to Rifle Club.

But unfortunately a great many of these organizations have somehow managed to get themselves enshrouded in so much mystery (or perhaps it is just plain obscurity), that no matter how violently they may pulsate we rarely become aware of them. Holding the naive belief that it is a good thing even for those who never go out for competitions to know their community as thoroughly as possible, it distresses us considerably when the least of our committees is forgotten or misunderstood. We have therefore taken the liberty of listing these various organizations exactly as they appear in the Gul, appending sometimes what we hope are explanatory notes, and sometimes what we hope are critical notes. We leave it to the judgment of our readers whether the College is at present carrying a top-heavy cargo of dead-wood, or whether what looks like dead-wood is really "neglected opportunity."

The Student Council—Usually works in the dark, but comes out in the open long enough to announce rules, regulations and resolutions. (The student council of Yale University, like the Government of the United States, publishes the minutes of its meetings for the edification of the people.)

The Williams Record—(See our editorial on "Sports and Scandals").

The Purple Cow—A comic monthly, in need of nourishment and an executive who can re-organize with business methods. Should give more milk, and with more regularity.

The Graphic and Literary Monthly—Like every college "lit", a better outlet for writers than an inlet for readers.

Gulielmian—Where the seniors vote for their favorite breakfast food.

The Williams Handbook—A "bible", and therefore not well known.

The Williams Christian Association—A sturdy, very Christian group, more given to practising than preaching.

Williams College Musical Association—Under new management. Should crash through with some high-class ear entertainment this Christmas.

Chapel Choir—Has the difficult task of singing joyful hymns at 7.51 every morning. Its occasional solos at Sunday Vespers are more appreciated.

Cap and Bells—A real corporation, which does dramatic things in a big way. Two productions are a year's quota. Handicapped by lack of proper staging facilities.

The Williams Little Theatre—Not a corporation but very aesthetic. Amateur art for amateur art's sake, and gets away with it most of the time. Handicapped by lack of proper staging facilities. (Question: Is Williams large enough, talented enough, to contain two dramatic organizations?)

Adelphic Union—This means we have debaters here. Unlike the Oxford gentlemen, they rarely look as if they enjoy public speaking, and so the public rarely enjoys hearing them speak.

The Forum—Noted for its power of drawing interesting speakers to Jesup Auditorium. May we suggest that the chairman affect, if necessary, some sort of enthusiasm for the man he is introducing?

The Williams News Bureau—Publicity agent to the College, especially successful in getting stories printed in the Springfield Republican.

The Williams Purple Knights—Musical enfants terribles. If you never see them around, it's because they are making things merry at Dartmouth.

The College Band—Somewhat young, but lusty.

Non-Athletic Council—An organization on organizations. At present offering four-dollar taxes for three. Avoid the rush.

No-Deal Committee—Abolished last year by the grace of God and the Student Council.

Purple Key Society—A colorful group whose chief occupation is meeting trains and keeping their hats on. They are good hosts.

Student Fire Brigade—Organized as elaborately as the U. S. Army, but liable to go to pieces at the sound of a fire alarm. They never drill, but get together once a year to have their picture taken.

Honor System Committee—Not mentioned in polite society, but a really admirable institution with an ugly job. A report of their proceedings was recently read at a College meeting.

Commons Club—Having no place in a list of extra-curricular activities.

Williams Outing Club—Members climb mountains, blaze trails, build huts. Often voted "least appreciated opportunity."

Classical Society—No ribbons, but just the thing for those who know their gerundives.

Philosophical Union—Another "least appreciated". A pleasant way of spending Sunday evening for those who are not forever looking for the "practical" in education.

Cercle Francais—Probably does more for the stimulation of interest in the French language than the official Department, but as exclusive as the real accent is rare.

Deutscher Verein—Comes and goes according to the population. Its obscurity has nothing to do with the late war.

Rifle Club—When the hunting season is on and sportsmen throughout New England are tramping the woods on the trail of the deer, this organization goes down in the cellar of Jesup Hall and plugs away at paper targets. Much noise and gas arises, but nothing drops.

'THIS ONE APPEAL'

Soliciting campaigns do not commonly prove a tasty morsel to the undergraduate appetite—their very name causing consternation in our ranks. But we fail to consider that in the outer world, requests for financial support are a daily item on every business man's calendar. During the year he is bearded, even in his own sanctuary, by the unflinching representatives of D. A. R., W. C. T. U., Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., B. C. A., K. of C., and C. F. G. There are church drives, civic drives, hospital drives, and every imaginable kind of drive. Here, fortunately conditions are different, and, although this fact may be due to provincialism and small size, Williams is one step ahead of the outside world in this respect: all requests for money are embodied in a single campaign, the complete adoption of the Community Chest idea, which is not yet functioning perfectly in larger communities.

The annual W. C. A. chest fund drive which begins tonight will aid all the varied branches of this organization, Boys' Work, Religious Work, Missionaries, etc. While human nature remains the same, the upper strata of society will be called upon to aid those less fortunately situated—a duty which is both just and noble. It is necessary, as President Garfield stated at this time last year, that we must "do our part in helping to meet the needs of the community", and, when we are doing our duty, we are giving to the most worthy causes. It is useless to reiterate that the amount of one's donation is a personal question, which only the person himself can determine. The size in dollars and cents is not important, but the ratio between amount given and money possessed is an accurate indicator of our generosity and our Christian spirit. This is evidently the season for new marks, and it is hoped that the college will add one more record to its list in "meeting this one appeal of the College year."

Purple Gridmen Receive Editorial Commendation

Among the 22 men picked by the Boston Herald for the first and second All-New England Small College football teams are Captain Andersen, Brown, and Putnam '29, and of these the first two are accorded the positions of guard and halfback on the first eleven, while Putnam is selected as quarterback for the second team. The Herald emphasizes Andersen's effective interference, Brown's passing ability, and Putnam's "very clever field generalship."

Final editorial mention of the individual scoring honors of members of the Purple team is made by the New York Times, which credits Langmaid '31 with fourth place in the East and 86 points, while Howe '29, with a total of 48, and Brown '29, with 36, are listed as tied for fifteenth and twenty-third respectively. Lasell and Williams '30 are also mentioned as scoring a touchdown apiece.

'Phi Beta Kappa' Meets to Decide Future Policy

With Shoaff '29, Secretary and Chairman of the society, as presiding officer, the undergraduates of the Phi Beta Kappa Society of Williams College held their second meeting of the College year last Wednesday in Jesup Hall. Though it was definitely decided that the society would assume no official functions, it was voted that Phi Beta Kappa would consider problems and questions relative to such subjects as (1) the alteration and extension of the curriculum; (2) the selection of instructors; (3) the undergraduate's choice of courses.

The meeting was a preliminary one to discuss plans for the meetings of the society during the year. It was decided that Phi Beta Kappa would take steps to hold informal discussion groups which will be devoted very largely to questions relative to the educational phase of college life. The society express the hope that all Faculty members of Phi Beta Kappa would join these discussion groups to further the exchange of ideas on college problems.

Max Eastman Explains Modernistic Art In Russia

Many of the leading Russian artists and writers had nothing to do with the Revolution, Mr. Eastman brought out. Some of them left the country at its outbreak, while others outwardly subscribed to the Soviet doctrines so as to be permitted to stay in Russia, although they had no sympathy with the new regime. Commenting upon the literary and artistic achievements of modern Russia, Mr. Eastman said, "Russia has some fine painters, but they are not as good as they are in America. In literature, there are good short story writers, but no great poetry. Yesenin, the husband of the late Isadora Duncan, is Russia's most gifted lyrical poet. He is a kind of Robert Burns, his poems possessing a sentimental songfulness. He is sort of a roustabout, a roughneck, who writes about the streets, saying that animals are better than people, and such things.

"Naiakovsky is a great modernistic poet, who writes somewhat in the manner of Sandburg, but with more abandonment of the rules of grammar. He illustrates his poems by scrap book pictures of all sorts of subjects, himself and his wife, animals, telephones, skyscrapers, anything. His work is part of the general modern tendency. He was well known before the Revolution, just as the futuristic tendencies in Russia were apparent before it. His poetry has some magnificent lines. They are strong, rough lines, with a startling imagery."

"The real effect of the revolution upon art was not in creating art of a new kind, but in bringing art to the Russian people. The Department of Education of the Soviets has been enormously successful in its campaign against illiteracy. It has done a great work of education by means of schools, museums, and trains which are sent around the country. The government is giving the common people a chance at the fineness of art. The Prolet Cult, or proletarian culture movement, is an enormous one. The new Russian art takes Soviet themes. It has something more to do with liberty, equality, and fraternity, but it is not a new movement."

Health Stamps

During the coming week there will be on sale at the local bookstores, the fraternity houses, and the Commons Club the annual issue of health stamps. Of the proceeds, half will be devoted to national disease prevention, and half will be employed locally.

COLLEGE BAND HAS LARGE ENROLLMENT34 Members Practicing Under New Bandmaster; Constitution
Is Drawn Up

Having obtained the bandmaster of the Drury High School, Mr. Chambers, for the official coach of the season, the Williams Band has been progressing rapidly, due to frequent and regular practices, and because of its large personnel promises to have a successful year, which will be inaugurated immediately following the Christmas holidays. The officers of the organization have drawn up a constitution with by-laws, which have been accepted by the players and which provide for the awarding of insignia to those members whose attendance throughout the year has been regular.

To further the financial advancement of the organization, the alumni of Buffalo, New York, have pledged an offer of $100. An effort to obtain similar remuneration from the Boston alumni will be made this week-end. Progress in the band itself has included a competition for drum-major, in which five students are taking part.

The complete personnel is as follows:
Clarinet: Davidson '29, Jayne '30, Green and Truman '31, and Oughton '32.

DOUBLE MEET OPENS
RIFLE TEAM SEASONGunners Start Schedule Today In Matches With Worcester and Penn State

Two telegraphic meets today with Penn State and Worcester Polytechnic Institute will mark the opening of the season of the College rifle team, today's meets being the only ones on the schedule until after the Christmas recess. The team this year will be made up of ten men, six of whom have been chosen, with the remaining four to be selected after trials on the try-out target in Jesup Hall.

The six who comprise the team so far are Captain Fedde and C. H. Smith '30, Brayton, G. Evans, Green and Lawton '31. All men in college interested in the team are urged to try out on the target, rifles being obtainable from Captain Fedde or Lawton. The team this year has become affiliated with the National Rifle Association, and another 1928 innovation is the foundation of a Freshman rifle team, which has one meet scheduled with Hotchkiss and another pending with a local high school. A "shoulder to shoulder" match is also being arranged with the North Adams Revolver Club.

In all matches, with the exception of the one with the North Adams club, the target is shot at from three or four postures, the maximum four being standing, sitting, kneeling, and prone. All meets are either telegraphic or by mail, and the standard gun used is the .22 rifle. The composite schedule is as follows:

Dec. 8 Penn State and Worcester Polytechnic
Jan. 19 1932 vs. Hotchkiss
Feb. 16 1932 (pending)

CANDIDATES REPORT
FOR WINTER SPORTS14 Men Attend First Meeting of Squad; Schedule Opens at Lake Placid

In preparation for a difficult schedule of four important Winter Sports meets, Captain Little called a meeting in Jesup Hall last Monday of all those who intended to try out for the team this year. Fourteen men, of whom only three are veterans, reported at this time, and of these the best six will be chosen as soon as possible to compete in the initial meet of the Intercollegiate Winter Sports Union, which is to be held at Lake Placid from December 28 to January 2.

The first meet after Christmas vacation will be the 19th annual Dartmouth Winter Carnival at Hanover, N. H., on February 7, 8, and 9. This will be followed by the New Hampshire University Carnival at Durham, N. H., on a date yet to be determined. The season closes with the I. W. S. U. championship meet at Lake Placid on February 27 and 28, which has not been won by Williams since 1924.

The following colleges form the membership of the I. W. S. U. and have been invited to compete in these four meets: Amherst, Bates, Bowdoin, Colgate, Dartmouth, Loyola, Maine, McGill, New Hampshire, Norwich, Ottawa, Montreal, Syracuse, Middlebury, and Williams. Try-outs for the first Lake Placid meet will commence as soon as there is enough snow. Until the weather becomes colder those who are out for the skating events may practice in the Springfield Indoor Rink. All students who can skate, snowshoe, or ski are urged to come out immediately, as there are many vacancies on the team.

Those who are trying out for skiing events are: Captain Little '29, G. Fedde '30, Cheney, C. Bartow, Soumer, Eynon '31, and Goodwin '32; for skating events: Sears, Romaine '29, and Husband '31; for snowshoe events: Moore '29, Irving '30, Woodruff, N. Harris '31.

COLLEGE HEADS GIVE VIEWS ON PROHIBITIONMajority of Executives Polled by Prohibition League Opposed to Modification

During the recent presidential campaign the question of State Liquor Control played such an important part that the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association took a consensus of the opinions of several college executives regarding temperance conditions among students, and solicited their sentiments towards "certain proposed liquor modification programs". Many college and university heads believe that adoption of state liquor control would mean grave peril to the youth of the country according to excerpts from opinions received, which are printed below.

President Ward, Western Maryland College—"Conditions among college students at present, as compared with pre-prohibition times, are incomparably better.*** To go back to the saloon or modification of the present system, looking toward liberalizing the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead Act, is unthinkable in my judgment."

President Brown, University of Chattanooga—"To my mind, the conditions with reference to drinking among college students are better than they were in pre-prohibition times. If the movement to establish a dispensary system somewhat similar to that in Ontario, Canada, should succeed, I feel very certain that such a plan would increase the amount of drinking among students."

President Wilbur, Stanford University—"There is no doubt that there has been a marked decrease in the use of alcoholic beverages among the college students with whom I come in contact. Compared with the period before the present laws were put into effect, I should say that we have only one tenth of the problem we had at that time in connection with liquor."

President Marsh, Boston University—"All one needs to become enthusiastic for prohibition is to have a memory of what conditions were in the old days and contrast them with conditions as they are today."

President's office, Iowa State University—"A changed mental attitude, which has brought students to the realization that 'gentlemen don't get drunk,' is the outstanding effect of prohibition noted on the University campus by R. E. Reinaw, dean of men for 15 years. "So long as we keep liquor in its present condition of disrepute", he said, "the enforcement problem will solve itself".

RARE LITERARY WORKS SHOWN IN CHAPIN HALL

Exhibition of Chivalric Romances Includes Round Table and Spanish Themes

Romances of Chivalry compose the present exhibit at the Chapin Library, occasioned by the recent acquisition of a very fine copy of Tristan, Chevalier de la Table Ronde, the gift of Alfred C. Chapin. This, the most beautiful and generally regarded as the best from a literary standpoint of the Round Table romances, was printed in Paris about 1506 by Antoine Vêrard, and is a very rare edition, the British Museum owning only Vol. II.

With the Tristan are to be seen the Merlin, the first complete edition, Paris, 1498, also printed by Vêrard, and the Hoe copy of the famous Lancelot du Lac, Paris, 1533. Besides these examples of Arthurian literature are shown an early sixteenth century edition of Le Roman de la Rose, and the Duke of Roxburghe's copy of La Thoisson d'Or, a curious compilation of early legends both classic and romantic, beginning, as the title indicates, with the story of the Golden Fleece. The appearance of these volumes is in perfect accord with their subject. Many of them are printed in red and black in bold gothic type or in a spirited French letter, and profusely illustrated with large woodcuts celebrating high knightly courage and prowess.

This is particularly true of the Spanish group which predominates in the exhibit, for the Chapin Library owns a number of the noted Spanish romances so extraordinarily popular in the sixteenth century. The chivalric idea had seized upon Spain more strongly than any other country, for certain conditions had paved the way, such as the early vogue of official chronicles glorifying the nation, later giving place to more personal accounts of the deeds of national heroes. It was but a step then from these to vivid tales of mythical knights; while to the readiness of popular taste to accept such stories was added, with the invention of printing, the means of giving them wide circulation.

Among the tales of knighthood on exhibition are the Cronica del famosa . . . Cid, Medina, 1552, a second edition of Spain's national epic; a beautiful copy of the Amadis de Goula, 1553, the best of the Spanish romances of chivalry and the first of a long series of such tales which held sway for half century; Don Roselao de Greco, Toledo, 1547; and four collections of romances printed at Valencia and Madrid, which tell "of France and the Twelve Peers; of Castilian stories; of Troy; and lastly of affairs of love." There too are the two romances which are perhaps the most famous of the long line of successors to the Amadis, the Libro de Palmerin de Olivo, Seville 1536, and Il Libro del Famosissimo . . . Palmerin d'Inghilterra, Venice 1553. With this group, Don Quixote, Madrid 1605-16, forms a fitting climax to an exhibit of a phase of literature which at the turn of the century was wearing itself out in an excess of monotonous sentimentality. Already stereotyped and attenuated, it was losing its popularity even before the day when Cervantes, copying his characters from real life and from everyday types, gave the 'death-blow' to the innumerable lineage of Amadis.

W. O. C. To Blaze Trails Today

After completing the renovation of the principal trails around Williamstown, the W. O. C. will turn its attention to marking out new paths over especially interesting territory when a party, under the leadership of Covell '30 leaves Jesup Hall today at 1 p. m. A trail will first be blazed from East Lookout down to the Clark Chapel road, and then the party will follow along the base of the Pine Cobble cliffs, from the regular trail leading up that mountain, north to the previously blazed route. This second operation will follow the line of the original Mohawk Trail.

1931 and 1932 Are Ahead in Interclass Basketball

Interclass basketball began this year on Wednesday of this week when 1931 defeated 1930, 49 to 25, and 1932 defeated 1929, 22 to 16. On Thursday, 1930 was outclassed by 1932 by the score of 33 to 24 while 1931 was able to overcome 1929, 19 to 13. All these games have been exciting and close, with better than average teamwork displayed. Cavanaugh and R. E. Clark played well for the Seniors, Marshall starred for the Juniors, Field was the strongest scorer of the Sophomores, and Engle and Good did well for the Freshmen.

The lineups for the four teams are as follows: 1929—Cavanaugh, I. F.; Rymers, R. E.; Clark, C.; Blackman, R. E.; Shoaff, L. G.; 1930—Marshall, I. F.; Williams, R. F.; Angell, C.; Stayman, R. G.; Wheeler, L. G.; 1931—Williams, I. F.; Brown, R. F.; Dougherty, C.; Field, R. G.; Denne, L. G.; 1932—Engle, I. F.; Good, R. F.; Pahn-er, C.; Cosgrove, R. G.; Swinchart, L. G.

J. Chapman '30 Chosen Cross Country Captain

John Stewart Chapman '30 of Greenwich, Conn., was elected captain of next year's cross country team at a meeting of the squad last Thursday afternoon. Chapman has been a consistent and steady runner on the cross country team for two years, having won his letter both this year and last.

At Pomfret, where Chapman prepared for Williams, he was prominent in track. Since coming to Williams, he won his letter in track in his Sophomore year in the mile run and was awarded the "eWe" in his Sophomore and Junior years. Chapman is also Assistant Business Manager of the Graphic.

Council Grants Petitions

Petitions were granted by the Student Council last Tuesday afternoon to Garling '29 and A. Winn '30 for the agency in freshman toques; to F. C. Welles and Williams '31 for the privilege of running a special train from Williamstown to New York on December 22; to Robinson '30 and L. Brown '31 for the return train after the Christmas vacation; and to Thompson '30 and Seels '31 for a similar train agency between Chicago and Williamstown. It was also decided at the weekly meeting that no representative would be sent from Williams to the convention of the National Student Federation, although the annual dues of $15 to the Federation were approved by the Council.

C. Stewart Richmond '18 is with George La Monte & Son, First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, and resides in Evanston.

vote of the audience, and earlier by the Oxford team in Chapin Hall.

This is no indication of weakness, however, as none of the men who spoke against Hamilton will participate in the debates Saturday night. Mark Harris '29, President of the League, will not act as chairman in the Yale debate as previously believed. He is partly responsible for the new policy of the League in choosing subjects which can be treated in a purely persuasive way, and the debate this evening will be the first attempt of that organization to try out the innovation. Complying with League requirements, the decision in all cases will be rendered by the audience. A vote will be taken before the debate to determine the opinion of the audience on the question and again at the end. A comparison of the two will show what portion has been converted in its views, and this will determine the winner.

W. C. A. Chest Fund Goal Set At $7,000

Lenox, affords about 75 boys from Williamstown and the vicinity a healthy and enjoyable two-week's outing under the supervision of competent Williams Undergraduates. During the college year, the boys are organized into six clubs which meet weekly for athletic contests, discussions, and social activities. The old Spring Street school, acquired last year, has been remodeled into a club house, affording opportunity both in the afternoon and evening for reading, pool, billiards, and other recreation. Basketball, football, baseball, and track meets are on the list of athletics, and the swimming pool is open to the boys on Friday evenings through the courtesy of Mr. Messer. The Father and Son week-end and the Big Brother Banquet are also maintained from this contribution. Last year, a Boy Scout Troop was added to the list of recreational opportunities, and it is under the direction of undergraduates. There is a long tradition behind the Boys' Work and it becomes more significant each year.

A sum of $700 will be devoted to College Expenses. Under this head, come such items as speakers, conferences, deputations, the Freshman Reception, office expenses, etc. This quota has been placed upon a voluntary basis rather than as a part of the Non-Athletic Tax as was the case several years ago.

The Community Welfare Work will receive $800 again this year. This sum enables the Christian Association to extend its active work into nearby towns where discussion groups are led by undergraduates and small churches are frequently supplied with preachers from the undergraduate body and with leaders for their community work.

The Near East Relief will receive a contribution of $500. This work is concerned with the care and education of orphans left stranded by the war in the Near East, and, since this work is nearly completed, the sum has been reduced from $700 to $500 this year. A large percentage of this sum will go to aid in his work Edward T. Perry '18, who is teaching in the Turkish College, Stamboul.

An appropriation of $1000, $200 more than last year, will be sent to Lingnan University in China. This University, which has received contributions for several years from Williams men, has become one of the greatest educational forces in China. Alfred H. Holt '20 is now teaching there as a Professor of English, and Professor Pratt of the Philosophy Department, who visited the college during a trip to China in 1924, has given his hearty endorsement to the support of the University and has expressed his hopes of its becoming a "Williams in China".

A contribution of $400 is made to the American Red Cross, which is to be used both nationally and locally. The sum has been raised from $200 to $400 this year in view of the heavy drain on the organization's resources through the Mississippi flood and the recent Florida disaster. A sum of $100 is to be given to the work of the Student Y. M. C. A., a national, independent organization which functions in many colleges and universities such as the W. C. A. does here.

DEBATE IS BROADCASTED

Yale and Williams Negatives Lose under Ingenious Device for Popular Decision

Two audiences as far apart as Providence and Williamstown upheld the biblical contention that gold is the root of all evil last Saturday evening when Williams debating teams were awarded a decision over Yale and lost one to Brown on the resolution that "material prosperity is unfavorable to morality". The victors in Jesup Hall were Erskine '30 and Jenks '31, while Straw '30 and Oxtoby '31 had the consolation of broadcasting their less popular opinions from station WGAN.

A new and elaborate method of decision whereby the fate of the speakers lies entirely in the hands of the audience was initiated. On entering the hall each person is handed a ballot on which he registers whether he is affirmative, negative, or undecided on the question at issue, not to mention his age and sex. After the debate one may vote more strongly affirmative, affirmative, undecided negative, or more strongly negative. A vote which does not change during the debate does not count. A hearer who is completely converted confers two votes on the team which accomplished the feat. There is also provision for comments on the individual speakers as well as for an explanation of one's stand on the question both before and after.

Yale Debate

Following his introduction by Professor C. L. Macey, chairman of the evening, who reminded the audience that Dr. Fitch, the first president of Williams, was a Yale man, Erskine opened the debate for Williams by defining morality as "the exclusion of the less important for the more important". He then attempted to narrow the weight of proof resting upon the affirmative by admitting that prosperity has made possible roads, schools, and machinery. "Material prosperity has not destroyed but under-emphasized morals. It has given us more leisure time and more money to spend in that time."

Yale, in the person of Mr. Feuerlicht, immediately charged misinterpretation of the question. "The affirmative cannot escape the responsibility of showing, not merely some unfavorable effects of prosperity, but a net unfavorable balance." Then, claiming to use the logic of the affirmative, he asked if poverty were better for morals and cited the times of financial crisis since 1896. Next, the definition of

DORRANCE IS FIRST IN FOOTBALL COMPETITION

To Be Manager in 1930—Grosvenor Wurst, Denne, and Schlosser Win Other Places

At the fall meeting of the Athletic Council held last Friday afternoon, Joseph Roby Dorrance of New Haven, Conn., was recommended to the Student Council for election as football manager for the season of 1930. By last year's ruling of the Student Council, the recommendations will be approved at its meeting next Tuesday evening, unless a formal petition for a general College election shall have been presented before that time.

Allan Livingston Grosvenor of Hartford, Conn., Perry Edward Wurst, Jr. of Buffalo, N. Y., Richard Marshall Denne of New York City, and Irving Florian Schlosser of New York City have also been recommended for the positions of 1930 Manager of Soccer, Intramural Manager, Manager of Freshman Football, and Manager of Freshman Soccer, respectively. Dorrance and Grosvenor will serve as Assistant Managers next year and will succeed R. H. Marshall '30 and J. C. Groskin '30 as managers of their respective sports in 1930, while the other positions last only through the 1929 season.

Dorrance prepared for Williams at Phillips Exeter Academy, where he was a member of the board of the Exonian, the school paper. He was a member of the

Bowker Swimming Meet to Start on Wednesday

Competition in the annual meet for the Bowker Trophy among all undergraduates who have not received their letters in swimming will begin on Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock in the Lasell pool. The meet, which was won last year by Burgess '30, with Birnie '31 runner-up, will include the following events: diving, 300-yard swim, 150-yard medley, 100-yard breast stroke, 100-yard backstroke, 100-yard freestyle, and 50-yard freestyle.

The events will be spread over a period of several days, so that a man can enter as many races as he wishes. Coach Graham expressed the hope that all men in college who have ability, even in only one event, will enter that race, although they have small chance of winning the cup. In this way, competition will be so keen that one man cannot have a large margin of victory, and also material for the swimming team may be discovered among men who are not at present candidates. While the meet is intended primarily for upperclassmen, Freshmen are also eligible to compete.

'THEATRE' PLAYS ARE FAVORABLY CRITICIZED

'Bill Produced in Jesup Hall Friday Justifies Existence of Two Dramatic Clubs'

(Courtesy of Dr. John H. Roberts)

If the Editor of THE RECORD really wants an answer to the query in his last editorial, "Is Williams large enough, and talented enough, to contain two dramatic organizations?", let the answer be delivered now strongly in the affirmative. The Little Theatre's bill last Friday evening is ample proof. The Williams Little Theatre does not go to Winnetka, Illinois, at Christmas time; it does not hire a professional coach; it does not attempt to fill Chapin Hall. It is essentially a theatre intime. It stays at home and works hard; under incredible difficulties connected with the meagre proportions of the Jesup stage, the lack of proper exits, and inadequate workrooms for scenery and costumes, it manages to do wonders. Moreover, it is a part of the community. Through its subscription plan it secures a small but steady local patronage; it does not limit its acting personnel to the undergraduates; and it does its best to serve forth the drama not only twice a year, but regularly throughout the season. It enjoys the inestimable virtue of enthusiasm for its art; and while its productions are uneven and sometimes more earnest than successful, it usually contrives to do some things so well that its mistakes fade in the light of its triumphs.

Last Friday's bill would have been typical, except that its low point was higher than usual and its high point was very high indeed. The evening opened with Lord Dunsany's pleasant little comedy The Lost Silk Hat. A simple panel setting served effectively to frame the door before which in their brief parts both Mr. Manning and Mr. Sewall gave sharp characterizations. The burden of the piece fell on Mr. Heermance and Mr. Sisley. Mr. Heermance has that most enviable quality among amateurs—a confidence of manner that gets across the footlights to the audience. It is made up of carriage, of voice control, of clear enunciation, and a sense of being at home. The result was that he made a great deal of a part that offered little but the opportunity to say again and

W. C. A. Drive Begins

Early Sunday evening, when the W. C. A. Chest Fund Drive reports had just begun to come in, $500 toward the needed $7000 had been collected. This makes a low average of about eight dollars per man, and it is hoped that later contributions will be large enough to bring up the average to the necessary ten dollars per man. The total sum at present is small, and if contributions continue to come in as slowly as at present, the W. C. A. will be unable to complete its budget. As yet no large contributions have been received, but the W. C. A. hopes that students who have not yet given to the Chest Fund will realize the charitable value of the items and make their contributions accordingly.

ITALIAN PIANISTE WILL PLAY HERE THURSDAY

Miss Materassi-Barton Has Won Acclaim of American and Italian Critics

Under the auspices of the Thompson Course, Miss Andreina Materassi-Barton, famous Italian pianiste, on her second concert tour in America, will give a recital in Chapin Hall next Thursday evening at 8.15 o'clock. Miss Materassi, who was born in Florence, Italy, and graduated with highest honors from the Royal Conservatory of Music in 1924, early earned a widespread fame in her native land, which followed her to this country after her first appearance at Chicago in 1926.

The enthusiasm with which she has been universally acclaimed in her own land is reflected in the glowing praise accorded her by Italian critics. The Florence Nazione della Sera says of Miss Materassi's recital in that city: "... In the execution of so formidable and exacting a program the young concert artist merited the spontaneous and abundant applause accorded her at the finish of every piece. Beauty and fluidity of tone, melodic limpidity, incisive rhythm—surely she possesses these qualities, and uses them with unconscious grace". At Pisa a critic wrote, "The noted pianiste played with exquisite beauty of touch, extraordinary technical ability, and fineness of interpretation".

During her first United States tour, which consisted of several concerts in the vicinity of Chicago, Miss Materassi evoked enthusiastic press reports everywhere, and was even more graciously received on her return to America in 1928. One Chicago critic writes: "... The most satisfying and complete Liszt performance of the season. Her account of the rarely heard and vastly difficult etude, Will o' the Wisp,

COLLEGE TO BALLOT ON INSIGNIA QUESTION

Student Council To Suggest Award of Straight W's of Two Sizes at Meeting

Proposing a change in the present system of varsity athletic insignia awards, the Williams Student Council will call a meeting of all undergraduates within the next few days to ratify or reject the proposal. This plan, in short, states that a six inch block purple W will be awarded in football, baseball, and track, while a five inch purple W will be awarded for all other sports recognized by the Athletic Council.

The Student Council feels that a revision in the present system is desirable for the following reasons: first, that there is at the present time a growing sentiment in favor of lessening or eliminating the distinction between major and minor sports, which is not only peculiar to Williams but also to other colleges and universities; second, that the reasons for the need of such distinctions are obscure, since it is held that the service and effort of the individual for the college is the basis for the award regardless of the sport in which he participates; and third, that the growth in the number of sports, each with its different letter award, has complicated the situation, leading to an unpleasant and confusing number of special letters on the campus.

The following proposal, endorsed by the Williams Student Council, the All-Campus Committee, the managers of football, baseball, track, basketball, and hockey, and the captains of football, baseball, track, and hockey, was informally approved by the Athletic Council, and will be submitted, in substance, to the vote of the college body:

The block six inch purple W is the letter to be awarded for football, baseball, and track;

Five Williams Candidates Given Rhodes Interviews

Although at the time of going to press the results of the interviews held last Saturday to determine the men granted Rhodes Scholarships have not all been announced, all of the Williams applicants were granted interviews. Among the ten out of 46 candidates for the Massachusetts scholarship to be selected for interview were W. Collins, Little, and Reeves, while Overton and Faison appeared before the Vermont and Maryland committees respectively.

Preliminary to the interviews in Boston the number of the Massachusetts applicants was reduced to ten; Williams, Harvard, and Yale each retaining three candidates and the University of New Hampshire one. On the committee of selection were President Lowell of Harvard, chairman, Professor Green of Harvard, Dean Nixon of Bowdoin, and Rev. Kinsolving of Amherst. In the fifteen minute interview granted each candidate, extremely general questions were asked pertaining

'CRIME FURTHERED BY ENVIRONMENT'—SQUIRE

Ex-Physician of Sing Sing Denies That Capital Punishment Is Efficacious

"We must look to welfare work for the boys and girls of this country for prevention of crime," said Dr. Amos O. Squire, formerly Chief Physician of Sing Sing Prison, in his address before a largely attended meeting of the Williams Forum in Jesup Hall last Sunday evening. Dr. Squire, whose subject was "Why People Commit Crime", treated his topic in a most intriguing manner due to his twenty-nine years' experience in the affairs of Sing Sing, and illustrated his exposition of the burden thrown by crime on the community, its causes, and possible cures, with abundant pithy descriptions and anecdotes.

After his introduction by Harris '29, the speaker discussed the apportionment of the yearly $10,000,000,000 cost of crime to this country, saying that this amount equaled in volume the debts of all foreign nations to this country, that it was three times the total government expenses per year, and twelve times those of the army and navy. He mentioned the fact that there are at present over 300,000 individuals confined in the 157 prisons and 3,292 jails and workhouses of the country, pointing out the magnitude of the anti-social elements in the United States with reference to the bare 10% of criminals who are apprehended.

Dr. Squire then proceeded to dissipate

Prof. Weston Praises Current Exhibition of French Impressionistic Paintings as 'Best Ever in Lawrence'

"Scorned in 1874, their works unsalable for years, the Impressionists began to come into favour in the nineties, and today their pictures hang in the Louvre," says a pamphlet issued by Professor Weston in connection with the Fifth Special Exhibition in Lawrence Museum of the Art Department's 1928-29 season. In addition to the works of eight French Impressionists and one Realist, this exhibition contains four paintings by Josephine Ames Morton which show the French influence.

"When Edouard Monet," continues Professor Weston in his brief pamphlet on the history of the Impressionist School, "outraged all Paris in 1863 by painting pictures in which the traditional conventions of light, shade, and colour were defied, the way was prepared for Impressionism. For the fixed opposition of different tones, lights were raised to a high intensity and shadows were replaced by less bright tones but always coloured. Strong colours were placed side by side without intermediate tones to effect a transition."

Professor Weston goes on by explaining that the four original Impressionists, Claude Monet, Pissarro, Sisley, and Renoir slowly developed most interest in light and atmospheric effects. Instead of remaining in the studio, these men formulated a system of painting in the open air. "In their pursuit of colour and

CLARK DEFEATED BY PURPLE TEAM, 32-17

Slow First Half Gives Clark 7-6 Lead, but Fast Last Period Attack Wins

BETHAM SCORES 14 POINTS

Cuddeback Checks Shannahan as Callaghan Sinks Four Shots From Floor

After a half of ridiculously slow playing in which Clark held the ball in the middle of the floor and Williams played a waiting game, the Purple came back in the second half of the opening basketball game last Saturday night in the Lasell Gymnasium to take the offense in their own hands and defeat Clark University of Worcester, by a 32-17 score. Clark scored in the first five seconds of the game when a perfect play, Whitman to Shannahan to Amsden netted a basket, but it was not until the closing minute of this half that either team again succeeded in scoring from the floor.

With the initial basket the Clark offence halted. The highly rated Shannahan never seemed to be free of Cuddeback, and was not able to get the ball except in the middle of the floor. Time after time he started to dribble toward the basket only to be forced back. The Clark defense proved just as impregnable to Williams with Betham and Thoms trying the only short shots in the whole first half. Even when Williams did obtain the ball from the stalling Clark quintet, they wasted their opportunities on long shots which were not followed up.

In the second period Williams discarded the Fabian policy. A basket and a foul by Betham followed by a perfect shot from the side by Cuddeback gave the Purple the lead, which was never relinquished. Amsden interrupted the rally for a moment with a basket, but another foul by Betham started it off again. Throughout this second half the same energetic offense continued with Williams playing a close man-to-man defense and forcing the Clark team back into its own territory. Callaghan set the pace at this time with four field goals from close by the basket. Even the Williams substitutes, which were sent in at this time were able to work the ball down the floor and try for the basket. Clark's final desperate drive, which won the game for them last year, netted only one field goal on a long shot by Shannahan from the middle of the floor.

Although the Purple offence was ragged at times during the game, the floor work of Betham showed the possibilities of the team. His passes accounted for many of the Williams scores. Shannahan played a steady game for Clark, but the close guarding of Cuddeback and of the whole Williams team left few opportunities to score.

"light", the article continues, "they were aided by the scientific studies of Professor Rood of Columbia and the French physiologist, Chevreul, who had proved that effects of greater intensity and purity are attained by broken or divided colour than by colour mixed on the palette."

"Thus the Impressionists adopted a palette composed solely of the colours of the spectrum, three of which, red, yellow, and blue are fundamental or primary." Instead of mixing blue and yellow to make green, they placed strokes of blue and yellow side by side on the canvass. They found that contrasts could be heightened by using a colour with its complement—as blue against yellow, or red against green.

After explaining that the derisive name of Impressionists came from a canvas by Monet entitled "Impression: soleil levant", the pamphlet concludes with a note concerning the works of Josephine Ames Morton. A memorial exhibition of Mrs. Morton's paintings was presented at the opening of the Lawrence Hall Museum in April, 1927. Four of her works, which reflect the French influence, will be shown in connection with the present exhibition.

The list of artists and their works in the present exhibition, for which the Art Department is indebted to the house of Durand-Ruel of Paris and New York, is as follows:

THE GUNS ON 'THE GRAPHIC'

We quote from a communication appearing in THE WILLIAMS RECORD of November 29, 1920 over the signature of the then chairman of the Williams Literary Monthly: "At a recent meeting of the Literary Monthly Board, the editors—after reading the single contribution submitted to the meeting—discussed a change in the character and policy of the paper . . . We are approaching the point where, for lack of material, it will be almost impossible for publication to continue."

So it has been eight years since a publication with nothing to publish converted itself into the Graphic to escape the ignominy of extinction. On Tuesday, December 4, 1928, the board of the Graphic (unconsciously) celebrated the anniversary of the capitulations. To be brief, the situation, if different, was no less critical. On the table there was material, perhaps six or eight times as much as on that pathetic November evening in 1920, six or eight times more interesting too, and not inferior in execution. But around that table sat seven members of a board of fifteen. To use words of homely intimacy, two were busy with the Little Theatre, one was rehearsing for Cap and Bells, one was practising basketball, and so the list of absentees went from the humblest poet to the editor.

It appears, then, that the Graphic cannot command the respect of its own board. Two-thirds of the names it carries in its editorial box are deadwood. Under such circumstances we cannot understand what it expects of the College. We mean no personal disparagement. It is nothing to us if those who have earned the distinction of membership during the comparative calm of underclassman days should come as Juniors and Seniors to yield precedence in their energy if not in their affection to every other activity on the campus. Our only conclusion is that the place of a literary magazine in Williams is small.

When we say small, it must be distinctly understood that we do not mean unimportant. It must be plain that a literary publication is particularly appropriate at Williams. Nor is it a hopeless effort to maintain a spirit that is dead. The College little appreciates the amount of material submitted to the Graphic at certain favored times of the year, nor the variety of sources whence it comes. Various and sundry are the adolescent souls laid bare for the critical dissection of the Board. Many are the important things in these days which inevitably receive a small amount of time and effort. Accepting, then, the facts as we find them, it is to be regretted if any cause comprises its importance by attempting to sprawl over a large amount of ground. In short, from the point of view of the administrators, the contributors, and the readers, a literary magazine in Williams is strained to the breaking point by attempting to be a monthly. The Graphic should be a quarterly.

That the Graphic knows its own troubles we are aware. That it carefully discussed this solution a year ago we are aware. In turning the editorial guns on a sister publication we have kept an eye out for shattered glass in our own abode. But perhaps a word of sympathetic criticism will be an improvement over the passive neglect which has been extended to the Graphic this year even by itself.

'Theatre' Plays Are Favorably Criticized

again, "But I must have my hat!" Mr. Sisley's poet is more difficult to evaluate. There can be no doubt but that he created a character and perhaps his creation is what Lord Dunsany had in mind. But it came dangerously near being a burlesque of the Greenwich Village or Chelsea type rather than a satiric portrayal of the excessively romantic temperament. His gestures were a little too broad, his mincing was a little too fine, his voice just a little too high pitched. The character almost became a caricature. But it is only fair to add that the audience liked him very much and that he did see all there was in his last line and made the most of it.

Lady Gregory's The Gool Gate, the next play, offers the kind of temptation that apparently The Little Theatre cannot resist. There is in it that element of gloom and tragedy that is essential, in the mind of the Play Committee, to the well balanced program. But it also presents tremendous difficulties: dialect, for one thing, and emotion that is built on exposition rather than action. And amateurs usually are not equal to the task. Again a panel setting with good color and light effect set the tone of the play. But Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Graham found it difficult to tell the story. This was largely Lady Gregory's fault. She gives her characters long speeches that are never anything but static at the same time expecting the actors to lift the words into the dramatic expression of grief and despair. There were two reasons why this did not happen in Jesup. The dialect confused the lines and left the exposition muddled; and the emotions became mere recitations of words rather than the irrefragable anguish of broken hearts.

The last play was Sheridan's A Tragedy Rehearsed and never has The Little Theatre been seen to better advantage. Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Casaday. Often before he has shown his directing skill in color and costume and setting; but this time he revealed another virtue, quite as rare as it is admirable—a sense of humour. He managed to get just the right touch of burlesque into the whole production. He saw—that it is absolutely necessary to see in this play—the fun that must result when the charmingly polite and artificial XVIII Century attempts to satirize the robust and red-blooded Elizabethans. The mad scene by Mrs. Newhall and Mrs. Chapin is an excellent example. The lines themselves are a burlesque on romantic madness; the acting showed all the restraint and decorum beloved by the Age of Enlightenment. The incidental business was perfect: the false entrance of the Earl of Leicester; Mr. Gilbert's repitious death scene with Mr. Demuth; the triple fainting performed by Mr. Spencer, Mrs. Brinsmade, and Mr. Sabin; the thinking act so subtly portrayed by Mr. Baxter. Mr. Sisley and Mr. Erskine were such Elizabethan gallants as only gentlemen in the XVIII Century could be. And Miss Healy, Miss Gobeille, and Mr. Willson in the brief moments allotted to them caught the exact spirit of the production.

All these people were performing, it must be remembered, not for the audience in Jesup, but for Mr. Reiff, Mr. Wheeler, and Mrs. Graham—the author, critic, and unofficial commentator. They were all so good that it was a temptation to watch them at the expense of missing the play. Mr. Reiff, who had the most difficult job in the whole business, made the most of his opportunity. In spite of a much too youthful make-up, he was proud, rebuffed, humble, and jubilant in turn and he managed skilfully to work the many scattered fragments of the play into one, unified design. Mr. Wheeler and Mrs. Graham, to whose lot fell many of the funniest lines, were sheer delight. They were the embodiment of Sheridan's time: gorgeous in appearance, perfectly proper in deportment, and thoroughly nasty in their critical remarks. But the play cannot be dismissed without one more word of praise for setting and costumes. Mr. Clapp created a most amusing Tilbury Fort and the costume staff designed wigs and gowns and jackets and breeches with such joyous use of color that one looked a little wistfully at an age when ladies, on going mad, always wore white satin ("It's a rule!") and a gentleman like Mr. Gilbert could wear scarlet brocade and still be a hero.

'Crime Furthered by Environment'—Squire

various unfounded ideas as to the criminal world by quoting statistics to the effect that criminals for the most part seem a great deal like any cross-section of the population. He said among the group of 1,005 new men admitted at Sing Sing last year there were 37 college graduates, 147 high school graduates, and a representation of 155 different pursuits, including 3 policemen. There were more single than married men, more men who had been employed than footloose. As to habits, there were 541 abstainers, and despite the current idea that few criminals confess, there were 471 in this group who had admitted their guilt.

The speaker then turned his attention to the reasons for crimes. He first criticized the excessive number of laws in this country, which, he said, amounted to over 2,000,000 with an additional 100,000 every year. His experience had led him to believe that men are not criminals by birth, that there is no characteristic physique, as has been claimed, and that, even among the supposedly most degraded type, of whom he has electrocuted 138 himself, there is never a man who is so far gone that there is no chance for a cure. Of 1500 men confined in the prison shortly after the war only 51 had been enlisted in the active army, so that the idea of holding up the deleterious effect of the world struggle as a cause for crime was wrongly conceived.

As to the factors which do react on crime, Dr. Squire emphasized particularly that of environment, saying that "all that have had anything to do with crime find that environment plays its part." Under this head he criticized the exaggerated "news value" accounts of lawbreaking given in periodicals and newspapers, and remarked that "producers of newspapers and motion pictures should use better judgment and refrain from the portrayal, especially on the screen, of incidents leading to the supposition that the taking of human life is of little or no account."

The commission of crime because of physical disability was also mentioned, the prime element here included being addiction to drugs, and chief among these heroin. Strangely enough, prior to 1919 there were on the average only 13 addicts a year incarcerated in Sing Sing. By 1923 this number had increased by 750%. In this connection Dr. Squire pointed out that of the 2,000 tons of opium produced every year a mere 75 are consumed by the medical and scientific industries. This country uses more than any other. In addition to this type of offender, 20% of the prison population are psychopaths—plain, professional crooks.

As regards capital punishment Dr. Squires said that he was formerly in its favor but now is afraid that the way in which it is employed is not much of a deterrent to lawbreaking. "Most criminals," he said, "prefer 'going out by the green door' to spending their lives in prison. Also, people are averse to sitting on a jury when there is a question of capital punishment. I believe for this very reason that we would get over 50% more convictions if we did away with capital punishment. Life imprisonment appears more rigorous to the average convict. The first thing I would do to alleviate the crime situation would be to deport alien criminals when they get out of prison. Ten percent of crime is committed by them."

FALL INSIGNIA GIVEN BY ATHLETIC COUNCIL

Football Men Honored with Gold Charms—Baseball Schedules Are Announced

Following the close of the fall sports season, the Athletic Council awarded 21 football letters and insignia to the other teams with the exception of the Varsity soccer eleven, and at the same time announced the schedules for the Varsity and Freshman baseball teams for next spring. The recipients of the football insignia were further honored by being awarded gold footballs as well.

The number of "W's" given for football is considerably below last year's total, but this was of course due to the abandonment of the "two team" system. The following is a list of the men who were honored with letters and watch-charms: Captain Andersen, Brown, Chase, Deming, Eisner, Gailer, Howe, Muller, Putnam, Watson, Williamson, and Manager Hubbard '29; Ashby, Lasell, Williams, and Asst. Manager Marshall '30; Hood, Kipp, Langmaid, Miller, and Schwartz '31. Twenty numerals were awarded to the following members of the undefeated Freshman eleven: Captain Fowle, Bartlett, Dawson, Engle, Foehl, Fox, Good, Hulse, Page, Patterson, Ris, Ripple, Rowan, Senn, Sherwood, Stevens, Tuttle, Wood, Manager Boyce, and Asst. Manager Miller '32.

The Council decided to defer action on the soccer letters until their next meeting on January 19. However, numerals were awarded to the following 16 members of the Freshman team: Captain Smith, Avery, Boyd, Dohme, Duryee, Forbes, French, Heermanee, Lambert, Marks, McMahon, Miller, Noe, VanSandt, and Wadsworth '32, and Manager Hoyt '30. Eight members of the Varsity cross-country team were given "cW's", while six yearlings won their numerals in the same sport. The following are the Varsity men: Captain Moore, Herrick, and Manager Lisle '29; J. S. Chapman, and Reynolds '30; Goodbody, Guernsey, Reynolds, and Suffer '31. Those freshmen winning numerals are Alexander, Burnet, Davol, Potter, Roy, and Walters.

The following schedules for the baseball nines were also announced:

Most of the art and literary material is that of board members with supplementary contributions by a number of freshmen. It will contain an announcement of recent elections to the board.

HARVARD DISCUSSES 'INNER COLLEGE' IDEA

Plan Provides Common Quarters for Group of Students and Tutors

Announcement of an anonymous gift of $3,000,000 to build and endow a "House" or group of dormitories, dining halls, and commons rooms for 200 or 300 students within Harvard College has recently been made at Cambridge in a statement by A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University. In certain respects it will be a college within a college, very similar to the "colleges" of Oxford and Cambridge.

The establishment of such Houses was suggested three years ago in a report presented by an undergraduate "Committee on Education", appointed by the Harvard Student Council. President Lowell describes the new project as the "capping stone" to the tutorial system which has been built up at Harvard during the last fifteen years.

The plan involves no change in the method of teaching. Those men who are selected will attend the College courses with the other students, but the tutoring will normally be done in the House. The main difference will be the aim to bring the students into closer association with their tutors, with research fellows, and with their own classmates. Thus the advantages of the small as well as of the large institutions are secured. Whether it is impractical and is abandoned, or whether it revolutionizes the general educational policy in the direction of the English system, its progress will receive marked interest.

25 PURPLE SWIMMERS REPORT FOR PRACTICE

Squad To Be Built Around Captain Schott and Five Veterans Of 1928 Team

With a squad of about 25 men reporting for the first practice on Wednesday and with six letter men, including Captain Schott, Doughty, Healy, Noble '29, and Davis and Van der Bogert '30, about whom to build this year's lineup, the swimming team began its pre-seasonal workouts on the gym floor and in the pool. The team will hold light practice until the Christmas recess, after which time severe work and a training table will begin to put the squad in good shape for its first meet with R. P. I. at Troy on January 12.

Through graduation last year, the swimming team lost Captain Butcher, Boynton, Dawes, and Putney, thus leaving a gap in the 440 and the dashes. Burgess '30, however, is expected to step into Butcher's place in the distance event, while Davis '30 will swim the dashes instead of Putney. There is an apparent scarcity of fast men for the relay team, but a large number of possibilities from the Sophomore class will probably be sufficient to fill this event. In addition to the Medley Relay, a new event has been added to the list in dual meets—the 300-yd. Medley Race, in which Schott and Healy '29 brought Williams supporters to their feet last year in the New England Intercollegiate by taking first and second places respectively. According to Coach Graham, a great deal of conditioning and coaching will have to be done before the team is in good shape for its opening meet.

The following is a list of the men who reported for practice on Wednesday: Doughty, Healy, Higginbotham, Noble, Schott (Captain), and Wolcott '29, Adams W. A., Burgess, Close, Davis, Niebling, Van der Bogert, and Wilson K. S., '30, Arscott, Birnie, Cavanaugh, Fedde, Garth, Gregg, Holbrook, Kimball, Kleibacker, Runo, Shaw, Webster, and Wheeler G. '31.

Address Books

Address books, containing the home street and town address and college address of every undergraduate and member of the faculty, will be placed on sale at Smith's book store and the Williams News Room during the week. The price is thirty-five cents each.

Paul Bunyan Is Here!

In those delightful fables of the North Woods, Paul Bunyan does wondrous works, far beyond the realm of human possibility, always on a gigantic scale.

But what was the miracle of yesterday is the reality of today. Norton Pulpstones—modern giants—with speed and regularity shred the millions of logs which flow down to the paper mills.

Mere man could not compete with Bunyan in the North Woods. Even so the old quarried sandstones yield to the prowess of pulpstones, manufactured by Norton. The North Woods bow in homage to the new abrasive giant.

Dean Hawkes Advocates Courses in Christianity

Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of Columbia College in an address before the annual convention of the Association of Colleges, held last Friday at Atlantic City, suggested that the place of religion in the colleges should be the same as that of any other subject, and cited Williams as a place where this idea was carried out to some extent. "It has been demonstrated that such courses can be offered to all without propaganda or personal bias," he stated, "and religion should be presented in the same way as arts and music, in terms of actual human significance." Dean Hawkes went on to say that many colleges, including Yale, Harvard, Williams, and Columbia did have courses in religion, but that these courses usually had to do with oriental and ancient religions. He said that he felt that the Christian religion should be taught in much the same unbiased way.

Mabie Room Visited 155 Times

According to figures compiled by Lawrence H. Bloedel who has charge of the Hamilton Wright Mabie Memorial Room, in the Stetson Library, 155 undergraduates have availed themselves of its privileges from Sept. 21st to Nov. 18th, and a total of 106 books have been taken from the shelves. It is seen from his report that "Don Juan", by Lord Byron, was easily the most popular, with the works of Henry Fielding, Hawthorne, Rabelais, Richardson, and John Addington Symonds being next in demand.

Infirmity Patients

Jepson '30 and Hufnagel '31 were confined to the Thompson Infirmary at the time of publication on December 9. If an undergraduate becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified.

All except one of the applicants there were given two interviews which consisted of a thorough questioning on American undergraduate life designed to determine the candidates general knowledge, and an investigation into his proposed study at Oxford.

Outing Club Blazes Trail

Led by Covell '30, twelve members of the Outing Club, mainly underclassmen, conducted a trail-blazing expedition up Pine Cobble to East Lookout last Saturday afternoon. The principal work of the expedition consisted in blazing and cutting an abandoned trail between East Lookout and the Clark Chapel Road, so that in the future men climbing Pine Cobble may return via the Lookout and the Clark Chapel Road, instead of retracing their steps. Those who made the trip were Covell and Armstrong '30, Cannon, Guernsey, and Kleibacker '31, Foster, Hackett, Miller, Parks, Robertson, Spenser, and Walter '32.

IT IS to be noted that both Lowlanders and Highlanders are glad to receive Glengair hose for Christmas. But we have long remarked that in its native country more Glengair golf hose is bought than is given away at Christmas time, and we are forced to believe that the canny Scot, having made his purchase, is loath to part with it.

Glengair hose is framed by hand in Leith, and its tradition of Scotch designing has made it the finest golf hose of today. It is knitted in solid colors, in patterns richly harmonized, and in the authentic tartans of clans that have made the history of Scotland.

Its pure, high-grade wool, heavy, luxuriously soft, and warm on the coldest day, makes it an excellent golf hose for skating, skiing and winter outdoor sports. We suggest that you inspect this hose (you can identify it by the Glengair coat-of-arms) where you will have choice of a fine selection from the line.

Immorality Wins in Two League Debates (Continued from First Page)

morality was called in question. "There is no standardized moral good in the United States, for morals change with time and are not the same all over the country. To make their case clear the affirmative must out-think Aristotle, Plato and Spinoza in the next ten minutes." Finally he blamed modern immorality on the war, unemployment, the influx of aliens, and industrialism "which, in France and Germany, is distinct from prosperity, though the condition of morals is worse there."

A high point in the evening was reached when Jenks, who now took the floor for Williams, displayed an ingenious diagram demonstrating that money was either the means or the incentive to every vice in the dictionary. "Why, the gentlemen from New Haven could not even get divorced without money. Of the famous trio, Wine, Women, and Song, they would be reduced to singing." Then: "The wheels of business would not go around without immorality to lubricate them. . . . War demands material prosperity, and there can be no popular sentiment to stop war as it is profitable to the business man."

Mr. Vance then announced his intention of proving that material prosperity has been "not only the goal of our efforts but also the gateway to the highest values of life". . . "The thing that distinguishes a man from a beast is sacrifice today in order to have something tomorrow." He pointed out that our prosperity does not tolerate trusts such as found in Germany, that embezzlement has decreased with prosperity since the frantic opening of the West, that none of us would be in college if it were not for prosperity, that infant mortality has been decreased by prosperity, a point peculiarly in line with his definition of morality as "that which is for the best interests of mankind as a whole." "Immorality from prosperity is merely a form of bad manners, the conduct of a child with a new toy which it does not know how to use."

Erskine, in rebuttal, put the debate on concrete grounds on the question of morality by pointing out that the negative had been lured into defining the term itself after consuming their first speech to prove that definition was impossible. He then attempted to annihilate the second speaker with a blanket admission, based upon the affirmative's contention that it was not obliged to prove that prosperity is entirely bad, but "only" that it is "unfavorable" to morality.

Brown Debate

After a few words of welcome to the Williams team on the part of the Reverend Herbert MacCombie, who presided at the debate in Sayles Hall, Alfred Berman '29 was introduced as the first speaker of the Brown affirmative. Mr. Berman opened the discussion by claiming that "America no longer judges a man by what he is, but rather by what he has."

"We people of today," he continued, "bow down in worship of the Almighty Dollar. We kneel before the great god of Gold". Mr. Berman concluded his speech by comparing our present civilization to that of Rome. He pointed out that the Greek philosophers had decried the evil effects of wealth on morals, and he argued that we are about to follow the road which led Rome to destruction.

"Money-grabbing is innate in human nature", replied H. K. Straw '30, first speaker for Williams. He maintained that, since we have the greatest prosperity in the history of the world, it was incumbent upon the affirmative to prove that this has resulted in the greatest immorality. He argued that money-grabbing, religion, and increased lawlessness could not be discussed in the debate, since they are not products of material prosperity. The speaker concluded by advancing figures which showed less crime in this country in recent years.

The decline of our birth rate was attributed by J. F. Aiso '31, of Brown, to the many married women who are now working to secure luxuries which their husbands salaries do not permit them to enjoy. "In this era of prosperity, can a man be convicted of crime if he has a million dollars?" he asked. "No", was his answer, "for every man has his price, and the decreased number of people committed to jails merely shows that there is more corruption in law."

That our material prosperity has made living conditions better than ever before was the contention of C. S. Oxtoby '31, who concluded the remarks for Williams. The decline of the birth rate, he asserted, is a positive benefit, since economists agree that with an increased rate our food supply will become inadequate. He pointed out that prosperity has given Man leisure time in which to enjoy the finer things of life, and he concluded by praising the new independence of women which has come with our present civilization.

Since the first affirmative speaker is allowed six minutes of rebuttal at the conclusion of the negative speeches, Mr. Berman closed the debate by maintaining that American home life has been undermined by increased divorces, with resultant sexual promiscuity. "We no longer judge things in their true light," he said, "for our standards of value have been gilded, and we are worshippers at the altar of false gods."

Clark Defeated by Purple Team 32-17 (Continued from First Page)

Williams shot every time there was a chance, and made many of them good. Betham's eight fouls out of eight tries was also a big factor in the Williams victory, and coupled with the other fouls gave Williams its margin of victory.

The summary of the game is as follows:

Betham	l.f. Shannahan
Thoms	r.f. Amsden
Allen	e. Whitman
Cuddeback	r.g. Nicoll
Alexander	l.g. Mattson

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Callaghan for Thoms, Thoms for Allen, Howse for Thoms, Field for Alexander; CLARK—Popple for Amsden, Philburn for Whitman, Lebeaux for Mattson. Referee—Whalen. COLLEGE APPROVES SIMPLIFIED INSIGNIA

Two Standard Letters and Class Numerals Are Only Official Athletic Awards

Alone in naked grandeur and stern simplicity will the "W" of Williams henceforth stand on the breast of her athletes. For six measures renovating the entire system of athletic awards, abolishing all combination letters formerly used for minor sports, rejecting the Old English "W", and recognizing only a six-inch block letter for all major sports and a plain five-inch "W" for all the rest, were passed without a dissenting vote at a small College meeting held in Jesup Hall last Tuesday evening.

Clark '29 on behalf of the Student Council presented the proposal, drawn up by a committee composed of the managers of football, baseball, and track after investigating conditions in 30 colleges and universities, and endorsed by the Student Council, the All-Campus Committee, the managers of football, baseball, track, basketball, and hockey, the captains of the same sports, and the Athletic Council: "The block six-inch purple 'W' is the letter to be awarded for Football, Baseball, and Track; the plain five-inch purple 'W' is the letter to be awarded for all other sports recognized by the Athletic Council."

The proposal met with no serious opposition. In answer to questions from the floor, Clark stated that the system, if approved, would take effect with the letters awarded for the past fall. Later in the meeting the entire new plan of awards was made retroactive when the house carried a motion presented by Overton '29 providing that men now possessing minor combination letters be authorized to remove all but the "W" if they so desire and that, where complete replacement is necessary, the Athletic Department make the exchange upon request.

Five corollary proposals were carried in rapid succession. First: "The old English 'W' shall no longer be awarded". In the past this has been a special reward for individual or team excellence in a minor sport. It was abolished to further the simplification of the entire system, and the abolition was justified by the fact that minor sports are now to be awarded a more dignified letter in general, and that in special cases the Athletic Council still has the power to grant a major letter for exceptional performance in a minor sport.

Second: "Upperclass managers of Freshman sports shall be awarded their respective class numerals."

Third: "Intramural managers shall be awarded their respective class numerals."

Fourth: "All letters shall be constructed for from a single establishment and distributed from one office." It was pointed out that this is to secure letters of uniform quality and accurately in accordance with specifications.

Fifth: "The maximum number of letters awarded for any sport shall not exceed twice the number of positions on the particular team, except on special request of the Captain, Manager, and Coach of the sport in question." This does not apply to (Continued on Fourth Page)

Handel's 'Messiah' to Be Presented Sunday Night

Under the conductorship of Mr. Charles L. Safford of the Department of Music, Handel's Messiah will be presented in Chapin Hall at 8.15 p. m. on the evening of Sunday, December 16. The program of this innovation in local musical productions will consist of solos and Community Chorus work by both undergraduates and citizens of Williamstown and vicinity.

Rehearsals for this production, which is given for the benefit of the Organ Fund of St. John's Episcopal Church, have been taking place during the past few weeks, and a chorus of about fifty has been recruited from the undergraduate body and from citizens of Williamstown, Blackinton, and North Adams. If this program is well received, Mr. Safford hopes to keep the chorus together for similar productions in the future.

Of the undergraduates participating in this presentation, Dougherty '31 will sing several baritone solos and Rogers '30 will accompany the chorus on the organ. Other soloists include Mrs. Grace Bradley O'Connell, soprano; Mrs. Laura Tappan Safford, contralto; and Mr. James C. Morton, tenor.

LASELL IS CHOSEN TO LEAD FOOTBALL TEAM

Veteran Player Has Strengthened Varsity Line During Past Two Seasons

Chester Harding Lasell, '30, of Whitinsville, was chosen captain of next year's football team at a meeting of the lettermen held in Jesup Hall last Tuesday noon. Throughout the past season the captain-elect has held a regular berth at left guard where he proved to be a good running mate for Captain Andersen, who was playing on the other side of center.

Lasell prepared for College at Pomfret where he rowed on the crew in addition to playing football. In his Freshman year he earned a name for himself by his playing at center, and last year he played the same position on the Varsity eleven. This fall, however, Coach Caldwell turned him into a good guard. Lasell held the office of Class Treasurer in his Freshman year and is a member of the Purple Key society.

Intramural Handball Starts

Resuming activities in the interfraternity field, Delta Kappa Epsilon easily defeated Delta Psi in the first round of the handball tournament by taking both singles matches last Friday. Phi Gamma Delta, runners-up in the tournament last year, had no difficulty in defeating Alpha Delta Phi, 2-0. Wallace, who played on Phi Delta Theta's championship team of last season, was unable to play, and their new team of Lobo and Clark was forced into extra sets to defeat Kappa Alpha by 2-1. These first round victories admit the winners to the round-robin in which eight houses will contest for the championship.

Choir Recital

In place of Mr. Safford's usual Sunday afternoon organ recital, the College Choir will sing a group of Christmas carols. The programme will begin at 4.45 p. m.

FIFTEEN WILL MAKE PLACID HOCKEY TRIP

Varsity Squad Is Practising Daily For New Year's Series With Amherst Sextet

Holding daily practice now on the pond at Cole Field, the Varsity hockey team is fast rounding into shape for its series against the Purple and White at the Lake Placid Club on December 29 and 31 and January 1. Because of the roughness of the ice at Cole Field, Coach Bellerose has confined the work so far largely to passing and shooting, but hopes to hold several long scrimmages as soon as the ice on the Sage Hall rink can be used.

Langmaid, from last year's Freshman team, seems to have stepped into the place of Shepler at left defense, where he is paired with Captain Howe in what offers a very satisfactory defensive combination. Watters, substitute for Hutchins last year, is assured of the goalie's berth, with Ward

CHEST FUND RESULTS DISAPPOINTING

At the time of going to press at 10.30 Thursday evening, the total amount subscribed to the Williams Christian Association Chest Fund as the result of the campaign conducted during past week amounted to $5,196, with indications that $5,500 would be subscribed before midnight. As this falls short of the goal by $1,600, the drive will be continued until all men in College have been approached. According to Rohrbach '29, President of the Association, the average contribution per undergraduate has been unusually low as well as the number of men contributing. All late or additional contributions should be given to R. H. Marshall '30.

and Sholes of last year's Freshman team fighting for the second position. So, with Watters at goal, Captain Howe and Langmaid at the two defenses, and Schwartz and Hazzard as second-string defense men, Coach Bellerose seems to have little need of worry about his secondary defense.

The forward line is another story. The loss of Blaney leaves a weak spot at center which Coach Bellerose has been unable to fill to his satisfaction. Langmaid was tried there last week, but failed to add any offensive strength, and was returned to the secondary defense again. At present, George Ney is slated to start at center, with Brigham and Hoyt on the wings, but Wheeler has recovered from the knee injury which troubled him last season and may take Brigham's place at the wing, with the latter going to center in place of Nye. Coach Bellerose plans to use two forward lines again this season, composed of Nye, Brigham, Hoyt, Wheeler, and Stanwood and Kendall or Ballou and Field, but will not settle upon them until he has had more chance to watch both Nye and Brigham at center in scrimmage and decided upon the starting pivot.

Fifteen men, including Manager Williamson and probably Assistant Manager Reeves, will make the trip to Lake Placid during the Christmas vacation. Brigham, Hoyt, Wheeler, Nye, Stanwood, Kendall, Ballou and Field will constitute the forwards, while only Captain Howe, Langmaid, and Schwartz will be available for the defense positions, since Hazzard is unable to make the trip. Watters and either Sholes or Ward, or possibly both, will complete the squad which will be entertained at the Lake Placid Club during its stay.

Williams Club Notice

The Williams Club of New York City extends to all undergraduates of the College the privileges of the Club during the Christmas holidays. It is hoped that as many of the undergraduates as possible will make the Club their headquarters while in New York.

CAMPUS LANDMARK HAS BEEN RESTORED

Sun Dial, That Albert Hopkins Built, Has Been Put Back In Its Former Place

An old landmark on the Williams campus, the sun dial which Professor Albert Hopkins erected at the time of the construction of the Hopkins Memorial Observatory, and which was taken down when the observatory was moved back, has once again been resurrected, and now stands on the west end of the Berkshire Quadrangle Terrace. Through the efforts of his niece, Miss Susan Hopkins, this dial, rich in tradition and familiar to the minds of many older alumni, has been restored to its former place, in almost its original form.

Albert Hopkins, who was Professor of Astronomy, Biology, Zoology, and all other subjects of an outdoor nature, at that time embodied in the Department of Natural History, first came to Williams in 1827 and spent the remaining forty-five years of his life in service to the College. One of his achievements was a scientific expedition to Nova Scotia, which he himself organized. No better description of him could be found than that of President Chadbourne, who at the time of his funeral said, "In later life when age had whitened his locks, and moral conflicts and triumphs had deepened the lines upon his face, he stood before us a form of dignity and beauty which no ideal of patriarch or prophet ever surpassed."

In 1837 "the Professor", as he was called, built the observatory which now is named after him, after he had obtained an instrument from Troughton on a trip to Europe in 1834. On bringing it to Williams (Continued on Fourth Page)

Apology Sent by Council for Pratt Field Damage

In consideration of the damage done to Pratt Field after the Amherst-Williams football game, it was voted by the All-Campus Committee to send the following letter to the President of the Student Council at Amherst.

December 13, 1928.
President of Student Council,
Amherst College,
Amherst, Mass.
Dear Sir:

The extent of the property damage done to Pratt Field following the Amherst-Williams football game on November 17th has recently been brought to the attention of the Williams undergraduate body. Feeling that our actions might be construed in such a manner as to cause misunderstanding between the two colleges we are writing you our apologies for the unwarranted property injury for which we may be considered responsible.

We sincerely hope that the fine relations that have existed between the two colleges will not have been jeopardized by this incident and would appreciate your calling this to the attention of your student body so that Amherst and Williams may enter into future engagements without any misunderstanding.

Sincerely yours,
Robert E. Clark,
Chairman, Williams Student Council
Lloyd D. Rohrbach,
President of 1929

R. P. I. FIVE THREATENS FAST ATTACK TONIGHT

Engineers Have Shown Superlative Team Work in Their Only Game This Year

Victorious in its first game of the season by virtue of a synchronized and smoothly working attack which started functioning in the second half, the Williams basketball team will face its second opponent of the season, R. P. I., tonight in Lasell Gymnasium at 8 p. m. In the only game they have played, the Engineers won by the score of 29 to 23 over Albany Law School in a contest featured by unusually effective team work on the part of the Cherry and White.

A close and evenly matched game may be expected due to the fact that Coach Donald has a defense composed entirely of veterans. A system somewhat analogous to the one used in football bore last year exists with the R. P. I. basketball team, as Coach Donald has 13 men who are practically on a par, and for this reason the personnel of his team is not constant. This tends to make the team dangerous, as a series of reserves are being continually put in the game to add new life to the team.

The power of the team was shown in the game with Albany Law School. The Law-yer team was composed almost entirely of ex-college basketball stars, many of whom had formerly been regulars on the five in school, and their individual brilliance was dimmed by the superlative team play flashed by the Cherry and White. R. P. I. has no outstanding performers, but the fact that there are four veterans who in all probability will start tonight makes the team formidable. The center position was left vacant by graduation last year, but Eggleston filled it to perfection in the game with Albany. Captain Liberty and Kennedy at the guard positions are both veterans and received considerable praise for their work in stopping the attack of the Law School quintet. Colvin, who is a veteran, will start at right forward for R. P. I., and either McDonald or Schiller at the other forward post.

Coach Messor has been drilling his team on the fundamentals and smoothing up some of the rough spots which were shown in the Clark game last week. The starting lineup will in all probability be the same as it was then, making the lineups as follows:

WILLIAMS		R. P. I.
Thoms (1)	r.f.	Colvin (11)
Betham (9)	l.f.	McDonnell (15)

Graduate Fellowships

The President's office wishes to call attention of students to the notices of Graduate School Fellowships posted on the bulletin board in Hopkins Hall.

Mr. Taylor Proves Inaccuracy of Human Observation to Political Science Class With Novel Demonstration

Clad in a bright yellow shirt and a pair of bull's horns, a man burst into the quiet classroom of Mr. Telford Taylor in Griffin Hall last Monday, followed by an apparition in a tennis blazer and derby, and while the foremost brandished a banana, his pursuer effectively missed three shots with a six-shooter. As they grappled on the floor, Mr. Taylor drew a revolver, which he always keeps for just such emergencies, from his desk and fired three times in the general direction of the disturbance, after which the combatants arose and disappeared.

Such was the method by which Mr. Taylor set about demonstrating to his class in Political Science the inaccuracy of human observation and the tendency to create images with no basis on fact. He had concealed two willing sophomores in the adjoining ante-room, and had let them loose with a revolver loaded with blanks on an unsuspecting class. After the alarm of the other classes then meeting in Griffin Hall had been quieted, Mr. Taylor asked his students for individual written accounts of the whole affair, just as if they were in the witness chair describing a similar occurrence. The following tabulation will show that the class is no longer skeptical of the possibility of human error.

One man out of the 22 in the group noticed the banana. Nine saw that only one of the combatants was shooting and named the right one. The rest of the class either said that the wrong one was shooting or that both were shooting. Four thought that Mr. Taylor had risen, picked up the revolver dropped by one of the combatants, and fired it, when, as a matter of fact, he had not moved from his seat. Out of 100%, there was 47% omission, 18% falsification, and only 35% corrects.

An experiment of this type was carried out in Vienna this year with a group of psychologists, and the percentage of corrects was higher than that found by Mr. Taylor. However, in a similar experiment performed in this country on a number of trained newspaper reporters, the results were much lower than those found at Williams.

ART AND THE UNDERGRADUATE

Quite as important as the classroom give-and-take of the various courses on our curriculum are the unofficial offshoots where weekly or spasmodic meetings of student and teacher afford opportunities for intimate, informal discussion. Philosophy has its Union, French its Cercle, German its Verein, Latin its Société, Science its Club. And Art has its exhibitions.

It is a matter for rejoicing to those interested in education and the aesthetic welfare of the country that the critical study of painting, architecture, and sculpture has recently come to take a prominent place in American colleges. Shortly after the War a general fine arts movement became apparent in many eastern institutions, notably Princeton, Harvard, and Yale. Today a college which lacks the proper facilities to stimulate such an interest has a large hole in its cultural program. President Pease recently brought out this fact in connection with the situation at Amherst, and now we are glad to see that the undergraduates themselves are also feeling this need in an editorial comment that suggests that the example of Smith and Williams be followed. Certainly our own art department needs no boosting. Last year the Senior class voted Art 1-2 the most popular and the third most valuable course—surely a tempting recommendation for those about to make out their schedules.

But unfortunately those who never have occasion to go upstairs in Lawrence Hall may very probably omit from their adventures in culture the interesting—very often delightful—experience of seeing an exhibition of paintings. Unlike most educational side-shows connected with the curriculum, this one requires no special or technical knowledge to enjoy. One does not attend meetings of the Cercle Français without a rather thorough knowledge of the French language. While previous study does help, we feel safe in saying that Art 1-2 is by no means an essential prerequisite for admission to a picture gallery.

Perhaps the increased interest in art as evident at Williams and other ports of learning, is in some respects a reaction to an age that naturally becomes ecstatic over products of the machine. When our conception of the beautiful begins and ends with the machine-made article, we place decidedly provincial limitations on the joys of life. It is then that Europeans are wont to give Americans the ignoble distinction of being incapable of either the appreciation or the production of art. It is quite true that the "art" of engineering which has become such an important factor in making life more pleasant, gives us a chance to become rhapsodic over the new Chrysler model, or the American Radiator Building, or sunken bath tubs. But it is just as senseless to say that everything that comes out of a machine is beauty, as to say that the machine cannot produce beauty. Let the Brooklyn Bridge be an example of how the engineer can make things more pleasing to the eye; and let the Paramount Theatre be an example of what he can do in the other direction. There still remains the question of art—a question which the colleges, at least, are beginning to answer.

And so, if for no other reason than to remind us that there can be art where there is no trade mark, it is a good thing to go to exhibitions. The College is fortunate in having Lawrence Hall. It is especially fortunate in having on its walls the works of noted French Impressionists in the current exhibition. Some of those who take advantage of this opportunity may have difficulty in understanding why we are so fortunate, but that will simply mean that they are in need of more artistic education than they have so far received. They may very well know what they like, but the chances are that they do not know much about what they do not like. It is for them, especially that exhibitions of this sort are a good thing.

NEW BRANDS FOR OLD HORSES

Simplification of the system of athletic awards met with the unanimous approval of those who cared enough about the matter to present themselves at the College meeting last Tuesday evening. That is all there is to it. It was a revolutionary move, but there was no revolution. No one was excited about it then, and so there is no reason to get excited about it now. It was not a problem of vital ethical or practical importance, and so there is no reason for digging up any ethical or practical basis for approving or condemning the solution. The College seemed casually agreed on what it wanted, and it casually got it.

That's the way it appeared at the meeting. Perhaps 125 there. Voted themselves into a quorum. Discussion manfully attempted by disinterested parties not personally involved in the question of letters. Seven measures carried without a dissenting vote and with perhaps one intelligent question. That is the way it appeared at the meeting, but, of course, such things don't just casually happen. There was a Committee, a Report, Endorsements, a Plan: to the agents behind these we recommend a word of thanks, not merely for a particular solution of a particular whim, but for enabling the "College" suddenly to discover itself so casually agreed.

Picture the disillusionment on the faces of all psychoanalysts of the modern collegian when they hear of the meeting of Tuesday last! While auditoriums are crowded to discuss chapel euts or automobiles, to hear a political debate or to applaud amateur dramatics, to learn how to crack jokes or why to commit crime, to absorb chamber music or to appraise a puppet show, Williams would rather pay $.30 to go to the movies rather than to fight about her letters free of charge. No condemnation certainly. Modesty is admirable, even when indifference to honors overrides that aesthetic sense which, if nothing else, might be expected to arouse some interest in the nature of the brand to be borne.

A fairly serious and important conclusion, perhaps, may be drawn from this indifference. One highly commendable end may be furthered by the new system of comparatively uniform letters. Men may feel freer to go out for the sport of their choice rather than for the sport leading to the most favored insignia. Obviously it will take more than the vote of 125 parliamentarians to place wrestling on a par with basketball, even when we distinguish appreciation from yelling. Public opinion must be educated. Now, firstly, this indifference to the abolition of the distinction between the two letters may prove that public opinion is already well on the way. Secondly, on the other hand, this indifference may prove that discrimination in letters never did have much to do with discrimination in sports, and therefore that the new measure will be of no help. Thirdly, of course, it may prove nothing at all.

INTRIGUING BUT FALSE

We rather like to be intriguing, but we do not like to be false. It has been called to our attention that two statements in a recent editorial entitled "The Guns on the Graphic" were false. The present situation of the Graphic is not "critical", as inadvertently stated in the second paragraph. Secondly, the statement that two-thirds of the members of the board are deadwood is false. We cannot even attempt to explain our first falsity, since in the remainder of the editorial we went to all lengths to contradict it, and reached a conclusion, that the Graphic should be a quarterly, which those most intimately connected with the publication have since pronounced valid. Since the purpose of this column is to provoke thought and discussion in the College as a whole, we regret that the discussion of this matter pro and con has been limited to the editorial office.

Freshmen Forge Ahead in Interclass Basketball

Play continued this week in the interclass basketball tournament with four more games played, which definitely established 1932 as the leader. In the first games on Tuesday, 1932 defeated 1931 rather easily, 28-13, but 1930 was forced to display an extremely good offense to down 1929, 25-22. The second pair of games were played on Thursday, with 1930 losing a very lop-sided contest to 1931, 27-9, and 1929 putting up a determined fight to down the freshmen and losing out only in the last few minutes by 22-16. As a result of these games, 1932 has now won four and lost none to lead the league, followed in order by 1931, 1930, and 1929.

Students Charter Four Special Vacation Trains

Four special trains have been chartered to convey Williams students to and from their respective holiday destinations.

A train to New York on December 22 will run on the following schedule:

Lv. North Adams, 12.45 p. m.
Ar. Pittsfield, 1.25 p. m.
Ar. Millerton, 3.15 p. m.
Ar. White Plains, 4.20 p. m.

Basketball Opponents Win First Encounters

Of the fourteen opponents remaining on the Williams basketball schedule only four have played regular games so far this season, although one, Columbia, has held a practice game with her alumni. Lafayette R. P. I., and Yale have won games, while Brown lost to Boston University last Wednesday night when a three team system similar to the football two team system lost a 15 point lead run up by the first five and the game by two points.

In the game with their alumni Columbia won by a 35-21 score, defeating a team composed of four members and one sub of the Championship Quintet of 1926. Lafayette defeated Upsala last Wednesday night 39-26. R. P. I. won from the Albany Law School 29-26. Yale was victorious over Upsala 33 to 22 in their first game of the season, in which the usual ragged team work was evident.

Campus Landmark Has Been Restored

Williamstown, he found that there was no place to put it; so he immediately started to raise money for a suitable building. He raised $400 among friends of the college, the Trustees contributed $1,200, and the remaining $475 he gave himself. Professor Hopkins and some of the students got the stone by going to a quarry two miles north of Williamstown in the Green Mountains, and then hauling it back here in wagons. The building was dedicated in 1837, and is the second oldest college observatory in America, the one at the University of North Carolina having been built a short time before.

When he erected the observatory, Professor Hopkins put the sun dial in a small garden, which at that time was in the rear of the building. Then such an instrument was of vastly more importance than it is today, and was considered a real innovation. When the Hopkins Observatory was set back to make way for the road, it disappeared. The dial itself was finally found in the basement of Clark Hall and a short time afterward the base was found in the cellar of Professor Perry's house. During the past year, Miss Susan Hopkins, his only remaining niece, and his great nieces and nephews, obtained the missing parts and had the dial put in at the west end of the Berkshire Quadrangle Terrace. It is not yet finished since some one, while the cement base was still wet, bent the upright indicator; so that the readings are not quite accurate, but this is to be fixed next spring.

Also a bronze plate is to be put on it, bearing two dates: 1837, the time of construction, and 1927, the time of its restoration. On the dial there are two inscriptions, one at the top and one at the bottom. On its face are written the following words: "How is it that ye do not discern this time", while the inscription on the base reads: "He maketh lightning with rain". With its original dial and base, the instrument now stands practically the same as it did when Professor Hopkins built it.

A year ago OLD GOLD'S holiday message to its many friends was entitled . . . "OLD GOLD'S first Christmas."

OLD GOLD was then just the infant prodigy among cigarettes. But, thanks to its three million new friends, and its countless old ones, OLD GOLD has grown four hundred per cent. The infant has become a strapping young giant. OLD GOLD is America's fastest growing cigarette. You have given OLD GOLD a wonderful Christmas by your kind patronage and cordial good-will. And in deepest appreciation we say to all our friends . . . "May your Christmas be as merry as you have made OLD GOLD'S."

We thank you.

The motion was defeated on the grounds that it would introduce a complication whereas the aim of the new system was simplification.

MME BARTON, PIANIST ENTERTAINS IN CHAPIN

Playing of Italian Artist Thursday Evening Is Well Received by Audience

(Courtesy of Mark Harris '29)

Madame Andreina Materassi-Barton, an aspirant to public recognition as a concert pianiste, played here last Thursday evening under the auspices of the Thompson Course. She presented a program identical to that given at her subsequent New York debut the following Sunday afternoon.

The Chapin Hall audience was predisposed in favor of Madame Barton and maintained its good will throughout the recital. And this favor was evidently quite apart from the fact that the young and charming pianiste is by way of a Williams' protegee thru her husband, Malcolm Barton '24. The audience was predisposed favorably as a result of the winning and tasteful platform manner and appearance of Madame Barton. It maintained its enthusiasm on the merit of her performance.

She played a variety of works by Scarlatti, Chopin, Brahms, Liszt, Ravel and others. Several of them called for the very highest technical skill. The demand was adequately met. The pianiste was (Continued on Fifth Page)

Apology for Pratt Field Damage Is Acknowledged

In reply to the Williams Student Council's apology for excessive destruction of property on Pratt Field after the victory over Amherst, the following letter has been received from the Amherst Council: December 14, 1928

President of Student Council,

Williams College,

Williamstown, Mass.

Dear Sir:

I have received your kind letter of December 13, and on behalf of the Amherst Student Council I wish to tell you how much we appreciate your note. We realize that victory brings about a certain amount of property damage, but we had also felt that this year the victors went a little too far. However what is done is done and it should be our outlook to see that discretion is used in the future. We are taking pains to see that next year, should we be fortunate enough to win, our students will not carry the thing too far. Of course the feeling between the two schools is far too strong to have a matter such as this make any lasting effect.

Thank you again for the courtesy of your letter.

Very sincerely yours,

Eugene S. Wilson, Jr.

Corresponding Secretary,

Amherst Student Council

PURPLE PLAYS BROWN FIVE HERE TOMORROW

Twice-Victorious Quintet Meets Brown Team Defeated by B. U. in Opener

With two victories behind it, the Purple basketball team will face the Brown quintet, which was defeated in its opening game last week by Boston University, tomorrow night in the Lasell Gymnasium at 8.00 p. m. With only two of last year's regulars back, the Bruins appear less formidable than Williams, who defeated them a year ago, but a large amount of fast material from the sophomore class may make them a dangerous foe.

The 33-31 score of the Boston University game is hardly an indication of the strength of the Brown squad, for a new unit-substitution system resulted in the loss of a 15-point lead run up by the varsity in the first ten minutes of play. The second team replaced the first at this point, and finished the half with a 13-point lead. A third team starting the second half was badly bewildered by the Boston attack, and with four minutes to go relinquished the lead, which the first team, rushed in at this point, was not able to overcome.

Leading the Brown aggregation in scoring is Snyder, who sank seven baskets and one free throw in the Boston game. The veterans on the first team are Captain Smith at forward and Heller at guard, both of whom are excellent on the offense and defense. Barnett at center was an outstanding player on the 1931 quintet, which had an undefeated season, while Fogarty was another member of the same combination. Many of the reserves have had college experience, but are being outclassed by the sophomore material.

The various combinations tried out by the Williams team Saturday night showed that the best five would include Captain Betham and Thoms at forward, Callaghan or Allen at center, and Alexander and Cuddeback at the guard positions. With a few more days of practice, this group should round out into a smoothly working combination which will give Brown a good battle.

Saturday's game with R. P. I. showed the weaknesses of the Purple team against long passes and the slowness of the defense at the start, a weakness that was also evi-

'CAP AND BELLS' TO PRESENT 'THE PIGEON'

Corporation Opens Christmas Trip in Chapin With Three-Act Galsworthy Play

Presentation by Cap and Bells of The Pigeon, a three-act play by John Galsworthy, will take place this Thursday evening in Chapin Hall at 8.15 p. m. when the dramatic association opens a schedule that will continue after the Christmas holidays in several western cities. After the comparatively short period of three weeks' rehearsing, Coach Edward Donnelly, in charge of Williams dramatics for the first time, feels that the cast has done a fine piece of work so far and that it will be in good shape for the opening night.

The Pigeon, first produced by Messrs. J. E. Vedrenne and Dennis Eadie at the Royal Theatre in London in 1912, was given more recently in New York, but has probably never been produced in college dramatics. It is one of Galsworthy's choicest plays and ranks with other popular favorites of his, Loyalties, and The Skin Game, seen recently on the New York stage.

Coach Donnelly intends to have a dress rehearsal tonight or Wednesday night. He is well pleased with the outlook at this time and has nothing but praise for the members of the cast, who have devoted approximately four and a half hours daily to rehearsals and have otherwise cooperated faithfully. Obstacles such as illness and other enforced absences have been met, but no serious difficulties encountered. The greatest obstacle to overcome has been to regulate the voices of the cast according to the acoustics of Chapin Hall, which because of their muffling tendencies are not so well suited for The Pigeon, as for a more vigorous play such as Hamlet.

Following is the cast of the play, which is the same as that originally picked, except for one change, made necessary due to illness:

Christopher Wellwyn	T. McKean '29
Ann	Nicoll '31
Ferrand	Lucas '31
Timson	Baxter '30

Art Department Offers a New Class in Drawing

Under the auspices of the Department of the History of Art and Civilization, a class in drawing will be held every Saturday afternoon for the remainder of this year under the direction of Mrs. William M. R. French of Williamstown, a well-known artist who has often exhibited her own works in Lawrence Hall. This addition to the courses of the Art Department will be open without tuition fee to all students of the college and, though not giving college credits, will be a part of the regular college curriculum.

During the first part of the course, charcoal drawing will be taken up and the casts of works by famous sculptors will be studied. Mrs. French, who will give instruction in the course, has painted many scenes of Williamstown and vicinity as well as Lake George. She is also a painter of portraits. All students who would like to receive instruction in this drawing should give their names to Professor Weston of the Art Department. Among those who have enrolled are Dougherty, Fujiyama, Kimball, G. Wheeler, Sisley and Mrs. Bellerose and Mrs. Manning.

Musical Clubs Present First Program of Year

Playing their first concert of the regular winter season last Saturday night in Albany, the combined Musical Clubs gave a well-received program in Chancellor's Hall at 8.00 p. m., followed by a dance in the ballroom of the Hotel Ten Eyck, the music for which was furnished by the Purple Knights. The performance, which was enthusiastically received by a good-sized audience, will be presented with a few alterations in a tour immediately after Christmas, extending from December 26 to January 5.

The singing of the Glee Club was exceptional throughout the program, with The Hundred Pipers and Sea Fever receiving the greatest applause. Almost as well received, the other selections showed that the Glee Club was up to a higher standard for so early in the season than during the last few years. Faison '29 and Rogers '30 presented solos, a song number and a piano selection respectively, that were highly successful, while Fitchett '30 and Heermance '31 teamed together in a specialty act. Bringing a well-rounded program to a close, the Glee Club and the alumni in the audience, under the leadership of Mr. Safford, sang The Mountains. After the concert the guests and members of the clubs adjourned to the ballroom of the Ten Eyck, where dance music was well supplied by the Purple Knights.

WILLIAMS DEBATERS TO MEET RADCLIFFE

First Women Opponents Since 1925 Will Defend the Activity of Women in Politics

Forensic training for domestic purposes will be resumed after a lapse of three years when Harris and Overton '29 travel to Cambridge next Thursday to encounter at Radcliffe the first women opponents since the representatives of Smith visited Williamstown in 1925. The debate on the question "Resolved, That this house favors the increasing activity of women in politics" will take place at 8.00 p. m. following a dinner in honor of the Williams team.

The event will be not only the first intercollegiate clash on the Radcliffe schedule for this season but also the debut of a debating society reorganized at that institution under the direction of Miss Margaret Follin and Miss Catherine Season-good after a considerable period of dormancy. The subject was chosen as particularly appropriate to the occasion, which it is hoped will be only the first of a series of encounters between Williams and Radcliffe, involving return visits to Williamstown.

Though not an Intercollegiate League debate, it will be conducted almost entirely according to the system which has been adopted by the League. The speeches will be 15 minutes in length, except that the first Radcliffe affirmative speaker will be permitted to use five minutes of her time for rebuttal at the end of the debate. The decision will be entirely in the hands of the audience.

After the holidays the Adelphi Union will hold new try-outs, for which freshmen will be eligible, and settle down to an exacting schedule of 10 more debates extending from February 23 to March 23. During that time the Purple will meet both Amherst and Wesleyan as well as completing the rounds of the "Big Three" opponents. A second aggregation of women will be met at Vassar on March 23.

WILLIAMS CONQUERS ENGINEERS, 38-29

Precise Shooting and Fast Passer Overcome Intermittent Attack of R. P. I.

In an intense game marked by rallies and counter-rallies on the part of both teams, and colored by superb shooting from all angles of the floor, Williams defeated the R. P. I. basketball team in the second tilt of the season last Saturday in Lasell Gymnasium by the score of 38 to 29. The turning point of the game came near the middle of the first half, when the Purple, after having seen-sawed back and forth with Rensselaer for several minutes, rallied to score 12 points, eight of which were made by Alexander, and to assume a 22-11 lead.

The attack of the Engineers, which up until that point had been spasmodic but dangerous, weakened perceptibly, and the visitors resorted to long passes to stem the tide. The interception of many of these passes enhanced Williams' power, which had really manifested itself when Thoms replaced Howse after R. P. I. had scored six points at the outset of the game. Thoms' work was sensational. With the Purple trailing 2-6, the scrappy forward sank a shot from the side of the court, followed this with a beautiful basket from a kneeling position on the floor, and a moment later added two more points by a long, deliberately-aimed shot from beyond the foul line.

The Cherry and White retreated immediately after this with five points, but Williams then came back with her 12-point rally. R. P. I. counter-attacked in the closing minutes to score five points while Thoms and Alexander were making two to bring the score to 26 to 16 at half time. Kennedy and Calvin were the most powerful for the Engineers during this half, and the former's shooting was superior to that of any one else on the team. As had been predicted, the R. P. I. attack was featured by smoothly-working team play, but Williams was able to keep the ball most of the time.

In contrast to the first half, the latter part of the game was without heavy scoring. Rensselaer's total in the second half being 13 and Williams' 12. The Engineers played a defensive game at the outset, and the first scores resulted from R. P. I. getting the ball out of confusing (Continued on Sixth Page)

NO CHANGE MADE IN CHRISTMAS VACATION

Despite Rumors Faculty Will Not Change Dates Because of Flu Epidemic

Rumors current about College regarding a possible change in the dates of the Christmas vacation or some sort of quarantine in view of the current outbreak of a mild form of influenza may be set at rest as it is understood that no such action is contemplated by the Faculty. Nevertheless reports continue to come in with news of other colleges closing early or receiving longer holidays, Amherst having just announced a five-day delay in reopening, and Mt. Holyoke planning an early closing, while numerous other schools and colleges in the South and Middle West are taking similar steps.

Dr. George H. Bigelow, state health commissioner, has issued a statement criticizing Mt. Holyoke for its action, declaring that "this might start the epidemic of closing schools and colleges which is sweeping the country and which may be more virulent than the disease itself". Dr. Bigelow sees no advantage in closing schools except in isolated rural communities, in fact it is more often a disadvantage in that it prevents frequent medical inspection. Furthermore there is little reason for closing educational institutions here in Massachusetts because the disease is by no means as prevalent here as in other states.

It is felt that if there were cause for serious alarm the best thing for the students would be to keep them here in Williamstown, as there is a far greater chance of contracting influenza at their homes in various parts of the country than here. It is understood, however, that no such action as this is contemplated by the College authorities.

A SPORT WITH A MORAL

The basketball team seems to be taking up where the football team left off. At any rate two pre-Christmas victories promise an auspicious greeting for the new athletic year of 1929. Ever since those early coachless days, basketball has held a dignified place in the company of Williams sports. It has had its share of championships, stars, and historic victories. And now with its new spacy court to romp about in, the team, as if conscious of an added responsibility, is giving the College interesting, polished, and exciting entertainment of high order.

It seems to us that this sport offers at least one case where the effects of the game are as beneficial to undergraduate spectators as they are to the players themselves. For one thing, basketball is "in season" when most other sports are "out of season". If there happens to be ice, there may be hockey. If there happens to be snow there may be skiing. But things that depend on New England weather are not always dependable.

In the second place, a basketball game is a great way of keeping men home on Saturday night. For what, may we ask, could have anchored so many undergraduates in Williamstown under one roof as the R. P. I. game last Saturday? Perhaps John McCormack in Chapin Hall, or Aimee McPherson in Jesup, or Greta Garbo at the Walden, or a Sophomore prom in the gym, but surely nothing less sublime. Unfortunately things can happen on a Saturday night when "sexual and social animals" are left to invent their own remedies for the malady called Fed-up. Possibly because it is the only one that has a Sunday morning, Saturday night is like no other night in the week.

Like the late "Model T", the appeal of this institution is universal, and jokes about it are very stale. Rich and poor, men of the world and boys in school, all look forward to it with the same relish of holiday anticipation. It is the spicy desert after the drab, somewhat too-wholesome meal. Pay-day for some, hey-hey day for all, it is no-man's-time for uncorking emotions and other suppressed things. The whole nation gets clean to get dirty on Saturday night, and we must accept this plebian institution because we cannot deny it. For that very reason it should not go unnoticed when a large number of young men choose to spend Saturday night by yelling at the basketball team. They are converting something primitive into what is considered civilized college spirit—truly a remarkable metamorphosis!

We should be duly grateful to our basketball team for being able to shoot baskets with such entertaining efficiency on a Saturday night.

As the result of the fall competition for Sophomores, the following men were elected to the Editorial Board of THE RECORD at its regular meeting last Thursday: Thomas P. Goodbody, Jr., of Toledo, Ohio, and Robert C. Husband, Jr., of Troy, N. Y. THE RECORD wishes to thank the other competitors for their faithful work throughout the competition.

BOSTON ALUMNI HOLD DINNER AND MEETING

President Carter Questions Wisdom of Establishing a College Baseball Team

(The following article is reprinted from the Williams Weekly of 1889, which has since become THE RECORD)

About 50 Williams alumni gathered at Parker's at the 22d annual dinner of the New England association, on Friday evening the 26th. At the business meeting the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Justin Dewey, '85; vice-president, Homer Rogers, '62; secretary, B. H. Warren, '85; executive committee, Thomas W. Davis, '66, Francis H. Davenport, '70, John D. Hardy, '82, and Charles D. Wheeler, '88. Among prominent persons present were President Carter, Rev. Dr. Andrew P. Peabody of Harvard, who came as guest, Judge J. R. Dunbar of Westfield, Rev. F. N. Beloubet of Natick, secretary Dickinson of the state board of education, Ex-Lieut-Gov. Knight, Burton W. Potter of Worcester, Herbert S. Underwood, of Boston, Ex-Lieut-Gov.

Weston, Judge Barker of Pittsfield, Hnrace Seudder of Cambridge, Thomas W. Davis of Waverly, and Emerson W. Judd, secretary of the Massachusetts tariff reform league. Judge Barker presided. After a brief opening speech he presented President Carter, who was welcomed with rounds of applause. He said the college owed its existence to the idea that every sacrifice should be made to secure an education. It was established by a constituency and had from the first the support of Yale men. Nowhere is New England education maintained better in its simplicity, purity and force than in this college on the frontier of Massachusetts, which was founded by a hero, and has been sustained by many saints. President Carter said he was in doubt how much the college should follow the tendency of the times. The undergraduates have the idea that a baseball team is as necessary to the college as steam is to make a locomotive go. But he questioned whether for a small college this modern idea was the best thing. It might do for a larger institution. The true course is to strive the golden mean, to hold traditions of the past and give the best of the present. The best gift to the college in his time has been the gymnasium. He had always been doubtful regarding the policy of asking help from the graduates. The Winkley legacy will be paid during

He united the country with nails

BEN FRANKLIN made the horseshoe nail a symbol of the importance of little things. "The kingdom was lost and all for the want of a horseshoe nail", goes one of his wise sayings. So when he became Postmaster General, he knew full well the need for proper horseshoeing as one step in punctual mail schedules.

The care given to details can still make or break a great plan. In the telephone industry, for example, the development of compact paper insulation helped to make possible the small diameter cable and therefore the vast underground plant necessary to serve large cities.

A multiplicity of details, from the testing of long fibre cotton to the "voice with the smile", offer a continual challenge to the Bell System men who unite the nation with telephones.

Students Sponsor Art Exhibition at Amherst

In an endeavor to stimulate interest in art and to prove that the establishment of an art course in the college curriculum was warranted, a number of Amherst students last week sponsored an undergraduate art exhibition. Contributions were exclusively student owned pictures and comprised paintings or fine reproductions, etchings, and wood blocks and prints.

Similar exhibits, frequently cited as an indication of rising student interest in this field, have been held in the past at many colleges and universities, among them Yale, Harvard, and Smith. The inaugurators of the idea at Amherst felt that there was sufficient art material of good quality among the students to insure the success of such an exhibition. The hope was expressed that the interest of students in the affair would be an indication of the advisability of including art in the college curriculum.

Uniform Athletic Code Indorsed by Convention

Disputes such as those which have severed Army-Navy football relations and seriously threatened Army "Big Ten" agreements may be avoided by a uniform athletic code for all American colleges which was recommended by the fourth annual conference of the National Students Federation held at Columbus, Mo. last week. In an effort to relegate intercollegiate athletic misunderstanding to the past, a general discussion led by M. A. Cheek of Harvard voted a resolution that a code be drafted by a national convention of student leaders, athletic directors, coaches, and athletes, to deal with eligibility and other problems.

Cheek emphasized the disparity of eligibility rules, and showed that a man could be an amateur in one conference and a professional in another. The meeting proposed that the code deal with eligibility rules, where the "three-year" rule has caused so much trouble, with standards of amateurism and professionalism, and with participation in professional sports, such as summer baseball, by many college athletes. It was further agreed that non-subscribing colleges would be boycotted in athletics by institutions governed by the uniform acts. A committee will be appointed to arrange the details of the proposed code-drafting convention.

Christmas 'Graphic' Will Make Appearance Friday

Fiction in the guise of a mystery story and two sketches, and a variety of undergraduate verse will comprise the main literary offerings of the December Graphic, which will make its appearance this Friday, the 21st. The Christmas number, which will be the third of four issues this semester, also offers, apart from its purely literary content, a number of pictorial features.

From the ever-popular theme of murder and its solution, as presented by T. E. Jenks '31, in a short story entitled "The Rusty Nail", the prose selections turn to the lighter and more loosely-knit sketch, to which Alan Baxter '30 has contributed "The Soul of Singing Traey", and "An Outline Toward the End of Justice." In the field of poetry, which predominates the issue, there are seven selections, from "Dawn", by W. H. Doughty III '29 to "Rendez-Vous" by A. J. Kobler '31, the concluding lines of verse. The other poetic contributions are "Retrospection" by M. E. Erskine '32, "Returning", by Ray Armstrong '30, "Fall", by J. R. Owre '30 "Truth", by E. W. Lakin '32, and "Siren's Song", by O. W. Prescott '30.

Purple to Send Six Men to Dartmouth Carnival

According to present plans of the winter sports leaders six men will represent Williams in the Annual Carnival Winter Sports Tournament of the Dartmouth Outing Club which is to take place on February 7, 8, and 9 at Hanover. Although lack of snow has greatly delayed practice for any of the ski or snow shoe events, the men to make the trip will be selected in the near future.

This year's mid-winter festival will take the form of an open intercollegiate competition, and representative teams from the leading American and Canadian colleges will participate as usual. Added interest to the winter sports phase of the Carnival will be furnished by the recently completed Dartmouth Outing Club House on Oecom Pond. The club house, in addition to forming the center of the Outdoor Evening program, will provide means of enjoying to the fullest the skating and skiing facilities nearby.

Freshmen Swimmers Report

Although candidates for the Freshman swimming team have been reporting regularly in the pool for the last two weeks, Coach Graham has been content to start the freshmen off slowly, since the first meet is more than two months away, and thus far practice has been limited to routine work in starts and turns, and exercises for developing shoulder and leg muscles. Apparently there is considerable material above the average, but until active practice starts after the Christmas recess, and time trials have been held, there can be no basis for comparison between the 1932 material and previous freshman teams.

Handel's 'Messiah' Sung by Local Chorus Sunday

Under the conductorship of Professor Charles L. Safford, Director of Music in Williams College, Handel's Oratorio "The Messiah" was presented Sunday evening in Chapin Hall before a large audience. The program of this innovation in local musical productions consisted of solos and Community Chorus selections by undergraduates and residents of Williamstown and vicinity.

The production was given for the benefit of the Organ Fund of St. John's Episcopal Church. The chorus of about fifty voices consisted of members of the student body of the College and of citizens of Williamstown, Blackinton, and North Adams. The soloists in the presentation included: Mrs. Grace Bradley O'Connell, soprano; Mrs. Laura Tappen Safford, contralto; Mr. James C. Morton, tenor; Edward A. Dougherty '31, baritone. Avery Rogers '30 accompanied the soloists and the Chorus at the organ. As a result of the success of the presentation of "The Messiah", Professor Safford hopes to continue the Chorus work in the future.

Mme Barton, Pianist Entertains in Chapin

strong on that side of piano playing which the public has grown to demand, technical resource. In an age highly competitive in music as elsewhere, mechanics are taken as a matter of course. As a result the concert pianist of today has a technique which would have surprised the masters of the 19th century. Furthermore, this being a day of growing sex equality, women must and do compete successfully with men as masters of pianoforte playing. There still remains a distinction in force, but in scarcely anything else. Paderewski and Madame Barton are more or less on a par with regard to what the concert-goer expects of them as sheer technicians. The day demands that all concert performers have pretty much the same repertoire. And that means that they play anything and everything of recognized standing in piano literature, a colossal field.

So it follows that anyone who seriously aspires to recognition as a pianist in these days must have the difficulties of the keyboard, and they are heartbreaking, behind him. Madame Barton, young as she is, has this technical mastery. She has the means.

The range of interpretative power and understanding is quite without end and the concert-goer still has enough sense to realize that such a matter is relative. This is something in which the young and the highly seasoned pianist cannot be expected to be on a par, though it occasionally happens thru the genius of youth and the limitations of age.

Madame Barton, on account of a certain lack of differentiation of tone and mood, because she seemed unwilling to speak out in her conceptions as much as her technique would have made possible, and thru the fact that she had a tendency to haste and cloudiness in phrasing, on account of these things, she could not honestly be said to have arrived at the top of her artistry yet.

But because she already has so much, and one might easily add such merits as great beauty of melodic tone, militant energy and an admirable lack of harshness, we are bound to wish her well. And this wholly aside from the fact that her charm and earnestness are sufficient to melt the hearts of far more dyspeptic critics than I am.

Dean of North Carolina Proposes Three Changes in Colleges to Effect a Proper Recognition of Teaching

"A new and real recognition of the importance of teaching" is the remedy for the evils of the colleges of today, in the opinion of Addison Hibbard, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts of the University of North Carolina, who expressed this view in a feature article of a recent number of The Outlook, entitled "Our Truant Professors". After criticizing the universities of the country for their increasing Rotarian tendencies, the author said that, if more stress were placed on teaching, many of the reforms suggested would become "superfluous".

Mr. Hibbard wrote that "probably at no time since the beginning of higher education in America has the criticism of our colleges been so general or so bitter as it is today", but that "a hopeful aspect of all this is that the criticism comes largely from within the universities rather than from without". Conditions have changed and turned the colleges away from their true objective; so that today the biggest need is an "honest recognition of the significance of a teacher who is vitally interested in his subject".

The university has become its own enemy, the author states, for "the modern professor is a first cousin of the Rotarian and Kiwanian". One reason for this deplorable condition lies in the fact that men get promotion for their activity outside of teaching. Research is one of these items that, although not connected with teaching itself, brings fame and glory. Another factor is the "democratic ideal of which we all talk so glibly", but which "eats the heart out of the college teacher in its demand that he take an active part in administration".

Today the average professor must serve on a maze of sitting and standing committees, in addition to giving numerous, off-campus lectures before women's clubs, high schools, Rotarians, Chambers of Commerce. Mr. Hibbard cites the example of one large state university, which maintains a fleet of Fords to convey its faculty throughout the surrounding country on their missions to gain fame for the college. Many write text-books, articles for journals, and attend various conventions. The author classes all this kind of activity as "the sort of promotion which eats the heart out of the university by robbing the student for the aggrandizement of the institution". Now, he states, the colleges no more think of those students who want "to drink deep at the Pterian spring."

Dean Hibbard proposes three changes to better the faults of present-day institutions of learning and to emphasize the importance of teaching, a fundamental of a good education. If adopted, these innovations would change the undergraduate mind, he asserts, and make many of the reforms, often suggested today, unnecessary. His suggestions are as follows:

1. The establishment of two to ten superprofessorships carrying an award of $1000 in excess of the usual salary, these awards being made to the "man pre-eminent as a teacher".
2. A careful avoidance of professors scornful of the undergraduate mind because of research work.
3. The choice of professors on their ability as teachers.

Amherst Students Get a Lengthened Vacation

As a result of the influenza epidemic which is threatening the East, Amherst college has lengthened the Christmas vacation from January 2 to January 7. This was announced last Saturday in a notice issued by President Pease, and is in agreement with the report of many schools and colleges throughout the country because of the wide-spread outbreak of influenza.

The statement, in part, of President Pease follows: "There appear to be no cases of influenza as yet among the student body of Amherst college, and the college will accordingly close on this coming Wednesday as already announced. In consideration, however, of the unusual conditions arising because of the spread of influenza in other parts of the country, it has seemed wise to Dr. Philips, Dean Esty, and me, to extend somewhat the length of the vacation, and we have set January 7 as the date for the resumption of academic exercises."

Freshman Five Shows Early Season Strength

Completely outplaying a 1931 team composed for the most part of varsity substitutes in a game preliminary to the R. P. I. contest last Saturday evening, this year's freshman basketball team gave promise of a very successful season. Playing in the interclass tournament, they have already defeated each of the other classes at least once, although held to a low score by the fine defensive play of the seniors in the 1929 game.

On Saturday night the freshmen started with Engle and Good at the forwards, Palmer at center, and Cosgrove and Swinehart as guards, and ran up a 16-6 lead before Coach Fox sent in his second team late in the first half. Displaying an accurate passing game which the sophomores seemed unable to break up, the first freshman five scored repeatedly from under the basket without being forced to resort to long shots, and had little difficulty in stopping the poorly coordinated attack of the upperclassmen.

The second freshman five, with the exception of Fowle, who substituted for Palmer at center early in the first half, did not come up to the standard of the others in their passing, but seem able to furnish adequate reserves, whose teamwork will undoubtedly improve with more practice. Against a varsity team which is now starting its second season of play together and should be expected to display remarkably good teamwork, the freshmen have shown up very well in occasional scrimmages, and have succeeded in holding down the varsity score. Although without an individual star, the freshmen have shown considerable strength in their early season play, and, under the guidance of Coach Fox, are expected to develop into one of the strongest combinations of recent years.

this year. Twenty thousand dollars have been given to the library and smaller sums have been received. The college was never doing better work than now; never had a stronger hold on its alumni; never had better prospects nor better teachers.

Rev. Dr. Penbody said he was troubled because our liberally-educated men have less to do with public office than formerly. A liberally educated man should be very close to the world, and make his culture felt. More educated men ought to be in the press. Doctor Denison expressed his belief in small colleges compared with large universities, and approved small classes because they could be wholly vitalized by men like Dr. Hopkins. The college journalism is better than ever and is a real education. Byron Weston, Homer Rogers, J. D. Colt, J. C. Dewey, Herbert S. Underwood, J. M. Lasell of Whitinsville, N. F. Wilcox of Northboro, W. S. Hyde of Ware, G. W. Anderson of Nashua, N. H., and Arthur Safford were the other speakers.

ALUMNI NOTES

1910

George M. Cheney, E.M., who has for a number of years been connected with the Anaconda Copper Mining Company in Antofagasta, Chile, is returning to his home in Williamstown to spend the holidays with his parents. After graduation from Williams, Mr. Cheney completed a course in the Colorado School of Mines.

1926

Francis V. Adriance, now attending the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia, won one wrestling match and tied another in a boxing and wrestling show at the West Side Y. M. C. A. in New York City on Nov. 23. Adriance first won a match at his own weight of 150 lbs., and then went out of his class to wrestle an opponent who weighed 175 lbs., with whom he secured a draw.

1927

Edward C. Gibbons and Roger W. Hardy are studying law at the Harvard Law School. Gibbons has recently received the great honor of election to The Harvard Law Review in his second year.

INTERCOLLEGIATES

Students Select Dean

Students at Amherst College are to have the unusual privilege of choosing their dean this week, when a poll will be taken of undergraduate opinion in the Junior and Senior classes.

Student Strike Threat Causes President's Resignation

After a furious but victorious week of rebellion the students of Eureka College, Illinois, caused the acceptance of the resignation of President Bert Wilson by the board of trustees. Threatening a strike because of the president's faculty changes, the undergraduates finally succeeded in gaining their point.

Amherst Trustee Dies

Arthur Charles Rounds, a Trustee of Amherst College and law partner of Charles Evans Hughes, died in New York last week at the age of 66. Mr. Rounds was graduated from Amherst in 1887 and from the Harvard Law School in 1890, going to New York the following year to work for the law firm of Carter, Hughes, and Kellogg, in which he later became a partner. He was a life trustee of Amherst.

Non-Athletic Taxes Due

This is the last week for the early payment of Non-Athletic Council Taxes. The tax of $3.00 will be accepted only until Thursday evening, December twentieth, and after that date will be raised to $4.00 per man.

Organ Recital

Since the scenery for the Cap and Bells production of The Pigeon is already under construction on the Chapin Hall stage, Mr. C. L. Safford has announced that he will omit his customary Wednesday afternoon organ recital this week. The omission is for this week only, however, and Mr. Safford expects to continue his recitals again after the Christmas vacation.

melées to score on passes. Betham's work as pivot man was notable, and Allen with two field goals and a free throw led the Purple during this half. Kennedy for Rensselaer ran his total to 10 for the game by sinking three field goals.

Thoms' superb work in scoring six field goals, all in the first half, gave him scoring honors, and Kennedy took second place. A glance at the summary shows the all-around ability of the Williams team, as of the six men in the scoring column, all but one made five or more points.

The summary is as follows:

WILLIAMS (38)	R. P. I. (29)
Betham	l.f. Liberty
Howse	r.f. Colvin
Callaghan	c. Eggleston
Cuddeback	l.g. Kennedy

'CAP AND BELLS' TO OPEN IN BUFFALO

Mr. Edward Donnelly To Supervise Christmas Tour Through Middle West

'THE PIGEON' IS SHOWN TO COLLEGE THURSDAY

Seven Cities from Winnetka, Ill., to Baltimore Are on Two Weeks' Schedule

Following the opening performance of The Pigeon given last Thursday night in Chapin Hall by Cap and Bells, the cast of the play has disbanded for the first part of the holidays, but will start its western trip with a presentation in Buffalo, N. Y. on December 26. The trip this year, which is one of the most extensive to be undertaken by the organization of late, will go as far West as Winnetka, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago, and will close in Baltimore the Saturday before College re-opens.

The Pigeon was first produced by Vendrome and Eadie at the Royalty Theatre in London in 1912 and was immediately acclaimed as another popular Galsworthy success. The play has recently been given in New York, but Cap and Bells is undertaking a unique thing in introducing it into college dramatists.

Coach Edward Donnelly, who has come from a successful season in New York, appearing with Glenn Hunter in "Behold this Dreamer", is well pleased with the outlook at present. The entire cast has at one time or another been subject to illness or unavoidable causes of absence from rehearsals. Nevertheless about four and a half hours have been spent daily on the production. According to Mr. Donnelly the greatest difficulty has been to regulate the voices of the cast to the acoustics of Chapin Hall. The Pigeon is not as vigorous a play as some of the former hills which have been given by the corporation and the muffled tendencies of Chapin have been a severe handicap. However, it is the opinion of Mr. Donnelly that the theatres encountered on the road will be better suited for the natural voices of the actors.

PHILOSOPHER'S CLUB RECENTLY ORGANIZED

To Stimulate and Give Expression to Undergraduate Interest in Philosophy

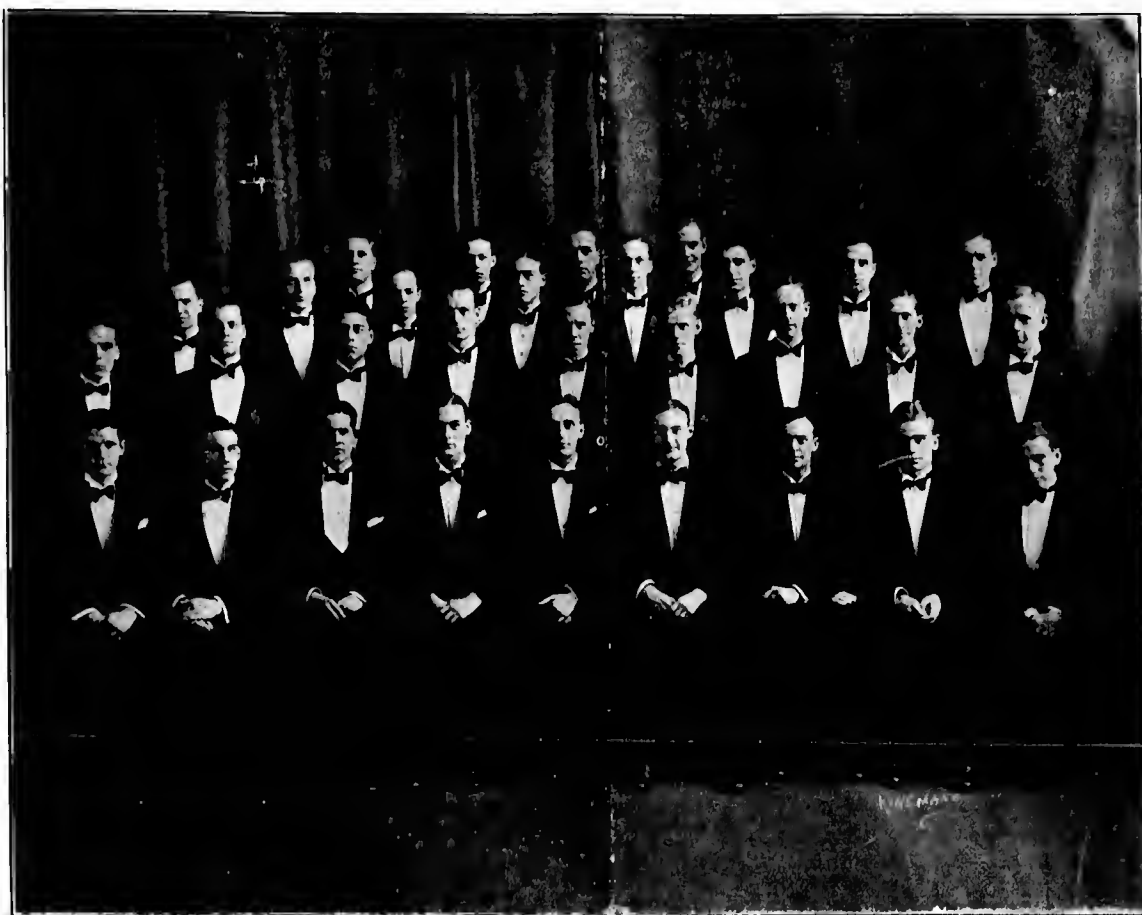

With the purpose of stimulating and giving expression to student interest in philosophical problems, a campus "Philosopher's Club" has been brought into existence. The present group making up this new organization is composed of some fifteen students and four faculty members, the only requisite for membership being that the student shall have taken a Philosophy course since he has been in college and that he shall express his desire to become a member.

It is planned that, at regular intervals (the time of which has not as yet been definitely decided upon), the Club will meet in an informal way to discuss freely and openly those problems of philosophy which are considered to be of a more vital and interesting nature—subjects which are too broad and too varied for the classroom.

At the first meeting, held last month, the subject, "What is the basis of Friendship?", was discussed, while at the second

PURPLE BEARDS LION IN NEW YORK TONIGHT

Columbia Team, Defeated by Army, Will Seek to Avenge Last Year's Defeat

With three victories behind it the Williams quintet meets one of the strongest teams scheduled this year when it plays Columbia tonight in the Blue and White Gymnasium at 116th Street, New York City, for the first game off the home floor. Columbia, also playing its fourth game of the season, will go on the floor determined to make up for the defeat last year and regain their stride after losing to Army last Wednesday night.

In the three games which the Blue and White has played so far it has not shown a particularly strong passing attack, though it did show power at times in the game with the Cadets, and there are several good individual players on the team. Against the alumni Columbia ran up a 35 to 21 score with Gregory and Urbach scoring most of the points. Seton Hall offered less opposition to the Lions, allowing them to pile up 37 points to 17. In one of the closest basketball games so far this season, the Army managed to gain a seven point lead on Columbia in the last few minutes of the game and to check successfully the rallies of the New Yorkers.

Three veterans from last year form the nucleus of the Columbia team with Captain Magurk holding his old forward position and Remy Tys, the football player, and Red Urbach at the guards. Two members of the 1931 team have been fighting for positions on the varsity, Okey, a guard, and Gregory, a center. In the game with the Cadets Gregory was one of the outstanding players with four baskets and six fouls to his credit.

The showing of the Purple against Brown, though flashy at times, left something to be desired in the way of a steady attack. Facing a stronger team in Columbia, the Purple ought to show its real power and smooth out its offense.

The probable line-up is as follows:

WILLIAMS		COLUMBIA
Thoms	r.f.	Magurk
Betham	l.f.	Okey
Callaghan or Allen	c.	Gregory
Cuddeback	r.g.	Urbach
Alexander	l.g.	Tys

Debaters Win Decision at Radcliffe Thursday

That the place of woman is not in politics was successfully proved by Harris and Overton '29, varsity debaters, in a forensic clash with the representatives of Radcliffe College held Thursday evening in the Agassiz Theatre in Cambridge. Opposing Miss Mildred Ann Gill '29 and Miss Mary Alice Goddill '32, the Williams pair succeeded in convincing two of the three judges, who were Mrs. W. White, Civic Director of the Massachusetts League of Woman Voters, Mr. Edward Rowe, coach of the Harvard College debating team, and Mr. H. W. Tacusch, Professor of English at Harvard and former Williams professor.

The first affirmative speaker, Miss Gill, took up the questions of whether or not a woman's household work prevented her from participating in politics, and whether she had the right to participate in politics. Overton then discussed woman's unfitness for political life on the grounds that she is unqualified by nature, cannot receive the necessary training, and cannot attract a sufficient following. That woman would better the tone of politics was the contention of Miss Goddill. Concluding the negative argument, Harris then maintained that a woman's type of brain is not that needed in political life. He admitted, however, that while woman had better remain out of office, her political efforts could still be of value.

1931 Delays Prom Plans

Since only four fraternity houses have announced definite plans for houseparties during the midyear recess, the 1931 Prom Committee has delayed the arrangement of a Sophomore Prom at that time. Unless more support is promised than that which seems probable at present, the Committee feels that it will be compelled to give up the project entirely. With the Senior Prom planned for June house parties, there is no other open date which would be satisfactory to the Student Council.

FAST WILLIAMS DRIVE DOWNS BRUIN QUINTET

Determined Attack in First Half More Than Offsets Brown Rally; Score 38-29

Adhering to a custom started last week of scoring 38 points to its opponent's 29, the Williams basketball team demonstrated its superiority over the Brown five last Wednesday evening in Lasell Gymnasium in a game marked by fast and accurate teamwork in the first half and by long passes and generally rougher play in the second period. The ultimate reason for victory lay in the Purple's ability to score from all positions near the basket after a swift drive, often by one man, through the Brown inner defense.

Williams' ability to launch a sustained drive was again apparent, for with the score 7-9 in the Bruins' favor soon after the opening whistle, an attack was started with Captain Betham, Allen and Cuddeback on the scoring end, and 14 points had been scored to Brown's one before Brown of the visitors checked the rally momentarily with a short shot just before half time. Before the whistle, however, Allen and Betham each scored to bring the total to 25-12 in Williams' favor at the end of the period. The trio of Betham, Allen and Cuddeback scored 19 of these points, while Thoms' inspiring floor work and the steady defense play of Alexander made many short shots possible.

The early part of the first half was featured by excellent teamwork by both Brown and Williams, but the latter's hard 14-point drive left the Providence team disconcerted. A large majority of the Purple's short shots were made possible by the Brown guards being drawn out of position. An exchange of futile long shots preceded and followed the Purple's rally, and Alexander and Cuddeback helped the offense by getting the ball away quickly after getting it off the backboard.

As in the first period, Fogarty's defensive work was outstanding in the second half. This part of the game was featured by close guarding by Cuddeback and Alexander, and by long passes and marches up and down the floor. The game became noticeably rougher, and there was much

Numerous dinners, suppers, and teas, sponsored by alumni, will give additional interest to a program which consists of a great variety of numbers, including piano and vocal solos, as well as a specialty act.

An innovation this year will be the conducting of the Glee Club by its leader, Maynard Ford '29, while the custom of an accompanying instrumental club will be dropped, although a college orchestra will travel with the Clubs and play for the dances. A special appeal is made by the officers of the Clubs to the alumni residing in the various cities in which performances will be given to lend all possible support.

SEXTET TO ENGAGE SABRINA AT PLACID

Three Exhibition Games Scheduled At New York Winter Resort During Holidays

Williams will meet Amherst on the ice three times before the two hockey teams engage in an official game when they play a series of exhibition matches at the Lake Placid Club on December 29, 30, and January 1. These contests, an annual custom, will not only add color to the carnival holiday season at Lake Placid, but will also provide much-needed practice for the sextet.

Fourteen men, besides Coach Bellerose and Manager Williamson, will make the trip, arriving on December 27 in time for two days of practice and leaving the night of the first. Because of the usual mild pre-Christmas weather, the squad has only been on the ice four times, and in that short period its potential strength has but partially been discovered. In the Lake Placid games every man will be tried and thus Coach Bellerose will be able to determine the strongest combination with which to start the regular season against West Point on January 11.

STILL ON THE JOB

Christmas, speaking from the point of view of released undergraduates, is here. For several days, special trains on many lines have been busy carting whole institutions into New York, the Mid-west, and miscellaneous points in other directions. Young men in sleek derbies going home to make merry. Even their carefully cultivated sophistication cannot quite conceal that rosy radiation which always exudes from people en route en masse for a holiday. The free-for-all chatter is the very essence of mistletoe and holly, 1928: shows to be seen, girls to be heard, parties to be stormed. It is a different picture from the tinkling sleigh heaped high with lap robes caroling through the snow, but one that is quite as full of genuine Christmas spirit.

College men may not believe in fairies, but they still believe in Santa Claus. And it is the same genial gentleman that a few years ago used to fill their stockings with tin horns and animal crackers. Today a garage or perhaps a wallet has taken the place of the stocking on the chimney, but even these are sometimes filled.

Does this annual crescendo of beneficence weaken our faith in a real flesh-and-blood Santa Claus? In the face of the evidence, we should say it were the mark of an extremely illogical and arrogant mind to deny his existence, just when his existence is most apparent. And yet, unfortunately, it has become a sort of fashion among certain cleverists in the adolescent stage to pretend that their benefactor is a rumor without foundation. They evidently hold the notion that such an affected pose can take the place of mental vacuity and give a scintillating edge of superiority to their social charms. But we are cruel enough to remark that while they are brazen in their declarations of denial, they never act as if they really believed them. They are always the first up Christmas morning to see what they got, and the first to whine if they didn't get what they want—behavior obviously inconsistent!

We should not waste too much time in discussing this variety of hopeful hypocrite who appears to take a perverted delight in avoiding all sensible explanations for the simple phenomenon of the filled stocking. They are not typical of a generation which, far from denying Santa Claus, often makes the mistake of putting too much faith in him. We merely mention the fact that there are these wretched iconoclasts as a warning to the great mass of the simple-minded, that they may keep themselves immune from the insidious propaganda of the anti-Santa Claus League. There is a Santa Claus, we repeat it; and let our "Merry Christmas" carry with it this very important thought.

WILLIAMS 30 YEARS AGO

"The College has had during the last two weeks an opportunity to have good skating, and an unusual interest has been shown for forming a polo or hockey team in college."

"A meeting of men interested in basketball was called for last Saturday evening, but was postponed on account of the College meeting."

"The College Glee Club appeared for the first time this season Tuesday evening in the Congregational Church. After the concert they were served with a bounteous repast by the young ladies of the church."

"The Glee Club has been rehearsing regularly three times a week in preparation for the concerts to be given shortly. Concerts will be given by the three musical clubs tomorrow night at Hoosick Falls, next week at Lansingburg, and later at Pittsfield, Blackinton, and North Adams."

Speaking of the concert at Hoosick, the Weekly reports:

"Mr. Hutehins, in his song 'I Am a Philosopher', showed himself to be a howling success as a comedian."

Reflected glory:

"William H. Edwards, who was recently elected Captain of Princeton's football team, is a cousin of Edwards '00."

Along in January there was a "Day of Prayer", which the Editor of the Weekly suggested might be abandoned, but which he favored.

"Permission has been granted by the Faculty to hold the Sophomore Promenade on the night of May 29 or 30 on condition that it close not later than two o'clock the following morning.

Even in 1898 there were editorials suggesting better conduct in chapel. "Often ministers, whom the College provides for the welfare of the students, are disturbed by the rustle of the pages of a newspaper as they are turned over."

About Amherst the Weekly says naively: "Amherst men seem much pleased to learn of the final grant of a franchise to connect Amherst with Northampton by an electric road. This will greatly improve communication between Amherst and 'fair Smith'."

Christmas vacation was three weeks long in the "Goode Olde Dayes".

Instead of "Hold that line" the students encouraged their football team with "Stonewall, Stonewall".

In 1898 the student signed petitions to having Commencement moved up because it interfered with their baseball schedule.

Baseball candidates were called out on February 18.

Alumni to Give Luncheon

In pursuance of its annual custom, the Williams Alumni Association of Chicago will hold an "undergraduate luncheon" in the University Club of Chicago at 12.30 on Thursday, December 27. All undergraduates in the Illinois region are cordially invited to attend with their fathers, even though the latter be not Williams graduates. The luncheon is described as "an occasion for contact with persons, problems, and possibilities that are and should be of interest to present undergraduates and alumni."

In connection with the concert in Upper Montclair, there will be a supper given at the Elks Club, while on the following day, the program will be broadcast from WEAF in New York from 3.30-4.00 p. m. On January 2 in Rye, N. Y., the Greenwich and Rye alumni will entertain the members of the Clubs at dinner and the next day a tea and buffet supper will be provided by the Junior League at the Worcester Country Club, sponsored by Chester Heywood, a Williams graduate. In Boston another broadcasting program will take place, over WNAC from 4.30-5.00 p. m. The alumni of this city, as well as those in Providence have also made preparations for serving dinner in honor of the Clubs.

Mr. Charles Safford, coaching the Glee Club this year, for the first time, has arranged a program whose variety and tunefulness augurs well for a successful reception. According to tradition, the first number will consist of Come Fill Your Glasses Up and Yard by Yard, followed by Sea Fever, and Eight Bells, also Glee Club numbers. A piano solo by Rogers '30 will precede bass and tenor solos, the former by Dougherty '31, and the latter by Faison '29. Following an intermission will come two Glee Club numbers, Deep River and Honey Chile. Number seven is a specialty act by Heermance '31 and Fitcher '30 entitled Just These Two. A Hundred Pipers will precede the last number on the program, The Mountains.

Following are the men who will make the tour: Baptiste, Beals, Collins W., manager, Faison, Ford, T. Patterson, transportation manager, and Van Etten '29; Amerling, Babize, Clarke, Fitcher, Hodgkinson, McIntosh, Mailey, Rogers, Sherman, Straw, L. Willson, and van der Bogert '30; Barber, Brandegee, Francis, Getman, Harmon, Heermance, Megeath, Moser, Parry, Reynolds, Runo, Sparks, and Suffer '31.

individual play and long dribbling. Brown outscored Williams 17 to 13 in this half, largely due to a fierce attack which started after the Purple had scored five consecutive points. Two intercepted passes checked this rally, and after that Williams was able to exchange shot for shot with Brown until the end of the game. The Williams attack was curbed considerably by Fogarty, while his fellow guard, Heller, scored six points in the second half to make him high scorer for Brown with a total of eight.

Betham scored 13 points for Williams. His short shots from all positions bewildered Brown, and he repeatedly tantalized the Bruins by taking the ball away from a dribbler. Cuddeback deserted his guard position frequently enough to score eight points, while Alexander and Allen had six and five respectively. After Heller, Brown's score was compiled chiefly by Smith and Brown with six each, and by Barnett with five.

The summary of the game is as follows:
WILLIAMS
Thoms r.f.

Dr. Brinsmade Speaks on Cosmic Radiations

Evidence tending to show that the mysterious "cosmic rays" observed by Dr. Robert A. Millikan come from interstellar space and are most probably produced in the synthesis of atoms of the more abundant elements by the union of atoms of hydrogen or helium was presented by Associate Professor James B. Brinsmade, of the Physics Department, in his lecture before the Science Club last Tuesday evening. Dr. J. F. King, of the Chemistry Department, also spoke briefly, telling of the work of Dr. Wieland at Munich in separating the complex organic acids, particularly cholic acid, which are present in the bile.

Dr. Brinsmade first told how the cosmic rays were discovered through efforts to reduce the leakage of electroscopes, when it was found that there was always some leakage greater than could be accounted for by poor insulation and the presence of radioactive materials, which led to the supposition of the existence of some other radiation of even greater penetrating power. Many experiments were carried out in mountain lakes in this country and in South America, which produced greatly improved electroscopes and a satisfactory curve showing the amount of radiation penetrating different depths of water. From this curve the different wave lengths composing the ray could be determined, and the tremendous amounts of energy needed to produce such a radiation were found to agree closely with the calculated energy to be liberated in the synthesis of heavier atoms from hydrogen and helium.

Sextet to Engage Sabrina at Placid

Two excellent defense pairs have been found in Captain Howe and Hazzard and Langmaid and Schwartz. Watters, with previous varsity experience, is assured of first position at goal, but a suitable combination has not yet been found for the forward line.

Amherst is sending a strong team to the New York winter resort, having lost only Cameron and Currier by graduation. Again under the coaching of "Dad" White, the following twelve men will journey to Lake Placid: Right defense: Felt (Capt.), Parnall; Left defense: Perry, M. Kellogg; Center: Nichols, McCann; Right wing: Williams, W. Kellogg; Left wing: Patrick, Waterman; Goal: Stearns, H. Hanson.

The Williams line-up is as follows: Defense men: Howe (Capt.), Ballou, Langmaid, and Schwartz; Line-men: Brigham, Field, Hoyt, Kendall, Nye, Stanwood, and Wheeler; Goal: Bird, Sholes, and Watters.

'THEATRE' ANNOUNCES PLAYS FOR FEBRUARY

Three One-act Farces by Modern Writers Will Comprise an Unusual Bill.

For its annual mid-year bill, to be presented on the evening of Friday, February 8, the Little Theatre has selected three modern one-act plays of a decidedly light and amusing nature. Two Gentlemen of Soho, by A. P. Herbert, The Proposal, by Anton Tehekoff, and The Mouse Trap, by William Dean Howells comprise a bill of strictly farcical content, yet retain balance in the variety of situations and methods of treatment.

Two Gentlemen of Soho is now being played in London as a curtain-raiser to Sheridan's A Tragedy Rehearsed which was one of the plays presented by the Little Theatre in its last bill. The scene is laid in a London night-club of the present day, while the conversation is carried on in the Shakespearean style. This apparent incongruity the author accounts for in his note: "It now appears that Shakespeare is best when played in modern clothes. Perhaps the themes of modern life would be better dressed in Shakespearean costumes. Some may think the play wordy, but there are brutes who think Shakespeare wordy". Direction of the play is in the hands of Reiff '30.

The Proposal is a thoroughly Russian comedy, intensely emotional, and rising to hilarious heights. Sewall '29 has charge of directing the play. The Mouse Trap, under the direction of Casaday '29, is a Victorian farce dealing with woman suffrage.

The tentative casts for the February 8 production are as follows:

THE GLEAMING LIGHTS OF THE AGES CROWNING TRIBUTE TO THE CRAFTSMEN'S MOVEMENT

N the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void . . . And God said, 'Let there be Light'; and there was light." Moses in the wilderness was given the Law that is the foundation of all law.

Came one saying, "Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light to all that are in the house." Many centuries of groping in the dark; then Johann Gutenberg lighted a taper that was destined to grow into a mighty illumination through the ages. The representatives of a great people met and agreed "That all men are created equal; that they are endowed . . . with certain inalienable rights."

Poor Richard, in his inimitable way, advised "Be ashamed to catch yourself idle."

Said the immortal Lincoln, "No country can continue half slave and half free."

And the men from out of a great industry, which is at once a trade, a service, a profession, and the art preservative of all arts, have set as a beacon before their faces

Freshman Quintet Wins From Williamstown High

In a slow game which served as a preliminary to the varsity game with Brown on Wednesday evening, the Williams Freshman quintet defeated the Williamstown High School basketball team in the Lasell Gymnasium by the score of 26 to 17. In the first half, the two teams were about equal, the second quarter ending with the Freshmen barely in the lead. The last two quarters, however, provided an opportunity for the yearling team to open up, and their lead gradually increased to make the final count 26 to 17 in their favor.

Captain Good, who was elected to that position before the game, and Fowle were the two highest scorers for the Freshmen. The Freshman line-up was as follows: Capt. Good L.F., Engle R.F., Fowle C., Cosgrove L.G., and Swinehart R.G. Palmer for Fowle at center was the only substitute. Time: 8 minute quarters; referee: Howse '30.

'Cap and Bells' to Open in Buffalo

As usual in his dramatic works, Galsworthy here presents a sociological problem of ageless interest: the irreconcilability of two opposing elements of society—to use his own words—"the wild birds and the tame birds". In characteristic fashion, he takes neither the one side nor the other; his is the position of the detached observer, wistfully surveying the futile attempts of the classes to meet each other on a common ground. He is keenly interested in his subject, presenting it with all the poignancy and delicacy of which he, as a great artist is capable; but he does not give what every theatre audience wants: the solution, evolved through the gradual triumph of the good characters over the bad, of the problem presented, the feeling of a certain finality gained, by the victory of one element over the other.

But this does not prevent us from admiring Galsworthy the artist; for in his charming fantasy he has given us abundant humor, delicacy, poignancy. The over-charitable painter, Welwyn, finds his household giving unexpected shelter to three human derelicts on a certain Christmas eve: a tense little flower girl who has wandered in from the streets, a vagabond Frenchman, Ferrand, a drunken old caddy who has been forced out of business by the competition of the ever-multiplying automobile,—all of whom he had met on his previous rambles. Here are the "wild birds" plucking clean the susceptible Pigeon; and in the persons of a professor, a J. P., a vicar, and Welwyn's own practical-minded daughter, the "tame birds", forever trying to set up rules and regulations against which the wild ones forever hopelessly strive. Here is the setting and somewhat time-worn situations result. There is no conclusion, no solution, no final enlightening climax; we may work them out for ourselves.

Of the players and direction I shall make little comment. The play itself was patently beyond the reach of both, and one which highly organized professional companies would hesitate to attempt. Its charm is subtle and fleeting; amateurs should beware. The outstanding performances were clearly those of Lucas, as Ferrand; Baxter, as the drunken caddy;

and Wheeler as the argumentative J. P. They handled difficult parts nobly, but only at times were they given adequate support. As a whole, the production lacked the whimsical freshness and spontaneity which fantasy—especially of this sort—demands; but it was a grand attempt, and we feel sure that the latent potentiality so surely there will be brought out by future rehearsing and performance.

Following is the cast which will make the trip:

Christopher Welwyn	T. McKean '29
Ann	Nicoll '31
Ferrand	Lucas '31
Timson	Baxter '30
Mrs. Megan	Miller '30
Megan	Gross '30

December 27 Cleveland, Ohio
December 28 Winnetka, Ill.
December 29 Indianapolis, Ind.
January 2 Columbus, Ohio

Yale and Wesleyan Win; Army Defeats Columbia

Though victorious over an alumni team composed of members of the 1926 championship quintet and over Upsala in the "Home-Week" game on December 14, the Columbia basketball team was defeated by the Army five last Tuesday evening with the final score at 37-30. Of the other teams remaining on the Williams basketball schedule, Yale and Wesleyan have each won two games and have played exceptionally good basketball for these first encounters of the season.

In the Army game, Ballou, Columbia's individual ace, who scored half of his team's points in the 37-17 defeat of Upsala, failed to break through the West Point defense, but Gregory, the Columbia center, made 14 points to take high scoring honors. The Yale University team has defeated Upsala and St. Lawrence, the final score of the Upsala game being 33-22 and that of the St. Lawrence game 32-18. Of the "Little Three" games, Wesleyan has defeated Clark University and last Tuesday won a lop-sided game from Boston University by the score of 46-28. Nye, Wesleyan center, scored 23 points in this encounter. R. P. I. and Brown, two of the opponents defeated by the Williams varsity, were defeated in mid-week games by Middlebury and Boston University.

Tuesday Lectures To Start

With the purpose of adding interest to the winter months in Williamstown, the 1929 series of Tuesday Lectures will start on January 15 in the Thompson Physical Laboratory, with two lectures before the mid-year recess and the remaining eight each Tuesday until the Easter vacation. In the first lecture, Professor W. I. Milham of the Department of Astronomy, will contribute to the variety of subjects offered with a talk on "This Universe of Ours", while Professor Pratt, in charge of the series, announces that later Professor Charles Safford will give a lecture on music in Chapin Hall, illustrating with the organ.

Winter Sports Team to Compete at Lake Placid

Despite the handicap of a snowless and almost iceless fall, the Winter Sports team is sending six men, headed by Captain Little '29, to the annual meet of the Intercollegiate Winter Sports Union at Lake Placid, from December 28 to January 2. Eleven colleges from New England, Canada, and the Middle West will compete for the trophy donated by the late President Harding, which was last won by Williams in 1924.

The skiing events occupy the prominent positions in the calendar of the meet, opening with the cross country ski-run and the slaloms, and concluding with the spectacular ski-jump. Captain Little and either Fedde '30 or Cheney '31 will represent Williams in these events, while Moore '29 is entered in the snow shoeing. Sears '29 and Husband '31 will take part in the skating events, Sears in the fancy skating, and Husband in the 440-yard dash. The other colleges represented at the meet include Amherst, Bates, Dartmouth, Middlebury, New Hampshire, Syracuse, and Wisconsin from the United States, and Kings, McGill, and Toronto from Canada.

Wrestling Candidates Drill in Fundamentals

For the past three weeks Coach Bullock has been directing a large number of candidates in conditioning and fundamentals in preparation for the wrestling meet with North Adams Y. M. C. A. on January 26. Individual instruction will be taken up after the Christmas recess, and tryouts will be held in the various weight classes to determine the members of the team. Among the experienced men who are expected to report are Deming, Andersen, Hibbard, Millard, Chase, and Fujiyama '29, and Reynolds '30.

Following is the schedule:

Jan. 26	North Adams Y. M. C. A.
	North Adams
Feb. 16	Norwich University Northfield
Feb. 23	Alfred University Home
Mar. 1	Brown University Providence
Mar. 9	Springfield Home
Mar. 16	Amherst Amherst

Armstrong, Jepson, and W. Smith '30 were confined to the Thompson Infirmary at the time of publication on December 20. If an undergraduate becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

1932 Editorial Competition

There will be a meeting of all members of the Class of 1932 who are interested in the first Freshman competition for the editorial board of THE RECORD immediately after chapel on Sunday morning, January 13, 1929, in THE RECORD office on the ground floor of Jesup Hall. At this time, the competition will be explained and the details of the work will be outlined. At the end of this competition, which will run for fourteen issues, two and probably three men will be elected to the board. There will be no work during the mid-year examination period.

'THE PIGEON' TAKES WELL IN MID-WEST

'Cap and Bells' Production Receives Laudatory Press Reviews in Cities Visited

LUCAS, BAXTER EVOKE FAVORABLE CRITICISM

Alumni and Friends Join to Fete Visitors With Numerous Social Activities

Cap and Bells endeavored this Christmas to present a play which would admittedly tax the powers of a professional troupe, but the reception accorded The Pigeon by the six audiences before which it was presented, while cool at first, was such in the later phases of the trip as to indicate that its success was even greater than could be hoped. The notices in local papers also bear out this impression, and the performance of Lucas '31 drew particular newspaper praise, while the characterizations of T. McKean '29 and Baxter '30 were also pronounced very creditable.

In addition to appreciative audiences during most of the trip, Cap and Bells members found themselves very fortunate in their reception by friends and alumni in the towns visited—Buffalo, Cleveland, Winnetka, Indianapolis, Columbus, and Pittsburgh. A dance was held for the cast after every performance, and local managers expended a great deal of commendable effort in providing for the entertainment and lodging of the actors and staff.

The Columbus Journal says: "J. D. Lucas '31 recited off long speeches in broken French that were natural and effective. But even he took no laurels away from A. E. Baxter, as Timson, the bow-legged, perpetually drunken English caddy." Another Columbus paper says that the cast "seemed to know what it was all about and acted accordingly. A very pleasing performance was the result. Top honors unquestionably go to J. D. Lucas, who gave a most delightful interpretation to the role of a French vagabond philosopher. He left nothing to be desired in the way of foreign accent or mannerisms. Another character role was excellently portrayed by A. E. Baxter. The title role, that of the artist who just couldn't seem to refuse to aid, was ably taken by T. McKean."

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette characterizes the play as "a finished performance" and says that "possibly the finest performance of the evening was given by J. D. Lucas."

ARMY SEXTET TO OPEN WILLIAMS HOCKEY CARD

Soldiers Will Meet Veteran Purple Team at West Point Today; Goalie Undecided

With a keen-edged attack carried forward equally effectively by the line or the defense and with its confidence bolstered by decisive wins over Amherst, the Williams hockey team will open its official season today against the U. S. Military Academy sextet at West Point. In their final game of last year, the Purple swamped the Blue and Grey behind a barrage of seven goals, with no counter-attack, but in their opener today they meet the cadets fresh from a 5-2 victory over St. Stephens, and the veteran Williams combination will find stiffer opposition.

Cold weather has permitted more practice so far than the team enjoyed before its opening game last year. The series with Amherst at Lake Placid had to be cancelled a year ago, while this season it afforded five days of excellent practice, and since their return to College the men have had two intensive sessions on the Sage Hall rink.

A powerful defense combination has been developed in Captain Howe and Langmaid, and in the Amherst series they proved to be just as effective in scoring. A strong attack from the forward wall is guaranteed by the combination of Brigham, Hoyt, and Wheeler, all veterans, in the forward line. Although the defensive work of the backs is of first order, the lack of a sufficiently experienced goalie is still bothering Coach Bellerose. Waters saw

Freshman Five Will Face Strong Adams High Team

Friday January 11—Meeting the strong Adams High School five in a game preliminary to the Varsity contest with St. Stephens in Lasell Gymnasium tonight, the Freshman basketball team faces its first real test of the season. 1932 has shown up very well in practice during the last week, scoring over the second Varsity and losing to the Varsity itself only by a small score.

The Freshman season does not open officially until the meeting next week with St. Joseph's School of Pittsfield, winners of the Catholic Schools of Western Massachusetts tournament in 1927 and runners-up in the same event last year. The freshmen have already defeated the Williamstown High School in a practice game by a score of 26 to 17, and should be able to keep their record clean in the game tonight. The line-up will be the same as that which has started against the Varsity, with Captain Good and Engle at the forwards, Fowle as center, and Cosgrove and Swinehart at the guards.

PROF. SALVEMINI TO ADDRESS FORUM

Noted Italian Author, Liberal, and Anti-Fascist Will Lecture on Pre-War Italy

"Italy And The Balkan Question Under The Triple-Alliance," and "The Outbreak Of The Great War" will be the subjects of a lecture by Professor Gaetano Salvemini, lecturing under the auspices of the Institute of International Education, in Jesup Hall at 7.30 Sunday evening as the third of the annual series of the Forum. The speaker, who is an author, Liberal, and an opponent of Fascism, has had an unusual opportunity for studying his subject, and in the past has met with universal success in his talks before all kinds of organizations.

Professor Salvemini received his education at the University of Florence, was a secondary school teacher in Palermo, Faenza, Lodi, and Florence, and has held a chair of Mediaeval and Modern History at the Universities of Messina, Pisa, and Florence, resigning from the last in 1925. An eminent historian, an author of note, and an ardent liberal in Italian politics, Professor Salvemini has much to offer the student of any phase of Italy's political history or present situation. Most of the lecturer's views have been expressed in his writings which are extensive and cover mediaeval and modern history, education, and politics.

Professor Salvemini's political history is of unusual interest. He was affiliated with the Italian Socialist Party from 1895 to 1910, and a severe critic of the revolutionary violence and of the reformist opportunism within the Party from 1902 to 1910, at the end of which time he left the Party. In 1911-1912, he was one of the few non-Socialist opponents of the expedition to Tripoli, on the grounds that it was

Dr. Noehren Optimistic Over Abatement of Flu

Two hundred and sixty-three colds and other minor ailments caused by the nationwide influenza epidemic have been treated by Dr. A. G. Noehren, College physician, in the past month, and only 11 of these cases have developed into influenza or grippe, according to a statement made by Dr. Noehren to a Record reporter. At present the local "epidemic" is on the decline, and it is considered improbable by College authorities that the wave will recur, as western Massachusetts has been unusually immune in comparison to other parts of the country.

Dr. Noehren expressed gratification at the response given by the members of the College to the postal cards mailed out at the re-opening of activities after the Christmas recess, and urges that care be taken even at this late date. "However much doctors disagree on reasons for influenza, they all agree on the value of open-air exercise, such as a brisk walk or skating, as a preventative." He also stated that the weather has been a primary cause in the wave, as wet, cold weather increases the possibility of the spread of the influenza germs.

ST. STEPHENS QUINTET TO TEST PURPLE FIVE

Veteran Crimson Team Has Five Victories to Credit With Record Score

Friday, January 11—With a team composed of five veterans of three years' experience, St. Stephens will present dangerous opposition tonight when it meets the Purple five for the first game of the winter season. The Crimson comes to Williams-town with an impressive record behind it, having won five out of seven games so far, the two lost games going to such strong teams as the Montclair A. C. and St. John's of Brooklyn, who defeated Columbia on her home floor.

Coach Messer has been putting the Purple squad through intensive practices during the last week to cover up the weak spots apparent at Columbia, while frequent scrimmages with the freshmen have given the team an opportunity to work together again after the vacation lay-off. Field has been playing at guard in place of Cuddeback, who is laid up with a cold, and will probably start the game tonight. Callaghan and Allee are alternating at center. Alexander, Betham, and Thoms will play their usual positions.

St. Stephens opened its season on December 5 and since then have played at least one game a week. Against Cooper Union they ran up a 76-8 score, and in all the other games managed to tally a comparatively large number of points. Four men form the attack with Ricciardi and Keen starring. Fussens and Lemley are also threats on the offense, while Given plays a standing guard. Commenting on the game, Coach Messer stated, "To win this game our club will have to play far better than they have at any time this season. They can do it."

The probable line-up is as follows:

PLACID RINK SERIES TAKEN BY WILLIAMS

Sextet Wins Two of Three Games In Winter Resort Exhibitions With Amherst

Business was combined with pleasure when the Williams hockey team, in search of pre-season practice, played a series of three exhibition games with the Amherst sextet at Lake Placid during the Christmas vacation. The five days at the Lake Placid Club were rendered the more enjoyable when, on the last day the team concluded the series in favor of the Purple with a 4-1 win, after taking the first, 5-3, and dropping the second, 1-2.

Arriving on December 27, the squad went into a two-day practice session, and on the thirtieth engaged Amherst in the first game of the series, which has become a yearly custom between the two institutions. Four goals in the first period were enough to insure a lead throughout

There will be a meeting of all members of the Class of 1932 who are interested in the first Freshman competition for the editorial board of 'The Record' immediately after chapel on Sunday morning, January 13, 1929, in 'The Record' office on the ground floor of Jesup Hall. At this time, the competition will be explained and the details of the work will be outlined. At the end of this competition, which will run for fourteen issues, two and probably three men will be elected to the board. There will be no work during the mid-year examination period.

Williams Participates in Lake Placid Carnival

Handicapped by the lack of previous practice and the illness of two of its members, the Williams winter sports team scored only one point in the annual meet of the Intercollegiate winter sports union, held at Lake Placid from December 28 to January 2. The meet was won by New Hampshire with 21 points, while McGill and Wisconsin finished second and third respectively and the other places went to Syracuse, Dartmouth, Bates, Ottawa, and Williams in that order.

Moore '29 was the only man to score for Williams, finishing fourth in the two-mile snowshoe event. Captain Little finished eleventh in a field of over 30 starters in the ski-run, which had the largest entry of any event. Sears and Husband were unable to make the trip on account of illness, and their absence was a serious loss to the team. By scoring one point, Williams was eighth in the final standings, the following gaining no score: Cornell, Montreal, R. P. I., and St. Thomas of Minnesota.

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS TO MEET R. P. I. TODAY

Opening Meet at Troy Will Make Severe Test for Untried Purple Team

In the opening meet of the season, which will take place at Troy, N. Y., the Williams varsity swimming team will oppose the R. P. I. natators this evening at 8.00. The team, which has only five veterans from last year, Captain Schott, Healy, VanderBogert, Noble, and Davis, and is considerably crippled by the illness of Adams and Doughty, will be forced to its utmost to defeat the Engineers.

With three weeks of practice before the Christmas vacation and daily workouts since then, the squad is in fair condition for the encounter. Time-trials were held before vacation and once after in an effort to pick the strongest men for each entry tonight. The graduation of Captain Butcher left a gap in the 440-yard swim, and the loss of Putney and Boynton is keenly felt in the dashes.

Higginbotham, who swam the dash events occasionally last year, has improved considerably and is expected to fill the position ably. His partner in the short races will be Davis in the 50 and Burgess in the 100. The breast stroke event is still well fortified with Captain Schott and Healy, consistent point winners of last season, as well as Noble and Gregg of last year's Freshman team. Burgess, who swam second man in the 440 with Butcher last year, will be counted upon in the 440 as well as Birnie who swam that event for the Freshman team last season. The loss of Dawes has left a hole in the diving, which will be filled by Nielberg, Wheeler, or Shaw. The 200-yard relay, on which the meet will probably depend, will be swum probably by Close, Davis, Wolcott, and Higginbotham.

Since the team has had very little practice and men have had to be developed to fill new positions, Coach Graham sees a hard meet tonight with the R. P. I. team which is unusually strong this year. The Engineers boast of three good free-style men, Yappes, Toth, and White, two excellent

1932 Swimming Meet

Entries for the annual Freshman swimming meet, an individual contest for the Leonard S. Prince Memorial Cup, will be received by Coach Graham next Monday and Tuesday, January 14 and 15. All regular events, including diving and 150-yard medley swim, will be included in the schedule of the meet, which will occupy about four days. As these will be the first time trials for the Freshman team, all Freshman swimmers are urged to enter the events in which they have a chance to place, regardless of all-around ability

SUCCESS ACHIEVED BY MUSICAL CLUBS

Enthusiastic Receptions Accorded in Holiday Concert Tour in Seven Cities

LIGHT NUMBERS LEND VARIETY TO PROGRAM

Songs Broadcast Over New York and Boston Stations—Alumni Give Dinners

Presenting a well-balanced and carefully selected program to large audiences throughout its tour, the Williams College Musical Clubs, consisting this year of the Glee Club alone, were heartily received in all seven cities visited during the holidays, beginning with a performance on December 27 in Upper Montclair, and ending in Providence on January 5. Twice the Glee Club sang over the radio, broadcasting from WEAF in New York City on December 28, the date of the regular concert in that city, and also from WNAC in Boston on January 4. Dinners followed performances in each city, music being furnished by a College orchestra, while several dinners were given by alumni in various places for the members of the Club.

Credit for the remarkably fine showing this year must be given to Mr. Charles L. Safford, who has undertaken the coaching of the Glee Club for the first time and who has achieved gratifying results. Another innovation this year which has worked successfully has been the directing of the singing by the leader of the organization, Maynard Ford '29. To gratify the desire of patrons, Mr. Safford asked all alumni and undergraduates after the regular performance to join the Glee Club on the stage in singing numerous college songs, thus giving a rousing finish to the evening's program.

The program itself represented a well-blended mixture of College, classical, and popular selections. As usual, the opening number consisted of the two College songs, Come Fill Your Glasses Up and Yare by Yare, which were followed by two other Glee Club renditions, Sea Fever, and Eight Bells. Rogers '30 then delivered a very pleasing piece entitled Pickaninny Dance, a piano solo. Faison '29, Fitch '30, and Dougherty '31 alternated as vocal soloists, the former singing tenor, and the latter two, bass. The final number before the intermission was Londonderry Air, vigorously applauded by appreciative audiences. The well-known Deep River and

LOCKHARTS WILL GIVE REVUE IN CHAPIN HALL

Novel 'Recital Revue' by Gene and Kathleen Lockhart Will Be Offered Tonight

Making another departure from the ordinary entertainments presented under the auspices of the Thompson Course, Gene and Kathleen Lockhart will give their original "Recital Revue" in Chapin Hall tonight at 8.15. "The Recital Revue" is a potpourri of satirical sketches, humorous songs, burlesques and pantomimes that most resembles the European revue intime; it has been likened to a "Charlot's Revue" with all but the two principals eliminated.

Although the Lockharts have not appeared together in Williamstown, many upperclassmen will doubtless remember Gene Lockhart's splendid demonstration of his versatility and mirth-provoking powers which he gave at the Jackson Festival in March 1927. Since that time, we are told, Mr. Lockhart became tired of travelling about with a six-legged piano and a stool that squeaks, and having at home a wife who is as talented as he, he decided to leave behind the piano and stool and to evolve a new program in conjunction with his wife (who does not squeak). The result of their collaboration has been received with delight wherever it has been presented and critics have been lavish with their praise.

Mrs. Lockhart has gained her reputation through wide and varied experience on the stage. She has appeared as leading lady in the English pantomime Sinbad the Sailor, and in the intimate revues Strolling

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE IT

If there is one road on which all Americans aspire to travel, it is undoubtedly the well-known road to success. We may be freely criticized for it, called hard-headed, mercenary, go-getting fanatics, yet as long as there is held out the promise of reward we never cease clutching at it. While this reward usually takes the shape of a fat dollar-sign, one seldom feels that mere financial success is really complete until the rich gravy of social approval has been poured over it. In this, we are convinced, is heaven on earth. It has nothing whatever to do with the homely sort of happiness that Irving Berlin extols, but few throbbing souls of the college age can picture a good time without plenty of cash and plenty of gas.

It is interesting to note to what degree the idea of Success has influenced the college man. Never quite the same, because never quite realized, it has nevertheless led him hopefully onward since those early school days when the greatest accomplishment in the world seemed passing a College Board examination. In college—at least for the first three years—success has a new meaning. On a smaller scale it is akin to the variety one finds oozing from the pages of the American Magazine, and it is exemplified by many little triumphs in extra-curriculum side-shows. To be a manager, a captain, an editor, a president, or even a vice-president of something—ah! this is success. And then after the elections are announced, if a man can add the glories of personal popularity with the right boys and the right girls, he is considered truly "big". In his senior year he may coast along in the pleasant assurance that underclassmen, at least, will single him out from the herd, refer to him as a "success". But just at this delightful point, our senior's complacency is liable to be interrupted by the disturbing thought of the great Beyond: more worlds to conquer, more success to be gained; and according to his disposition and prospects he will suddenly become uneasy or impatient all over again. The magnificent achievements that he has always considered the height of success begin to pale disconcertingly as the commencement of his new life comes rushing upon him. The new goal is so much higher; the competition must be so fierce.

If one is interested in the question of Success, as we fancy most young men are, we recommend an article in the current Harpers called "Young Men on the Make" by Henry F. Pringle. Mr. Pringle discusses not only the attitude of undergraduates toward success in the business world, but also treats in some detail what constitutes success within the colleges themselves. In one place he makes the interesting statement that, "The young man whose talents are chiefly social will undoubtedly select Harvard or Princeton or Williams for his Alma Mater. At these institutions the societies consider mutual likes and dislikes in making their selections. It is not uncommon for some tremendously important lad to be ignored when the elections are announced". At Yale, on the other hand, "charm is a secondary consideration. To have been successfully active in student affairs is, with a few exceptions, the sine qua non". While we have not noticed so many "tremendously important" lads left out in the cold at Williams, it is probably true that what Mr. Pringle calls "charm" and what we call "smoothness" is an important factor in the success of a Williams undergraduate, as an undergraduate. This is at least a better synonym for success than the dogged winning of competitions, but it takes most of us four years to realize it. True success is something quite different from either mere accomplishment or social grace, whether in Williamstown or Wall Street. Training in the liberal arts should surely give us some inkling of its nature, give us hope in the knowledge that it is still possible to be a successful failure—a failure perhaps from the standpoint of conventional criteria, but superbly successful in being true to one's self.

At a meeting of THE RECORD Board last Thursday evening, David R. Heaton, of Fort Wayne, Ind., Charles S. Hyde, Jr., of Syracuse, N. Y., and Joseph K. Close, of Toledo, Ohio, were elected to the positions of First, Second, and Third Associate Editors respectively. They will hold these positions until the 1930 Board takes office, when they will assume the positions of Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, and Assignment Editor.

the game, although Amherst staged a late rally which gave them three points. Captain Howe and Langmaid on defense proved to be equally powerful on the offense, scoring three times. Nichols in the pivot position was most effective for Amherst.

The second game found the ice in very poor shape and the Williams team perhaps just a little over-confident. The Purple scored in the first period, but Amherst registered twice in the second. Then the lack of a good surface began to show as the play became worse and consequently rougher, and, in spite of many fouls, neither side was able to score again.

Williams regained its former stride in the final contest, and the Howe-Langmaid combination started the scoring in the first period. They followed this with another in the second, and Brigham and Nye also tallied, while Amherst was able to score but once. Sholes, who played goal for the freshmen last year and who had seen service in the previous game, remained through the entire contest.

unjustifiable and inexpedient, and would precipitate a European conflict.

While advocating intervention by Italy during the War, Salvemini stood for understanding between Italy and the Southern Slavs, on the basis of Italy's renunciation of claims to Dalmatia. This attitude increased the opposition of the Nationalists, but in 1919 he was elected to Parliament against the votes of both Socialists and Nationalists. He has been an uncompromising opponent of Fascism from its start, and in June, 1925, was arrested on the charge of participation in a clandestine newspaper, but the amnesty of July 31st, 1925, cut short the trial.

IT was unprofitable wilderness, most men thought. But James J. Hill had faith that it could grow wheat and so he built his railroad. Settlers turned the waste-land into wheat-land, the wheat into wealth, the wealth into great western states.

Faith in the economic future still points the way. Right now men in the Bell System are planting the seeds of vast possibilities for even better communication.

Out of the belief that the public needs a broader use of the telephone is growing a constantly improved long distance telephone service. Like the railroads of an earlier day, this service is now tapping and helping to develop rich new territories of commerce.

Mr. Lockhart is well known as a composer, author, actor, and director, in addition to his fame as a peerless entertainer. He has appeared in or directed plays too numerous to mention, scoring his greatest success when he directed and played the lead in Sun Up. He is the author of many songs, among them The World is Waiting for the Sunrise. His greatest fame, however, has been won by his ability at entertaining, and Gene Lockhart and a piano have for several seasons been synonymous with an evening of dazzling wit and humor.

COLUMBIA OUTCLASSES
PURPLE TO WIN, 49-33Gregory Leads Lion Offense While Alexander Is Mainstay of Williams Team

Taking advantage of every opportunity to score and flashing a powerful attack built around the tall center, Gregory, Columbia University landed the Purple quintet its first defeat of the season on December 22, 1928, by a score of 49-33. The New Yorkers got off to a flying start, sinking four baskets before Williams made a point, and increasing the lead to 12 points at the half and 16 at the finish.

In spite of brilliant individual playing the Purple offense never got under way, and what teamwork there was, had none of the speed and fire shown in parts of the Brown game. A strange floor, which was rough in spots, and poor lighting facilities threw the team out of its stride a little at first, but the final outcome was never in doubt after the first ten minutes of play. Many penalties for personal fouls slowed the game up, and especially weakened the Williams team when Allen and Callaghan were forced out of the game.

Gregory of Columbia was the outstanding player of the game, heading the scoring with four baskets and eight fouls besides doing fine work as the main cog in the Lion offense. His reach was a good six inches longer than that of any other player. Alexander played the best game for Williams, tallying a total of fifteen points, while Field, who was substituted in the first half, also helped prevent a complete rout.

After the initial run of baskets by Columbia the game settled down to a hard battle with the Purple hanging on doggedly. Time and again the Blue and White waited for the Williams players to charge in and leave an opening for another shot at the basket, while the Purple had to fight for the ball and rush it down the floor to score before the defense could be formed. Although the scoring was nearly even after the first ten minutes, Williams was kept on the defensive most of the time. The Purple rallies were short-lived, and usually ended with Gregory dropping in a basket or a foul.

A summary of the game follows:

a very tuneful song called Honey Chile followed in succession and proved to be highly successful choices. Fitcher '30 and Heermance '31, the former playing a violin and the latter a banjo, put on a specialty act, which was one of the most popular numbers on the program. Songs written by Heermance and current popular pieces were sung and played to great satisfaction. A Hundred Pipers, by the Glee Club, was followed by several Williams songs, sung by all Williams men present, who had left the audience and crowded onto the stage. The singing of Lord Jeffrey Amherst and Drink a Highball, was followed by all joining in the rendition of The Mountains.

Although the Club gave a concert in Albany a week before the opening of vacation, the actual Christmas trip did not start until December 27, when a performance and dance were given at the Upper Montclair Woman's Club in Upper Montclair, N. J. The next day the itinerary led to New York City, where a program was broadcast over WEA for one-half an hour. The concert that evening was held at the Hotel Roosevelt. On December 29 the Club went back to New Jersey where they sang at the Summit High School in Summit. The Greenwich and Rye alumni entertained the Glee Club on January 2 before a concert at the Westchester-Biltmore in Rye, following a brief respite over New Year's. Worcester was the next town to be visited, the performance here being given at the Woman's Club. Another radio program was broadcast the following day in Boston over station WNAC, again for a half hour. The concert that night was given at the University Club. The final performance was given the next night at the Providence Plantations Club in Providence, R. I.

W. C. A. Cabinet Meets

At a meeting of the W. C. A. Cabinet on Wednesday evening, it was announced that the Chest Fund Drive had netted over $6,000, considerably short of the desired goal of $7,000. As a result, the Cabinet decided to reapportion the budget as follows: the Boys' Club is still to receive the full allotment of $3,500, since that organization is practically dependent upon college contributions, while all the other items are to be reduced proportionately. At the same time, plans for the Northfield Conference were made public. The dates are to be February 15-17—Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, while the principal speaker will be Dr. Ward of Union College. The study will center about the industrial situation at New Bedford, and the economic problems arising from it will be treated from the Christian point of view.

WILLIAMS CONQUERED IN OVERTIME PERIOD

St. Stephens Nets Two Baskets in Second Extra Session for 32-28 Victory

Two baskets made in the second five-minute, extra period after the score had been tied twice by shots sunk in the last seconds of the preceding periods, gave St. Stephens a victory over the Purple quintet in the Lasell Gymnasium last Friday night by a 32-28 score. Getting off to a slow start with Williams doing most of the scoring the game gradually speeded up until the second half ended in a whirlwind of desperate long shots and fierce rushes for the basket.

Although crippled by the loss of the two regular guards, Alexander and Cuddeback, the Purple put up a gallant battle throughout the whole game with Betham, Thoms, and Field fighting doggedly to check the Crimson advance. By his shooting in the first half Allen gained a lead for Williams, which was not lost until the middle of the second period when a series of baskets by Ricciardi gave St. Stephens the lead, which was in turn overcome by Betham. With the score tied and a minute to play Field dropped a perfect foul shot through the hoop only to have it tied in 50 seconds by an unfortunate foul on Lemley. As the gun was fired for the end of the second half, Howse received a pass and sank a perfect but useless long shot.

The first overtime period opened with a rush by St. Stephens which resulted in a basket. Allen retaliated with a foul. Lemley scored another basket for the Crimson, and Betham another foul. After innumerable long shots attempted by every member of the team and with only seconds to play Betham received the ball in the corner, shot, and the score was again tied as the gun barked the end of the period. Opening the second overtime session Lemley scored for the Crimson with a one handed toss from close by the basket, while Williams frantically shot from anywhere on the floor. Ricciardi contributed another two points for the Crimson, and the Purple in vain renewed its efforts to score with impossible long shots.

Although the closeness of the score made the game violently exciting, the contest was loosely played throughout. St. Stephens had a steady but not brilliant offense while the Purple found it impossible to organize any offense which could break through the opposing defense for more than four or five short shots. It was here that the loss of the regulars was felt. Individual starrng was all that kept the

Freshmen Down Adams High School Easily, 26-13

Starting with a rush that swept their opponents off their feet and netted a 14-3 lead at half time, the Williams freshmen had little difficulty in defeating the Adams High School five in Lasell Gymnasium last Friday evening by a score of 26-13. Captain Good of the freshmen was easily the outstanding player with seven field goals for a total of fourteen points, while Captain Hagerty of Adams, unable to break through the Williams defense, accounted for almost half his team's total with three field goals from well back towards the middle of the floor.

Play in the first few minutes of the game was unusually fast, with the freshmen showing a far better passing attack than that shown by the Varsity in the St. Stephens contest later in the evening. Although missing several easy shots from close to the basket, 1932 ran up an 8-0 lead against the leaders of the local High School league before Hagerty succeeded in dropping in his first long try of the evening. Two field goals by Good and one by Cosgrove for Williams and Czaja's foul shot for Adams brought the count to 14-3 and ended the scoring for the half.

During the second half the Freshmen's attack slowed up so much that they were held on almost even terms by their opponents, who began to succeed in their attempts to work the ball down into Williams territory. The substitution of the entire Freshman second team late in the period speeded up the play somewhat but brought the scoring to a standstill, and the final three minutes were scoreless.

R. P. I. DEFEATS PURPLE SWIMMING TEAM, 41-30

Engineers Gain Six of Eight First Places; Yaples of Opponents and Schott Star

In the opening meet of the season, on Saturday evening, the Williams swimming team was defeated by the strong R. P. I. natators to the score of 41 to 30, the meet being decided by the relay, since the score up to that event stood 33 to 30 for the Engineers and a victory in the relay would have given either team a win. Captain Schott was the star performer for the Purple, taking a first in the breast stroke in the fine time of 2:45 and a second in the back-stroke event, while Yaples with firsts in both dashes did best for R. P. I.

Although Williams won only two first places, Schott in the breast stroke and Burgess in the 440, the Purple swimmers won enough seconds and thirds to make a

THE LOCKHARTS OFFEER REVIEW IN CHAPIN HALL

Gene and Kathleen Lockhart Give Thompson Program Before
Large Audience

When Gene Lockhart sang, "For Today's a Holiday, Joliday, Holiday", in his Recital Revue last Saturday evening in Chapin Hall, he was describing his presentation as a distinct departure from the usually somber and serious Thompson Course programs. With their music becoming satirical melodies as they pointed a sly finger at human weaknesses; and with their delightful skits revealing a keen perception of human traits, Gene and Kathleen Lockhart smiled, sang, and "skit-ed" their way into the hearts of an enthusiastic audience.

WILLIAMS WHO in the Lockhart program: Gene Lockhart, composer, author, actor, Stage Director in "Players, Inc.". Composer of "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise" and "The Way to Your Heart". Clubs: Players, Lambs, and Dutch Treat. Kathleen Lockhart: Leading lady in pantomime, "Sinbad the Sailor". English Spy in Sam Harris's "Three Faces East". Prima Donna in a revival of "The Geisha". An organization which included these characters might be expected to offer an interesting program and this was found to be the case when Lockhart's "Company of Two" appeared in Chapin Hall.

The first number, a dissertation on the "Why's and Why Not's" of married life, proved conclusively that a man should marry a woman who is an adept at tying bow ties. After Mrs. Lockhart sang two short pieces, "A Girl Can Never Be Too Careful" and "She Was a Very Modest Little Thing", Mr. Lockhart stated that he had formulated a new theory of musical arrangement. Instead of putting sad words to sad music and joyous thoughts to joyous music, he suggested that, in order to satisfy an audience of sad and happy listeners, sad words should be sung to joyous music, so that the sad listener might hear the words and the happy listener might hear the music. He illustrated by singing, to a light and happy air, the lines, "We Had a Dreadful Storm Last Night and Forty Thousand Men Were Killed—Whee-e-e". An extension of the theory would state that songs should be selected for a singer with reference to the weight of the singer. A diminutive artist would sing light songs while singers of large stature should offer pieces such as, "I Wish I Were a Winsome Whale". "In a Wagon-Lits Office" was an entertaining skit in which Miss Average American, in trying her French in Paris, discovers that in France, even the French would rather speak English. Gene Lockhart sang, "Let's All Have a Good Cry", in which he pleaded for a "great national weep." In his impersonation of the leader of a Wednesday evening Literary Circle, Lockhart discussed the calamity which befell "Little Bo-Peep" when she lost her sheep.

"Doing the Doge's Palace" by Mr. and Mrs. Lockhart was a clever satire on the

SEXTET ROUTS ARMY UNDER 10-0 BARRAGE

Cadets no Match for Purple as Team Tallies Freely; Defense
Is Impregnable

Scoring with almost monotonous regularity while holding the Cadets to shots from the middle of the ice, the Williams hockey team outclassed a bewildered Army sextet last Saturday afternoon on Stuart rink at West Point. In spite of fine work by Costello in the soldiers' goal, 10 points were scored by the Purple as shots rained from the sticks of Brigham, Howe, and Langmaid, while the Blue and Grey, shooting largely from long range, was unable to tally.

This is the second time that Williams has shown the way to the Army, for last year in the final game of their season they came away with a 7-0 win. However, this even more one-sided contest this year was in part due to the fact that graduation took only two Purple players, while the Cadets lost practically their entire team.

The Williams attack worked throughout the contest with its expected sharpness. Brigham opened with a tally at three minutes, and he and Langmaid alternated for the next three goals. In the second period, both scored again, followed by Wheeler. Captain Howe came in for two in the third, and Hoyt scored once. However, a newly discovered stoutness of defense came to light during the contest and showed Howe and Langmaid, as well as the spare combination of Hazzard and Schwartz, stronger on the defense than ever before. Watters' activity in goal, consisting mostly of catching flies, was faultless. Using his usual two-team system, Coach Bellerose substituted Varsity B during part of the contest, when Nye at center and Hazzard at defense showed up especially well. The game marked the return to the line-up of the latter and Schwartz, both of whom had been out because of injuries.

The summary follows:

WILLIAMS (10)	ARMY (0)
Hoyt	r.w. Chaffee
Brigham	c. Lindquist
Wheeler	l.w. Carter
Howe (Capt.)	r.d. Schorr
Langmaid	l.d. Fink
Watters	g. Costello

Goals: Brigham 3, Langmaid 3, Howe 2, Hoyt 1, Wheeler 1.

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Ballou, Hazzard, Nye, Gross, Schwartz, and Sholes; ARMY—Huglin, Pressley, and Sweeney.

Penalty: Langmaid (1 min.); Referee: McDonald; Time: 20-min. periods.

Organ Recital

The series of Wednesday afternoon organ recitals, presented in Chapin Hall by Mr. Charles L. Safford, College Director of Music, will be resumed this Wednesday, January 16. Mr. Safford will announce the program at that time.

Professor R. D. Leigh Discusses Choice of Academic Career in Recent Article

'Variety of Opportunity Draws Graduate to College Teaching', Says
Dr. Leigh, 'But Isolation and Lack of Money Hinder Him'

The following article, published in the Journal of the National Education Association, was written by Dr. Robert D. Leigh, until last year Professor of Government at Williams, and now President of Bennington College, to give, as he says, "an indication of what one Williams professor thought of his job":

In popular literature and the movies the college professor persists as a type—a tired, absent-minded person dressed with a certain genteel shabbiness living in a "cozy, cultured retreat, sedulously built as a sanctuary where, secure with the culture of the past at his back, a fugitive from reality can view the present safely from a distance . . . ." The visitor to the faculty club of an urban university or the national convention of one of the many academic departmental organizations, however, would have difficulty in identifying members of the profession according to these specifications. With the variety of subjects now taught and the variety of institutions for higher education now in operation there are many different kinds of more or less academic occupations which are entered upon through the well-traveled road of graduate or professional work following the A.B. degree. Some of the more obvious possibilities are those of instructor of undergraduates in the small independent colleges in such subjects as literature, science, or history; the head of a large department in a thriving urban university whose work is that of an organization and management as much as classroom teaching; the professional teacher in an engineering, medical, or law school; the research professor whose teaching is limited to that of a few advanced graduate students; the special investigator lent to a governmental commission for consultative or administrative work; and the dean or other administrative officers in college or university.

This variety of opportunity associated with, or leading from, the college teaching career is important to emphasize because it allows the young member of the profession a very desirable latitude of eventual choice in determining the place where he can make the most of his particular talents. This he may do without retracing his steps to engage in a long and difficult second apprenticeship. The interest in research, for instance, may develop slowly after several years of teaching rather than appear at the outset of an academic career. So also ability and preference for college executive work may reveal itself in the course of a career rather than at its beginning. The records of members of college and university staffs show that there is usually a period of gradual rather than immediate adjustment to the type of activity into which the person finally settles.

Underneath all of this variety there seems to be a major attraction which draws people to the college teaching profession at

SALVEMINI LECTURES ON ITALY IN BALKANS

Noted Historian Studies Relations in East Preceding Outbreak of Great War

"All the nations of Europe were equally guilty in storing up the powder which burst into the Great War, but it was the Austrian and German governments which touched the lighted match to the powder train and brought about the great explosion of 1914," said Professor Gaetano Salvemini in addressing the third gathering of the Williams Forum in Jesup Hall last Sunday evening. Professor Salvemini, who is regarded as an authority on Italian history, formerly occupied chairs of Modern and Medieval History at three Italian universities, has lectured for several months at Oxford, and is now on a tour of American colleges and universities.

In developing the causes of the Great War, Professor Salvemini went back to the agreement signed by Austria and Italy in renewing the Triple Alliance in 1887, by which they pledged themselves to maintain the status quo in the Balkan peninsula and the Turkish shores of the Mediterranean and Adriatic Seas. They also agreed that, if one should gain any increase in influence, territorial or otherwise, the other should be entitled to compensation in like degree.

H. L. Foster Criticizes Present Rushing System; Suggests More Natural Dates and Later Pledging

(This article, written by H. L. Foster '28, is reprinted from the December issue of the Alumni Review).

The present system of rushing has been the object of constant criticism without any apparent constructive results. Remedies have been suggested but the remedies have met with harsher criticism than the system itself. One hardly dares to suggest that there might be some other plan than the present method of polite social warfare. Perhaps it is really inevitable that any organized, artificial code of social segregation is doomed to more or less failure. If so, then all we can hope for is to arrive at some workable scheme not too full of holes, not too hopelessly muddled.

There is no question about the fact that the present state of affairs has the advantage of having been tried and found at least workable. It has produced no unholy social errors, while a new experiment might result in disaster. But on the other hand there is the chance that a new idea might be more progressive, more in harmony with the newer social sophistication and social sensitiveness of the undergraduate.

What are the most blatant defects of the present rushing arrangement? It is highly artificial, both as to the men rushed and the rushers. No one is natural; and the gods play tricks on the unnatural. The whole business is a game of blind chance; and blind chance almost always ends in maladjustment. The present system is too concentrated, under too high pressure; it loses sight of the real purpose of any rushing at all. It herds together a group of bewildered freshmen, and then sends them around to a number of fraternity houses two or three times, for an hour at a time, and all during the period of one week. What chance has the freshman or the fraternity of making an intelligent choice? The whole business is under too high a pressure.

The rushing season also means practically a complete suspension of college work. The men are made to go to classes, but they are not prepared. They sit for an hour pretending interest in the work when their minds are pointing off in another direction, toward the fraternities they had visited last night and the ones they will visit tonight. It is all a "blossoming buzzing confusion" when no one works, feelings run high, jealousies are aroused, and social injustice is done.

When the smoke of battle is cleared, what a rout, what a victory! C'est magnifique mais ce n'est pas la guerre. Then the fraternity men settle down to find out slowly what their freshmen are

LET THERE BE LIGHT

The surest way of preventing Chapin Hall from becoming overcrowded is by eliminating from the programs presented there all traces of the serious, the aesthetic, and the educational. The obstinate indifference of students toward the sopranos and chamber-music artists which crop up from time to time under the wing of the Thompson Course has long supplied a text for undergraduate editorials and other forms of sermonizing. No one likes to believe that Williams men would really rather spend an hour with Ruth Draper than with the Flonzaley Quartet, but after some years of gentle experimenting it must be fairly obvious what kind of entertainment the College prefers.

It is no doubt the ideal object of the Thompson Course to be able to pack Chapin Hall by presenting good, but for the most part unexciting music; and yet last year—this was probably one of the experiments—it was not until the magician, Frederick E. Powell, came along that the student body showed much interest. It would take an even greater magician, or what we have long waited for, a great artist, to fill the Hall on a concert night. Those whose musical appreciation rarely soars beyond classical jazz do not bother themselves about names they never see in headlines.

In presenting last Saturday evening what was frankly little more than glorified vaudeville, the Thompson Course showed an exact knowledge of its public's tastes. The compact minority of music-lovers may have been somewhat disappointed in their one hope and support, but if there is to be an indictment, surely it will not land on those who brought this sudden burst of laughter to our gilded Hall. The director of the Thompson Course merely chose to please the many instead of the few for a change, and we think not unwisely. It does not mean that the ears of Williams men are hopelessly deaf to good music, but simply that the sort of music that the Thompson Course can afford to supply has not and never will appear very attractive to many of us who are still trying to be intelligent listeners.

If we thought that the Thompson Course meant definitely to omit from its programs the musical, our enthusiasm for "Recital Revues" might not be so hearty. But it must be quite evident that if there are to be musical attractions in Williams that really attract, a higher type of artist must be imported. A suggestion of a remedy was supplied earlier in the year by the Marine Band concert. This enterprise, offered as an experiment by a few students, showed at least that there is no special aversion in Williams to pay for music, if the music seems to be worth it. The Thompson Course should abandon its present not altogether attractive policy of giving free concerts, and adopt some system whereby a series of really fine artists might be maintained, in part by present appropriations and in part by student subscription. This would be an important step in making Williams a musical center in the Berkshires during the barren winter months, and would stimulate greater interest among the students for psychological reasons. We have a noteworthy example in Smith where subscription concerts are now in progress; and while there may be something of a difference between a woman's college of 2,000 and a man's college of 800, we should not let mere sex or size doom us forever to musical mediocrity. Some day, perhaps, our concerts may attract a few visitors from Northampton, as now theirs are attracting a few from Williamstown.

MAY THE BAND NOT DISBAND

Since the football season the Band has been conspicuous by its silence—one thing, obviously, which a band should never be. It is to be hoped that their virilant exhibition at the Amherst game was not too great a tax on youthful lungs, but surely by now even the bass horn must be fully revived. We see no reason, then, why basketball should not be served with the same martial music that went so well with football.

If the organization is to win sanction as an honorable college institution—toward which it was well on the way last fall—its outbursts must be more constant than a sophomore prom. Diligence in secret and muffled practice ceases to be a virtue when it takes the place of all public appearance. But if the Band is typical of other college organizations its greatest weakness lies in the aversion of its members to keep themselves organized. When art for art's sake fails to hold them together, they naturally look about for some other reward for their labors, and fearful, perhaps, that this will consist chiefly in jeers from the gallery, they bravely run away.

We wish we could convince our timid music-makers how false is this attitude. The College took the Band seriously as soon as it found the Band taking itself seriously. And those who blew the horns suffered no great loss of self-respect by affiliating themselves with an organization that was only just beginning to find a place in the exclusive company of campus activities. It remains for the members of the Band to determine whether or not the College shall continue to take them seriously. Most of us would very much regret to see this promising organization, established with such difficulty and not a little cost, suddenly lopped off the map through the laziness or false temerity of its own members.

THE BERKSHIRE CELLAR AGAIN

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

An article in the December Alumni Review entitled An Indictment reprints a Record article describing the discovery of valuable prints and pictures in Berkshire Hall, charges the College with "negligence in caring for material of this sort," and concludes by advocating "a period of old New England house-cleaning extending from attic to cellar."

Before the College has an opportunity to take its customary prompt action on this suggestion, I wish to state the case for the opposition. The dust-enshrined farrago of books, pictures, bric-a-brac, and manuscripts in many tongues both familiar and strange in the catacombs of Berkshire Hall has been known to explorative students for many generations. Countless thrilling hours have been spent amid this apparently inexhaustible treasure trove. A tradition has grown up which regards the collection as common property. Rival explorers have fiercely vied with each other in procuring valuable items. I remember a bitter warfare which was waged between two claimants to a set of Jowett's Plato in four volumes.

At any rate, Williams men have for years been able to take away from College valuable gifts from their Alma Mater,—freely given tokens of her generosity and bounty. And now this custom which has all the weight of a tradition is threatened with extinction. As an alumnus, I wish to warn the College against rashly depriving future generations of Williams men of an institution which has stimulated an interest in independent research, archaeology, and bibliography, and in general afforded her sons untold pleasure and profit in the past.

Fossil.

UNION PUCKMEN TO BE HERE TOMORROW

Garnet Will Open Season Against Strong Purple Sextet on Sage Hall Rink

In the first home game of its season and the second official contest on its schedule, the Williams hockey team, conquerors of the Army six last Saturday by a 10-0 score, will meet the Union College stickmen tomorrow afternoon at 4.00 p. m. on the Sage Hall rink. The strength of the visitors is not known, for they were forced to call off the first game of their season with Cornell last Saturday because of sickness of several members of the team, and it is even possible that the contest scheduled for tomorrow may be cancelled or postponed.

With the recovery of Hazzard and Schwartz from minor ailments, the Purple squad is in excellent physical condition, and is going through two days of practice on the Sage rink in preparation for tomorrow's game. The wealth of material this year is gratifying to Coach Bellerose, who favors the two-team system. Because of the emphasis he places on pass-work and team play, he is using two complete sextets alternately and keeping the line-ups of each the same so that the players may learn to work together. In the West Point game, the second varsity proved itself to be nearly as powerful as the first six, although the shorter time it was in the contest gave it little opportunity to score.

As Union College is located at Schenectady, the Garnet squad has taken advantage of the same favorable weather conditions as Williams. Practice started about December 15, under Coach Larabee and the team returned early from vacation for extra sessions. However, illness has struck the squad, so that any prediction as to the relative strengths of the two teams is impossible.

The Williams varsity will probably line up as follows: Hoyt, r.w.; Brigham, c.; Wheeler, lw.; Howe (Capt.), r.d.; Langmaid, l.d.; Watters, g.

Intramural Wrestling and Basketball Begin

Continuing the winter schedule of interfraternity athletics, the first contests in the basketball series were played yesterday and entries for the wrestling were closed. The first round elimination games in the basketball tournament will be completed before the mid-year examinations and the championship will be determined by a round robin series during February.

Due to the absence of Coach Bullock, the three-day wrestling tournament scheduled to begin yesterday was delayed until today and will continue through Thursday. Under the scoring system used, the winners of the first round matches each receive one point, the winners of the semi-finals two points, and the finals winners four points.

Freshman Cabinet To Meet

Meeting on Thursday evening, January 10, for the first time after the holidays, the Freshman Cabinet of the W. C. A. discussed the question, "What Is a Fair Income?" The meeting was led by H. A. Mark '32. At its meeting this Thursday, January 17, J. H. S. Lee '32 will lead the discussion group. The Cabinet officers are anxious to have more members of the organization present at that time.

FINANCIAL GAIN MADE IN FOOTBALL PROGRAM

1927 Season Deficit Turned to Net
Gain of 3264.85 in 1928,
Report Shows

According to Mr. E. Herbert Belsford, Graduate Treasurer, the report of the 1928 football season shows substantial savings in a number of items, reversing the actual deficit of last year. In 1927 the football program cost the undergraduates $1,343.21 while the net gain for 1928 is $1,264.85, the budget allowance of $2,000 being deducted in both statements. The height of football earnings is shown in 1925 when $12,000 was returned to the treasury. The decision against playing more than one game with the large university teams eliminated the chance of further large gains. This year Wesleyan received its largest check from Williams, while the Amherst game netted Williams about five thousand dollars.

Following is the balance sheet of the football season as submitted by the Athletic Council:

Pair of Mastodon Tusks To Be Added to Museum

Harking back to the days when Williams sent out student archaeological expeditions two mastodon tusks of unknown origin have been unearthed by Professor Cleland, Head of the Geology Department, in the basement of Clark Museum, where they have been resting ever since the building was constructed. A representative of the American Museum in New York will visit in Williamstown shortly to renovate these tusks and mount them for display in the College Museum.

The tusks, which are about ten feet in length and varying in diameter from eight inches at one end to a point at the other, are the eye teeth of some prehistoric elephant which roamed the mountains and valleys of Pennsylvania. In one of the show cases on the main floor of the museum there is a collection of mastodon bones probably from the same skeleton, and it is on this that Professor Cleland bases his guess that the bones were brought to Williamstown by a student expedition. They have lain there longer than the span of the oldest inhabitant's memory.

Handball Teams Begin Play in Second Round

With the championship match in the Interfraternity Handball Series scheduled for Tuesday, January 22, eight teams which have survived the elimination round have begun play in the Round Robin of the series. The team winning the championship on January 22 will be awarded 16 points toward the Intramural championship of the season, while the runner-up will score 11 points.

Playing the first matches in the Round Robin on Tuesday, January 8, Phi Delta Theta defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon by the score of 2-0, Zeta Psi defeated Chi Psi, 2-0, and Phi Gamma Delta defeated Delta Phi in a three game match by 2-1. On January 12, Commons Club scored over Beta Theta Pi, 2-0, and Phi Delta Theta won a second victory, 2-1, from Chi Psi, in a close match decided by the doubles. The following matches remain on the schedule:

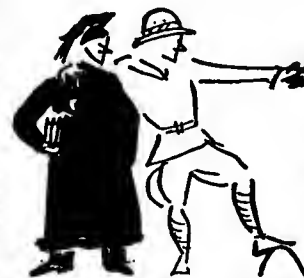

Jan. 14 Delta Kappa Epsilon vs. Zeta Psi.
Jan. 15 Phi Gamma Delta vs. Commons Club.
Delta Phi vs. Beta Theta Pi.
Jan. 17 Delta Kappa Epsilon vs. Chi Psi.
Phi Delta Theta vs. Zeta Psi.
Jan. 19 Phi Gamma Delta vs. Beta Theta Pi.
Delta Phi vs. Commons Club.
Jan. 22 Championship.

Skies with Commerce

THE air map of America is now in the making—on the ground.

Ten years ago, there were 218 miles of air mail routes with two station stops; to-day, a network of sky roads bridges the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Can you imagine this growth without electricity—without illuminated airports—without trunk lines studded with electric beacons?

Men of vision are building for increasing traffic of the air. Soon, the skies will be filled with commerce.

Just as electricity is helping to conquer the air, the land, and the sea to-day, so to-morrow it will lead to greater accomplishments in aviation and in every human activity.

A majority of the beacon lights used in airport and airway illumination have been designed and manufactured by the General Electric Company, whose specialists have the benefit of a generation's experience in the solution of lighting problems.

R. P. I. Defeats Purple Swimming Team, 41-30

close and interesting meet. Schott's time of 2:45 in the breast stroke was by far the best time in the meet, although the R. P. I. team did well in winning the medley relay, the 50, and the 100 in 3:39.6, 26.2, and 1:0.2 respectively.

In the first event, the R. P. I. medley team composed of White, Schmitzer, and Hughes, defeated easily the Purple team of Arscott, Noble, and Close, although Noble did well in the breast stroke division of the event and Close gained on Hughes in the freestyle division. Yaples of R. P. I. was barely able to touch out Higginbotham in the 50 in the good time of 26.2 while Toth of R. P. I. took third. The Purple scored a clean sweep in the distance event—the 440—when Burgess and Birnie took first and second places respectively, nearly lapping their one opponent who remained in the race.

The diving was very close with a difference of only ten points between the six entrants, in spite of the fact that the Williams divers were inexperienced and performed on a strange board. Conlon and Williams of R. P. I. won first and third respectively while Wheeler of Williams took second place. The backstroke was won easily by R. P. I.'s sterling swimmer, White, while Schott took a good second and VanderBogert beat out his opponent in the last lap for third. Yaples of R. P. I. won the 100-yard freestyle, while Higginbotham took a close second and Woleott third. Although he had swum a hard backstroke race barely five minutes before, Captain Schott beat out Schmitzer, R. P. I.'s excellent breast stroker, in the last 50 yards of the breast stroke event in the fine time of 2:45, while Kramer of R. P. I. took third. Schott was hard pushed and forced to turn in an excellent early-season time in order to win.

The last event of the meet—the 200-yard relay—which would give either team a victory was won by R. P. I. in the slow time of 1:49. The Engineers' team of Toth, Hughes, White, and Yaples defeated by a body's length the Williams quartet of Close, Burgess, Higginbotham, and Davis, and thus clinched the meet for R. P. I. by the score of 41 to 30.

A summary of the lineup and times is as follows:

300-yd. medley relay—Won by R. P. I. (White, Schmitzer, and Hughes); Williams (Arscott, Noble, and Close), second. Time: 3:39.6.

50-yd. freestyle—Won by Yaples (R. P. I.); Higginbotham (Williams), second; Toth (R. P. I.), third. Time: 26.2.

440-yd. freestyle—Won by Burgess (Williams); Birnie (Williams), second; Griffith (R. P. I.), third. Time: 6:43.2.

Dives—Won by Conlon (R. P. I.)—79.6 points; Wheeler (Williams), second—78.7 points; Williams (R. P. I.), third—73.9 points.

150-yd. backstroke—Won by White (R. P. I.); Schott (Williams), second; VanderBogert (Williams), third. Time: 1:58.

100-yd. freestyle—Won by Yaples (R. P. I.); Higginbotham (Williams), second; Woleott (Williams), third. Time: 1:0.2.

200-yd. breast stroke—Won by Schott (Williams); Schmitzer (R. P. I.), second; Kramer (R. P. I.), third. Time: 2:45.

200-yd. freestyle relay—Won by R. P. I. (Toth, Hughes, White, Yaples); Williams (Close, Burgess, Higginbotham, Davis), second. Time: 1:49.

APPALACHIAN HIKERS VISIT WILLIAMSTOWN

Members of Mountain Club Spend Vacation Making Walking Trips in Vicinity

Taking advantage of an invitation extended by the W. O. C. to make Williams town its headquarters during the Christmas holidays, one of the six divisions of the Appalachian Mountain Club, an organization composed chiefly of New York and Boston people, hiked over most of the trails in the Taconic region during a stay at the Williams Inn from December 28 to January 1.

The club was formed for the purpose of taking hikes in different parts of the United States, and the local contingent, many of whom had been here before when a division of the organization was in this region in 1926, was made up of 35 men and women. Unsuitable weather prevented the club from skiing and snowshoeing, but the skating was unusually good and offered a variation from walking trips. Other diversions were a dance on the evening of December 29 and a New Year's Eve party, both at the Inn.

Among the trails traversed were the one along the Taconic ridge, by way of Snow-Hole, Greylock, Pine Cobble, the Dome, Eph's Lookout, and a few other short trails. The group, which was under the leadership of Aubrey N. Shaw, of Brooklyn, included many Wellesley, Smith and Vassar girls, and all the members took advantage of their stay here to visit the College buildings. All hikes were made over trails cleared and recommended by the W. O. C., and many members took the W. O. C. booklet home to add to their libraries. They found the maps prepared by the local hikers to be a great help in their stay here, and the accuracy of the maps enabled them to hike without any difficulty.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATIONS HOLD ANNUAL DINNERS

Chicago Alumni Attend Banquet; Michigan Graduates Form Association

(The following is reprinted from the January 9th issue of the 1905 WILLIAMS RECORD.)

At the auditorium Friday evening, December 23, the Chicago Alumni held their annual banquet and reunion. At seven o'clock the banquet was served with covers laid for 48. President Henry Hopkins represented the college, and responded to the toast "Williams College". As toastmaster, Charles Gardner '64, president of the association, was in his happiest vein. After the invocation by Rev. B. S. Winchester '89, Mr. Gardner read a poem "The Vista of the Years". After President Hopkins had spoken, Franklin A. Rising '64 responded to the toast, "The Spirit of Old Williams". "The Williams Alumni", and "The Williams Undergraduates" were represented respectively by William H. Swift '63, and Richard S. Tuttle, Jr. '07. Extemporaneous toasts were given by H. R. Platt '87 and Rev. H. Miner '53. College songs were liberally interspersed throughout the banquet, Eddy '03 furnishing the accompaniment. The officers elected for next year follow: President, Henry W. Austin '88; first vice-president, Ira J. Geer '82; second vice-president, H. R. Platt '87; third vice-president, H. A. Towner, Jr. '92; secretary and treasurer, Harry B. Leonard '95; executive committee, chairman, S. S. Rogers '77, John C. Parsons '85, John P. Wilson, Jr. '00, O. D. Street '01; Wallace D. Rumsey '03. The president elect was empowered to appoint a committee whose special province it shall be to boom Williams throughout the middle West during the coming year.

Michigan Alumni Dinner

A very successful dinner, which resulted in the formation of the Williams Alumni Association of Michigan, took place at Detroit on the evening of December 22. The following officers were chosen: President, Rev. Henry Tatlock, '71; vice-president, Justin E. Emerson M.D. '65; secretary-treasurer, Ray Connor, M.D. '97. About thirty alumni were present, including President Hopkins and Rev. Thomas Wright '35, the oldest living graduate of the college. Dr. Hopkins, in answer to the toast "Alma Mater", told of the advantages of the smaller college as compared with those of the larger universities. "Williams", he said, "does not want to be a little university—it wants to be the best college in America". He went on to show how Williams was endeavoring to retain its ideals and to keep the disciplinary and culture studies well balanced.

General Henry M. Duffield '61, was toastmaster, and the other toasts were answered as follows: "Jolly Good Ale and Old", a song by Dr. E. B. Spalding; "Williams in Michigan", Dr. Justin E. Emerson '65; "What Williams has done for the Medical Profession", Dr. Charles A. Devendorf '59; "There'll Never Be One Like You", Dr. Spalding; "Williams of '81" Prof. Charles E. Barr '81.

ALUMNI NOTES

The dates of four Alumni Association meetings have been set recently, as follows: Philadelphia, February 1; New York City, February 8; Boston, February 15, and Chicago, March 15. Other meetings are being arranged and will be announced in the near future.

Last year the Alumni Secretary made an extensive trip to organize and stir up interest in the various associations on the western coast, while this year he is in especially close contact with the large eastern associations. Meetings in Detroit, Minneapolis, and Milwaukee have not yet been announced but will be held in March.

1928

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Smyth of New York City have announced the engagement of their daughter, Thelma, to Allen Hackett. The wedding will probably take place in September. Miss Smyth is a member of the senior class at Wellesley, and Mr. Hackett is a member of the entering class at the Union Seminary.

"It won its title"

PERHAPS you have read some of the New York Herald Tribune advertisements which have appeared in this newspaper recently. They have attempted to show you, in a simple, straightforward way, some of the reasons why the Herald Tribune is "New York's most interesting newspaper."

It won its title, not alone because of the Percy Hammonds and the Grantland Rices and the Claire Briggs, but because each department is manned by people who do their jobs fully as well as their more famous veteran associates. Because the entire staff writes clearly and accurately, in good taste and with a deft touch of humor here and there, Herald Tribune news stories blend perfectly with the feature articles and special columns to make the newspaper as complete as it is interesting.

We hope you have come to know the Herald Tribune by reading it. Only in that way can you understand exactly why it gained more new readers in 1928 than in any other year in its history.

Professor Leigh Discusses Choice of Academic Career

the outset and keeps them in it in one capacity or another—this is an intense interest in a field of knowledge or investigation. The first-rate teacher is one who combines such a permanent intellectual curiosity with a like interest in individual human beings. But the latter interest is one that may be satisfied by teaching youth of all ages rather than of the college age alone. The particular advantage of college and university career, therefore, would seem to be the opportunity offered for the life-long pursuit of the great truths which men in the modern world believe to be the reward of experiment, reading, and ratiocination. It will be granted that a high degree of competence as well as of interest, in the field of one's choice, is a prerequisite of the successful teacher. But fortunately a consuming interest and a considerable competence usually go hand in hand.

And so each year our colleges turn into our graduate schools and our graduate schools turn back to our colleges young men and young women who wish to make their own education a lifelong process. To such of these as combine with this desire an ability to understand youth there is offered the opportunity of a life of work which is at the same time full of durable satisfaction. It is a compliment, rather than a criticism of the occupation, therefore, to say that people enter it because they cannot keep out of it. The good fortune of him who finds in his occupation his recreation and delight need not be enlarged upon.

Assuming that no one who does not have a fundamental intellectual curiosity should enter college teaching, it is perhaps more important to indicate the drawbacks of the academic career. They are precisely those features of academic organization which present hindrances to the free and continuous opportunity to think, to write, to investigate, or to encourage these activities in others, which attract young people to the profession.

The first of these hindrances is the pecuniary one. Doctors' and grocers' bills have a way of invading the calm isolation of the scholar's study. We need to be definite about this matter. As the world's financial rewards go to the mass of men the college professor is not among those on the poverty level. But he and his family are almost invariably persons who insist on maintaining what Jessica Peixotto in her excellent study, Getting and Spending at the Professional Standard of Living, calls a professional standard of living. They desire especially a comfortable house, a car, the best of education for their children, and they yearn for weekends in the city at the theater and a long vacation for travel. According to this same excellent study, the average faculty salary, which averages three thousand dollars in our first class institutions, is insufficient for these family needs. As a consequence the hoped-for leisure and vacation periods are spent in odds and ends of remunerative work rather than for mental refreshment in reading and travel. Even with the addition by such means of about fifteen hundred dollars annually the income of the academic head of a family falls by about two thousand dollars a year to provide the kind of living which would give his family the rational comforts they desire and give him the freedom for continued intellectual growth which is part of the fundamental ambition which attracted him to his calling.

Since this pecuniary problem is probably duplicated throughout the entire teaching profession it need not be overstressed, but should be insisted upon as a very real although at the same time quite remediable defect in the career of college teaching. It does and should serve as a factor to be weighed by the person contemplating entering it. A young man and woman who are, either or both, consumed with the desire to live through in their own lives the modern American epic beginning with a bungalow and a Ford and moving up steadily or suddenly to a country estate and a Cadillac had better seek other means for the attainment of their ambition. I do not know how likely other callings are to offer them the medium for expressing such purposes but in any event if they lose directly the attainment of their goal they may always reach it vicariously and cheaply through the products of Hollywood. In academic life they would not only fail to attain such a goal but would also be at war with the standards and ideals which govern salaries, promotion, and the ways of academic living. They would be unhappy and often irritating members of the college community.

The second drawback to college teaching, especially in such fields of knowledge as the social sciences, is the isolation of the teacher from the main currents, the rapid movement, and what seem to be the realities of modern life. This drawback is much more serious in the rural college than in the great urban university. And it is not an insuperable obstacle in any case. It is probably true that the busy person engaged in non-academic intellectual activities—the newspaper journalist, for instance—feels as sharply the opposite need for drawing aside from the main stream of surface activity to ponder, to read, to reflect, and to order his thoughts at leisure. But I mention the drawback because it is something almost all college teachers feel at certain times if they are engaged in attempting to understand and to find meaning in the world in which we live. The young man who is impatient to be at the task of doing what he knows rather than of knowing what he is doing, who cannot sense the sure and ultimate power resulting from patiently and gradually pushing toward the truth, might better choose some other calling lest he find himself lonely or irritated rather than inspired by the slow and incalculable reward of his labors. There are many egotists teaching in colleges and universities. But it is no proper place for egotists. The teacher and investigator to be happy in his work must be of the type who obtains his satisfaction in other ways than by ostentatious recognition or immediate results.

The third drawback to college teaching many would deny is peculiar to this particular calling. It is jealousy and meanness of spirit. A strange paradox this, that those who are dedicating their lives to the great common quest of the true, the good, and the beautiful and in kindling in youth the spirit of that quest should in their practical community relations give way to bickering and meannesses more excusable in those whose minds and spirit have no other outlet. But there is an explanation for this. Accomplishment in teaching or scholarship is difficult to measure—as difficult as the comparative quality of soprano and tenor voices. Promotion is slow and is too often made for accidental or meretricious reasons. And upon promotion the whole family depends for its wellbeing. The college community moreover is like an army post where everyone knows everyone else's business—and income. As a result men and women of splendid qualities living in a community with unique possibilities of unusually decent human relations and cooperative endeavor sometimes behave toward each other like adolescents. Nothing is so discouraging to the young instructor with high hopes for a life of plain living and high thinking as his first encounter with this all too human frailty of the academic community. His discouragement is matched only by the greater disillusionment of his wife. The real scholar and teacher will develop a philosophy and personality which will overcome this unfavorable aspect of the environment. And at many places and times decent, generous, and cooperative group relations are built up and maintained for long periods. But unless a young man and woman possess enough self respect and serenity to rise above the gossip level of a small town they are likely to find in the life of a rural college teacher disappointment and a conflict with their essential ambitions.

College instructors, therefore, must be persons of substantial qualities of character both to succeed in their calling and to find permanent satisfaction in it. They must have a whole-hearted, enthusiastic devotion to a field of knowledge or investigation, they must have a preference for modest comfort rather than for the high hazards of economic gain or loss, they must have patience and perseverance, and they must possess that essential decency which naturally avoids mean competition, unfairness, intolerance, and self-seeking. To men and women with these high qualities the academic life offers rich rewards. There is (at least in our better institutions) a lifelong opportunity for freely ranging, consecutive thought and for the constantly refreshing association with youth. In its highest places, such as those occupied by the great spirits who instruct and lead a generation of graduate students and thus as teachers of teachers quietly influence the thought of a generation or a nation and for those other even more unobtrusive men and women who gradually build up a precious and intimate prestige in our smaller colleges, there are rewards which come from the sense of having exercised a real and lasting power and of having obtained a tangible immortality.

and it was this second provision which produced the constant bickering that resulted in the outbreak between the Allies.

In 1911, Italy went to war with the Turkish Empire, hoping to gain control of Tripoli and Cyrenaica, but abandoned its attempt as a result of the Austrian protest that such action was in violation of the agreement of 1887. Two years later, Austria, outraged by Serbian support of Pan-Slav propaganda, declared war on Serbia, and sought the support of her allies. Italy claimed that Austria was violating the treaty by occupying territory without her consent, and refused to take any action. Germany feared at that time that Roumania might desert her allies and side with Serbia, and therefore forced Austria to give up her attack.

In the following year, 1914, Austria

again found cause for war with Serbia, and Germany, now feeling sure of Roumanian friendship, supported her demands and asked Italian entry also. Italy, remembering that her allies had refused to support her in Egypt several years previous on the ground that "communal interests" were not involved, returned the same reply now. She did, however, declare herself a "benevolent neutral", in accordance with the terms of the Triple Alliance. Professor Salvemini paused here to point out that Italy should have taken this occasion to protest Austrian occupation of Serbia without consent and to declare the treaty void. Her failure to do so involved succeeding Italian ministries in a predicament from which they had "great difficulty in extricating themselves with honor".

England's entrance into the war on the side of France and Russia made Italian support invaluable to the Central Powers, and Germany forced Austria to make conciliatory offers, promising that she would help Austria regain any concessions that might need to be made to Italy. Negotiations were begun for active military aid, but Austria's unwillingness to make any concessions prevented their successful conclusion. Italy began to doubt the success of the Central Powers and undertook negotiations for an alliance with the Entente. This alliance was actually concluded three weeks before the termination of the Triple Alliance, and was cited by Professor Salvemini as definite evidence of Italy's bad faith with her allies. He went on, however, to justify her action by the previous faults of the other signatories, and pointed out that blame for the treacherous termination of the Triple Alliance must rest equally upon all three of the contracting powers. On May 3, 1915, Italy announced her withdrawal from the alliance with Germany and Austria, and three weeks after that she cast her lot with the Entente and declared war against her former allies.

travels of Americans in Europe "with stops at Milan, Florence, and three days in Paris". Mr. Lockhart delivered Professor Zacariah Higginsbotham's lecture to the Business Men's Club on "The Larger Life" wherein, the Professor stated, were to be found "bigger men and broader women". After Gene Lockhart gave "The Politician", a farce in pantomime, and discussed the production of a musical comedy, Mr. and Mrs. Lockhart offered "Europe at a Gulp" or "Why Men Want to Camp in the Maine Woods."

At a time when the theatrical world would like to reduce road companies to a personnel of one, at a time when motion picture companies would like to reduce them to a personnel of none, Gene Lockhart conceived the original idea of his "Company of Two". The result has been that the Lockharts have been synonymous with an evening of entertaining melodies, pleasing humor, and delightful sketches.

COLLEGE AIR CLUBS PRAISED AT MEETING

Importance of College Education in Aviation Is Stressed at Conference

Senator Hiram Bingham, President of the National Aeronautical Society, and Harry D. Copeland, communications officer of the air corps of the Connecticut National Guard, urged delegates to the first intercollegiate aviation conference, held recently at New Haven, not to try to sponsor college air races; but both men favored strongly an intercollegiate aviation association, and declared that the aviation authorities of the future will be recruited from the college student of today. "College air clubs can make college men air-minded, they can give the faculty and their parents an education of what is meant by safety in the air, they can study ground school matters, and do valuable research work", stated Captain Copeland in his appeal.

Walter Hinton, head of the aero club ground school, and transatlantic flier, told the delegates that training methods are now standardized the world over, and casualties reduced to a minimum; that students have learned that they must not take too many liberties with gravity; that a delicate coordination of mind and body are essential in ground school teaching and that the college air club, with a nearby flying field, offers the best opportunities for learning the problems of aviation. "Actual piloting is only five per cent of a pilot's duties", said Mr. Hinton; "he must be the captain of his ship and the doctor of his machine, and he must know the theory and the practice of all branches of aviation."

In respect to safety in modern flying Captain Copeland stated: "Aerial transportation is as safe as transportation by water. It is no more dangerous to go from New York to Boston by air than by water. Travel by water is perfectly safe; but it is suicide for a man to start from New York in January in a canoe for Boston. If you take the proper aeroplane, properly licensed and manned, it is safer than trying to walk through New York City. Safety in the air is a purely relative term, just as safety in the water."

The gist of Captain Copeland's remarks were that the college man in aviation is a practical necessity, and the sooner he becomes a student of aviation the better; that there is a lack of understanding among college authorities as to the program, but it would be unfortunate if the college man of the future could not be kept in the forefront of aviation. College men need the mental training of such problems and aviation needs the brains of the college men. He also stated that it is easier to instruct college men than men without their training, and that college aeronautic clubs in the future will represent a definite part of aviation.

H. L. Foster Criticizes Present Rushing System (Continued from First Page)

really like; and the freshmen who have been chosen strut a while until the novelty wears off. The freshmen who have been left out smile stoically, finding justification for themselves, and secretly wondering what's wrong with themselves. It is a distressing picture full of real brutality and injustice; but the answer to any question concerning it is always evasive. It is said, "Well, the fraternities are an important part of our social organization, the most important in fact. We have got to make selections somehow. We have to be arbitrary, but surely no more arbitrary than any other social selection, which is often based on less worthy distinctions than our fraternity standards."

True, but the unfortunate thing about the whole situation is that the sensitive, unassuming ones are the men who have to suffer instead of those who would go through it without any lasting harm. The freshmen with the ready laugh, the nimble tongue, the happy disposition, and a love of sport make the good impression and get themselves taken into the fraternities. The men who feel most keenly about social distinctions are those who are forced to suffer them.

No matter how many letters are published in THE RECORD to the contrary, this is not a particularly democratic arrangement, if democracy means social equality. If the process of selecting men means anything at all, it means a definite differentiation. It gives the stamp of approval to the men taken into the fraternities, and by inference puts a contrary seal on the rest of the men. And all the statements to the contrary are made merely as sops to wounded feelings.

If we admit this, then what is to be done about it? We can attempt to make the Commons Club take the place of the fraternities, but that is a process of slow growth and without a change in the rushing method, almost impossible.

There has been suggested recently a change in the mechanics of the present rushing system, which would be of benefit in removing one of the evils, but not the worst. It proposes that the first week of college shall be set aside as a freshman week, in which all rushing shall be gotten through with before the beginning of classes. This has been suggested from the point of view of the damage to studies under the present system and as such is a wise move. But on the other hand it appears to us that any such shift would aggravate the real problem. It would put greater stress on that very element in the situation which we wish to improve. It emphasizes the importance of the social selection by putting aside a whole week at the disposal of the fraternities, and at the time in the year when it will create the most unfortunate results, before the freshmen have really found themselves. It seems to mean that the college would open a week before classes begin, to make the freshmen first, either fraternity men or outcasts, and secondly, to make them students.

It seems to us that if this process could be just reversed, the results would be far better. Without attempting to work out the plan in detail, we propose that a more leisurely rushing arrangement would be less damaging to studies. It would relieve the over-emphasis on the immediate social segregation, and would tend to make the Commons Club group a more genial, self-assured social unit. The arrangement would require careful study but some such system seems plausible.

It might be arranged that a date be set some time just after the Christmas holidays, before which no man could be pledged. Prior to this time, throughout the term invitations could be sent to the freshmen to the number of not more than ten freshmen a week for each house. This would tend to the rushing business a more leisurely tone, more like a real social program than an open warfare. If the fraternities are to furnish a means for natural social intercourse among intelligent men, it appears to us that they defeat their aim if they start the year by being essentially unsocial, by becoming a group of competitive bidders. They polish and decorate themselves beyond all recognition, making capital of anything which might lure unsuspecting freshmen. Can't we adopt a more tolerant, friendly system, under which freshmen will finally find themselves among congenial people?

To suggest a more leisurely, more civilized system of rushing, may be to assume a more orderly, tolerant group of students than we actually have—but the only way to make them so is to assume that they are.

SEXTET RALLIES TO WIN, 5-1, OVER UNION

Superior Passwork Shows Way to Garnet Team as Brigham Scores Three

Four goals in a little over four minutes late in the afternoon gave to Williams the hockey game which for two periods had remained in balance while the Purple battled with the Union sextet last Wednesday afternoon on the Sage Hall rink. After a period of listless play, the Williams team unleashed the keen passing attack which in the third frame culminated in the winning rally, and it was this team-play, always stressed by Coach Bellerose, that aided Brigham in scoring three times and kept Foster, the Union goalie, busy all afternoon, while the brilliant solo rushes of the Garnet stars rarely got through the Purple defense.

The first period found the Williams team weak on the offense and barely able to break up the powerful dribbling attack of J. and R. Beale. Watters, in the home goal, made some fine stops, and Captain Howe was effective on the defense. The second line, consisting of Ballou, G. Nye, and Gross, was substituted at about eleven minutes, but were no more successful than the first in crystalizing the attack.

It was a different team that took the ice for Williams in the second frame,—different, that is, in style of play. With much improved passwork, Brigham, Howe, and Hoyt led an attack that smothered the Union goal for the first five minutes, and Foster did excellent work to prevent a score. Matching the new pace, Union countered as J. Beale and Hensafelt took the puck within scoring distance. Then Hoyt barely missed two chances from the mêlée, which found Foster on his knees 10 feet from the cage. However, a minute later Brigham scored with a strong shot after a pass from Howe. The play was rough during most of the period, and after the first tally became more so. Hensafelt received the only penalty of the game, being sent off the ice for two minutes. At 12 minutes, Union again put the contest on an even basis when J. Beale scored, after Watters had successfully stopped several tries.

The third period showed that the Williams attack was still on the rise, as Hazzard (Continued on Fourth Page)

PROF. MILHAM GIVES ASTRONOMY LECTURE

Magnitude, Numbers, and Distance of Stars in 'Our Universe' Are Outlined

"Light coming to us from the Pleiades tonight, though travelling almost 200,000 miles per second, left that cluster when the Pilgrims reached Massachusetts," declared Professor Milham, head of the Astronomy Department, in his talk "This Universe of Ours", given in the Physics Laboratory last Tuesday afternoon. This lecture, which opened the annual Tuesday Lecture Course, outlined the relation of the various heavenly bodies to our solar system and estimated the size and shape of the universe.

"The sidereal universe consists of many galaxies or 'portions', continued Professor Milham, "each one containing the neighborhood of thirty billion stars and other celestial objects. The sun is only an average star, nothing to be surprised, proud, or ashamed of, since there are many like it though not an infinite number as many people believe". Our portion of the universe was likened to a discus, a cross section of which would have a long axis of 50,000 light years.

For the last part of the talk the lecturer took the audience on a trip around the universe, pointing out interesting planets, asteroids, and satellites. He showed them stars and star clusters some of which were as large as our own solar system. One of the most remarkable sights was one of the greenish, spiral nebulae, which are thought to be clouds of gas consisting of nitrogen and some unknown element. After expounding the "Einstein Theory" a little, and stating that the hypothesis was correct in that velocity in three space elements is not the product of space and time but merely the time element, Professor Milham brought his listeners back to earth, a distance of 300,000 light years in five minutes.

Freshman Five to Oppose St. Joseph's of Pittsfield

Meeting St. Joseph's School of Pittsfield in a game preliminary to the Varsity contest with Lafayette this evening in Lasell Gymnasium, the Freshman five will encounter its hardest opposition so far this season. Their opponents, who won the Catholic Schools of Western Massachusetts Tournament in 1927 and were runners-up in the same event last year, have captured five out of their first eight games in a very hard schedule.

The fact that they have scored two decisive victories over the Dalton High School, one of the strongest teams in the local high school league, by scores of 33 to 12 and 28 to 14, gives proof of the strength of the St. Joseph's quintet. In Captain Dunn at center, the visitors boast one of (Continued on Third Page)

MME. HALIDE EDIB TO SPEAK BEFORE 'FORUM'

Noted Exponent of Liberal Reform To Explain Feminism in Its Turkish Aspect

Characterized alternately as the "Turkish Joan of Arc" or the "Jane Addams of Turkey", and noted as having been the first Turkish woman to receive a B.A. degree at the American College for Girls in Constantinople and as the first to appear unveiled on the streets, as a popular novelist, as an Amazon-sergeant among the fighting men of Kemal Pasha in the drive against the Greeks, as organizer of the first Turkish Ministry of Education, and as the leading feminist of the East, Mme. Halide Edib (Hannu) comes to Williams this Sunday to address the Forum at 7.30 p. m. in Jesup Hall on the subject: "Development of the Feminist Movement in Turkey". It will not be the first time that Mme. Edib has visited Williamstown, since she had the honor last summer of being the first of her sex to speak before the Institute of Politics.

The early contact with Western ideas which was afforded Mme. Edib by her attendance at the American College is mainly responsible for the appreciation of social liberties which, translated into action, has won for her a place of high distinction in the ranks of the servants of humanity and, particularly, of her sex. Mme. Edib has been mentioned by Charles R. Crane, former minister to China, as "the most brilliant woman in Asia."

Although active as a supporter of the constructive principles of the Young Turk movement after 1908, and instrumental in establishing the Turkish Republic as a leader of the Nationalist movement, Mme. Edib has been in voluntary exile in London since 1924, due to being out of sympathy with the dictatorship of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, which does not consider the Islamic conception of law in its legislation. The season 1928-1929 will constitute her first lecture tour in America.

Freshmen Will Discuss Honor System in Class

In order to afford the members of the Freshman class a thorough understanding of the working of the Honors System at Williams and a realization of the responsibilities accompanying it, all classes in Freshman public speaking will, within the next few weeks, devote an hour to the discussion of that subject. It is the feeling of the Honor System Committee that freshmen should have more than a hazy conception of this system which has been in use at Williams for more than thirty years and which depends for its continued successful functioning on the understanding of all undergraduates.

'Verein' To Reorganize

In order to further the interest of those who desire to acquaint themselves better with the German language, it was decided, after two successful informal social gatherings had taken place at Professor Lessing's home last fall, to reorganize the Deutscher Verein. At a meeting held last Wednesday for those interested in the organization, McAneny '30 was elected president and L. R. Thun vice-president.

LAFAYETTE FIVE WILL FACE PURPLE TONIGHT

Coach Messer Anticipates Victory With All Regulars Returned to Positions

Strengthened materially by the return of two veterans to the line-up, the Varsity basketball team will attempt to check its losing streak when it plays its sixth game of the season tonight against Lafayette in the Lasell Gymnasium at 8 p. m. Cuddeback, who has not played since the Columbia game, has recovered from the influenza and will be able to resume his guard position, while Alexander, whose work in the Columbia game was outstanding, is also expected to start beside Cuddeback.

Coach Messer is optimistic, and feels that the team has returned to the early-season form which characterized its play against Clark, R. P. I. and Brown. The practice sessions during the past week have shown a considerable improvement over those when the team was handicapped by illness, and the team-work that was evident before the Christmas recess has again manifested itself to make the quintet a dangerous foe.

Lafayette won her first game against Upsilon, 39 to 26, but the next encounter, with Johns Hopkins, was lost by a 31 to 25 score. The only severe setback of the season has been against Georgetown, who ran up a 37-24 score, largely in the second half. Ursinus defeated the Pennsylvanians in the last few minutes, 30 to 27, and Lafayette in her next game defeated Seton Hall by the same three-point margin, 21 to 18. In her last game before a tough schedule this week, Lafayette bowed to N. Y. U., 29 to 25.

A factor in favor of the Purple is Lafayette's schedule this week. The game (Continued on Third Page)

DR. NOEHREN ADVISES VIGILANCE AFTER FLU

Infirmary Cases Have Responded Well to Treatment; Warns Against Colds

(The following article was written by Dr. A. G. Noehren, College Health Officer, concerning the recent influenza epidemic and its consequences.)

COLD PREVENTION
Though too early to predict that all danger of an influenza epidemic in the College is over, the fact that all high temperature cases so far treated at the Infirmary have responded favorably and quickly to hospital treatment with only a single case of lung involvement, is reassuring. Students are warned however, not to relax vigilance and to adopt a sane middle course between extreme Spartanism on the one hand and excessive coddling on the other. In addition to the severer forms of grippé, there is evidence of a milder, but nevertheless infectious, cold among some students which, if accompanied by sore throat and fever is best treated by absolute rest in bed. The extreme "collegiate" custom of going about hatless and with feet insufficiently protected from the cold and damp may be commendable during mild weather, but is positively dangerous in zero weather with snow on the ground. Two important preventive measures are first, to keep the digestive tract clean and secondly to gargle twice or thrice a day with a mild alkaline solution such as warm salt water.

There is a tendency among another group of students to be unduly frightened and whose reaction is to wrap themselves in cotton wool in a warm, insufficiently (Continued on Fourth Page)

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS MEET N. Y. U. SATURDAY

Team Seeks To Avenge Defeat by Engineers After Week of Severe Practice

Opening the season for the visitors, the varsity swimming team hopes to outscore the New York University matadors Saturday afternoon at 4.30, taking revenge both for their defeat at the hands of R. P. I. last week and also for the New York victory over the Purple last year. Several changes have been made in the lineup of the Williams combination since its opening meet, and although Healy is still out with a cold and Burgess has received an injury which will keep him from the pool for two weeks, strenuous workouts during the past few days have put the team in better shape than it was for the opening encounter.

Captain Schott, who can be counted upon for a sure win in the breast stroke event although Nisselson of N. Y. U. does good time, will also swim the backstroke. His partner in the dorsal race will be VanderBogert or Birnie, while Gregg, last year's Freshman breast stroker who is doing well on the varsity squad, will swim second man in the breast stroke. Birnie, who has swum the distance event with Burgess this season, will swim the 440, and Close, a dash man who is being tried out in the distance race, will swim with him. Higginbotham is to swim both dashes, with Doughty, who has returned to the team after illness, in the 50, and either Birnie, Close, Doughty, or Wolcott in the 100. The 300-yard medley relay team will be the same as last week—Arscott, Noble, and Wolcott. The Williams entries in the dives will be chosen from Niebling, Shaw, and Wheeler, while the 200-yd. medley relay team will be composed of Higginbotham, Davis, Doughty, and either Birnie, Close, or Wolcott.

As this is the first meet for the visitors, their strength is difficult to determine. However, Nisselson, breast stroker of the undefeated N. Y. U. team last season, remains in the line-up, and Barrere, who defeated Captain Butcher last year, will swim the distance event. Captain Zoble (Continued on Third Page)

Taylor and Rawlins Take Lead in Prince Cup Meet

As a result of wins in the first two events of the Prince Meet run off last Wednesday and Thursday, Rawlins and D. H. Taylor are tied for the lead with five points each, while Swayze with two third places is one point behind and Swift and Sidley are tied for third with three points each. The trial heats for the 50-yard dash have been held and it is expected that the remaining events will be completed by Monday.

In the opening event, the 225-yard medley, D. H. Taylor took a close race from Swift with the time of 3 min. 32 sec. while Swayze and McMahon placed third and fourth respectively. Rawlins won the 200-yard breast stroke in the excellent time of 3 min. 1 sec. followed by Sidley, Swayze, and Pierce. Finals in the 50-yard dash and the backstroke were held Friday.

PURPLE SIX TO MEET AMHERST AGAIN TODAY

After Losing Placid Series, Sabrina Will Renew Hockey Rivalry On Sage Rink

With the memory of defeat in their hearts, the hockey players from Amherst will come across the mountains today to seek retribution from the Purple sextet on the Sage Hall rink at 2.30 p. m. Two weeks ago at Lake Placid, the Williams skaters won the final contest of a three-game exhibition series with Amherst, 4-1, after taking the first, 5-3, and dropping the second, 1-2, and this afternoon, in the first official struggle between the two institutions which will count one point in the Trophy of Trophies race, practically the same line-ups will face each other again.

In point of preparation, the advantage lies with Williams. Besides eight practice sessions the Purple sextet has engaged in two official contests since returning from Lake Placid. Although West Point in the first offered little opposition, losing 10-0, the sextet from Union gave the Williams puckmen a real test last Wednesday, and they had to call forth their true strength to win. On the other hand, the Sabrinas came to Williamstown to play their opening game. The first contest on their schedule, with Middlebury, was cancelled because of poor weather conditions, and their play so far has consisted only of practice sessions.

Captain Parnall at right defense, and Felt at right wing will probably be outstanding performers for the visitors today. The former did a good deal of the scoring for Amherst in the Christmas series, while the latter will be remembered as a football player last fall who, after a brilliant season on the Sabrina team, was placed at right end on the All-New England eleven. The Williams line-up will probably be the same as that which crushed Union last Wednesday with a strong rally in the third period, except that Langmaid may replace Hazzard at right defense.

The following are slated to face each other this afternoon:

WILLIAMS		AMHERST
Wheeler	r.w.	Felt
Brigham	c.	Nichols
Hoyt	l.w.	Patrik
Howe (Capt.)	r.d.	Parnall
Hazzard or Langmaid	l.d.	Perry
Watters	g.	Hanson

WESTON ANNOUNCES NEW ART EXHIBITION

Paintings by John Lillie, Untaught Vermont Carpenter, Hung In Lawrence Hall

Continuing the series of special exhibitions sponsored by the Department of Art, Professor K. E. Weston has announced a showing of twenty paintings by John Lillie of Dorset, Vermont, which will be hung in Lawrence Hall until February 10. Lillie's work is particularly interesting because he was trained as a carpenter, mason, and plumber, in which vocations he was in great demand, and his talent was only revealed when he produced a landscape, using ordinary house paints, which astounded the little group of artists staying with him, by the mature ability displayed in it.

His gift was cautiously aided in its development by the painters who went on sketching trips with him, and he accumulated a little stock of landscapes, which clearly showed the great knowledge and appreciation of artistic values he possessed although he was utterly untrained in the traditions and theories of painting. The following winter he visited New York for the first time and displayed further evidence of the extent of his talent in his ability to unerringly point out the best picture on the wall in a gallery, and to give his reasons for his choice.

Writing about Mr. Lillie in The Outlook, Zephine Humphrey says: "Utterly untrained in the traditions and theories of painting, he suddenly, without any effort, painted landscapes as if he had spent his life doing nothing else. All the pictures had mystery and imagination. They were amazing productions on the part of a countryman whose only training had lain along the precise and accurate lines of carpentry. Like John Keats, like Walt (Continued on Third Page)

THE TRUTH ABOUT TROUSERS

A questionnaire, devised by the dean of George Washington University, for the ambitious purpose of ascertaining "the real status of the so-called 'collegiate' in American college life" has found its way to our office. The half dozen questions are so worded that they set up a sort of rhythmic antithesis between a most obnoxious type of flamboyant person and a negative well-dressed window dummy. Should the four hundred deans to whom these questions have been sent find time to write out their answers, we still cannot see what would be discovered, unless it is, what everyone must know by now, that popular movie conceptions of college men are greatly exaggerated.

The fact is that "collegiatism" is not, as this questionnaire seems to imply, so much a manner of getting dressed as it is a state of mind or attitude. So-called faultless attire may represent the acme of metropolitan fashion, but unless the well-dressed man keeps in tune with his surroundings he runs the danger of becoming over-dressed and therefore quite ridiculous. For instance, corduroys in themselves are neither collegiate nor gauche; and in Williamstown, on the proper legs, they can be conventional, conservative and appropriate. And so when they ask, "Is neatness of appearance, as evidenced by clean shaving, well-shined shoes, starched linen, appropriate neckties of neat appearance, and well-pressed suits of clothing, typical of your student body?"—the honest answer must be no. This is not typical, because it is not typical of the student body to be dressed up, though it can be as doggy as Princeton when it wants to be. During the workaday week a glance at the contents of any classroom is sure to show that sloppiness is at least half the charm of the modern undergraduate. One finds plenty of faces that need shaving, shoes that need shining, necks that need neckties, and pants (to make the description realistic) that need pressing. And yet the total impression is not altogether unpleasing, for it blends nicely with a landscape of rugged mountains. To call a man collegiate merely because he hates garters is unfair. On the contrary, the real collegiate is more often the one who consciously strives to mix the New York manner with Williamstown scenery, for he sins against propriety. After all, the luxury of sloppiness is too universal in its popularity to be the peculiar characteristic of any one type, such as the collegiate or the hobo.

The conventional, indeed, is not necessarily of Arrow Collar neatness. It is quite conventional, for example, for members of our remote mountain colleges to sport a stubble or forget a necktie. This is not done for collegiate effect: it is merely the sensible way of living in the country and of bringing about mental and physical acclimation with the least amount of pain and discomfort.

If the curious would know whether we are collegiate, let them examine our brains, not our shoes. Clothes don't make the man—collegiate or anything else. They indicate his tastes, perhaps, and for advanced students in psychology they may even reflect his true self, but when it comes to academic questions of "collegiatism" we must make a closer study. We must hear the boys talk, see how they amuse themselves and how they busy themselves; feel out their attitude toward servants, toward women, toward books, toward God, toward art and literature and science—in short, toward life. Only then can it be said whether or not most American undergraduates are prostituting their association with college by being collegiate. Let this penetrating examination be made, and we are confident the results will show the species to be dying out; especially in the Eastern institutions where a far more genuine product comes out of the campus.

THE ROUND TABLE

The Round Table has come to the conclusion that the religious element in our four years of more or less collegiate residence has been too lightly passed over. This weighty recommendation is proposed at an opportune moment, for our sister companion, the editorial column, has brought forward to our attention no especially vital question during the last few weeks, to be mulled over and decided upon with a great deal of excitement. To offset this grievous fault we have propounded an important proposal from our fertile imagination. We seriously advocate two chapel services per diem for six diems of the week, and on the seventh diem, ten consecutive hours of enforced aesthetic appreciation of the spiritual in life, except for time out for water, of course, and other urgent needs. Will the thinking few co-operate with us? Come one and all of you into our little "room under the eaves", where the first "get-together" will be held. An interesting program is promised, with the first three hours being spent in silent meditation to prepare those present for the serious thinking to follow. Bibles and free water will be supplied to all.

A Nocturnal Ditty

Silent footsteps fall
In Jesup Hall
And, under cover of the night,
Twelve men creep in so very light
They make no sound at all.
In single file
Without a smile
Each face beshrouded in deep gloom,
They crawl into their meeting room
To whisper for a while.

The red-haired Clark,
When lights are dark,
Marshals his men without a sound,
And teaches them how to creep around,
For this be not a lark.

They meditate
In somber state
Of facts beyond our ken
And finally sink out again,
When it has grown quite late.

These are the student Council, who
Engage in meetings starless nights,
And after hours 'neath lowered lights
Announce petitions due.

Concerning the game, Coach Messer says, "I am confident of a victory, as we will have our full strength on the floor for the first time since the Columbia game. The spirit and cooperation shown in practice this week indicate that Williams will play an inspired game against Lafayette."

The starting lineups are as follows:

will doubtless do well in the dives, while Alders does fast time in the backstroke. The other men on the team are for the most part new to varsity meets. In consideration of the apparent power of the N. Y. U. team, the meet promises to be close, probably depending again on the 200-yard relay race.

A tentative line-up for the two teams is as follows:

300-yd. medley—Williams: Arscott, Noble, Wolcott; N. Y. U.: Nathan, Cohen, Moness.

50-yd. freestyle—Williams: Higginbotham, Doughty; N. Y. U.: Meyers, Frazer.

440-yd. freestyle—Williams: Birnie, Close; N. Y. U.: Barrere, Cohen.

150-yd. backstroke—Williams: Schott, VanderBogert, Birnie; N. Y. U.: Alders, Cohen.

200-yd. breast stroke—Williams: Schott, Healy, Gregg; N. Y. U.: Nisselson, Nathan.

Intramural Athletics in Three Sports Progress

Friday, January 18—Intramural athletic activities have continued throughout the week in three sports, basketball, wrestling, and handball. In the opening games of the basketball series, Delta Upsilon and the Commons Club emerged victorious, only one match was played off in handball, while the final matches in wrestling will be run off today.

Delta Upsilon had no trouble in winning its first basketball game, submerging Kappa Alpha under a barrage of goals, 52-24. Williams was the outstanding player for the winners. The Commons Club also had an easy time defeating Delta Phi, 22-6, as Kazan led a formidable attack for the victors. In the only handball match played off since Monday, the Commons Club won from Phi Gamma Delta, 2-1.

The interfraternity wrestling tournament was started on Wednesday, all matches taking place within three days. Up to Thursday night, all bouts except one had reached the third round, and because of the fewer entrants in the 115-lb., 175-lb. and unlimited classes, this was also the final round. The candidates which survived are as follows: 115-lb. class—Hess and McClure; 125-lb. class—Miller, Newman, Wadsworth and Spencer; 135-lb. class—Reynolds, Strong, Froeb, and Baylis; 145-lb. class—Shoaff, Johnston, Meikeljohn, Sparks, and Neilson; 155-lb. class—Goodbody, Hebard, Baldwin, Ripley; 165-lb. class—Fowle, Baxter, Warren, and Chase; 175-lb. class—Gardner and Carroll; and the unlimited class—Hulse and Tuttle.

the leading scorers of their league, with an average of over nine points a game. St. Joseph's starting line-up will be: Flynn, l.f.; Wise or Grady, r.f.; Dunn (Capt.), c.; Fox, l.g.; Haughy, r.g.

The freshmen have shown up extremely well in practice this week, outscoring the crippled Varsity in their only scrimmage, which took place Wednesday afternoon. They have had little trouble in winning their two unofficial practice games with local high schools, defeating Williamstown 26 to 17 and Adams 26 to 13. The line-up will be the same as that which has started the other games of the season with Captain Good and Engel at the forwards, Fowle at center, and Cosgrove and Swinehart at the guards.

29 Try for 'Record'

Beginning with this issue, 29 members of the Class of 1932 are trying out for the two, and possible three, positions offered in the first Record competition for freshmen. This competition, the first of three, will last for eight weeks. The following are entered:

Bayless, Bush, Chandler, Downer, Forbes, Foster, Gordon, Green, Hamilton, Haynes, Herriek, Hurst, Hyde, Johnson, Mark, Mason, Miller, Otto, Peters, Potter, Roy, Sargent, Sellery, Shepard, Thornton, Turner, Walter, West and Wick '32.

Sextet Rallies to Win, 5-1, Over Union

zard and Howe opened with a brilliant advance. Then, at about 10 minutes, the storm broke. Brigham, aided by Wheeler, shot the disk into the net from about twenty feet, and a moment later, tallied again from closer range. As darkness came on, the Union team seemed to lose their defensive power, which so far had been their mainstay, and Hazzard, working with Howe, caged another. This was closely followed by Hoyt who pushed the puck through from a mée. Toward the end of the period, a Williams advance culminated in what at first was thought a goal but it was decided later that the puck had entered through the side of the cage, and the game ended about two minutes later.

Neither Union or Williams were able to put their full strength on the ice. The former had been forced to cancel their opening game with Cornell last Saturday because of the illness of several members of the team, and they came to Williamstown without the services of Adler. Although three reserves made the trip, the starting sextet played the entire game.
The absence of Langmaid from the Williams line-up was not strongly felt because of the effective way in which Hazzard filled the defense position. Which of these two players will be permanent running-mate with Howe has not yet been definitely decided. However, Watters has cinched the post of goalie, and the first line will continue to be composed of Hoyt, Brigham, and Wheeler. Langmaid, who has sustained a slight leg injury, will soon be back on the ice.

N. Y. U. DEFEATS PURPLE SWIMMING TEAM, 49-22

Home Medley Relay Combination Sets New Pool Record of 3 Min. 44 Sec.

By winning six of the eight first places and five second places, the New York University swimming team easily defeated the Purple natators in the Lasell Pool last Saturday afternoon by the score of 49-22. Meyers of the visitors, taking first in the 50, the 100, and swimming anchor man on the winning relay team, was high scorer of the meet with 12 points to his credit, while Captain Schott of Williams gained eight points for the home team by winning the 200-yard breast stroke, taking third in the backstroke, and swimming on the winning medley relay trio.

The opening event of the meet—the 300-yard medley relay—was easily won by the Williams team of Schott, Noble, and Doughty who set up a new tank record with the good time of 3:44.4. Meyers and Frazier, both of N. Y. U., took first and second in the 50-yard dash, touching out Higginbotham by an arm, in the fast time of .26.3. The 440 was won by Barrere of N. Y. U., who lead Birnie of Williams to the finish by a comfortable margin, while Calm took third from Close, who was swimming the distance event for the first time. The time for this race was 6:31.2.

Captain Zoble of the visitors had little difficulty in winning the dives, while his teammate Nathony was second and Shaw of Williams a close third. The visitors also took first and second in the backstroke when Alders and Barrere lead Schott by a slight edge in 2:48. The 100-yard dash was the most exciting race of the meet: Meyers, the star dash man of the New York team, barely succeeded in heating out Higginbotham in the last few yards while Wolcott took an easy third. The winning time was 1:0. After swimming on even terms for the first half of the race, Captain Schott finally pulled ahead of Nisselson of N. Y. U. to win the breast stroke in the fine time of 2:44.1 while Gregg was a good third. The last event of the meet—the 200-yard relay—was won by the visitors' team with a three yards' margin in the low time of 1:45. Moore, Frazier, Silbert, and Meyers made up the N. Y. U. team while Doughty, Birnie, Higginbotham, and Davis swam for Williams.

'PHI SIGMA KAPPA' WINS INTRAMURAL WRESTLING

Triumphs for Second Successive Year over Commons Club and Zeta Psi

Separated by only three points after three days of close competition on the wrestling mats, Phi Sigma Kappa, Commons Club, and Zeta Psi emerged in that order as the leaders in the annual interfraternity wrestling meet, scoring 24, 22, and 21 points respectively. By virtue of this victory, Phi Sigma Kappa repeated its 1928 triumph, and was credited with 15 points toward the Intramural Trophy, while Commons Club was runner-up for the second successive time, and scored a total of nine points towards the trophy.

Hess secured the first points for the Commons Club by pinning McClure of Beta Theta Pi to the mat in the 115 lb. final match. Delta Psi was the winner in the 125-lb. class, R. F. Miller gaining a decision over Newman of Zeta Psi in the last round. Reynolds added five more points to the Commons Club total at the 135-lb. weight with a fall over Froeb of Zeta Psi. The title in the 145-lb. event went to T. R. Shoff, Chi Psi, and D. P. Meiklejohn of the Commons Club took second position after defeating Sparks of Delta Phi in a challenge match. Baldwin scored the first Phi Sigma Kappa victory in the 155-lb. class, Lenihan of Delta Psi losing on a fall. The decision in the 165-lb. class was secured by Chase, Psi Upsilon, with Baxter, Phi Sigma Kappa, runner-up. Gardner, of Phi Sigma Kappa then annexed the 175-lb. crown on a fall, throwing Carroll, Beta Theta Pi. The final matches in the unlimited weight class proved to be decisive, Tuttle of Zeta Psi winning the title, and Wood preventing a tie for the meet championship by adding two points for Phi Sigma Kappa in a victory over

Freshman Five Defeats St. Joseph's High, 29-22

Starting with a rush that swept their opponents off their feet and netted a 10-0 lead after five minutes of furious play, the Williams freshmen defeated the strong St. Joseph's School quintet of Pittsfield in Lasell Gymnasium last Saturday evening by a score of 29-22. The game, a preliminary to the Varsity contest with Lafayette, was marked by the smoothly functioning offense of each team.

After piling up so decisive a lead with a whirlwind offense, the freshmen were forced on the defensive throughout the remainder of the first two periods, in order to retain their margin, leading at half time by a 14-10 score. The fighting Pittsfield five, unable to break through the stubborn defense of the yearlings, dropped in three long shots to outscore the frosh in the second period. Coming back with a rush late in the third period, 1932 developed a fast passing attack which increased the

PURPLE QUINTET TO INVADE AGGIE COURT

Improved Shooting of Lafayette Contest Expected To Tell Against M. A. C.

With the sweeping victory over Lafayette putting Williams back in its stride, the Massachusetts Agricultural College quintet will meet a determined invader tonight when it clashes with the Purple in the Drill Hall at Amherst. Although the return of Alexander and Cuddeback to the game last Saturday night brought Williams back to the form it showed before the Columbia game, the hard, close guarding of the Aggies, playing on their home floor, will put the visitors to the test.

M. A. C. opened its basketball season on January 10 with a victory over the Fitchburg Normal School by the score of 22-13. In the two weeks since then the Maroon has played Wesleyan and the Connecticut Aggies, losing to the former by a single point after a fierce uphill struggle. Captain Ellert, lone letterman from last year's quintet, has been the most outstanding player so far this season, scoring eight of his team's 14 points in the game with the strong Wesleyan five, besides leading the defense for which the Aggies are renowned on their home floor. In Stanisiewski, who starred against Fitchburg, the Maroon has a hard-working center with a keen eye, while Burbank and Kelley at the forwards are also dangerous.

The "flu" has hit the M. A. C. squad in the same way it has depleted the Williams ranks, Ellert and Stanisiewski being kept out of the Connecticut Aggie game, but their recovery in time for the game tonight is expected, and with such reserve material as Webber, Conkos, and Davis, there is sure to be a battle for the victory. Coach Messer expects a close and hard game, and with the team doing a "comeback" as it did in the second half against Lafayette, he expects them to pull through.

The probable line-up is as follows:

WILLIAMS	M. A. C.
Betham	r.f. Kelley
Thoms	l.f. Burbank
Allen	c. Stanisiewski
Cuddeback	r.g. Mann
Alexander	l.g. Ellert

Infirmity Patients

The following men were confined to the Thompson Infirmary on January 20: J. R. Chapman '30, Jackson and L. K. Miller '31, and Kerr and Potter '32.

Attention 1929

In the Advertisers of Thursday and Saturday of last week, the attention of the Senior Class was called to the fact that there would be a class meeting directly after Chapel Sunday morning for the election of its Class Day officials and permanent officers. Approximately 30 men of a class of 170 were present, thus rendering it impossible to hold the elections. Since it is essential that these men be elected immediately, it is absolutely necessary that the class attend the meeting which will be held Tuesday evening, January 22 at 7.15 in Jesup Hall. In view of the importance of this election, I urge every member of the class to make a special effort to be present.

MADAME HALIDE EDIB LECTURES TO 'FORUM'

Speaker Traces Movement Toward Westernization of Women in New Turkey

"Under Islam women had property rights and other privileges not enjoyed until recently by Western women," was one of the surprising statements made by Mme. Halide Edib in her lecture on "The Development of the Feminist Movement in Turkey" given in Jesup Hall last Sunday evening under the auspices of the Williams Forum. Mme. Edib is well known as one of the leaders of the movement, being the first to appear unveiled in the streets, and has been referred to by former Minister Crane as "the most brilliant woman in Asia."

Starting her lecture with an expression of her pleasure at being invited to address the students after speaking at the Institute of Politics last summer, Mme. Edib traced out briefly the influence of women in the various Western civilizations before turning to a historical account of the changes of the Turk's attitude toward his women under the influence of Islam and the various conquests. The seclusion of women did not come until the period of Persian influence, about two centuries after the coming of Islam, and until then the women had enjoyed great freedom.

Under the harem system, women were able to exert indirectly great influence in politics, so that the period is known as the "reign of women." The harem was different among the people where the wives were Turkish and polygamy was not usual. A great period of reform starting around 1800 and reaching its peak in 1839, when the intellectual element realized the need of a changed attitude toward women, was checked from 1876 until 1908 through the action of a despotic sultan. Since that time reforms have been numerous, so that the New Turkey is mostly the result of the last twenty years.

After 1919 the masses began to take an active interest in Westernization and the marriage laws were changed. Since the war, women have been working in Turkey and there is no difference in wages where men and women do the same work. Woman suffrage has not yet come, but Mme. Edib believes that it will in 20 or 30 years, as soon as they are ready for it. She closed with a reminder that the Turks as Westerners are now looking to America for guidance, and that it is the duty of thinking America, as represented by the colleges, to guard against the mechanistic trend of civilization.

Undeclared Freshmen to Meet Holyoke High

Fresh from a victory over the strong St. Joseph's High School team, the undeclared Freshman quintet will encounter even stiffer opposition tomorrow afternoon when it faces the Holyoke High School five in Lasell Gymnasium. The freshmen have shown up well in practice lately and should put up a good fight against the visitors, who handed last year's freshmen their worst beating of the season.

Although they have been weakened by the graduation of several members of last year's championship five, Holyoke is again credited with possessing one of the strongest quintets in western Massachusetts.

Schott's Record Is Broken by Yale Man

The national intercollegiate record of 2:39.2 for the 200-yd. breast stroke event, established by Captain Schott of Williams on March 24 last year, was broken on Saturday night by Nelson Millard '30 of Yale. Millard swam the race in 2:38.6, thus reducing Schott's previous record by three-fifths of a second.

In his Sophomore year, Schott lowered the existing time for the breast stroke event from 2:44.1 to 2:41.2, and last year, he reduced his own record to 2:39.2. Millard, who was unable to represent the Blue last year because of scholastic ineligibility, came within two-fifths of a second of Schott's record in Yale's opening meet two weeks ago, and succeeded in breaking it last Saturday in the Yale Pool during a meet with Pennsylvania. Millard and Schott, both of whom participated in the Olympic trials for the breast stroke last July, have swum together several times and use practically the same long, powerful stroke.

M. A. C. SIX CARDED TO ENGAGE PURPLE TODAY

Boasting Good Record, Aggies Will Meet Undeclared Purple On Amherst Rink

Basing judgment on scores against the Army, the only mutual opponent so far, Williams is favored to win today's clash with the Massachusetts Agricultural College sextet on the Aggies' rink at Amherst. Ten days ago, the Purple pucksters routed the Army, 10-0, on ice familiar to the soldiers, while last week the Aggies, also playing at West Point, could only secure a 3-1 verdict.

However, M. A. C. comes to Williams-town with a record of three victories and one defeat, having swamped the Connecticut Aggies, 6-0, in their opener. The Maroon and White met disaster by a single point when they lost the second game to Hamilton, 2-3, but on an invasion of New York conquered both the Army and St. Francis. In these contests, Davis and Frost, both sophomores, were especially effective and are men to be watched in today's contest. They have been scoring better than a point a game so far, and the latter tallied three times against the Connecticut Aggies. Coach Ball stresses pass-work over individual brilliance, however, and the M. A. C. machine has shown excellent teamwork this season.

Coach Bellerose of the Purple has also placed emphasis on combination play, and this factor, combined with fast skating and individual strength, has led to triumph over teams who showed a comparative lack of passing ability. Today, however, the home team will meet a club said to be more effective in this department of the game. The line-up will probably be the same as that which showed a keen passing attack against Union last Wednesday, with the possible substitution of Langmaid for Hazzard at right defense. Although the Purple has had little practice since Thursday due to weather conditions, the same applies to the Aggies, who were forced to cancel their return game with C. A. C. last Saturday on account of lack of ice.

The following teams will probably face each other this afternoon at the opening whistle:

WILLIAMS	M. A. C.
Wheeler	r.w. Manty
Brigham	c. Davis
Hoyt	l.w. Frost
Hazzard or Langmaid	r.d. Bond
Howe (Capt.)	l.d. Nash (Capt.)
Watters	g. Myrick

Professor Peirce to Lecture

"Adventures in Translation" is the subject chosen by Assistant Professor Walter Peirce for his lecture before the second meeting of the Tuesday Lecture course this afternoon in the Thompson Physics Laboratory. The entire time will be devoted to personal anecdotes in relation to Mr. Peirce's work with the Paris Peace Conference after the World War. Mr. Peirce had been abroad for 11 years working for the various governments when he entered the service of the United States War Department as a translator. He served during the War and for a few years afterwards.

PURPLE OVERWHELMS LAFAYETTE FIVE, 53-30

Second-Period Attack Turns Game Into Walkaway After 18-17 Score at Half

Victims of an inevitable attack early in the second half which, working with machine-like precision, scored 16 consecutive points during a let-down in their defense, the Lafayette basketball five went down to an overwhelming 53 to 30 defeat at the hands of the Purple last Saturday evening in Lasell Gymnasium. The Pennsylvanians trailed by only one point at the end of the first period, but attempts to check Williams' headlong drive in the second half resulted only in an even exchange of baskets after the attack had subsided.

Exact shooting during the lull in the Lafayette defense game, combined with almost phenomenal long shots from the corners and near-center of the floor, told the story of the victory. The Williams team was not content with bouncing the ball in off the rim; rather, they sent it whirling through without touching either backboard or rim in an increasing succession of shots from all parts of the floor to nearly double their first-half score of 18 by making 35 points in the last period. Only by occasional periods of lively passing, which enabled them to score on short shots, was Lafayette able to hold her own in the first half, and in the second, the visitors had to resort to long shots in a futile effort to keep up with the Purple.

The two teams see-sawed back and forth in the early part of the game, but two brief rallies of five points each, started by Cuddeback and engineered by Betham and Thoms, were sufficient to outweigh a seven-point rally by Lafayette. Captain Betham's high score of seven points in the first half, which he doubled by the end of the game, was threatened by Leisenring's three field goals. After Thoms and Betham had scored five points near the end of the first half, the Pennsylvanians tied the score with a free throw and a basket, only to have Field's free throw give the Purple an 18-17 lead at the intermission.

The beginning of the second half did not portend the fatal attack. There were short, careful passes, and a converted foul by Thoms was followed by Leisenring's goal to even the score. Then the rally began. A field goal by Alexander, an-

MUSICAL CLUBS TO TAKE SOUTHERN TRIP

Manager Collins Plans Invasion of Southern States During Easter Vacation

At a dinner given Saturday evening at the Beta Theta Pi House by Manager W. H. Collins '29 for all the members of the Musical Clubs who went on the Christmas trip, plans were outlined for the rest of the college year. Among the projects announced was a concert to be given at Vassar shortly after midyears with probable performances at Mt. Holyoke and Wellesley.

The Glee Club will compete in the intercollegiate contests at Boston around the first of March, and arrangements are being made for a concert to be given here in April by the Vassar Glee Club under the auspices of the Williams musical organizations. Although detailed plans will be announced later, Collins said that there will also be a tour during the Easter vacation which will include a large part of the South. Competition for freshmen for the managership of the season 1931-32 will, he said, begin immediately after midyears and will last until next February.

Mr. Safford announced the choice of songs for the intercollegiate contests and stressed the importance of regular rehearsals. Ford '29, director of the Glee Club emphasized the fact that the unusual success of the Christmas trip would have been impossible without the efforts of Mr. Safford and Collins, and read a letter from the Dean quoting from the communications of several alumni, who praised the last Christmas performance as the best of recent years. After the banquet, Mr. Safford entertained the gathering by playing and singing some of his favorite songs, and the meeting closed with the singing of "The Mountains."

FOR GENTLEMEN ONLY

Alexander Meiklejohn, the well-known experimenter in education, has come out in The New Republic with another fancy panacea for the colleges. In view of the apparently proved fact that no more than six per cent of a modern student body is in college for the sake of studying, he boldly advances a proposal made by the Dean of Lehigh that there be two distinct types of undergraduate schools—one for the studious student, and one for the man-about-campus, called a "College for Gentlemen."

This "College for Gentlemen," says an editorial comment in the Herald-Tribune, "would meet the perfectly human needs of those 'nice boys' for whom four years of 'activities' are indicated as necessary between high school and a career. Fraternities, games, dances, publications, concerts and the management of all these, campus politics and campus nonsense and good fellowship—these things are what the majority of undergraduates seem to many a wise and experienced dean to wish to get out of college."

If this is an accurate picture of the insides of our colleges, it is accurate only because the "young barbarians" have little or no incentive to go to class, whereas the incidental training of extra-curriculum activities has an irresistible appeal and an undeniable reward. If most undergraduates prefer a piece of jewelry to an "A", or a felt letter on the chest to a gold key "on the stomach", at least part of the explanation can be found in a very human tendency that clutches at the practical and shies from the abstract. Like half-blind moths we flutter about the razzle-dazzle of college life, and feel very little affinity for the grayish beauty of the intellectual and the scholarly.

It would be a greater service to education, it seems to us, to make some effort to decrease the mortality of the student type rather than to shut our eyes to the problem. A "College for Gentlemen" would be a place that not even gentlemen would care to go, and it would leave the serious college so serious that even the student might rebel. But let some of the life of the campus be imported into the classroom through inspiring teachers and interesting courses, and "gentleman" will cease to be a term incompatible with "scholar."

SPORTSMANSHIP

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

During recent basketball games, many criticisms have been made concerning the decisions of the officials and the playing of individual members of the visiting teams. At time, as for example in the recent game with Lafayette, there was even hissing and booing. Such conduct casts a reflection upon the good name of Williams. Certainly no undergraduate or spectator desires to have the Williams basketball management and undergraduate body considered discourteous to our opponents.

Basketball is a hard-played sport. Players need to be in the best physical condition at all times and should be ready to react to the many changes which constantly occur in the games. Very often they find themselves in situations which call for speedy and immediate change of tactics. This requires skill, self-control, and forceful execution of basketball technique. There is no place on the basketball floor for the man who is not willing to sacrifice himself by playing his hardest for the good of the team and the welfare of the College. Physical contacts are inevitable, and often they are viewed differently by officials and spectators. No official in the country can please everybody, for he sees things from a non-partisan standpoint and makes his decisions accordingly. Spectators are often governed in their judgment by their enthusiasm for the home team. The members of the Williams basketball team appreciate highly the fine encouragement always given them by the undergraduate body, but they regret exceedingly the discourteous conduct on the part of a few who have so far forgotten themselves as to cast serious reflection upon their Alma Mater.

In the coming games, which are bound to be close and hard fought, the spectators should constantly keep in mind that they have a definite responsibility to the College and should govern themselves accordingly. They should applaud the good work of our opponents and support wholeheartedly the efforts of our own men to achieve victory.

I am sure that the lack of courtesy referred to above was the result of thoughtlessness on the part of a few, and I am equally sure that the basketball management will receive the overwhelming support of all in eliminating this objectionable feature from future contests.

other by Cuddeback, a free throw by Alexander, a goal by Allen, a converted foul by Betham, and then field goals by Thoms, Allen and Betham, and the score was 35 to 19. Near the end of this rally Lafayette went completely to pieces, and the last eight points were made with the scorer unguarded. This was the mid-half rally which has featured practically all of the Williams victories. When the team couldn't work the ball in, they worked it to beyond the center of the floor, or into a corner, and Lafayette was powerless to stop the scoring.

When the pause in the Williams attack came, it was only momentary, for after three Lafayette baskets, the Purple launched an attack of long passes from their own end of the floor, with Betham usually on the receiving end, and were able to match the desperate Lafayette, basket for basket. With only six minutes to play, the Purple scoring machine again became so active that it could not be stopped, and in these few minutes scored 14 points to Lafayette's three. Willmott, put in with only four minutes remaining until the end of the game, managed to score three baskets, and Lafayette's complete bewilderment which was noticeable earlier in the half was again evident at the end.

Betham's five goals and four free throws gave him high scoring honors with 14 points, while Allen scored 11, Thoms 9, and Captain Leisuring 8. The summary is as follows:

Band Will Play Saturday

Under the leadership of Mr. Chambers, Musical Director of the Drury High School in North Adams, the College Band will make its first appearance this winter at the Wesleyan basketball game next Saturday night. Due to the ability and long experience of the director and recent practices held by the band, the organization promises to make a thoroughly successful initial showing.

Interclass Relays Begin

Having come out victorious for the past two years, 1930 is expected to carry at least the influence of prestige into the annual inter-class relays which are to commence this afternoon at 4.15 on the board track, weather permitting. Although no time trials have been held as yet, the teams have been selected, and in the first races the seniors will run the juniors and the two lower classes will compete. The series of contests is scheduled to be completed this week.

January 'Graphic' Is to Contain Varied Selection

Featuring an article by Alan Baxter '30 entitled Little Red Riding Hood, the January issue of the Graphic, which will make its appearance this Friday, will present a well-balanced and varied selection of prose and several pieces of poetry. Two other contributions will be found by Baxter, called Hard-boiled and The Queen's Birthday.

Other articles include an autobiographical sketch by L. Walker Willson '30, The Williams Musical Clubs, in which he recounts several recent personal experiences. Poetical contributions contain pieces by Baxter '30, Prescott '30, and Lakin '32.

Rice Book Fund Prizes Awarded to Six Juniors

Book prizes from the Rice Fund were recently received by Baldwin, Fitch, Goodwin, Kramer, C. E. Smith, and Thoms '30, Asst. Prof. J. S. Galbraith, in charge of the selection of the awards, announced this week. Announcement of the prize winners was made at the last Commencement, but the books, rare editions of Latin classics, could not be presented before this time.

Outstanding among the volumes given was a Folio of Virgil printed by Tonson in 1701. Three early editions of the Horace of Bentley, the most famous editor of the works of that poet, were also presented: a first edition of 1711; a second of 1713; and a third of 1723. Six such prizes are awarded each year from the Rice Fund for excellence in Latin or Greek to students who do not receive prizes from the Benedict Fund in the same departments.

Coaches Join Semi-Pro Team

Although organized only a week, the semi-professional basketball team on which Coaches Caldwell and Fox play put up a creditable exhibition Saturday night in Lenox against the Brotherhood of that city. The Williamstown Millionaires, as they call themselves, were handicapped by the court, on which they had never played before, but gave the well-known Brotherhood quintet a good fight, losing by the score of 42-28. The coaches, together with several other Williamstown men, intend to play a number of games this season and next Saturday night will meet the Adams team in what promises to be a spirited contest.

'Theatre' Bill Date Changed

Due to the cancellation of plans for a number of the usual mid-year social events and the difficulty of rehearsing during the examination period, Little Theatre has postponed its mid-year bill until Friday, February 15. As previously announced Two Gentlemen of Soho, by A. P. Herbert, The Proposal, by Anton Tchekov, and The Mouse Trap, by William Dean Howells will comprise the bill which is of a more consistently light tone than any of Little Theatre's previous offerings this season.

Two More Games Played in Intramural Basketball

Opening the third series of interfraternity basketball on Saturday afternoon, Delta Kappa Epsilon defeated Phi Delta Theta, 23-14, and Phi Gamma Delta snatched a decisive 28-19 victory from Phi Sigma Kappa. A surprising number of fouls were called in both games, particularly in the first two periods, when ragged team-work made the play rough and slow, but once the half had closed both winning combinations scored readily, and had little difficulty maintaining their lead.

With Bartlett and Putnam staging a brilliant offense about the Phi Delta Theta basket in the first half, and Putnam widening the lead with three baskets in the second, Delta Kappa Epsilon took the first game of the afternoon with a comfortable margin to spare. Phi Gamma Delta had a close battle with Phi Sigma Kappa throughout the first half, trailing at quarter, 7-3, and leading by a single point at half, 13-12. From then on, however, Patterson and Wolf, with able assistance from Heine and Herrick, established a comfortable lead. Patterson led the scorers with 11 points.

W. O. C. Adds Requirements

Announcement was recently made by B. W. Hales '29, President of the W. O. C., that the following requirements have been added for election to key membership of the club: the candidate must visit Robinson Point on the west side of Gerylock; he must follow the new trail from Eph Lookout to the Clark Chapel Road; and he must take the recently constructed trail connecting the Glacial Lake Trail with the old Pine Cobble Trail. At the last meeting of the club, Kleibacher '31, and Hackett and Walter '32, who had fulfilled the new requirements, were elected to key membership.

Organ Recital

Due to the delay in replacing a small part in the Chapin Hall organ, Mr. C. L. Safford will present his regular Wednesday organ recital in Thompson Memorial Chapel again this week. His program will be as follows:

- I. Sonata in F Minor Mendelssohn
- II. Largo, New World Symphony Dvorak
- III. a. Reverie Bonnet
b. Song Without Words Bonnet
c. Alleluia Bossi
- IV. Overture Fantasia Tchaikowsky
Romeo and Juliet

Phi Betes Organize Forum

Phi Beta Kappa Society of Williams College has decided to establish a forum for the purpose of reviewing the college curriculum in general and certain courses from the undergraduate point of view. This decision was reached at a meeting of the society on Sunday, January 13, at the residence of Professor Wild. Complete development of the idea has been left to a committee of undergraduate members, who will make a report at the February meeting.

margin of victory three points before the game ended.

Captain Good was outstanding for the victors with six field goals and a free toss for a total of thirteen points while Wise and Grady each with eight points led the visitors' attack. The summary follows:

FRESHMEN (29)	ST. JOSEPH (22)
Good	l.f.	Wise
Engle	r.f.	Flynn
Fowle	c.	Dunn
Cosgrove	l.g.	Haughy
Swineheart	r.g.	Fox

Goals from floor—Good 6, Fowle 3, Wise 3, Grady 3, Engle 2, Swineheart 2, Fox 2, Cosgrove, Flynn. Goals from foul—Good, Wise 2, Grady 2. Substitutions: FRESHMEN—Palmer for Fowle, Fincke for Swineheart, Fowle for Palmer, Swineheart for Fincke. ST. JOSEPH—Grady for Wise, Wise for Flynn. Referee—Hosley. Time: 8-minute quarters.

Skiers Begin Practice

Holding strenuous work-outs during the past week, the wintersports team has been preparing for the Dartmouth Winter Carnival, which is scheduled for February 8 and 9. The following week, a six man team will compete against Dartmouth and

New Hampshire University at Durham to settle the divisional championship, while on February 26, Captain Little will again take his men to Lake Placid, to participate in the third international tourney of the year. Captain Little in the skiing events and Moore '29 in the snowshoe race are regarded as Williams' strongest competitors, while Sears '29 is slated for fancy skating and Husband '31 will probably take part in the skiing and slaloms.

Taylor Outstrips Other Prince Trophy Aspirants

Three first places in those events of the Prince Meet which were run off last Friday and Saturday gave Taylor '32 a total score of 20 points, enough to clinch the trophy. Swayze '32 is in second place with nine points, Rawlins '32 has five to his credit, while McMahon, Ripple, Sidley, J. Smith, and Swift '32 each have three.

Taylor took first in the 150-yard backstroke final held on Friday in 2 min. 11 sec., and won both the 50 and 100-yard free style races on Saturday. The concluding events of the meet were run off yesterday.

W. B. Cunningham '32 has recently been pledged to the Theta Delta Chi Fraternity.

chussets. Some idea of their strength can be gained from the fact that they recently defeated by a score of 29-18 the St. Mary's High School five of Westfield, which numbered among the victims of its nine-game winning streak St. Joseph's High School. The visitor's line-up will be: Collins l.f., Cassidy r.f., Torno c., Nakrayko l.g., and Dugas r.g.

The freshmen displayed a good attack against St. Joseph's, but seemed to have difficulty in getting it started from under their own basket, where their handling of the ball was rather undecided. Practice against the Varsity should clear up that fault, however, and they should put up strong resistance to the visitors' fine passing attack. Their line-up will be the same as that which started against St. Joseph's, with Captain Good and Engel at the forwards, Fowle at center, and Cosgrove and Swineheart at the guards.

Freshman Cabinet To Meet

Members of the Freshman Cabinet of the W. C. A. will meet for the last discussion before mid-year recess on Thursday evening, January 24. W. F. Thornton '32 will lead a discussion on the subject "Philanthropy."

Combination of Offense

Wesleyan Game

Continuing a streak of games against stiff opposition, the Varsity basketball team will encounter its initial 1929 Little Three rival when it plays Wesleyan at 8 p. m. tonight in Lasell Gymnasium. The record of the Cardinal and Black is very impressive, as out of eight games played, they have lost only to the unusually powerful Springfield quintet, and their seven victories have been by comfortable margins, with the exception of the lurch-like M. A. C. team, which Wesleyan defeated by the close score of 15 to 14.

Although, confident of victory, Coach Messer realizes the potentiality of the Middletown team, and concedes that Williams will be extended to their best game to win from their Little-Three opponent. Wesleyan started her season with wins over Clark and Binston University, and then her stride was checked by Springfield. Springfield's strength is well known, and it was not until last week that she was vanquished. After this game, Wesleyan tackled Connecticut Aggies and defeated them by a 36 to 23 score, and then, playing Lafayette the night before they played here, beat the Pennsylvanians, 41 to 20. From a comparative standpoint, this shows the Williams attack to be more than 10 points stronger than Wesleyan's, as Lafayette scored 30 points against both Williams and Wesleyan, who scored 53 and 41 points respectively against Lafayette.

Against Wesleyan, M. A. C. used the same strong defensive tactics that they used against the Purple, and the low-score victory which the Methodists were able to eke out was even closer than that gained by Williams. Last week Wesleyan tucked two more victories to her string by conquering New Hampshire, who plays here February 7, and taking over Maine University, 30 to 19. The team functions smoothly as a whole. Nye, at center, is always a dangerous man when near the basket, while Howard and Owen, who will probably start at the forward positions, came up from the freshman team from last year, and have played together other years. Equally strong substitutes for these men are van Cott and Ward. In the Lafayette game, Millsbaugh, playing a guard position, scored eight points, while Sanders' eye for free throws is a source of danger to the Purple.

The hard practice which the Varsity has been undergoing has been continued

PURPLE TANKMEN TO MEET W. P. I. SATURDAY

Worcester's Powerful Team Has Defeated Boston University and Wesleyan

Encountering one of the strongest teams of the present season in the Worcester Tech swimming lineup at five o'clock Saturday in the Lasell Pool, the Williams natators, who suffered two setbacks in their opening meets, will be forced to their utmost to defeat the visitors. The Worcester team, although outscored by Brown in the first meet of the year, defeated by decisive scores both Wesleyan and Boston University, from whom they won every first and second place.

The 300-yd. individual medley will probably net eight points for the home team, with Captain Schott and Healy leading. The dashes are a toss-up, since Holcombe, Rogers, and Driscoll do approximately the same time in the 50 and the 100 as Higginbotham, Davis, and Wolcott. First and second can virtually be conceded to W. P. I. in the 440-yd. swim, as Osipowich and Tinker of the visitors, considered among the best distance men in New England, do better time than Birnie in the distance event.

Fritz and Driscoll of Tech, who swim the 150-yd. backstroke in excellent time, will probably take first and second in the

1932 Swimming Team to Face Pittsfield in Opener

Friday, January 25—Journeying to Pittsfield tonight to swim against the Boys' Club team of that city, the Freshman swimming team will encounter stiff opposition in their first meet of the season. Their opponents, who have been well represented in the past, will present a formidable line-up tonight, while the freshmen, with three weeks of strenuous practice behind them, rely on a well-balanced team and several individual stars to win the meet.

Kerr '32, the winner of the Bowker trophy, will take part in the 50-yard backstroke, while Taylor, winner of the Prince cup meet, is expected to enter sprints together with Ripple. Ach and Pierce will represent the freshmen in the diving events and Fenton, McMahon and Stevens are slated for the 440-yard swim. Smith, Swayze, Swift and Downs are also members of the squad. The yearling team has been making remarkably good time under Coach Graham's guidance, nosing out the 'varsity in a recently held practice meet, and is expected to show up well in the Pittsfield contest.

WILLIAMS ALUMNI TO HOLD ANNUAL REUNION

Record Throng Plans To Attend Gathering at Hotel Astor
In New York

Judge C. C. Nott, Jr., Chairman of the Williams Mid-Winter Reunion, announced recently that the Hon. Herbert H. Lehman, Dr. Arthur Stanley Pease, and Professor Karl E. Weston will be the principal speakers at the Williams Alumni Dinner, to be held at the Hotel Astor, Friday, February 8th, at 7 p. m. A record throng is expected to attend this annual gathering of Williams men.

Mr. Lehman, Lieutenant-Governor of the State of New York, and a graduate of Williams in the class of 1899, is well-known to the undergraduates for his generosity to the college. Dr. Pease is President of Amherst College, respected as an institution of the highest ideals, and cherished as a rival by Williams men for generations. The last principal speaker of the evening will be Professor Weston of the class of 1896, who fills the important post of Professor of the History of Art and Civilization at Williamstown. Marvin A. Chapman, '03, President of the Williams club of New York, will be the Toastmaster.

Judge Nott stated that no topics had been suggested to any of the speakers. It is believed that, on account of the friendly audience and the intimate nature of the gathering, each speaker will feel free to deal frankly and openly with matters of real interest and importance to Williams men.

Mr. R. B. Jones, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee has admitted reluctantly that the music, singing, and other forms of audible amusement which he is to provide will be far superior to those of past years. Note: The Entertainment Committee suggests that those guests who expect to take active part in the singing, devote some time between now and February 8th to cultivating that art of staying on the key. It is alleged that there were complaints after last year's dinner.

A trying situation was narrowly averted when the Committee suggested to the management of the Astor that unless a dinner could be provided which was not only edible, but a gastronomic triumph, the guests would be instructed to dine ad lib in the neighborhood, and come in later for the speeches, which they knew would be good. Spurred on by this taunt, the

Christian Scientist To Talk

John Randall Dunn, C. S. This Society, founded two years ago by Williams students, holds regular Sunday services in the library of Griffin Hall at 10.45 a. m. under the laws of the college, in place of the regular chapel service, with Chase '29, and Whittlesey '30, as first and second readers respectively.

AGGIE DEFENSE FALLS BEFORE WILLIAMS SIX

Brigham Makes Lone Purple Score Early in Fast Hockey Game at Amherst

Confronted by what Coach Bellerose called a "basketball team on skates" because of their unusual style of defense, the Williams Hockey team in spite of superior pass-work was able to gain only a scant one-point decision over the M. A. C. sextet on their own rink at Amherst last Tuesday afternoon. The lightning offensive dashes of Hoyt, Brigham, and Captain Howe into the enemy's territory were repeatedly met and rendered useless by the tenacious Aggie defense combination centering around the small but intrepid Bond.

Beginning with a sweeping attack which barely failed to score, the Purple team gave promise of another decisive victory, but were met by an opposition fully as determined and almost as spectacular as was their own attack. Whenever Williams seriously threatened to score, they found before them a solid wall of five stout Aggies fully prepared to stave off what thrusts might come. In time, however, there came a break in the nearly perfect line of defense, and Brigham, taking advantage of his opportunity, passed Myrick with a sizzling shot which was fated to be the only score of the game. For the rest of the period the play went on at the same high speed with Williams always the aggressor.

The first minutes of the second bracket saw a contest considerably more bitter, in which Frost of the Aggies, who has started so far this season, responded to Howe and Hoyt with equally ferocious dashes for the goal. This additional heat in the fray resulted in several penalties on both sides and kept the goalies busy, both of whom made spectacular stops in the face of a rain of would-be tallies. The last period, although dominated by con-

Griffin '62 Dies Tuesday; Was Prominent Educator

Dr. Edward Herrick Griffin '62, who held various professorships at Williams from 1872 to 1889 and was dean of the collegiate department of Johns Hopkins University from the latter year until 1915, died last Tuesday at the home of his son, John W. Griffin, in Riverdale, L. I. Dr. Griffin, who was born in Williamstown in 1843 and received his A.B. degree at the age of 18, had celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday last November.

Receiving his M.A. degree from Williams in 1865, Dr. Griffin attended the Union Theological Seminary in New York until his graduation in 1867. He then served for several years as pastor of the First Congregational Church of Burlington, Vt. Summoned to Williams as Professor of Latin in 1872, he occupied that chair for nine years until he was made Professor of Rhetoric. In 1886 he became Mark Hopkins Professor of Intellectual and Moral Philosophy. In 1889 he went to Johns Hopkins University as Professor of the History of Philosophy and Dean of the college faculty, in which capacity he remained until his retirement in 1915.

Dr. Griffin received the degrees of Doctor of Divinity from Amherst in 1880, and of Doctor of Laws from Princeton in 1888, and Williams in 1905. While a student here he was a member of the Philologist and Kappa Alpha Society. He was the son of Rev. Nathaniel H. Griffin '34, who was for some years Professor of Ancient Languages here, and a distant cousin of Edward Dorr Griffin, D.D., third President of Williams College (1821-1836).

Wrestlers to Open With 'Y' Meet in North Adams

In the first meet of the season, the Williams wrestling team will engage the North Adams Y. M. C. A. grapplers at eight o'clock tonight in the North Adams Y. M. C. A. building. With only three experienced men the Purple will face a team even stronger than the one which was defeated in the opening meet last year by the precarious margin of one point.

Although the development of a formidable group of wrestlers has been considerably handicapped by the lack of experienced material, and by conflict with the usual mid-year scholastic hazards, some of the new candidates have demonstrated sufficient interest and ability to insure a respectable showing. As an accommodation to the North Adams team, there will be no matches in the 115-pound and unlimited divisions. The tentative line-up is as follows: 125-pound class: R. F. Miller and Spencer; 135-pound class: E. Reynolds; 145-pound class: Lisle and D. Meiklejohn; 155-pound class: Baxter; 165-pound class: Chase; 175-pound class: Millard and Andersen.

PROFESSOR DUTTON TRIES NEW SYSTEM

English Students Work Separately

Independent Study

Desiring to "test the power or ability of the students to use materials which they have unearthed for themselves," after the method of getting this material from authors of the Victorian Period, has been pointed out to them by the instructor, Professor Dutton of the English Department has introduced a new system of study for the English 7-S course, since Christmas. There is no class meeting between the Christmas vacation and the mid-year examination period, but, on the examination, the student will be expected to give a keen and accurate criticism of the author that he has been studying since Christmas.

"Each student may take his choice from among the three typical authors of the Victorian Period: Swinburne, a poet; Gissing, a novelist; and Henry Adams, an historian. After picking the author, the student's first task is to discover what the leading critics think about his author and what they judge to be his most important works. Having determined these, the student must study them as thoroughly as time will allow. He must analyze them, using the same method that was employed in class before Christmas, and endeavor to determine the author's ideas, artistry, and relation to romanticism." Professor Dutton

Football Dinner at Deke House

At the annual football dinner, held Thursday night at the Delta Kappa Epsilon house, gold footballs were awarded to 19 players, to Coaches Caldwell, Snively, and Fox, and to Manager Hubbard '29 and Assistant-Manager Marshall '30. Hubbard, who acted as toastmaster, called upon as speakers Coach Caldwell and Assistant-Coach Fox, Ruether '23, and Captain Andersen, Howe, and Watson '29. The speakers remarked upon the fine record of the past season, which was regarded as "one of the most successful in the history of the sport at Williams". Toastmaster Hubbard '29 emphasized at the close of the dinner "the debt of gratitude owed by the players and the college as a whole to the excellent coaching staff."

Lloyd Derr Rohrbach, of Sunbury, Pa., and Robert Edwin Clark, of Springfield, Mass., were elected respectively to the offices of Permanent President and Permanent Secretary of the Senior Class when that body met in Jesup Hall last Tuesday evening. At the same time Horace Fullbright Callaghan, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Winston Healy, of Evanston, Ill., were chosen as Class Marshals.

The Class Day Committee, elected at the same meeting, is composed of the following: Lawrence W. Beals, of Bronxville, N. Y.; William H. Doughty III, of Williamstown; John F. McKean, of Orlando, Fla.; Richard C. Overton, of Manchester, Vt.; and Dexter K. Strong, of Portland, Ore. The other Class Day officers were selected as follows: Library Orator, Richard B. Sevall, of Rye, N. Y.; Orator in Lower Classes, John F. McKean, of Orlando, Fla.; Ivy Orator, Mark Harris, of Ossining, N. Y.; Class Poet, William H. Doughty III, of Williamstown; Ivy Poet, Samson L. Paison, Jr., of Baltimore, Md.; Pipe Orator, Daniel W. Layman, Jr., of Indianapolis, Ind.; Class Prophet, Philip F. Kobbe, of New York City; Prophet on Prophet, William C. Millard, of Searsdale, N. Y.; Class Historian, John D. Shoaff, of Fort Wayne, Ind. Rohrbach was re-elected as Class Singing Leader.

Rohrbach, who prepared for Williams at the Hill School, has been outstanding in varied fields of College activity since his matriculation. In his first year he captained the Freshman football team, and was on the Varsity squad during the following two seasons. He was a member of the Student Council for the first half of his Sophomore year, and was elected Class President for the second semester, a position which he has held ever since. As a member of the W. C. A. he had charge of the Missionary Union Conference, was chairman of the College Religious Committee in his second year, was Recording Secretary last year, and is now president of the organization. Rohrbach has been Class Singing Leader since Freshman year, has sung on the Chapel Choir, and was on the Varsity track squad last spring. He is a member of Gargoyle and the Purple Key Society.

PURPLE AND CORNELL CROSS STICKS TODAY

Victorious Williams Team To Try To Keep Slate Clean; Coach
Predicts Win

Undeclared after three official tests, the Williams hockey team will present a strong front to an invading Cornell sextet this afternoon on the Sage Hall rink at 4.30 p. m., and coupled with this determination to keep its slate unblemished, the Purple will show an attack, centered around Brigham, which so far has proved very powerful. Again the advantage in point of scores lies with Williams, for the visitors have played but one game to the home team's three, and this was lost to St. Lawrence last Saturday, 1-0, their opening contest with Union the week before having been cancelled.

The skaters from Ithaca also come with the memory of a 7-1 defeat administered by the Purple last year on their visit to the New York institution, but the fact that the strong team of Canadians from St. Lawrence could only gain one point from the Cornell outfit, shows that this year's aggregation will give the Purple a harder fight. The squad boasts several veterans, and two stars in the Clark brothers, T. and O., the former of whom is captain.

Practice sessions on the Sage rink have been the daily fare of the Williams stick-

SPRING CLEANINGS IN JANUARY

Volume One of the college year slams shut; the reckoning is upon us. At the examination bar we shall soon be called upon to surrender our mite of freshly gathered facts and figures. When the unbending judges, like customs officers, demand to hear what we have to "declare", there is no use to prevaricate for they search the luggage of our mind with little respect for personal privacy and no compassion for personal weaknesses. Before we may continue our academic journey we must dump at the feet of these incomparable inspectors all the curios, souvenirs, and antiques we have picked up on recent excursions through Philosophy, Literature, Art, History, and Science. And if the offering is not grand enough there may be difficulties about obtaining a matriculating passport or an insurance policy for graduation.

It is without doubt a good thing that this intellectual house-cleaning should take place, for despite its well known drawbacks and hardships it usually enables the wandering student to perceive a little clearer the direction, if any, he is taking. As it reveals to some extent the ground just covered, so it maps out, for a few miles at least, the road that lies ahead.

But we should not stop here. If, as is often maintained by intelligent people, there are things in college that are quite as important as studies, why should not these "things" be examined with the same amount of dexterity and thoroughness? If the campus has as much to contribute to the education and character-training of the undergraduate as the classroom, one would expect to find as systematic an investigation of the one as of the other.

We are not, of course, advocating or even suggesting annual and semi-annual examinations for the extra-curriculum "courses"; but there is a less formal and more effective way by which this phase of college may be gently overhauled from time to time. Several years ago there was established for this very purpose the Dunbar Student Life Prizes. Through an annual essay competition the Dunbar Foundation, as it is called, aims "to start up, by and among the students themselves, thought, discussion (controversy it may be), and action on the social ethics and other aspects of college life". It is not therefore a mere literary exercise, but a sort of campus cathartic, to be taken not only in the late spring when the prizes are handed out, but in large doses throughout the entire year.

At just this time of year—in the exact middle—plenty of material for such essays suggests itself. The old problems are still with us, awaiting new solutions, fresh points of view. Rushing situation, curriculum anatomy, cut systems, athletic tangles, extra-curriculum side-shows, and compulsory chapel are but a few of the many topics that should be aired frequently and thoroughly. The last word has been said on none of them; they are a perpetual challenge to the thinking undergraduate who would make Williams a better place to live in. And in order that valuable discussion of them may not be limited to a few, we recommend that Dunbar entries first be submitted for publication to either the Graphic or The Record.

Let this examination of the campus proceed at once. It may stir some dust, but like those other examinations, it may also give us a clearer idea of "whither we are tending."

Wesleyan Will Test Purple Team Tonight

during the week by Coach Messer, but the shape that the entire squad has attained, and the form that has been shown recently, leads Coach Messer to anticipate victory. It is expected that his usual combination of Thoms, Betham, Allen, Cuddeback and Alexander will start the game. The probable line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS	WESLEYAN
Thoms	r.f. Ward or Howard
Betham (Capt.)	l.f. van Cott or Owen
Allen	c. Nye
Cuddeback	r.g. Millsbaugh
Alexander	l.g. Sanders

New Hampshire State Game

After a lay-off of nearly two weeks due to final examinations, the Purple quintet will get under way again on February 7 when it encounters the New Hampshire State team. If comparative scores may be used as a criterion, the visitors will not afford Williams as much competition as they have been accustomed to face recently, as Connecticut Aggies, whom Wesleyan defeated, was able to defeat New Hampshire, and Wesleyan also triumphed over the New Hampshire team.

New Hampshire's five, however, is stronger than comparisons would indicate. They have a uniquely powerful combination in that their guards, Foster and Gaunt, have fully as much basket-shooting ability as their forwards. Gaunt accounted for nine points in the game with Connecticut Aggies, which the latter won by a decisive 44 to 25 score. Hagstrom, at center, is a dependable defense man, while the speed and generalship of the forwards rounds out a well-balanced team. The probable line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS	NEW HAMPSHIRE
Thoms	r.f. Tilton
Betham (Capt.)	l.f. Pateh
Allen	c. Hagstrom
Cuddeback	r.g. Gaunt
Alexander	l.g. Foster

Alumni To Edit 'Living Age'

As a result of the recent reorganization of "The Living Age", three alumni of Williams College have been selected to be editors of this magazine. John Bakelless '18 has been chosen Editor-in-Chief and Harry Binsee '26 will be an Associate Editor. Marvin Lowes '25 will serve as Managing Editor of the publication.

ALUMNI COLUMN

The regular monthly meeting of the Williams College Athletic Council was held at the Williams Inn on Saturday noon, January 19. Matters of routine business were transacted. The graduate-treasurer reported that settlement had been made with Amherst College for the damage done on Pratt Field at the recent football game. Contracts with Amherst for football games in 1929 and 1930 were approved.

The Alumni Associations are planning many meetings for the near future: at Philadelphia, February 1, to be attended by Mr. Botsford; at Minneapolis, February 6, to be attended by Prof. T. C. Smith; and the big meetings in New

Only 63% of the total graduates of the College, and 38% of the non-graduates, have sent in their questionnaires for the Decennial Catalogue. York, February 8, and at Boston, February 15, where Professor Weston will represent the College. Meetings are also being arranged for Detroit, March 14, Chicago, March 15, and Milwaukee, March 16, to be attended by the Alumni Secretary. Mr. Botsford will make a trip in the latter part of March, stopping at Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Buffalo.

Joseph P. Pollard '20 is the author of several articles in recent magazines, one being printed in the January Century and another in the January Scribners. The article in the Scribners has been selected as one of ten outstanding magazine articles for the month by a council of librarians.

George C. Appell '05, judge of the Westchester Country Children's Court since its establishment seven years ago, died recently in his forty-sixth year. He is survived by his wife, daughter, and one son.

For nearly twenty years Mr. Appell had been a judge in Mount Vernon, having sat on the bench of the City Court for thirteen years before beginning his service in the Children's Court. In recognition of his career as a judge and as a celebration of his victory at the recent election, when he was the sole Democratic county candidate to triumph in Westchester, a dinner in his honor had been arranged by his party's county committee to take place on January 31 at the Hotel Commodore.

A son of the first city judge of Mount Vernon, Judge Appell was graduated from Williams College in 1905 and from the law school of New York University in 1907. Until recently he had been president of the State Association of Children's Court Judges and in 1916 he was president of the State Association of Magistrates. Many of Judge Appell's methods in the Children's Court were adopted by similar tribunals in other cities, among them his practice of allowing no publicity of the names or records of juvenile offenders.

George P. Shoemaker '28 has recently taken several small parts in Walter Hampden's revival of "Cyrano de Bergerac", which opened in New York shortly before Christmas. He appears in the first act as Cardinal Richelieu, in the second as a pastry cook, and in the fourth as one of the Cadets of Gascoyne.

Mr. Shoemaker directed two of last year's Little Theatre productions, "Love One's Neighbor" by Andreyev and "Beauty and the Jacobin" by Booth Tarkington, and hopes eventually to continue his directing work in New York. Walter Hampden himself received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Williams in 1924.

The following communication appeared in THE WILLIAMS RECORD of November 3, 1904, on the subject of chapel conduct:

"The writer believes that if a man wants to bring a book to chapel and will read it without undue ostentation, it is his business, for chapel is a required service. But he believes that common, ordinary courtesy requires that during the course of a sermon he keep still about it. Yet the writer doubts if chapel has been noisier for some weeks than it was Sunday morning last during the course of one of the best sermons of the year. Shuffling feet, whispered conversations, dropping books, and turning around like a crowd of kindergarten children at each new sound were the most noticeable deficiencies. 'My brethren, these things ought not so to be'. To call attention to the matter should be enough."

HOCKEY TEAM WILL MAKE MID-YEAR TRIP

Sextet To Journey to Princeton and Penn after Meeting
Colby at Home

During the three intensive days of hockey which will face the Williams sextet in the mid-year recess period, Colby will be entertained in Williamstown on Thursday, Feb. 7, and then the team will journey southward to meet Penn at Philadelphia on Friday and Princeton at Princeton on Saturday. In these three, the Purple will find varying grades of opposition ranging from that offered by the Red and Blue, who have a hockey team for the first time this year, to that of the crack Princeton six, which is tied with Dartmouth for League leadership.

Little information has come from the Colby camp concerning the strength of their sextet as they have played but two games this year. The first resulted in a 2-2 tie with Bates but in the second Colby lost, 2-0, to Bowdoin. The first score is significant in that Williams swamped the Army, 10-0, two weeks ago, while a little later Bates defeated the Cadets by half as much, 5-0. As Colby could only get a draw with Bates, this would indicate an advantage for Williams.

The two opponents on the southern trip have played earlier this season with the result overwhelmingly in favor of Princeton. The Tigers scored almost at will, even with a team handicapped by illness, and swamped the Red and Blue, 10-0. Captain Graham Jones of the Orange and Black accounted for six of these, and has been doing brilliant work all season as an offensive star, while Pennypacker at goal has excelled on the defense. Although neither Penn nor Princeton have played teams on the Williams schedule so far this year, it is safe to say that when the Purple crosses sticks with the Red and Blue on Friday evening, the former will be favored to win, and when it meets Princeton on the Baker rink the following night the odds will be for the Tiger sextet.

Taylor '32 Holds Lead to Win Prince Meet Handily

With the relative positions of the two high scorers unchanged since Saturday, the Prince Meet for Freshman swimmers ended Tuesday afternoon at the Lasee pool when consistent winning of first places in last week's competition proved to have guaranteed the lead of D. Taylor over his nearest rival, Swayze. McMahon's first place in the 440-yard swim Monday and Pierce's victory in the diving on Tuesday failed to threaten the position of the leaders, although McMahon drew up to third, and Pierce to fourth place for the meet.

McMahon won the 440-yard contest in the excellent time of 6 min. 42 sec., followed by Swayze, Ripple, and Fenton. The diving, in which only four men took part, was won by Pierce with Stevens, Downs, and Ripple taking second, third, and fourth places. Kerr, winner of the Bowker Meet in December could not take part on account of sickness. The final standing of all contestants is as follows: Taylor 20, Swayze 12, McMahon 9, Pierce 7, Ripple 6, Rawlins 5, Stevens, Downs 4, Swift, Sidley 3, Fenton 1.

From old kettle to new world

SOMEBODY has to believe in the big possibilities of little things. James Watt saw the lid of his tea-kettle dance—and today our civilization is built largely on steam.

In the field of communication, Bell saw the possibilities of a little vibrating diaphragm. Today from the telephone at his elbow a man talks to his next-door neighbor or across the continent, just as he chooses.

Men in the telephone industry, in commercial and administrative as well as technical work, are constantly proving that little suggestions, little ideas, little changes, when smoothly fitted into the comprehensive plan, may be big in possibilities of better public service.

Frosh to Hold Trials for Hotchkiss Debate

Trials for the Freshman debating team will be held during the week of February 24th, at which time all men desiring to go out for this team are eligible to do so. A debate with Hotchkiss Preparatory School has been scheduled for March 16th, and there will probably be a triangular debate within the "Little Three" group.

The Hotchkiss debate will take place at 5.30 p. m. in the Hotchkiss Chapel at Lakeville, Connecticut, and will be conducted on the Oxford system of speaking with the decision depending upon a vote of the audience. There will be three men on each team. This debate will be similar to those held in the past with Taft, Hill, and other preparatory schools, the purpose of which was to create better feeling between boys of these schools and Williams men.

The subject for this debate has been decided upon but will not be announced until two weeks before the debate occurs, so that all those trying out for the team will have an equal opportunity. Needless to say, the Freshmen must prepare their own speeches individually without the aid of either the Faculty or upperclassmen.

There is also now pending a project to have a debate between Wesleyan and Williams at Middletown, one between Amherst and Wesleyan at Amherst, and another between Amherst and Williams at Williamstown. If this plan materializes, two men will compose each of the teams.

Freshmen Down Holyoke for Fourth Straight Win

Prospects for an undefeated season brightened considerably last Wednesday afternoon when the Freshman five succeeded in downing the strong Holyoke High School quintet in Lasell Gymnasium by a score of 35-23. Displaying an almost perfect defense that allowed the visitors to score only once from under the basket and kept them trying long chances from the middle of the court, the freshmen ran up a 10-3 lead at the end of the first quarter and had increased that advantage slightly at the end of the game.

Captain Good opened the scoring for Williams with a field goal following a tangle under the Holyoke basket, and the freshmen kept increasing their lead throughout. Play in the first few minutes was slow, with all the scoring resulting from wild confusion under the baskets, but with the opening of the second quarter the game seemed to speed up. Cosgrove scored on a short shot after taking a pass from Fowle, and Collins missed two easy trips in quick succession as the Holyoke passing attack suddenly broke through the Williams defense. Play was considerably faster for the rest of the period, with the freshmen holding their own to end the half with an 18-7 advantage.

In the second half, Holyoke, unable to break through the Williams line, resorted to a series of despairing tries from the center of the floor and one-hand circus shots from the corners, and their good fortune in sinking several of these enabled them to hold their own for the rest of the game. Nakrnyko, who sank four tries from the distance, was the star of the Holyoke attack with a total of ten points. The individual high scorer of the game was Cosgrove of Williams who broke through the Holyoke defense unaided on several occasions to amass a total of six field goals for twelve points. Fowle and Captain Good with eight points each also contributed to the Williams score, and the whole team should come in for credit for their nirtight defense against the Holyoke attack.

Athletic Tax Report

Collected to date $16,693.47
Unpaid $5,070.78

Unpaid by Freshmen 25, Sophomores 42, Juniors 56, Seniors 48, total unpaid 171, or 21% of the student body.

Last year it was necessary to follow up about this same proportion of undergraduates before we were able to report a hundred percent record, but the record was made and turned a threatened deficit into a two thousand dollar balance for the academic year. The Williams system has been established and maintained by student vote. Only by student cooperation can it continue to be successful. It is not fair to the large majority who meet the obligation promptly to allow a small minority to delay or avoid payment. The Graduate-treasurer again urges prompt action by the 171 student classed above so that he may not be forced to use drastic measures in the process of collection. That is an unpleasant process. Let's cooperate!

E. Herbert Botsord, Grad.-treas.

LECTURER TELLS OF INTERPRETING IN WAR

Prof. Peirce, in Tuesday Lecture, Gives Humorous Anecdotes
Of War Work

"Adventures in Translation", the second of the series of Tuesday afternoon lectures, presented this week by Assistant Professor Walter Peirce in the Thompson Laboratory, proved to be an entertaining pot-pourri of humorous anecdotes in connection with the World War and subsequent political events which have written such important chapters in international history. From the vantage point of chief of the American interpreting and translation service during the War, and later of chief of the translation bureau of the American Delegation to Negotiate Peace, Professor Peirce was for eleven years in a particularly fortunate position to amass these "footnotes of history", as he called them, which formed the basis of his lecture.

Professor Peirce first became concerned in "making the world safe for democracy", when he secured a position as interpreter at American Headquarters in 1917. "Could he translate French into English?" "Yes." "But could he put bad English into good?" "I have been a university professor for eighteen years," said Professor Peirce, and the job was his.

Mr. Peirce's chief difficulties as head of the translation bureau lay, on the one hand, in supervising French professors who were "more familiar with the language of Shakespeare and Milton than that of the American Expeditionary Forces," and on the other, in guarding against the errors which persistently creep in under the tension of constant translation. On one occasion, serious consequences were narrowly avoided when Rene Talamon, a former Williams man, discovered on the third proof-reading that a mis-translation of the French word "riposter" had represented the Germans as retreating, when in reality they were fairly "boiling out of the trenches."

The professor's work brought him in frequent contact with General Pershing, whom he described as making no definite impression for popularity or unpopularity among his troops, not even to the extent of receiving the familiar nickname of the "old man". The legend of "Lafayette nous voila" was also discounted by the speaker as being a little too theatrical for the character of the General.

After his War activities had been completed, Professor Peirce was associated with the Commission on the League of Nations, as interpreter. "Of all the personalities around the table," he stated, "the three that impressed me most by their vast knowledge of international law, and keen sense of practical politics were President Wilson, Lord Robert Cecil, and Venizelos." President Wilson, he noted, "thought and spoke clearly", but Lord Cecil "apparently subscribed to Talleyrand's doctrine that all language is invented for the concealment of thought".

For a short time after his experience at the League of Nations, Mr. Peirce served as translator of the numerous admiring letters which Wilson received from everywhere in Europe. Among these he encountered many amusing proposals, ranging from that of the inventor of a petrifying process to preserve the bodies of famous statesmen, to that of an expert in eugenics who offered his services to the "Emperor Wilson" in founding a eugenically perfect line for his American Throne.

The professor concluded his lecture with an account of his interpreting services on the Reparations Commission, and included various amusing details of the strife and struggles of the little Balkan countries, emancipated by the War. "And now," he said, "I have reverted to type, and am training translators to take my place in the next ultimate war to end wars."

20 Report for Regular Frosh Hockey Practice

In addition to the regular Varsity practice, Coach Bellerose has been giving the freshmen a chance to handle the puck in order to develop Varsity material for next year. In spite of the infrequency of their practice sessions, the freshmen have shown up remarkably well, the playing of Doughty and Hanrahan being particularly outstanding.

Two weeks ago, the freshmen defeated the sophomores by the score of 3-2, and on Wednesday and Thursday of this week practiced with the second Varsity. Twenty men have been coming out, and two first-class teams have been selected, the forward line of the first consisting of Van Sant, Hanrahan and Doughty, while Johnson and French play defense, and Hamilton and Lessing are competing for the goalie position.

February Matches Will Decide Two Intramurals

Eight teams have survived the elimination round in intramural basketball, and as soon as the examination period is over, these eight will turn their attention to a series of round-robin games which will be concluded with the championship match in the last week of February. Three unplayed matches in the round-robin series of handball have likewise forced a postponement of the deciding game, scheduled for this week, until the week following the mid-year recess.

Two close basketball games, each decided by a single basket, provided the climax on Wednesday afternoon for the last interfraternity matches of the semester, Zeta Psi defeating Psi Upsilon, 17-15, and Theta Delta Chi gaining a last minute decision over Sigma Phi, 20-18. In the latter game, Theta Delta Chi overcame a lead of 16 to 9 with four successive baskets in the final quarter, and just managed to hold their slender advantage through the remainder of the game. Zeta Psi, on the other hand, was far in front of Psi Upsilon at half time, 16-3, but added only one point to their total for the balance of the game, while Psi Upsilon, after moving up to striking distance with 12 straight points, was not quite equal to tying the score.

In the only handball match of the week, Phi Delta Theta defeated Zeta Psi, 2-0. This victory practically assures them of a place in the final match, as they have won three straight matches without a defeat. Commons Club is the only other team with an undefeated record, and in the event of a victory over Delta Phi, will occupy the other position in the final bracket.

Soccer Insignia Awarded

Members of last year's championship soccer team and the two managers were awarded the new five inch "W" by the Athletic Council at its last meeting. Under the successful tutelage of Coach Bullock the team won the Little Three Championship last year to conclude the most brilliant season since the introduction of the sport here six years ago. The following men were awarded letters: Captain Christie, Gregory, Neilson, Phelps, and Willmot '29, Captain-elect Thoms, Babize, Bright, McKittrick, Park, and Sherman, Strong, and Groskin '33, Heine and Leber '31.

Musical Service at St. John's

There will be a special musical service at St. John's Church on Park Street under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Safford this Sunday at 10.45 a. m., and all students have been invited to attend. The Reverend Brook Stabler will preach, with Mr. Safford at the organ. The special numbers to be sung by the choir, of which Mrs. Safford is a member, include Bless the Lord, Oh my soul by Ivanoff and Mendelssohn's I Waited for the Lord.

King Lectures on Germany

German educational methods and national characteristics were discussed by Assoc. Prof. J. F. King of the Chemistry Department before the Science Club Thursday. The speaker, who spent a large part of his sabbatical in Germany, described the curriculum and methods of the secondary school system of the country and of the University of Munich, at which he studied during the winter of 1927. He also explained national celebrations and customs observed in his stays in Saxony and about Munich.

Printing

THE MOTHER OF PROGRESS

THE LIGHT that dispelled the darkness and put to flight the hosts of ignorance and superstition is the art of printing. It has penetrated through the centuries, flooding the recesses of the human mind and awakening dormant powers to further the ideals of an insatiable civilization. Its beams radiate knowledge, truth and power; unconsciously it is shaping and directing the intellectual and the material life of all mankind --a stimulus to the creative mind, an uplifting influence to the dullard. Printing is the art of enlightenment of all arts, as truly as an art preservative. It reflects and disseminates in true colors, without distortion or stinted reservation, truth that is stranger than fiction, guiding with a strong hand the destinies of the thoughtful world

PURPLE RALLIES TO CONQUER M. A. C. 12-9

Maroon Lead of 9-4 Overcome as Thoms Is Substituted in Final Quarter

After thirty minutes of superb defensive play which held the Maroon to nine points but netted only four on its own score, the Purple offense suddenly broke loose to sink four quick baskets for a 12 to 9 victory last Tuesday night over the Massachusetts Aggie quintet at the Drill Hall in Amherst. A five to three lead at half time was steadily increased to nine to four by the M. A. C. five, but the substitution of Thoms at right forward for Williams cracked the Aggies' zone defense besides holding them scoreless for the last ten minutes.

Opening hostilities in the first half, the Maroon scored on a perfect long shot from the center of the floor. After a minute of passing Betham tied the score with another basket. The half went on with Williams shooting wildly at the basket and M. A. C. adding three points to its total by another long shot and a foul, while both teams guarded fiercely. Near the end of the half a foul by Betham brought the Williams score to three.

The second half continued as the first with the Aggies adhering to their Fabian policy, but gradually adding to their score. Two more long shots brought their total to nine as the Purple added one more on a foul. With only eleven minutes left to play the storm broke. Allen took a pass from Alexander and made a basket. Cuddeback put one through the hoop from well back on the floor, and after a minute Allen again dropped one in the ring. With a one point lead the Purple adopted the M. A. C. tactics, holding the ball in its own territory. When only two minutes were left for playing the Aggies gave up their waiting game, coming out to get their men. Alexander promptly scored on a long dribble and a short shot.

Most impressive throughout the game was the guard in both quintets, the team work of Alexander and Cuddeback in particular being the best so far this season. But the whole outcome of the game depended on whether the Purple would ever find the basket, for in the first half alone Williams tried 22 shots to M. A. C.'s 11, while the former's man-for-man guarding was just as strong as the zone defense used by the Aggies.

The following is a summary of the game:

William H. Danaher Dies

William H. Danaher, proprietor of the W. H. Danaher Hardware Store on Spring Street, died here last Monday after an illness of three weeks. Between the hours of 10 and 11 on Tuesday, while the funeral was being held, all business in Williamstown was suspended as a sign of the town's sincere regret of the decease of one of its oldest residents and most prominent business men. The funeral service was held in St. Patrick's Church and was largely attended.

Infirmary Patients

Ginn '30 and Gregg '31 were the only students confined to the Thompson Infirmary on Thursday evening, January 24. If an undergraduate becomes seriously ill, his parents are immediately notified by the College authorities.

THE ROUND TABLE

A GENTLE CENSURE

The Round Table, in keeping with its religious policy of the last few issues, has yet another weighty recommendation to bring forward to the attention of the undergraduates of Williams College. To put our idea into a nutshell, we advocate bigger and better singing by all and sundry within the precincts of the Thompson Memorial Chapel. Last Monday during the morning chapel service, unbeknownst to the student body, we conducted an extensive and far-reaching campaign to discover who, where, and why undergraduates might be adding their tuneful harmony to that of Safford's singers. Weeks before we had gathered a band of twenty tried and true companions, who were to unobtrusively station themselves, at the proper moment, in advantageous positions around the chapel. Came the eventful day, and our carefully-thought out plans worked to perfection. Four of our most skillful operators hid themselves around the entrance, to scrutinize each countenance of the marching column as they trekked into morning worship, and so receive beforehand some inkling as to who were contemplating the serious act of singing. To make a long story short, detailed reports from each of our twenty operators were handed in at the secret conference afterwards. We herewith present the main points of our investigations, which also showed up many of the humorous foibles of mankind. 57 hymnals, in addition to various papers and text-books, were opened during the service, and 26 were opened to the right page. It is a matter of interest that 22 of these 26 were used by members of the faculty and their wives.

Thus the real finds of our research netted the sum total of 4 undergraduates who really sang. Now, we ask you, is this not deplorable? Returning alumni will think that a new Williams man is in the making, one whose vocal cords are atrophied. May we not beg you, may implore you with tears in our eyes, that this grievous fault be remedied immediately? To bring this about we humbly suggest, in all appreciation of the "galaxy of conscripted songsters", that a judicious allocation of Choristers among the body of an apathetic audience might lead to startling results.

Merlin.

Let chaos reign
On earth again
Until I see her charms.
I fear that she,
So sweet, may be
Enlosed in other's arms.

Merlin.

The following, for which we take no responsibility, was mailed to us in a plain envelope, postmarked Williamstown. Feeling that the veiled threats within the letter merited drastic steps, we decided to call the famous Philo Vance to our aid, but all to no avail. Even he was foiled, for the sender had used a typewriter. We quote Vance in saying, "it is my opinion that the writer used mittens while typewriting, as no inermingating finger-prints are discoverable. Nevertheless, I was of the opinion that I had the scoundrel within my grasp after an important find, namely that the 'i's' were all printed in a peculiar manner. However, this led but to a blind alley, since I discovered, following a laborious investigation which lasted several weeks, that the only typewriter with such a defect is located in the private office of Dean Howes. Knowing that he is absolutely without suspicion, and entirely innocent, I have regretfully given up the case." Underneath the enclosed three verses was imprinted a ghastly Skull and Bones with the following signature, U. Printet. In order to protect ourselves from possible harm, we are devoting these few lines to the anonymous poet. We believe that the model of this poem is undoubtedly Poe's "To Helen".

TO PREXY

Prexy, thy power is to me
Like those vanishing autos of former dates,
By some yeleft the Model "T",
Which the weary, way-worn student takes
Back to this God-forsaken place.

On Western missions long want to roam,
Thy frosted hair, thy classic face,
Thy regal airs, have made me moan
For the glory that is Hoosie,
And the grandeur that was Rome.

Lo, in yon muddy ditch,
How helpless there I see you stand,
The useless crank within your hand.
Ah, Prexy, view the waters which Gurgle gently to the land.

U. Printet.

We have been requested by our enterprising contributor, Sir Reptitious, to print an age-old favorite of his. While some of our readers may remember it, yet we are confident that the majority will find a keen enjoyment within its hidden meaning. With best good wishes we leave it to your tender mercies.

He was elected Class Secretary in his Sophomore year and also to the Student Council. Last year he was Secretary of the Student Council, as well as manager of track and a member of the Varsity football squad. Last fall Clark became president of the Student Council, and this spring will again manage the track team. He is a member of Gargoyle and the Purple Key Society.

By vote of the Class the Senior banquet will not be held this year. Its place will be taken by the banquet proposed by the Faculty Class Day Committee, provided that that committee's plans are approved by the Committee on Administration and by the Trustees.

men since returning from a 1-0 victory over M. A. C. last Tuesday. As the low score against the Aggies was more the result of the five-man defense adopted by that organization at the sacrifice of an offense than the lack of scoring power in the Purple aggregation, Coach Bellerose has laid no special emphasis on the attack. The entire squad is in excellent shape, and the Coach is confident of victory. Gathering darkness toward the end of the contest will have no effect this afternoon as the hockey management has completed the installation of flood-lights around the rink. They are so arranged as to cast no shadows and play might even be carried on at night.

ton explained that he limited the number of authors, because it would be an extremely difficult task to make out the individual examinations for each student, as would be necessary if each chose a different author.

The system of working is somewhat similar to that used by men working for a Ph.D. degree. "Although there are no classes held during this period of research, students are welcome to consult the instructor at any time concerning the method of work or the general principle regarding the studies," said Professor Dutton. "The men must determine which author they wish to study without consulting one another, but, after this decision has been reached, all, who are working on the same author, may exchange ideas if each contributes his share to the general welfare."

The system has been likened to the Harvard Reading Plan, but the two differ slightly. Whereas the Harvard student is assigned certain books to read, the Williams student may take his choice. Also the examination for the latter is based entirely upon the results of his independent work, while the examination at Harvard covers greater territory. The result is that the Williams student has a much greater chance to show individuality and ability to grasp the important facts.

Undefeated Freshmen Face Drury High Today

Facing Drury High School of North Adams at 2:30 p. m. today in Lasell Gymnasium, the Freshman five should have little trouble in keeping their season's record clear of defeats. The visitors have won only four games this season, and have lost to both Williamstown and Holyoke High Schools, whom the freshmen succeeded in downing easily.

Indications as to the relative strength of the two teams may be gained from the fact that Drury lost to Holyoke last week by 23-17 and to Williamstown earlier in the year by 26-21, while the freshmen downed Holyoke, 35-23, and the local high school by 26-17. The freshmen will start their usual line-up, with Captain Good and Engel as forwards, Fowle at center, and Cosgrove and Swinehart as guards.

1932 Wins Interclass Relay

In the first race of the Interclass Track Relay series held last Tuesday afternoon, 1932 defeated 1931, the Freshman team covering eight laps on the board track in the fast time of 2:22. Nelson, Senn, Myers, and Tuttle composed the first-year team while Jacobs, Capps, Trunman, and Goodbody represented the Sophomores.

sistent pass-work on the part of the Purple, nevertheless gave the Red Ball its only real chance to score when Manty in the midst of a flurry in the enemy's territory shot an already rolling puck toward the goal. Unluckily for him, it hit a spot of rough ice and bounced clear of the cage.

The remarkable defense of the M. A. C. team, which withstood nearly all attacks, was the feature of the game. With strategy almost like that of basketball, they staged the hockey counterpart of the famous five-man defense, with Myrick at goal doing his share of the fighting with 22 stops to his credit. The Williams sextet, displaying superior pass-work throughout, offered an attack by Howe, Hoyt, and Brigham which was stopped with difficulty at the end of a series of determined rushes up the rink.

The line-up and summary follows:

QUINTET OVERCOMES WESLEYAN, 38 TO 25

Willmott's Brilliant Debut Colors
Auspicious 'Little Three'
Series Opener

N. H. TEAM IS ALSO VICTIM

Fighting New Hampshire Staters

Wesleyan Game

Clever, ingenious passing that took Wesleyan by surprise and punctured her close, man-for-man defense, enabled the Varsity basketball team to inaugurate successfully its drive for the 1929 Little Three title by defeating the Cardinal and Black, 38 to 25, in the last game before the mid-year recess, which was played on January 26 in the Lasell Gymnasium. Inspired by the remarkable work of Willmott at forward, Williams was able to stage a characteristic mid-period rally in the first half and score 15 consecutive points to assume an 18 to 12 lead over Wesleyan at half time.

Allen scored 11 points, Willmott scored 10, Betham nine, Alexander eight, while the fact that Substitute van Cott with eight points was the only Wesleyan man to score more than four points, shows the inability of the Methodists to get started in the development of an efficient attack. The Purple followed the ball like hawks, and by their superb guarding forced the Cardinal and Black to resort eventually to long shots.

Careful playing at the outset of the game kept the score low until Wesleyan started a short drive in which Nye and Sanders were able to score six points by a basket and four free throws, while Williams were getting three on Betham's converted foul and Allen's perfect shot from the side of the court. But when the Purple got started, it was hard to stop. Reverting to the form which it has shown in most of its home games, the team began its rapid trips down the floor, its snappy passing, quick dodging, nice shooting: Alexander, Allen, Willmott, Betham, Willmott, Allen, Willmott and Alexander shot and 15 successive points were scored to give Williams an 18 to 6 lead. Then with new blood in her line-up, Wesleyan got six points back before the gun sounded, ending the half.

In the second period Williams quickly widened the gap between the two scores from six points to 15 points by fast, sensational play marked by much dribbling.

Traffic Lights for Main St.

Decision to purchase traffic control equipment for Main Street intersections, and provision for a new post office building, feature Williamstown improvement projects voted for this year at the business session of the town meeting, last Monday afternoon. The only closely contested office in the town voting resulted in the election of M. L. Monahan over Mrs. Richard A. Newhall as member of the school board. A crowd of over 1200 taxed the capacity of the town hall to the limit, although none but qualified voters were admitted.

Williamstown Said to Be Favorable to Morals and Literary Improvement in Recent Study of Colleges

"Pleasant social life, combined with an unusually strict moral atmosphere, and at least a fair degree of ambition for culture and literary interests" mark undergraduate life at Williams, writes James Anderson Hawes in his recent study of American colleges, Twenty Years Among The Twenty Olds. Basing his comments on the experience of a score of years as travelling secretary of Delta Kappa Epsilon, the author devotes himself chiefly to a discussion of the type of student and the organization of campus life here as compared with other Eastern schools.

The social organization at Williams quite closely parallels that of Harvard, Mr. Hawes believes, declaring that this college, from considerations of expense, reputation, and classical tradition, attracts as highly selective a student body from the "Aristocracy of the Small Cities" as does the former from the "Aristocracy of the Big Cities." "Consequently," he continues, "we find the appearance of the entire student body at chapel on Sunday morning to be of a higher and more attractive average than we would find at a general gathering of all students at Har-

Freshman Five Defeats Drury High Easily, 42-23

Finding little difficulty in breaking through their opponents' defense to score almost at will, the Freshman basketball team ran its string of victories up to five on Saturday, January 26, by downing the Drury High School five of North Adams by 42 to 23. Cosgrove of Williams was again the high scorer of the day with six field goals and a free throw for a total of thirteen points, while Lobo, who substituted for Bishop at left forward for Drury, led his team with four field goals.

The freshmen started slowly, their offense being marked by faulty passing which kept the score down during the first few minutes, but soon rallied to take an 18-8 lead at half time. The visitors, unable to break through to score from under the basket, were forced to resort to long shots, and their failure to follow up their numerous tries kept them scoreless for several minutes at the start of the third period. With the Williams total mounting rapidly, Coach Fox took the opportunity to try out most of his squad, and made seven substitutions in the second half. The line-ups were as follows:

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS BOW TO W. P. I., 45-26

Schott Is Individual Star With 12
Points; Two New Records
Are Established

Suffering their third straight set-back of the season, the Williams natators went down to defeat before the strong W. P. I. swimming team by the score of 45-26 on Saturday, January 26, in the Lasell pool. The power of the Worcester line-up was centered in four freestyle men—Osoipowich, Tinker, Holcombe, and Rogers—who scored 32 points for their team by first and second places in the 440, the 50, the 100, and by composing the victorious relay team, though Captain Schott of Williams was the individual star of the meet with 12 points to his credit through victories in the breast and backstroke and by swimming on the winning medley relay team.

Springfield Meet

The Williams swimming team was defeated on Thursday afternoon in the Lasell Pool by the powerful Springfield natators by the score of 52 to 28. Full details of the meet will be published in Tuesday's issue of THE RECORD.

Two new records—one college and one pool record—were established in the meet. The Williams medley relay team, composed of Van der Bogert, Schott, and Wolcott, broke the record made the previous week and set up a new college time of 3:38.5. Osoipowich and Tinker, the star distance men of the visitors, swam the 440 in a dead heat to establish a new pool record of 5:48.2, breaking the former record of 5:52 made by Littlefield of Springfield in the 1928 intercollegiate at Williamstown.

STRONG YALE FIVE TO FACE PURPLE TONIGHT

Yale Team Has Erratic Record in Ten Games Though Brown
Is Conquered

Prepared to avenge the two defeats in its last two games and refreshed by a fortnight's rest, Yale sends a powerful quintet to renew basketball hostilities with the Purple five tonight at 8:00 p. m. for the second game of the Mid-Year, Holiday period. Playing on the Lasell Gymnasium Court for the first time in many years, the Eli quintet comes with a varied but dangerous record behind it, having defeated Brown, Dartmouth, and Princeton on its home floor though losing to Cornell, Dartmouth, and Penn away.

In the other six games that Yale has played since the opening of the season three have been won and three lost, though only one of the latter was on the home floor. Upsala was defeated in the first game by a 33-22 score, while Providence College was victorious over the Blue a week later. In the annual Christmas tourney Georgetown defeated Yale in the first game, and Holy Cross lost to Yale in the second. Of outstanding importance for comparison is the game with Brown, which resulted in a 31-18 victory for Yale after the second team held the Bruins even for the first half.

Against Dartmouth in the last game before exams the Eli quintet played a whirlwind second period after trailing at half time 23-16 only to lose out in the end by a single point, 34-35. A new star, Joe Cook, made his appearance in this game when, besides leading the defense, he sank seven baskets and two fouls. Nassua at right forward also played a sterling game for Yale, accounting for eleven more of his team's points. Horowitz, another forward, was outstanding for his work in the Cornell game, which the Blue also lost after a desperate second half rally. In Linehan Yale has a spectacular and clever center, while Fodder is as good a center as he is a forward. Merrill, who was one of the high scorers of the Intercollegiate League last year, has been out of the line-up several times this season with an injury, but he may be able to play.

33 GIRLS EXPECTED FOR MID-YEAR PARTY

'Psi Upsilon' House Party the Only
One on Campus During the
Mid-Year Recess

About thirty-three girls are expected to be present for the mid-year festivities at the Psi Upsilon house, which is giving the only house party on the campus at this time, planned for the evenings of February 8 and 9. Phi Gamma Delta, which had received the sanction of the Student Council to hold a party, decided to abandon it, and possibly because of the cancellation of plans for a Sophomore Prom none of the other houses saw fit to make any plans.

In addition to the customary dances entertainment for the girls will consist of a hockey game with Colby, a swimming meet, against Springfield, and a basketball game with New Hampshire State. The music will be furnished by Miff Mole and his "Little Mollers". The list of girls expected is as follows:

Mrs. L. G. Adams and Mrs. Gee of Holyoke; The Misses Mary Alexander, Mary Frances Apgar, Jane Baker, Virginia Crane, Jane Castle, Mary Louise Brown, Elizabeth Dunscourt, Kay Hawkes, Jane

INSTITUTE PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR 1929, LISTING FOREIGN ECONOMISTS

Relay Team Will Enter
Race in Melrose Games

Travelling to New York on February 9, the Williams relay team will compete with Union, Amherst and Colby in a mid-winter meet at Madison Square Garden. Composed, in addition to the four-man relay team, of a hurdler and a sprinter, as well as Coach Seeley and Manager Clark, the group will be met by formidable opposition in New York on the part of a number of famous track athletes, including Percy Williams, who won the 100 and 220-yard dashes at the Olympic Games last summer.

With Lane, Strother, and Skinner, all of whom were members of last year's team, the only vacant post for the relay will be filled by Goodbody, a leading runner on the cross country team this fall. Doherty, who is doing the 50-yd. hurdles, has figured prominently in the Spring track meets. The 50-yd. handicap dash is to be run by Beals, Captain of the track team for next year.

LONE CORNELL SCORE BEATS PURPLE SEXTET

Season's First Setback Suffered
On Sage Ice as Heye Stops
All Purple Tries

Thirty minutes of everything that Williams could put on the ice was not quite enough to overcome a first period lead of one point, and on Saturday, Jan. 26 the Purple sextet met defeat for the first time this season, losing to Cornell, 1-0, on the Sage Hall rink. Reminiscent of the Union game, Williams started listlessly, allowing Llop to slip the puck past Waters after a struggle around the home cage, but unlike the previous contest, a revived attack in the last two periods, which kept the disk in Cornell territory, failed to tally as it clashed with a strong defense superbly backed up by rangy goalguard Heye.

Last year, when the Purple handed Cornell a 7-1 defeat, the Red and White possessed a Freshman team that could beat the varsity. This fact was demonstrated on Saturday when a team composed almost entirely of sophomores showed a much better brand of hockey than that played by the Ithacans last season. Although Kingsbury, flashy defense star, is an upperclassman, Llop, the only man to score, and Heye, who averted a tie or possible defeat by many sensational saves, are both of the class of 1931.

The game opened with careful advances by both teams. Langmaid, back at right defense, crossed the puck back and forth with Howe for several stinging shots, while Brigham skated around Kingsbury only to have his try knocked down by Heye. The Red and White showed ability to take the rubber from advancing defense-men just as they crossed their own forward line, thus leaving the Williams men momentarily behind and forcing them to come up from the rear. At 12 minutes,

Varsity Swimming Team Defeats Freshmen, 45-27

Meeting for the first time, officially, in the pool at Lasell Gymnasium on February 2nd, the Varsity swimming team overwhelmed the Freshmen, 47-25, a victory which despite its completeness was sharply contested. Several yearlings gave signs of promise in the meet, notably Taylor and McMahon, both sharp contestants for the Prince Cup, and Kerr whose excellent 150-yd. backstroke in 1:59.1, though not a college record, is the best time yet attained in the new pool.

With the 300-yd. Medley Relay as a starter, the Varsity began to quickly pile up their score in a 6-3 win. Next in the 50-yd. Higginbotham, and later Wolcott in the 440-yd. added five points each. However, the following races were more successfully contested, and the Freshmen succeeded in taking many close seconds, notably in the diving. Though they easily won the 150-yd. backstroke, and Rawlins finished first for all in the breast stroke, the Freshmen lost all three places in the final 100-yd. race.

TO CONVENE HERE AUG. 1-29

Dr. Schacht, President of German
Reichsbank, Is Among Those
to Lecture

Placing emphasis on the economic aspect of international relations and presenting as lecturers such noted economists as Dr. Hjalmar Schacht of Berlin and M. Andre Seigfried of Paris, the ninth annual session of the Institute of Politics will convene in Williamstown next summer from August 1 to 29, according to the recent announcement of Executive Secretary Walter W. McLaren. While at its last session the Institute considered as a main topic Pan-American relations in their more political phases, this year four of the conferences and one half the lectures will be voted to the general subject of "World Economic Stabilization", and in this light, limitation of armament and similar topics will be treated by both European and American leaders.

Besides Dr. Schacht, who is president of the German Reichsbank and chief German delegate to the conference which will frame proposals for the final settlement of the reparations question, and M. Seigfried, author of "America Comes of Age", who is professor at the School of Social Sciences in Paris and attached to the French Foreign Office as an economic expert, three other Europeans will speak at the session. These are Dr. William E. Rappard, professor at the University of Geneva, writer and speaker, former member of the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations; Count Giovanni Elia, of Rome, a Fascist and naval expert who invented the depth bomb used by American and British Governments in the War, and Theodor E. G. Gregory, professor of Banking in the University of London, and expert on economic and banking matters.

Dr. McLaren prefaced the announcement of the program of the ninth annual

WRESTLERS LOSE ON NORTH ADAMS 'Y' MAT

Inexperienced Team Defeated by Margin of One Fall in First
Meet of Season

Although equaling their opponents in the number of matches won, the Purple matmen lost their initial encounter with the North Adams Y. M. C. A. team 16½ to 14½ at the association gymnasium on the evening of Saturday, January 26. The brawny North Adams wrestlers experienced no little difficulty in downing their younger adversaries who frequently displayed an encouraging cleverness in attack, and only falls in the last two bouts gave them the victory.

The first match in the 125-pound class was finally declared a draw after Miller of Williams and Guzzi of North Adams had tussled indecisively through two overtime periods, but Moore of North Adams made short work of throwing Spencer of Williams in less than two minutes to score five points in the other match in that weight class. Reynolds, in the 135-pound division, then evened the count by scoring a fall over Waterhouse of North Adams in slightly over two minutes.

Both bouts in the 145-pound class were concluded in favor of Williams. Meiklejohn, wrestling for the first time, won a decision over Cleary of North Adams, while Capt. Lisle displayed his customary skill in throwing Rossi of North Adams. At this stage in the meet a Williams victory seemed more than likely, but the two final bouts completely altered the situation. In the 165-pound class St. Pierre of North Adams succeeded in throwing Baxter of Williams after five minutes of struggling, and Andersen of Williams, wrestling in the 175-pound class, was brought to the mat by Graney in about four minutes. The final count then gave North Adams three falls and a draw as against two falls, one decision, and a draw for the Purple.

Finding little difficulty in breaking through their opponents' defense to score almost at will, the Freshman basketball team ran its string of victories up to five on Saturday, January 26, by downing the Drury High School five of North Adams by 42 to 23. Cosgrove of Williams was again the high scorer of the day with six field goals and a free throw for a total of thirteen points, while Lobo, who substituted for Bishop at left forward for Drury, led his team with four field goals.

The freshmen started slowly, their offense being marked by faulty passing which kept the score down during the first few minutes, but soon rallied to take an 18-8 lead at half time. The visitors, unable to break through to score from under the basket, were forced to resort to long shots, and their failure to follow up their numerous tries kept them scoreless for several minutes at the start of the third period. With the Williams total mounting rapidly, Coach Fox took the opportunity to try out most of his squad, and made seven substitutions in the second half. The line-ups were as follows:

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS BOW TO W. P. I., 45-26

Schott Is Individual Star With 12
Points; Two New Records
Are Established

Suffering their third straight set-back of the season, the Williams natators went down to defeat before the strong W. P. I. swimming team by the score of 45-26 on Saturday, January 26, in the Lasell pool. The power of the Worcester line-up was centered in four freestyle men—Osoipowich, Tinker, Holcombe, and Rogers—who scored 32 points for their team by first and second places in the 440, the 50, the 100, and by composing the victorious relay team, though Captain Schott of Williams was the individual star of the meet with 12 points to his credit through victories in the breast and backstroke and by swimming on the winning medley relay team.

Springfield Meet

The Williams swimming team was defeated on Thursday afternoon in the Lasell Pool by the powerful Springfield natators by the score of 52 to 28. Full details of the meet will be published in Tuesday's issue of THE RECORD.

Two new records—one college and one pool record—were established in the meet. The Williams medley relay team, composed of Van der Bogert, Schott, and Wolcott, broke the record made the previous week and set up a new college time of 3:38.5. Osoipowich and Tinker, the star distance men of the visitors, swam the 440 in a dead heat to establish a new pool record of 5:48.2, breaking the former record of 5:52 made by Littlefield of Springfield in the 1928 intercollegiate at Williamstown.

STRONG YALE FIVE TO FACE PURPLE TONIGHT

Yale Team Has Erratic Record in
Ten Games Though Brown
Is Conquered

Prepared to avenge the two defeats in its last two games and refreshed by a fortnight's rest, Yale sends a powerful quintet to renew basketball hostilities with the Purple five tonight at 8:00 p. m. for the second game of the Mid-Year, Holiday period. Playing on the Lasell Gymnasium Court for the first time in many years, the Eli quintet comes with a varied but dangerous record behind it, having defeated Brown, Dartmouth, and Princeton on its home floor though losing to Cornell, Dartmouth, and Penn away.

In the other six games that Yale has played since the opening of the season three have been won and three lost, though only one of the latter was on the home floor. Upsala was defeated in the first game by a 33-22 score, while Providence College was victorious over the Blue a week later. In the annual Christmas tourney Georgetown defeated Yale in the first game, and Holy Cross lost to Yale in the second. Of outstanding importance for comparison is the game with Brown, which resulted in a 31-18 victory for Yale after the second team held the Bruins even for the first half.

Against Dartmouth in the last game before exams the Eli quintet played a whirlwind second period after trailing at half time 23-16 only to lose out in the end by a single point, 34-35. A new star, Joe Cook, made his appearance in this game when, besides leading the defense, he sank seven baskets and two fouls. Nassua at right forward also played a sterling game for Yale, accounting for eleven more of his teams points. Horowitz, another forward, was outstanding for his work in the Cornell game, which the Blue also lost after a desperate second half rally. In Linehan Yale has a spectacular and clever center, while Fodder is as good a center as he is a forward. Merrill, who was one of the high scorers of the Intercollegiate League last year, has been out of the line-up several times this season with an injury, but he may be able to play.

33 GIRLS EXPECTED FOR MID-YEAR PARTY

'Psi Upsilon' House Party the Only
One on Campus During the
Mid-Year Recess

About thirty-three girls are expected to be present for the mid-year festivities at the Psi Upsilon house, which is giving the only house party on the campus at this time, planned for the evenings of February 8 and 9. Phi Gamma Delta, which had received the sanction of the Student Council to hold a party, decided to abandon it, and possibly because of the cancellation of plans for a Sophomore Prom none of the other houses saw fit to make any plans.

In addition to the customary dances entertainment for the girls will consist of a hockey game with Colby, a swimming meet against Springfield, and a basketball game with New Hampshire State. The music will be furnished by Miff Mole and his "Little Mollers". The list of girls expected is as follows:

Mrs. L. G. Adams and Mrs. Gee of Holyoke; The Misses Mary Alexander, Mary Frances Apgar, Jane Baker, Virginia Crane, Jane Castle, Mary Louise Brown, Elizabeth Dunsourt, Kay Hawkes, Jane

INSTITUTE PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR 1929, LISTING FOREIGN ECONOMISTS

Relay Team Will Enter
Race in Melrose Games

Travelling to New York on February 9, the Williams relay team will compete with Union, Amherst and Colby in a mid-winter meet at Madison Square Garden. Composed, in addition to the four-man relay team, of a hurdler and a sprinter, as well as Coach Seely and Manager Clark, the group will be met by formidable opposition in New York on the part of a number of famous track athletes, including Percy Williams, who won the 100 and 220-yard dashes at the Olympic Games last summer.

With Lane, Strother, and Skinner, all of whom were members of last year's team, the only vacant post for the relay will be filled by Goodbody, a leading runner on the cross country team this fall. Doherty, who is doing the 50-yd. hurdles, has figured prominently in the Spring track meets. The 50-yd. handicap dash is to be run by Beals, Captain of the track team for next year.

LONE CORNELL SCORE BEATS PURPLE SEXTET

Season's First Setback Suffered
On Sage Ice as Heye Stops
All Purple Tries

Thirty minutes of everything that Williams could put on the ice was not quite enough to overcome a first period lead of one point, and on Saturday, Jan. 26 the Purple sextet met defeat for the first time this season, losing to Cornell, 1-0, on the Sage Hall rink. Reminiscent of the Union game, Williams started listlessly, allowing Llop to slip the puck past Waters after a struggle around the home cage, but unlike the previous contest, a revived attack in the last two periods, which kept the disk in Cornell territory, failed to tally as it clashed with a strong defense superbly backed up by rangy goaltender Heye.

Last year, when the Purple handed Cornell a 7-1 defeat, the Red and White possessed a Freshman team that could beat the varsity. This fact was demonstrated on Saturday when a team composed almost entirely of sophomores showed a much better brand of hockey than that played by the Ithacans last season. Although Kingsbury, flashy defense star, is an upperclassman, Llop, the only man to score, and Heye, who averted a tie or possible defeat by many sensational saves, are both of the class of 1931.

The game opened with careful advances by both teams. Langmaid, back at right defense, crossed the puck back and forth with Howe for several stinging shots, while Brigham skated around Kingsbury only to have his try knocked down by Heye. The Red and White showed ability to take the rubber from advancing defense-men just as they crossed their own forward line, thus leaving the Williams men momentarily behind and forcing them to come up from the rear. At 12 minutes,

Varsity Swimming Team Defeats Freshmen, 45-27

Meeting for the first time, officially, in the pool at Lasell Gymnasium on February 2nd, the Varsity swimming team overwhelmed the Freshmen, 47-25, a victory which despite its completeness was sharply contested. Several yearlings gave signs of promise in the meet, notably Taylor and McMahon, both sharp contestants for the Prince Cup, and Kerr whose excellent 150-yd. backstroke in 1:59.1, though not a college record, is the best time yet attained in the new pool.

With the 300-yd. Medley Relay as a starter, the Varsity began to quickly pile up their score in a 6-3 win. Next in the 50-yd. Higginbotham, and later Wolcott in the 440-yd. added five points each. However, the following races were more successfully contested, and the Freshmen succeeded in taking many close seconds, notably in the diving. Though they easily won the 150-yd. backstroke, and Rawlins finished first for them in the breast stroke, the Freshmen lost all three places in the final 100-yd. race.

TO CONVENE HERE AUG. 1-29

Dr. Schacht, President of German
Reichsbank, Is Among Those
to Lecture

Placing emphasis on the economic aspect of international relations and presenting as lecturers such noted economists as Dr. Hjalmar Schacht of Berlin and M. Andre Seigfried of Paris, the ninth annual session of the Institute of Politics will convene in Williamstown next summer from August 1 to 29, according to the recent announcement of Executive Secretary Walter W. McLaren. While at its last session the Institute considered as a main topic Pan-American relations in their more political phases, this year four of the conferences and one half the lectures will be voted to the general subject of "World Economic Stabilization", and in this light, limitation of armament and similar topics will be treated by both European and American leaders.

Besides Dr. Schacht, who is president of the German Reichsbank and chief German delegate to the conference which will frame proposals for the final settlement of the reparations question, and M. Seigfried, author of "America Comes of Age", who is professor at the School of Social Sciences in Paris and attached to the French Foreign Office as an economic expert, three other Europeans will speak at the session. These are Dr. William E. Rappard, professor at the University of Geneva, writer and speaker, former member of the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations; Count Giovanni Elia, of Rome, a Fascist and naval expert who invented the doph bomb used by American and British Governments in the War, and Theodor E. G. Gregory, professor of Banking in the University of London, and expert on economic and banking matters.

WRESTLERS LOSE ON NORTH ADAMS 'Y' MAT

Inexperienced Team Defeated by
Margin of One Fall in First
Meet of Season

Although equaling their opponents in the number of matches won, the Purple matmen lost their initial encounter with the North Adams Y. M. C. A. team 16½ to 14½ at the association gymnasium on the evening of Saturday, January 26. The brawny North Adams wrestlers experienced no little difficulty in downing their younger adversaries who frequently displayed an encouraging cleverness in attack, and only falls in the last two bouts gave them the victory.

The first match in the 125-pound class was finally declared a draw after Miller of Williams and Guzzi of North Adams had tussled indecisively through two overtime periods, but Moore of North Adams made short work of throwing Spencer of Williams in less than two minutes to score five points in the other match in that weight class. Reynolds, in the 135-pound division, then evened the count by scoring a fall over Waterhouse of North Adams in slightly over two minutes.

Both bouts in the 145-pound class were concluded in favor of Williams. Meiklejohn, wrestling for the first time, won a decision over Cleary of North Adams, while Capt. Lisle displayed his customary skill in throwing Rossi of North Adams. At this stage in the meet a Williams victory seemed more than likely, but the two final bouts completely altered the situation. In the 165-pound class St. Pierre of North Adams succeeded in throwing Baxter of Williams after five minutes of struggling, and Andersen of Williams, wrestling in the 175-pound class, was brought to the mat by Graney in about four minutes. The final count then gave North Adams three falls and a draw as against two falls, one decision, and a draw for the Purple.

RICH MAN, HOCKEY-FAN

Inasmuch as the building program of Williams College for the near future includes an enclosed rink for Hockey . . . .

This optimistic refrain was sung at a college meeting back in December of 1927, and pretended to be one of the reasons for postponing action on the "major-minor" sports controversy, which at that time was in a mild state of eruption. We have never been able to discover just how near the near future is (the term is always used with such magnanimous expansiveness, such impregnable ambiguity); but when it comes to building decent hockey rinks, the future is apparently never too near to make the player hopeful or the Trustees uncomfortable.

If Williams could play its hockey games in the near future instead of in the thawing, snow-swept present, what a marvelous thing it would be! Rain or shine, melt or freeze, we could at least be sure of a full, unabbreviated schedule and a busy, busy season—things quite necessary for the pride of any college sport. As a matter of fact, no one denies that the College should shelter its hockey team. On the contrary everyone thinks it would be great—and there the matter has rested, patiently waiting for the birth of the near future.

The Trustees, of course, have had their reasons for not becoming excited about a new rink. First it was the Field House, then the Gym, and now, perhaps, will it be a new auditorium or something—all most necessary and commendable undertakings but offering no relief to a hockey team foundering in slush.

We have thus reached a point where there seems but one hope left of getting a rink with a roof, or even a roof for the "rink". A member of the Administration has put the situation succinctly. The first thing, he says in effect, is to find a rich man. That's easy. The next thing is to find a Williams hockey fan. And that's easy. But then we must find a rich man who is also a Williams hockey fan. And that's not so easy.

However, with almost no grace at all, we fling these ill-disguised hints through the mails, hoping that perhaps the rich hockey fan will find us instead. In the meantime, from some warm room high up in Sage Hall we look down with mingled sympathy and admiration at a valiant band of skaters waging their little wars on flooded, sometimes frozen, tennis courts. For tomorrow they may melt.

'XEROSTOMATIC'

To the Editor of THE RECORD,
Dear Sir:

Is tradition in itself a thing so unimpeachable that succeeding generations of Williams men must cotton to the idiosyncracies in the taste of their forebears? Are seventeenth and eighteenth century customs forever to permeate the life of this campus? No one reveres more than I the honored and unsullied flag which it is our privilege to carry on. The ideals upon which this college is founded are everlasting. Their interpretation, however, is of necessity determined by reason, whose dictate is contemporary practicality.

But this article is not intended as a general treatise upon decadent practise at Williams. An extremely narrow field prompts the observation. The Record recently reviewed the Christmas production of Cap and Bells. It was a most flattering article—a comfort indeed to those members of the cast upon whose ears there had fallen, throughout the trip, a prolonged wail from alumni, distressed at the two hours of boredom which love of their Alma Mater sternly bade them to endure. Their ill-disguised censure of the play has forced cognizance upon the undergraduate mind of the fact that something must be done.

The Pigeon was not as well received as THE RECORD might lead one to believe. In that review there was quoted a laudatory paragraph from the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette—perhaps three inches of a column.

The writer neglected to mention, however, that, beside the space devoted to the Williams production, there were two entire columns praising the Princeton Triangle show, which had been there two nights before! There was more space devoted to the Yale performance, presented a week before, than to the Pigeon! The "Michigan Opera," for the past four years, has been able to fill the Metropolitan Opera House in New York—once three nights running. Contrast this with Cap and Bells in Buffalo and Cleveland where a late comer—say dashing in for the third act—could scarcely get a seat in the first row. It is perfectly absurd to contend that their turnout is an outstanding example of alumni enthusiasm. People unconnected with either institution go to the Princeton and the Michigan productions for an evenings entertainment. They come away satisfied. If this, then, is what those of the theater-going public who follow college theatricals want, it appears that Cap and Bells might profit by a study of the kind of a performance they put on.

"Are we, sir, playing to the rabble, or to a select group?" I can hear it now! But I consider it scarcely fair to so describe the audiences which attend the more popular collegiate offerings. Such an implication—that the people who crowd the halls where the Triangle Club is playing are unworthy to be catered to—betrays an utter ignorance of the kind of persons who attend such performances. It is not that the "better" class attend the Pigeon, and the undiscriminating herd the Zuider Zee. More of the better class attend the latter. The sole difference in the audiences is quantitative, not qualitative.

And now, turning in curiosity to the financial annals of Cap and Bells, we find that the most successful productions, from the mercenary point of view were Officer 606, and Jabberwocky. The former is a light, farcical comedy with "a laugh a minute." The last, a dramatized version of Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass, livens with music the imperishable humor of Carroll's masterpiece. Jabberwocky made for Cap and Bells more money than any other play since the incorporation of the organization.

Cap and Bells, through no fault of the Business department, lost much money this year. It is all very well to talk of one's subjective satisfaction in the artistry of the play, but in too short a time the organization will be in financial straits. No corporation can lose thousands of dollars a year and long remain solvent. I am a firm believer in collegiate production of real drama. But it is a matter of common business sense that at Christmas a play must be chosen that will tide over the spring play's loss. These matters are factual, not opinionative. Upon what inference is to be drawn from these facts, however, dispute is bitter.

Nearly two decades ago, the dramatic club at Princeton was faced with circumstances identical with those which we face today. There, practically triumphed, and the Triangle Club was formed. Here there is a strong feeling on the part of the undergraduates concerned that a musical production—and I refuse to admit that this necessarily implies vaudeville—disgrace—should supplant the usual Xerostomatic Christmas performance. But what reception will such a suggestion receive from the powers that be? The same I fear, that the cook received who put before her master a dish of Cream of Wheat when she had once before been coldly informed that oatmeal was usual.

"The only excuse for the existence of Cap and Bells is for the production of drama. And I consider as Drama only those plays written by a recognized author—Shaw, Galsworthy, Shakespeare—the names which the English department conjures by." This was the austere comment which cooled for a time the ardor of an undergraduate who would have suggested an original comedy. Apparently it matters little what the alumni and undergraduates want. As a matter of fact, the graduate audiences were dismissed in that same speech from which I quoted: "The alumni will come to your plays, whether or not they are interested in them." But, as one alumnus said to me, when I quoted this statement to him, "Yes, we shall continue to support you, in hopes that sometime you may put on something which we can laugh at. But, until the directors of Cap and Bells recognize the limitations of their actors, and choose for production a play adapted to collegiate interpretation rather than Walter Hampden's, we most certainly shall not long our friends. It is bad enough to sit through a play which is meant for that careful study which reading alone can give it. But to watch your friends getting bored for the sake of politeness . . ." He was not alone in his feelings. Two ex-presidents of Cap and Bells left the performance after the second act—one in Williamstown, one in Buffalo. The local managers in Chicago and Indianapolis expressed their pleasure at the labor of the actors, but regretted that a play had been chosen which made such labor obvious. Nor can this be laid to the several abilities of the actors. The cast was capable and experienced—an exceptionally good find in a college. Nor can the coaching be altogether at fault. The play itself was unsuitable, or the ability of the actors would have saved it. It is to me unthinkable that the policies of a Williams organization should be dictated by that reactionism typical of the colonial doctor and preacher, who frowned upon as pernicious any practise in which the deluded populace found enjoyment."

Graduate Scholarships
Offered at Chicago U.

Graduate assistantships and scholarships carrying stipends of $225 to $1200 have recently been announced by the Dean of the School of Commerce and Administration of the University of Chicago for graduates of accredited schools who are interested in business or the teaching of business. These scholarships are divided into four groups for graduates who have done varying amounts of work in economics or engineering as undergraduates, and for those who have already done some graduate work.

The work of the School, which is in the fields of Administration and Economics, leads to the degree of Master of Arts and in co-operation with the Department of Economics to the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, the latter of which is intended primarily for those preparing for the teaching of business. The time required for absorbing the requirements depends largely on the previous work of the graduate, varying from four to six quarters. Applications for the School, the tuition of which is $70 per quarter, should be in the hands of the Dean not later than March 1, 1929.

Williams Will Meet Two
New Football Opponents

Two newcomers will come to Williamstown to play football next fall, according to the schedule recently ratified by the Athletic Council. They are Trinity and Hobart, the former taking the place of Providence College, while Hobart supplants R. P. I. on the Williams schedule. The remainder of the games are with colleges played in 1928, except that Bowdoin and Amherst will come to Williamstown, and the Williams team will journey to meet Middlebury, Wesleyan and Columbia.

The complete schedule is as follows:
September 28, Trinity at Williamstown;
October 5, Middlebury at Middlebury;
October 12, Bowdoin at Williamstown;
October 19, Hobart at Williamstown;
October 26, Columbia at New York;
November 9, Wesleyan at Middletown;
November 16, Amherst at Williamstown.

COLLEGE NOTES

As the result of the fall competition, the following members of the Class of 1932 have been elected to the Staff of the Williams News Bureau: Hackett, Hamilton, Hanser and Sellery '32.

Strong Yale Five To Face Purple Tonight

With the New Hampshire State game to give the team a workout and to smooth down the attack, Coach Messer expects the Purple to give Yale more than stiff opposition. Yale's victories have come through team work and not individual brilliance; and Williams will give them something of their own tactics. In spite of the defeats Yale has a strong team, and the game will not only be fast but it will be close.

The following is the probable line-up for the game:

WILLIAMS		YALE
Willmott 10	r.f.	Nassau
Betham 3	l.f.	Beane or Fodder
Allen 7	c.	Linchan
Cuddelback 11	r.g.	Narry
Alexander 14	l.g.	Cook

AT MOHAWK GARAGE

AT the portals of our large cities—New York, Baltimore, Detroit, and soon Cleveland—a semaphore halts a luxurious flyer drawn by a puffing steam engine. A simple switching maneuver, and electricity takes charge. A giant electric locomotive, quickly under way, glides silently into the home stretch with its long string of Pullmans.

Like a thoroughbred it makes the run—tirelessly. Passengers alight in a clean terminal—clean because there is no smoke or soot.

Another milestone in transportation—another event in the life of the iron horse!

Civilization is progressing, with electricity in the van. How far this advance will take us, is a problem for our future leaders. It is for them to develop and utilize new applications of electricity—the force that is pointing the way over uncharted courses, not only in railroading, but in every phase of progress.

New Travel Bureau Aids Students Planning Tours

For the purpose of aiding college students who are planning to visit Europe, a travel bureau has been organized in Williams College, consisting of six undergraduate members under the direction of H. L. Foster '28, its founder. The particular aim of the travel bureau, in common with similar organizations at Princeton, Yale, and various other colleges, is to assist students who have summer tours in mind by giving information concerning various Steamship Companies, securing passports, and visas, and generally planning details of the trips.

Four seniors, S. Andrews, E. Fitch, J. McKean, and A. Williamson are in active charge of the organization, assisted by two juniors, who are acting as understudies. The bureau will be able to arrange complete details of passage on any prominent steamship line, as well as to secure railroad passages on the continent. The office of the travel bureau, located in 16 Jesup Hall, will be open Monday afternoons from 4.00 to 5.00 p. m.

Quintet Overcomes Wesleyan, 38 to 25 (Continued from First Page)

The Cardinal and Black resorted to ridiculously long shots, in an effort to increase their total, while the guards and Betham and Willmott were quick to seize the ball and get it started towards the Wesleyan end of the floor. Wesleyan's guarding game became lax as she threw all energy into an offensive effort, but the continued close defense game of the Purple worked cleanly in unison with the forwards to swell the Williams total. Seven of the first 11 points in the second half were made by Betham, while his dependable co-worker, Willmott, was always at hand, playing an elusive floor game as well as feeding the accurate Allen.

After Williams' fire had died down a bit, Wesleyan took heart. The score was 16-29 against them, and ten minutes to play. But still Williams was not content, and on two confusing, quick passes, Allen was able to add four points, being quite unmolested under the basket. When the Purple had a 34-18 lead, play became rougher and Cuddeback and Alexander started a waiting game. The freezing tactics were broken up by Wesleyan, whose policy became one of continual bombardment of the William backboard, and this resulted in a few phenomenally long shots in the last minutes. With a few seconds left to play, Alexander rushed in to score a short shot, making the final count 38 to 25.

The line-ups are as follows:

New Hampshire State Game

Forcing many misses on the part of a persistently penetrating dribbling attack carried on throughout the game by the opposition, the Varsity quintet defeated New Hampshire State last Thursday night in Lasell Gymnasium by the score of 38 to 23. The Purple's variety of attack was noteworthy, and their keen shooting eyes, coupled with a fast floor game, enabled them to break through the Granite man-for-man guarding.

Five free throws by Betham, together with four field goals, gave him high scoring honors with 13 points, while Willmott's eight points and Allen's seven put three Williams men ahead of New Hampshire's high scorer, Captain Gaunt, who made three goals from the floor. Williams' superiority was especially marked in free throws, as 10 Purple free throws were amassed compared to three by the visitors. In field goals, the Varsity got only four more by making 14 to New Hampshire's 10.

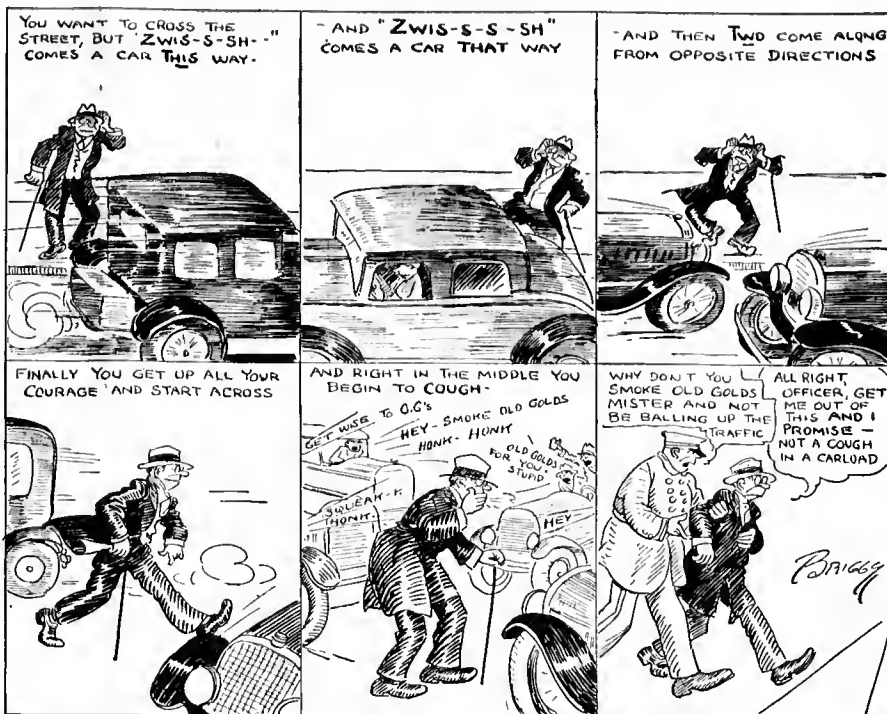

New Hampshire did not lose because of lack of scoring opportunities. Repeatedly, a fast circling play, started near the center of the floor, would end only after a New Hampshire man had dribbled painstakingly through the secondary defense to a position under the basket, where energetic guarding would force him to shoot hurriedly; and so it was that almost half of the Granite's 23 points were recorded from the vicinity of the foul line, or even further away. The visitors started a scrappy, persistent attack with the first tip-off, and not until near the end of the game did they vary their kind of play and resort to a bombardment of the backboard from a great distance.

Every Purple rally that promised length was punctured, and, contrary to their past performances, they were able to score no more than nine consecutive points. This came at the end of the first half, after a succession of exchanges had finally assumed a Purple tendency and made the score 14-10; Betham made five of these points, and then during the rally the defense came forward and Cuddeback and Alexander together ran up seven points before Betham's goal made the score 23 to 10 at the end of the first half.

was continued in the latter half, and the shooting by New Hampshire was from a longer range. Many passes were intercepted, due to reckless passing by both teams. Williams was able to get the ball away quickly after New Hampshire shots, and the visitors' defense was taxed in an effort to keep up with the swiftly-moving Purple. Betham was temporarily injured by running into one of the end stands after an attempted goal had been stopped by a New Hampshire guard, but Betham retaliated to score one of the free throws awarded him. Near the middle of the half, the play became rougher, and Alexander was sent from the game for four personal fouls. Pointless passing and stalling characterized this part of the contest, but after Willmott had batted in a field goal to make the score 31-16, the game became headlong, with the teams racing up and down the floor. With the entrance of substitutes to the game, the play became shoddy, with long passes down the court and long, looping efforts at the basket. Willmott, Allen, and Betham accounted for the last nine points, and the game ended with the score 38 to 23.

Institute Plans Announced Listing Foreign Economists (Continued from First Page)

session by a statement in characterization of it, which was as follows:

"The Institute program for 1929 directs attention to some new elements, the cumulative effects of which may constitute a serious threat to the future peace of the world. The dangers that lie ahead are economic rather than political. The renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy can only have that degree of importance that the industrialists and traders of the world contrive. The struggle of the commercial nations to find markets at remunerative prices for their surplus products becomes more severe as more and more nations become commercialized. There is perhaps no question of equal importance that has had so little careful and collective attention as the effects upon world peace of the impact of almost universal competition. Ten years hence we may need another Kellogg pact renouncing ruthless competition as an instrument of national policy.

"Under the title of 'World Economic Stabilization' the Institute will devote four of its conferences and half of its lectures to the study of this little heeded aspect of the peace problem. Good will and cooperation have supplanted isolation, economy and prosperity as our slogans, but these new words will have no real content until then unless we can find a way of being as considerate of the interests of others as we are of our own. Around this central idea will be grouped such subjects as limitation of armaments, and our relations with our neighbors in the Western Hemisphere."

Owing to the fact that the subsidy for the Institute for the past five year period expired with last year's session, the forthcoming session and others, pending the ultimate endowment, will be carried on, it was announced today, by Williams College in the loan of its plant, and annual grants of money by Mr. Bernard M. Baruch of New York, The General Education Board, The Carnegie Corporation, Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Mr. Herbert H. Lehman, Lieutenant-Governor of the State of New York. Mr. Rockefeller and Lieutenant-Governor Lehman are individuals to give for the first time financial support to the Institute.

The officials concerned with the management of the sessions of the Institute are Dr. Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams College and the Chairman, who is now in Europe in its interests, Dr. McLaren, the Executive Secretary, and Mr. Andrew Ten Eyck, of New York City. The advisory board has placed this year in its membership Roland W. Boyden of Boston and Dr. George H. Blakeslee of Clark University, who, together with Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia, Dr. Edward A. Birge, former president of the University of Wisconsin, Philip Marshall Brown, of Princeton, Walter Lippman of the New York World, Dr. Jesse S. Reeves of the University of Michigan, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. James Brown Scott of the Carnegie Endowment for Internal Peace, and Mr. Owen D. Young, Chairman of the Board of the General Electric Co., constitute the full Board.

The Institute, in addition to the round table conferences, which are limited to duly enrolled members, each member being assigned to one only on the basis of his ability and intention to contribute to the discussion, will have general conferences in which the members of various round tables come together to hear a series of arguments for and against the project or policy which forms the subject of discussion for the day, at the conclusion of which a general discussion follows.

The round table conferences, as now arranged, include one, on our relations with Latin-America under the chairmanship of Dr. Herbert I. Priestley, associate professor of Mexican history at the University of California; two, Limitation of Armaments with Rear Admiral Charles L. Hussey, one-time American naval attaché at the Court of St. James, as leader; three, a conference on American-Canadian Relations, and four, on a New Agricultural Policy for New England to be arranged, and four conferences on what is termed "World Economic Stabilization". Dr. T. E. G. Gregory of London will present the subject of Currencies and Exchanges; Dr. Jacob Viner of the University of Chicago will present Reparations and Debts; Dr. William T. Foster of the Pollak Foundation, Newton, Mass., the question of planning for prosperity, and a conference to be arranged later will be devoted to Trade Barriers and International Cartels.

Each of the round table conference leaders will conduct two general conferences during the session and in addition two special groups of general conferences have been set up,—the first of which will be under the leadership of Professor Harry T. Collings, of the Wharton School of Finance, Philadelphia, on the subject of our economic and commercial relations with Latin-America. A second conference of this group will be devoted to the Mexican question.

The lecture courses to be given at the Institute are by Dr. William E. Rappard on Europe's Economic and Industrial Progress; The Political System in France by Andre Seigfried; The Economic and Financial Situation in Germany by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht of Berlin.

Count Elia will give an address on Modern Italy, Political and Economic Conditions, and Dr. T. E. G. Gregory of London will speak on the Present Industrial and Financial State of England.

Lone Cornell Score Beats Purple Sextet

after such maneuvers, Cornell stormed the Williams goal, and in the melee, Llop hooked the puck off Watter's skate and slipped it into the cage.

Seemingly awakened by this adverse score, the Purple came back in the second period with determined aggressiveness. The puck was rushed into Cornell territory as Brigham, Hoyt, and Wheeler showed some scintillating pass-work in the forward line. As soon as the visitors managed to clear their goal, their offensive threats were dissolved by Howe and Langmaid who alternated with the forwards in bombarding the Ithacan's goal. With the added Williams aggressiveness, the Cornell skaters went into a more defensive formation, and rarely threatened the home goal during the rest of the period. Consequently, every Purple advance met with determined resistance, and although many shots brought Heye to his knees in phenomenal stops and evoked comment from the spectators, none reached the net. The second Williams line with Hazzard at defense, was substituted in the middle of the period, but was no more successful in scoring attempts.

The newly installed flood-lights went on at the beginning of the third period. Whether because of their only slightly more uncertain light or because of the heightening tension of the game, both teams showed less pass-work after the first few minutes, and the contest was marked by brilliant individual dashes. E. Clark, the visitor's center, showed considerable cleverness in advancing solo to the Williams goal only to have his tries checked by the Purple defense or stopped by Watters. Continuing to guard against a tying score, the New Yorkers kept four men near their goal most of the time, and this advantage in numbers prevented Captain Howe, who drew applause by a series of fast and shifty advances, from scoring. Toward the end of the period the attack vacillated on almost even terms without a score until the final whistle.

A 2 to 1 Favorite in 13 technical schools

Proves the Parker Duofold is "The College Pen"

In a canvass of 13 technical schools (names on request) it was found that as many students owned a Parker Duofold Pen as owned the next two nearest makes combined, and more would buy a Duofold next time than the next three combined.

There are several reasons. One is Parker Pressureless Touch—Geo. S. Parker's 47th Improvement—known the world around as the means to tireless writing.

28% lighter than a rubber pen, this weight alone brings the pen into action the moment point touches paper. No strain. No fatigue. This relieves finger pressure. Smooth and steady ink-flow no matter how fast you write.

No interruptions, no intrusions. A clear track for clearer THOUGHT, and better grades on papers.

Five flashing colors and a new, modern Black and Pearl. Then a **guarantee forever against all defects*, so these Parker benefits are everlasting.

See "Geo. S. Parker—DUOFOLD," on the barrel to know you have the genuine.

Penn No Match for Purple, Losing 9-1 in Philadelphia Arena Friday Night

PRINCETON TAKES SECOND

Brigham Scores in Last Period To Prevent Shutout as Tigers Win Easily, 6-1

Competition offered by a hockey team which has yet to win a game and that presented by the undefeated leaders of the Eastern Intercollegiate League was met by the Williams puckmen last week when they skated to an easy 9-1 victory over Penn in the latter's new arena in Philadelphia Friday night, and the following evening went down to nearly as severe a defeat before the invincible Princeton Tigers on the Baker rink. Although unaccustomed to indoor play, which is more enervating than outdoor, the Purple six scored almost at will against Penn, Howe leading with three goals, but Saturday night the inclosed Baker rink showed definite effects when, after holding the powerful Tigers to a 2-1 lead until the middle of the third period, the tiring Williams team allowed Princeton, led by Captain Jones to tally four times in the final frame.

Penn Game

After several minutes of cautious play by both teams following the opening whistle, Williams took the offensive which was maintained almost throughout the contest. Penn presented a style of play very similar to that shown by Cornell in their 1-0 victory over the Purple, without the Ithienns' sudden scoring threats or the almost fruitless services of a goalie such as Heye of Cornell. The Red and Blue were also handicapped by the fact that they are representing Penn on the ice this year for the first time.

Moreover, from the Williams standpoint, while the shots were flying wild in the game two weeks ago, last Friday night found the shooting much improved. Although Capt. Howe and his defense partner, Langmaid, made several brilliant advances in the first period, the initial tally was netted by Ballon at about 10 minutes, after Varsity B had been substituted.

The Penn defense, which had so far successfully broken up many Purple tries, gave way at five minutes in the second frame, as Hoyt scored. He was almost immediately followed by Langmaid, who with Howe continued to criss-cross the puck up the ice to culminate in a shot. This combination worked to perfection (Continued on Third Page)

Fred O. Newman, '27, Reports on the Value of His Year's Work in the League of Nations at Geneva

Reprinted from the bulletin of the International Student Union

The final value of most scholarships is usually interpreted in terms of specific results obtained and formally recognized by academic authorities. The prestige of an acquired degree, a treatise published, a new principle evolved through study and research, is as interest on the capital investment which the scholarship represents. Such prestige does not have to be demonstrated; it stands or falls by its own inherent worth. Furthermore, its value is measurable by well-defined standards, which, though they may be so formalistic as to be sometimes decadent, nevertheless are founded on centuries of academic tradition and experience.

The task, then, of preparing a report on my year in Geneva under the auspices of the Students' International Union is at once rendered more difficult—and facilitated—by the circumstances under which the scholarship was given. It is easier because of the understanding that I was not to pursue specialized study resulting in any sort of academic recognition. My goal was rather to discover for myself whether my current interest in world affairs could become permanently crystallized, so that I

Professor Newhall Sets Feb. 16 for Current Events Quiz

With its object the creation of "a thorough grasp of contemporary affairs" which "is part of the essential equipment of a college career," the 1929 New York Times Current Events Contest for Williams men will be held at 1.30 p. m. Saturday, February 16, in 6 Griffin Hall, according to an announcement made by Professor Richard A. Newhall, College representative of the contest. The candidates are to be tested, as in other years, on their knowledge of world affairs, major events in urban centers, and general cultural activities, but crime and sport news, which was included in the 1927 examination, will not appear, this year.

The prizes offered aggregate $250, the winner normally getting $125, second place $75, and third $50, but distribution is at the discretion of the local committee. Aside from the local prizes, the winning (Continued on Third Page)

TRINITY FIVE TACKLES WILLIAMS WEDNESDAY

Attack Centering About Nye Has Won Six Victories in First Eight Starts

Facing an aggregation that has been characterized as "a green team that has had its ups and downs," the Varsity basketball five will encounter Trinity tomorrow night in Lasell Gymnasium at 8 p. m. The Hartford quintet has lost only two games, one of these by only two points, but Lafayette is the only impressive opponent of the six which Trinity has beaten, her other victims including her own alumni, the weak Clark team, Albany Law School, Connecticut Aggies, and Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute.

Trinity's chief power lies in a strong group of reserves, who are practically on a par with the regular line-up. The starting five is built around Nye, a tall and rangy center whose offense work this year has surpassed that of any of his teammates. One of the best shots on the team, Nye has accounted for a majority of the Connecticut team's points in the eight games played so far, and his uncanny ability to remain free under the basket makes him a dangerous opponent. The forwards on the team, Flossberg and Fleming, are also good shots but their floorwork and practice of feeding Nye are their greatest assets. Practically all of the Trinity plays are centered about Nye.

Bissell and Deschamps hold down the guard positions, and the latter is a valuable offense man as well. Three substitutes, Glynn, Kanrek, and Meier, are excellent reserve material, and are used a great deal by the Trinity coach for purposes of keeping a fresh team on the floor. The Trinity quintet has shown effective scoring ability in its eight games, and is a smoothly working organization. After defeating their (Continued on Third Page) my goal than I ever considered possible. The difficulty of the task lies in the fact that I have nothing very definite to present, unless one accepts my new status as Geneva Correspondent of the World Peace Foundation as equivalent to the complete success of the year's work.

AMHERST TO OPPOSE PURPLE AGAIN ON RINK

Speed and Strong Attack Indicate Slight Advantage for Purple over Lord Jeffs

Returning from a Middle Atlantic invasion that netted an overwhelming victory and an equally severe defeat, the Williams hockey team will cross sticks with Amherst tomorrow afternoon at Amherst in the first of two important battles with the Sabrinas. Captain Howe has already led the Williams sextet in three exhibition games against Amherst at Lake Placid, and the Purple boasts two victories over her chief rival, with a scoring advantage of 10 goals to 6; but Williams has since been handicapped by soft ice and consequent lack of steady practice, while the Lord Jeffs, with four recent games and an increasing list of victories, promise to present an improved front to the invaders.

Including the two games played during the mid-year recess, the record of the Williams team stands at six victories and three defeats, in which the Purple skaters have averaged four goals a game, and held their opponents to an average of slightly less than two. In only one game was the margin of defeat more than one goal, and that was against a Princeton team which has scored twelve successive victories, and which whitewashed Amherst, 6-0, on the preceding night.

Amherst, on the other hand, has been less fortunate both on attack and defense, and in seven games has been outscored by her opponents. Despite a relatively weak defense, however, the Sabrinas have a brilliant offensive player in Patrick, at left wing, and their line-up includes four veterans from the aggregation that last year, on their home rink, defeated Williams 1-0. The most recent Amherst victory was a 4-3 triumph over West Point, and while Williams had no difficulty in subduing the same team 10-0, the Cadets (Continued on Third Page)

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS LOSE TO SPRINGFIELD

Schott Breaks Own Medley Record But Visitors Take 7 of 9 Firsts To Win

In spite of close seconds by Higginbotham in both the dashes and narrow margins in the relays, inability to finish in the lead again brought defeat, the fourth straight of the season, to the Williams swimming team when it lost to Springfield College, 28-52, last Wednesday afternoon in the Lasell Gymnasium pool. Although nearly all the times made by Springfield were not as good as those recorded by Worcester last week, the Purple swimmers could only obtain firsts when Captain Schott swam a brilliant individual medley, included in the program for the first time this year, for a new college record of 4:28.4, and Gregg, closely seconded by his teammate Noble, took the breast stroke event.

The meet started with an upset when Springfield bested the hitherto victorious Williams medley relay team by holding an early lead gained in the backstroke by Ford. Although Schott practically made up the loss in the breast stroke laps, Nelson managed to nose out Close to shatter the Williams record of 3:38.5 with a time of 3:33.1. Clark, high scorer of the meet, won the next event for the visitors when he beat Higginbotham by a scant two feet in the 50-yd. freestyle, clocking at 27.2 seconds.

ALUMNI HOLD BANQUET

Large Gathering Is Addressed by Pease, Lehman, and Mears

About 450 alumni from New York City and vicinity gathered in the Hotel Astor last Friday evening for the annual banquet of the Society of Alumni, which Mr. Bottsford declared to be one of the most successful in history. Karl J. Austrian '14 acted as chairman for the evening, while Marvin Chapman '03 performed the duties of toastmaster, introducing first the oldest graduate present, Rev. W. W. Clark '66, who recalled playing first base on the first intercollegiate nine in 1864.

Others at the speakers' table were Philip James '97, president of the Society of Alumni, and Professor Brainerd Mears '03, of the Chemistry Department, who spoke in place of Professor Weston, who was taken ill in New York and was unable to attend. ## 'THEATRE' TO PRESENT FEBRUARY BILL FRIDAY

For its annual mid-year bill, to be presented this Friday, February 15, the Little Theatre has selected three modern one-act plays of a decidedly light and amusing nature. Two Gentlemen of Soho, by A. P. Herbert, The Proposal, by Anton Tchekoff, and The Mouse Trap, by William Dean Howells comprise a bill of strictly farcical content, yet retain balance in the variety of situations and methods of treatment.

Two Gentlemen of Soho is now being played in London as a curtain-raiser to Sheridan's A Tragedy Rehearsed which was one of the plays presented by the Little Theatre in its last bill. The scene is laid in a London night club of the present day, while the conversation is carried on in the Shakespearean style. This apparent incongruity the author accounts for in his note: "It now appears that Shakespeare is best when played in modern clothes. Perhaps the themes of modern life would be better dressed in Shakespearean costumes. Some may think the play wordy, but there are brites who think Shakespeare wordy". Direction of the play has been placed in the hands of Reiff '30.

The Proposal is a thoroughly Russian comedy, intensely emotional, and rising to hilarious heights. Sevall '29 has charge of directing the play. The Mouse Trap, under the direction of Casaday '29, is a Victorian farce dealing with woman suffrage.

The casts for this Friday's production are as follows:

Two Gentlemen of Soho

Lord Withers	Lucas '31
Hubert	Sisley '31
Phum (public detective)	Spencer '31
Sneak (private detective)	Sabin '31

Debaters Are Chosen to Oppose Harvard and Penn

As a result of the recent trials Henton and Erskine '30 have been chosen to face the University of Pennsylvania debaters in the next league debate at Philadelphia on February 23, taking the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That this house approves the Baumes Laws of New York State". Bates and Straw '30, who were chosen at the same trials, will oppose the Harvard debaters here two days later and will support the affirmative of the argument.

The Adelphic Union has been forced to cancel two of its debates outside the league, with the University of Oklahoma on March 16 and with the Chinese team of Harvard University on April 4, due to the inability of the westerners to make the trip and to the disorganized Harvard team. It has also been announced that the trials for the four varsity and two Freshman debates to take place during March will be held early in the week of February 25.

YALE QUINTET WINS THREE-POINT VICTORY

Purple Loses Hard-Fought Game, 22-19, in Contest of Close Defense Work

CUDDEBACK LEADS RALLY

Betham Is Held to Five Fouls as Nassau Sinks Four Baskets for the Blue

Outscored 18 to 8 in field goals but sinking eleven fouls to Yale's four, the Purple quintet met defeat at the hands of Eli Saturday night in the Lasell Gymnasium after giving one of the hardest battles seen this season. Even the brilliant guarding of Cuddeback, Alexander, and Field, who settled down after a disastrous first minute, could not stem the tide when the Blue began sinking perfect long shots, while Williams in vain tossed the ball towards the basket only to miss repeatedly.

To Cuddeback go the honors for keeping the Purple in the running up until the very end, when, after Betham was forced out of the game injured and Yale was ahead 22-14, with seven minutes left to play, he staged a single-handed rally to gain five points for Williams in two minutes. Although held scoreless on the floor, Captain Betham dropped in five fouls for the Purple besides breaking up many of the Yale offensive marches and furnishing a dangerous threat at all times. Willmott and Allen also played hard games the former starring under the basket, while Allen did his best to even the score by getting the tap from the highly rated Linnehan.

In Nassau Yale had a crackforward who accounted for almost half of the Blue's points with his assorted long and short shots. Guards Cook and Nanry also played excellent games for Yale, fouling when necessary to prevent the elusive Betham from scoring or getting away down the floor, and making a basket each on their own account. Although losing the tap to Allen, Linnehan at center for Yale redeemed himself with two baskets to one for Allen and furnished a bulwark on the defense as well as a main cog in the Eli passing attack, which the Purple found hard to stop.

Following the precedent established in the earliest games this season, Williams allowed Yale to score first on a foul, with a field goal added a second later. Cuddeback opened the scoring for Williams with a foul and Willmott evened the count with a pretty follow-up shot. The lead saw-sawed throughout the remainder of the half with Yale shooting baskets and Williams fouls. As half time approached and Yale led ten to nine, play grew faster and faster with the Blue trying to establish a lead and Williams fighting for the point.

The second half opened most auspiciously for Eli, the score going to 13-9 in the first few minutes. Four fouls by Betham and Willmott, however, tied the count, and here it stayed for some minutes while (Continued on Third Page)

Relay Team Disqualified in Amherst-Colby Meet

Running in New York last Saturday in the Melrose Games before a capacity crowd of about 17,000 spectators, the Williams relay team placed second to Amherst but was later disqualified because a Purple runner cut in too sharply on an opponent, unfortunately spilling him to the boards, and Colby was given second place. Although Doherty ran a creditable race in the 50-yard hurdles, he was eliminated by the famous Weems Baskin in his first heat, only the winner qualifying for the finals, while Beals was also eliminated after a close dash for the tape in his first heat of the 50-yard sprint.

Skinner, lead-off man for the Williams relay team, ran the best leg of the race for the Purple. Starting in second position from the pole, Skinner, with a pretty sprint on the backstretch of his last lap, passed the Amherst runner and handed over a yard lead to Goodbody. This yard and several more were lost on the exchange, and the Amherst runner had a good five-yard lead over Goodbody at the half. When Lane, the next bearer of the Purple, passed the baton to Strother, Colby was in second position with a one yard lead. At this point Strother, running anchor man, attempted to cut too sharply in on the pole, spilling his opponent.

both teams made every effort to break away. Nassau and Linehan scored for Yale as Alexander was forced out on fouls, Field taking his place. Betham brought the score to 14-18, and the Purple began shooting wildly at the basket. Yale scored twice more gaining an eight point lead. With the substitution of Thoms for Willmott and Howse for Betham, Cuddeback revived the Williams hopes as he shot a basket, a foul, and another basket in rapid succession. Yale stalled and the Purple charged, continuing to fight desperately for the ball which the Blue held on to just as desperately until the gun marked the end.

Failure to account for more than eight points from the floor brought defeat to Williams, though the close guarding of the Yale team left few opportunities. The Purple attack had none of the brilliance and fire of the Wesleyan game, but throughout it had to fight for breaks which Yale calmly forestalled.

The following is a summary of the game:

during the rest of the period, and Howse scored three times at about four minute intervals, bringing the Williams total to six goals.

With awakened offensive, Penn took the puck at the drop as the third period started and rushed it to the Williams cage. In the melee that followed, Captain O'Reilly of the Red and Blue knocked the rolling puck into the net. The Williams defense tightened, and at the same time the forward line, which up to this time had not been playing up to form, showed some clever pass-work which resulted in a tally by Brigham. Langmaid followed with a score at five minutes, but during the next ten the Red and Blue gathered strength and brought an offensive into Williams territory. Coach Bellerose continued to alternate Varsity B and Hazzard at defense with the first line-up because of the fatiguing conditions of the sticky indoor ice. Nye, of the former, sank the last Purple tally at 15 minutes.

Princeton Game

Four points in the last half of the final period turned a closely contested tilt into a walk-away after Williams had played the Orange and Black on almost even terms for 45 minutes. Captain Jones opened the game disastrously for the visitors by scoring twice in the first five minutes practically unassisted. The Williams defensive machine was not working as well as on the previous night, while the forward line showed a corresponding increase in effectiveness. Led by Brigham, who showed some of the best hockey seen on the Purple squad this year, Hoyt and Wheeler returned each Princeton advance during the rest of the period, but without success.

With increasing power, the Purple took the offensive in the second frame, the whole team having steadied down. The shots, however, were not nearly as accurate as against Penn, due in part to the added speed of the Tiger defense that did not allow as much time to shoot. Nevertheless, several tries were missed by very narrow margins, as Howse drove a rebound from Langmaid just outside the post, and the latter repeated the performance a moment later. During the middle of the period, Williams distinctly outplayed the Orange and Black, and only the superb work of Pennypacker, veteran Tiger goalie, saved a tally when Wheeler circled the defense for a hard shot, and Brigham followed soon after with another.

At the beginning of the third period there was little let-down the Williams attack, and Brigham was playing more brilliantly than ever. At about three minutes, he skated clear of Jones at defense and skimmed the corner of the cage with a back-hand shot for the only Williams goal. After this, however, G. Jones led a powerful Princeton rally which caught the tiring Purple skaters in the middle of the period. He scored the first of four goals which followed in quick succession to put the game on ice.

seem to have advanced materially since their opening game, as evidenced by their recent game with Princeton, in which they held the Tigers to the same number of goals as did Williams.

Williams will take the ice tomorrow with line-up intact, while Amherst will be without the services of Kellogg, one of her regular defense-men. Fast ice will benefit the Purple, as the speed of Brigham and Howse has contributed materially to the power of the Williams attack in previous games.

The return game of the series will be played in Williamstown this Saturday, February 16. The following is the probable line-up for the two games:

NEW HAMPSHIRE WINS
DARTMOUTH CARNIVALWilliams Team Scores Two Points in Nineteenth Annual Event at Dartmouth

For the third time in three years, New Hampshire University won the annual Dartmouth Winter Sports Carnival, held this year at Hanover on February 8 and 9. Handicapped by lack of practice on account of poor weather conditions, the Williams team scored only two points when Sears '29 took third place in the fancy skating event.

In the ski jumping contest, which proved to be the most exciting event of the nineteenth annual carnival of Dartmouth College, Earl O. Pederson of New Hampshire University annexed first place for the third successive year, his ability in this event being the main reason that New Hampshire has held the championship of the carnival for the past three years. The Williams team was composed of Captain Little in the cross country ski race, Fedde '30 in the slaloms, Sears in the fancy skating, and Reynolds '31 in the cross country snowshoe race. The teams which competed in order of point scoring were: New Hampshire University 36, McGill 29, Dartmouth 14, Syracuse 3, Williams 2, Middlebury 1, Amherst 0, Bowdoin 0, Norwich 0, Vermont 0.

Following is the summary of the events:

Cross country ski race: Won by Dorken (McGill); Grayson-Bell (McGill) 2nd; Woodward (N. H.) 3rd; Perley (N. H.) 4th. Time—1h, 20m, 30s.

Cross country snowshoe race: Won by Lazure (N. H.); Bertram (Dart) 2nd; Sawyer (Dart) 3rd; Hazen (N. H.) 4th. Time—12:33.6.

Two-mile skating: Won by Mailman (N. H.); Wendell (N. H.) 2nd; Platt (Dart) 3rd; Tetley (N. H.) 4th. Time—6:35.6.

Fancy skating: Won by Bolton (McGill); Tucker (Dart) 2nd; Sears (Williams) 3rd.

Ski jumping: Won by Pederson (N. H.); Sander (Dart) 2nd; Sumner (McGill) 3rd; Weston (Middlebury) 4th. Distance—100 feet.

Coach Messer is standing pat on his line-up, and in all probability will start the same team that played against Yale last week. Betham's eye injury has healed sufficiently practically to insure his presence in the line-up tomorrow. Coach Messer is not downhearted over the defeat by Yale, and says that it was merely an "off-night" such as the team had in the St. Stephen's game, which was lost after two overtime periods. The inability of Williams to score Saturday was not due to faulty team-work, Coach Messer believes, but merely to the "off-night" in shooting.

The probable line-ups are as follows:

Betham (3)	l.f.	(8) Flossberg
Allen (7)	e.	(14) Nye

First prize was won by Taylor '28 in 1927, while last year Saunders '28, Stern '29 and Knox '30 won first, second and third prizes respectively. Copies of the 1928 examination are posted in Jesup Hall, in the Political Science Seminar Room, in Stetson Hall, and in Room 6, Griffin Hall. # F. O. Newman Reports on Value of His Year's Work (Continued from First Page) pating the need of some familiarity with League publications before I took charge of the Students' International Union Sales Room, I was given a temporary appointment in the Publications Department of the League itself. There my job was to keep the sales-force at the Assembly Hall supplied with periodicals and documents which the crowds never tired of demanding. The prestige of a fifth-class clerk enables one to observe without being observed, and from that lowly plane I saw the League stripped of its Wilsonian idealism to assume the form of a tremendously efficient mechanism which functioned well only because every member of it was working hard.

The next two chapters of my year with a scholarship are chronologically intertwined but must be treated separately. The first concerns experiences and impressions at Geneva's student center, the Students' International Union. The second will cover the main features of the work executed in the Publications Sales Room of the Secretariat.

It is a physical impossibility to relate all the details of the year's course of contacts in that student milieu which was forever undergoing such constant change. There was not only an actual influx and outflux of personnel, but I myself found it more interesting to turn in my tracks and look for new points of view, freshness, and sparkle in new personalities and ideas.

Just here came the first significant step in my international education. I discovered that certain barriers exist to acquaintanceship and friendship in Geneva which had been totally unknown at home, or better, unknown to the American student in America. Until the twin obstacles of language and nationality are thrust in your path; until you see interesting books lectures, and, most important of all worth while people held off from you because of your own ignorance, you have not felt the sincere remorse that comes of neither understanding nor being understood.

In spite of the League of Nations' official recognition of the parity of English, French is still the important international medium of speech. So French I had to learn; without it I would remain just an ordinary American; with it I might hope to become a little more of a human being in the eyes of my European associates. The average Anglo-Saxon's willingness and inability to speak any language but his own is strongly countered by the average European's natural indignation that he should be thus forced to cater to what he regards as a racial, or national, superiority complex.

After I had become a real working part of that student group, my eyes were opened to a number of things. One of them was the fact that, because I was an American, I was being continually forced on the defensive, made to defend American customs, clothes, habits. The aptitude of European newspapers in giving such exclusive publicity to the American customs of bootlegging, banditry, and divorce is responsible for most of the Europeans' ignorance of us. This was all rather an amazing revelation to me. I had come to Europe admitting complete ignorance of foreign lands and peoples, but found that my ignorance was even surpassed by those people's ignorance of America.

This slow though effective give-and-take process required a deal of patience on both sides, but in the end I think that it paid. Mutual confidence came by degrees. It took more than French to keep one of my good friends a Slav, from jumping into the lake; it took more than French and many months besides, before the son of the President of a small European state came forth with the admission that his ideas of America had changed completely since he had been thrown into such intimate contact with this one American.

"Maybe the audience would be grateful if I stepped to the footlights some night and voiced the above protest about the 'coughing chorus' down in front.

"But that wouldn't be kind and it wouldn't be just. The cougher doesn't cough in public on purpose. He can't help it. It embarrasses him as much as it annoys his neighbors.

The seminars led by the Director, Mr. Harry D. Gideonse, were by far the most stimulating and helpful features of the winter program. What I learned in them has often served as intellectual kindling wood which is ever ready to be set off when I hear those topics, or related ones being discussed again.

The least interesting phase, though perhaps the most important, of the year occurred in connection with the routine work of taking charge of the sales room of the Secretariat. For the four or five months before the first of October, I can recall only an unending stream of tourist hordes, for the most part composed of Americans, with considerable numbers of British, Canadians, and Germans. If they did not know what they wanted to buy, my job was to help them find it, and perhaps lead to interest in another field. The questions ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous, just as the visitors did. But whether I was replying to the dear old lady who had asked, "Can you tell me is this Mr. Wilson's League of Nations?" or whether I was helping a Harvard professor search for material for a new book, I was kept extremely busy dispensing information and documents.

There was the occasional individual or even occasional group of travelers who displaced a sincere interest in the League and its documentary output. I felt a real satisfaction in giving this small service for it is, I believe, a useful part of the tremendous task facing the post-war generation, that of presenting hitherto unknown facts in such a way that the creation of the international attitude may be started.

AMHERST BEATEN BY WILLIAMS SEXTET, 2-1

Second Period Lead Gained by Howe and Langmaid Threatened by Late Rally

TROPHY SCORE NOW 7-0

Brigham Stars In Forward Wall As Penalties Are Frequent on Amherst Rink

With a crescendo of action in the last two periods that brought out the fastest and, at times, the roughest play seen by the Purple this year, the hockey teams of Williams and Amherst clashed in their first "Little Three" contest last Wednesday afternoon on the ice at Amherst, and a slashing attack in the second frame coupled with a tenacious defense before Amherst's counter-rally brought the Purple a 2-1 win over the Lord Jeffs, and another point toward the Trophy of Trophies. Although the forward-line, led by Brigham's brilliant play, kept the puck largely in Amherst territory, the Williams defense again did the scoring, Howe and Langmaid twice weaving in for close shots, while the Sabrina forwards, Patrick and Felt, worked together for Amherst's only score 12 minutes before the final whistle.

In this game, the first of two on the regular Williams-Amherst schedule, the rivalry was rendered keener by the memory of the unofficial series of three exhibition contests played at Lake Placid last Christmas vacation. At that time Williams took two of the three games, but the victories did not contribute to the Trophy of Trophies total. By winning Wednesday's match, however, the Williams lend for the cup, now in Amherst's possession, was increased by one. While Amherst has yet to gain a point, victories in football, soccer, and hockey have brought the total to 7-0 for Williams.

Williams superiority last Wednesday lay in better pass-work and a rugged defense that has been building up all season. By means of frequent short passes, a system which Coach Bellerose has particularly stressed, the Purple players were able to break through the opposing defense for close-range shots at the goal. On the other hand, while the Sabrina showed some powerful concerted attacks, their pass-work was not sufficient to get them by the Williams defense combination. The excellent poke-checking of the entire visiting aggregation broke up threatening attacks over and over again. The Lord Jeffs were forced to take a majority of their shots from mid-rink, so that the puck was flying wide of the Williams goal, three times over the back-stop.

As usual, Williams did not show its full strength in the first period, but Amherst started off no more powerfully. The Purple forwards took the puck at the drop, and worked it to the Sabrina goal, only to have Brigham's shot stopped by Hanson. The Purple and White then advanced, but their tries went too high, one outside the rink. Howe and Langmaid opened a series of criss-cross attacks, and

Eight members of the Class of 1929 have been elected to the honorary scholastic society, Phi Beta Kappa, thus filling all but four vacancies in the Senior Class delegation. PARES WILL LECTURE TO FORUM ON 'RUSSIA'

British Student Has Had 15 Years of Intimate Contact With Slavic Questions

Authority on contemporary Russia, eye witness of the earlier phases of the Revolution, and minute observer of Soviet affairs, Sir Bernard Pares, who will address the Forum Sunday evening on "Present Day Russia—The Communist Experiment", has attracted marked attention for the progress which the School of Slavonic Studies of London University has been making under his directorship. Sir Bernard is not unknown as a lecturer in this country, since he made a tour here in 1924 in the interests of Russian reconstruction; while a number of the staff of his school have visited the United States as lecturers under the auspices of the Institute of International Education.

A considerable part of Sir Bernard Pares' life has been spent in Russia. He was there for part of every year from 1904 till 1919, and knew nearly all the principal persons in politics during that time, with the exception of the Bolshevik leaders. While in Petrograd he was a regular attendant at the sittings of the Duma. From the end of 1914 to the spring of 1917 he was with the Russian Army, with permission to live with any regiment he chose. He witnessed the early months of the Revolution and in 1919 travelled through Siberia.

Sir Bernard is outstanding as an author and journalist. He is editor of the Russian Review and of the Slavonic Review, and among his publications may be numbered the following: Russia and Reform; chapters on Russia in Cambridge Modern History (Vol. XII); and Day by Day with the Russian Army.

Al Smith, in Palm Beach Talk with 'Record' Reporter States 'I Am Fed Up With Politics, and Here to Rest'

Desiring to ascertain the views of ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York upon certain questions pertaining to colleges in general and Williams in particular, a Record reporter interviewed him in palatial Whitehall at Palm Beach, Florida, during the mid-year recess. Mr. Smith was very willing to talk upon any topic except politics but only under the condition that his opinions should not be published, for, "I have refused New York Times reporters, my boy, and thousands of others; so I certainly can't give anything to college publications," he said in his most friendly manner, placing his hand on the reporter's shoulder.

After sending a note requesting a short interview with Mr. Smith, and waiting several minutes, expecting to be told that the illustrious gentleman was not in his suite in the pent house at Whitehall hut at the Breakers beach or the Patio Marguery, the reporter was asked to wait a few minutes until Mr. Smith came down. Having stood for 45 long and anxious minutes, the reporter was rewarded by the presence of Mr. Smith and Mr. John J. Raskob. Mr. Raskob strolled out to his automobile, while Mr. Smith leaned against a sofa in preparation for an informal conversation.

The moment that politics was mentioned, Mr. Smith's face clouded up and he said, "My boy, I'm sick and tired of it all. I've had six months of it and I'm fed up with it. I'm down here for a rest and I want to get away from it all. I don't want to hear anything about politics." This was a confirmation of the statement of Mr. Raskob to the Palm Beach News in which he said, "Mr. Smith and his party are in Palm Beach for a rest. They will devote their time entirely to motoring, yachting, swimming, dancing, golfing, or dining. As Mr. Smith wishes to forget all about politics, he may not be interviewed."

When asked certain questions about the business future of college graduates, Mr. Smith replied, "I'll answer any of these questions for your own benefit, my boy. I'd like to help you or any other Williams student in any way that I can, but I can't give you an interview. In other words, I'll answer your questions but I don't want my answers quoted; so there is really no point to my answering. I'm down here on a vacation and I have nothing for the papers or college publications."

'THEATRE' PRESENTS COMIC BILL TONIGHT

Three One-act Farces of Widely Different Styles Afford a Variety of Humor

Friday, February 15—For the third time this season the pitfalls of the Jesup Hall stage will be braved by Little Theatre in presenting The Proposal, by Anton Tchekoff, The Mouse Trap, by William Dean Howells, and Two Gentlemen of Soho, by A. P. Herbert, at 8.15 o'clock this evening. These three one-act plays are all in a farcical vein, but insure sustained interest by being entirely unlike in subject and manner of treatment.

The Proposal is a thoroughly Russian comedy, intensely emotional, and rising to hilarious heights. It is being produced under the direction of Sewall '29 in the manner of Chauve-Souris now playing in New York. Woman suffrage affords adequate opportunity for humor in The Mouse Trap, a Victorian farce, which will be acted in genuine costumes replete with bustles. Casaday '29 is directing the play. Two Gentlemen of Soho, being directed by Reiff '30, depicts happenings in a London night club of the present day through the medium of Shakespearean blank verse, which results in an amusing incongruity.

The casts for tonight's productions are as follows:

The Proposal
Anton Tchekoff
Lomov McAneny '30
Chubukov Baxter '30
Natasha Mrs. King
Directed by Sewall '29
Setting by Owre '30 and Bannister '32

Interfraternity Council Notice

A. H. Jones and E. S. Jones '32 have been relieved by mutual consent from their pledges to the Psi Upsilon fraternity.

"A pledge to a fraternity imposes on both parties—the student and the house—a mutual obligation that, under existing conditions, is nearly, if not quite, as binding as the actual initiation of the student. In order that the Interfraternity agreement may operate successfully, the highest standards of honor and good sportsmanship must govern the keeping of these obligations. A pledge may be dissolved only for definite and substantial reasons. Each house should recognize that when a pledge is broken on the initiative of the house, whether or not by mutual consent, the student involved is placed in a peculiarly unfortunate and defenseless position, and that consequently such action can be justified only on grounds of extreme necessity.

Arbiter.

The above statement was presented to the Interfraternity Council by the Rushing Arbiters after they had investigated the case in point. At their suggestion, the Council has voted that it be published in The Record.

Prof. C. L. Safford Gives Talk in Tuesday Course

"To understand and fully appreciate music, one must suspend emotional feeling and take time to analyze the construction, technique, and particular expression", Professor Charles L. Safford of the Department of the History of Art and Civilization stated in his Tuesday Afternoon lecture this week in Chapin Hall. Demonstrating his points in Damrosch style with selections on the piano and phonograph, Professor Safford spoke on the subject: "Bach, Polyphonist; Beethoven, Symphonist; Debussy, Impressionist".

Bach, heir to the musical tradition of a family famous as organists, Professor Safford distinguished for the texture, inspiration, and simplicity of his work. Power of improvisation, the use of sharply contrasting themes, and the development of the sonata forms we renoted as the characteristics of Beethoven. Though Beethoven inherited the sonata form from Mozart and Haydn, Professor Safford stated that the spirit in Beethoven's works was his own. "Debussy epitomizes the history of French art" stated the speaker in concluding, "He was a universalist, not a modernist". His music was impressionistic rather than mechanical, but he resisted to a great extent, the emotional tendencies of his own age.

VARSITY WINS DULL GAME FROM TRINITY

Purple Plays Mediocre Basketball, But Downs Weak Hartford Team, 32 to 20

After a slow first half made uninteresting by faulty shooting and mediocre guarding on the part of both teams, the Varsity basketball five managed to rally at the end of the first half and again at the end of the game to register a 32-20 victory over Trinity in a dull game played last Wednesday evening in Lasell Gymnasium. The Purple five was off its game, and only the impotent offense displayed by the Hartford team enabled Williams to win, although the spasmodic brilliance of Alexander and Allen, coupled with consistent play by the substitutes, forecast the outcome of the game.

Three points by Williams and a basket by Nye made the count only 3-2 at the end of the first seven minutes, and occasional scores boosted the count to 8-7 soon after the middle of the half. The game struggled along with the score the same until two minutes before the end of the period, when Alexander unleashed an attack singlehanded to score two baskets, which, with Allen's last-minute free throw, brought the score 13 to 7 at half time. The Trinity team seemed adept at scoring on one shot only, a one-handed effort from the right side of the court. Trinity was unable to get very near the basket, and would not essay any sort of drive up the court until absolutely sure of the forwards being free. This caused much passing in mid-court, and the dogged guarding of

Only Debating Trials of Season To Be Held Soon

In preparation for the seven debates scheduled for the varsity and freshmen during March, trials will be held in Jesup Hall at 4.30 p. m. on Monday, February 18 for freshmen only, and at 4.30 p. m. on Tuesday, February 19, for the three upper classes. Members of 1932 are eligible for all these contests, but will be used only in freshman debates unless they display unusual ability. Since these two trials are probably the only ones that will be held this season, all men interested are urged to compete. The debating schedule follows:

For freshmen only
March 4—Intra-Class Debate in Chapin Hall. Six men.
March 16—Hotchkiss at Lakeville, Conn. Three men.
March 21—Wesleyan 1932 at Middletown, Conn. Two men.
For two classes
March 8—Albany Law School in Jesup Hall. Three men.
March 23—Princeton in Jesup Hall. Three men.
March 23—Vassar at Poughkeepsie. Three men.
March 30—Bucknell in Jesup Hall. Three men.

PURPLE AND SABRINA TO BATTLE ON COURT

Amherst Quintet, Victorious in Six Games, Has Lost Only to Brown Five

TEAMS ARE RATED EVEN

Lord Jeff Five Has Averaged 40 Points per Game; Williams Average Is 33

Six victories in seven games make up the record of the Lord Jeff basketball team which will oppose Williams tonight in the Pratt Gymnasium at Amherst for the second of the Little Three Championship contests and the first one for the Purple off the home floor. Although the decisive defeat of Wesleyan, which showed the real power of the team, gives Williams the lead in the title contests, a change from the crude playing of the last three games will be necessary to win over Amherst, who has not lost a game on the home floor this season.

Brown University and New Hampshire are the only teams which the Purple and the Lord Jeffs have both met, Williams winning from the Bruins 38-29 and Amherst losing to them 29-23. That Williams ought to win by 15 points from Amherst on the basis of this comparison does not follow, however, since Brown played Williams in Williamstown, while Amherst played at Providence. The games with New Hampshire, each played on the home floor, showed the teams to be evenly balanced since the margin of victory in each case was the same, Amherst winning 40-25, and Williams 38-23.

In the other five games the Sabrina has been triumphant, usually by large scores. Newport Training School lost 45-21 in the opening game. Maine was beaten 40-31 in a contest which showed possibilities of the Lord Jeffs developing into a fast passing team. Lowell Textile was conquered 41-28, although the game was characterized as an exhibition of "poor passing" and "inaccurate shooting". Stevens Institute fell by a 43-28 score. Finally Boston University was overwhelmed on last Wednesday night by a 53-33 count even though star forward Navin and center Harmon were out.

Comparing evenly with the Lord Jeff record is the Williams total of eight victories and three defeats to date. Defeats by Columbia, Yale, and St. Stephens are

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS MEET UNION SATURDAY

Purple Natators Will Open Garnet's Schedule at Schenectady; Close Meet Seen

With high hopes of winning its first meet of the present season, the Williams swimming team journeys to Schenectady today to open the schedule of the Union natators who fell to last year's varsity by the score of 37 to 34. Since the meet is to be swum under the rules of the National Collegiate Association, of which Union is a member, the events will be run in the following order: 200-yard relay, 200-yard breast stroke, 50-yard dash, 440-yard swim, 150-yard backstroke, 100-yard dash, dives, 220-yard dash, and 300-yard medley relay.

As this is the first meet for Union, little is known of the strength of their team. However, Captain Perkins, who won the backstroke last year and, five minutes after, pushed Putney to the utmost in the 100-yard dash, is still available. Knight, who starred in his Sophomore year and was ineligible last season, is slated for the dash events, while Conant is again in the backstroke. As a whole, Union presents a well rounded squad, with particular strength in the backstroke and good possibilities in the dashes.

Exact entries for each event have not yet been decided by Williams, but Captain Schott, Gregg, and Noble will probably take care of the breast stroke races. Higginbotham and Davis, who have been swimming the 50 for most of the season, will enter the short dash, while Illegginbotham and either Doughty, Close, Birnie, or Wolcott will swim the 100. The backstroke will be entered by Schott, Davis, Birnie, and Van der Bogert, and by Burgess and probably Wolcott, while the 220,

TRUMPING THE HEART

In recent years the appropriate observance of February 14 among American colleges of both genders has fallen off with such deplorable rapidity, that it is time for someone to become alarmed and start a thorough investigation of the matter. No heart should be left untended to arrive at the cause of this insidious condition which now seems to threaten the very possibility of our posterity. If the graceful art of sending valentines is obsolete, or even obsolescent, one may well fear that this is an indication that the art of love is also undergoing a katabolic process. We are considering future husbands and future wives! Surely, it is no joking matter today if that old attraction of the sexes has lost some of its reputed efficiency. Has love, too, gone the way of those delightfully atrocious affairs in lace that we used to drop so surreptitiously in the mail box at the corner? Have those sportive cupids really tired of their monotonously accurate archery? Has, in short, modern science finally managed to render the human heart impregnable to the point of an arrow? These are questions which face us on an almost sterile Valentine's Day.

Legend has it that on the day St. Valentine was beheaded in 306 A.D. the birds first began to mate. Human beings, ever imitative, desired to commemorate such an important event in some fitting manner, and so for many years thereafter it became the custom for each young man in a community to choose on the eve of the great day a girl or "valentine". For better or for worse, he was supposed to be attentive to her and amorous about her throughout the following year. As far as we know, the birds alone have faithfully maintained this quaint custom up to present times.

And yet the situation is not quite as hopeless as it first appears—not even in the cloistered college. In fact there is good reason to believe that, far from despising the delicate thrills of the valentine, modern youth, in its incorrigible passion for the saturation point, has made every day Valentine's Day. After all, the cupids, the arrows, the hearts, even the elegant lace, are still very much with us—but now hiding shyly behind a screen of slang and a fence of exclamation points. We merely have a new love-language. "My valentine" has become "my baby", and Cupid has put on the uniform of a Western Union messenger. A shot of gin may be the arrow, but it still hits the mark. The heart may be stained yellow with nicotine, but when pierced the drops are still a passionate red.

The false alarm is over. Posterity is guaranteed, C. O. D. Already the young men have picked their valentines, which they now call blind dates. And they will crowd the amours of a whole year into one synthetic week-end. The birds, with a startled tweet, fly south, quite outdone. For little did they know what they were starting on that historic occasion in 306 A.D. when St. Valentine lost his head.

alternating with the forwards, kept the puck almost entirely on enemy ice for the rest of the period. Accurate pass-work was greatly hampered, however, by the poor condition of the ice, and playing the rubber off the boards was almost impossible, due to the holes along the edges.

There was no let-down in the Purple offense at the start of the second period, and after the first few minutes, the team seemed to settle down, playing with more confidence. The speed of the contest increased continually, and Brigham and Wheeler twice skated around Parnall and Perry to no success. Howe and Langmaid then opened up, and after smashing his way to the goal, the former received a pass from Howe at one corner and drove the disk to the net.

The second line was substituted a moment later, and Ballou showed some clever hockey. Following the first tally, Amherst redoubled their efforts, and the play became rougher. Langmaid was sent off the ice for two minutes, and soon after his return was penalized again. Taking advantage of his absence, the Jeffmen stormed the Williams goal, and Watters showed some spectacular goal tending, making four saves in quick succession. The Amherst threat, however, was quickly reversed as Howe flashed through the opposing defense to receive a pass. Using tactics which have been emphasized in practice, he received the disk while crossing in front of the goal, and flicked it in. The period ended a moment later.

Amherst came back in the next frame with a renewed attack which elicited from the first drop. They were on the puck all the time, but were unable to get near enough to the Purple goal to shoot accurately, due to the efforts of the forward as well as the defense line. Brigham got two minutes for over-zealous checking, and Hoyt left the rink for one, soon after in company with an Amherst player. The defense men got a little pre-season baseball practice when they pulled down several high ones in the glove. Excellent work by the latter, backed up by Watters, was not enough, however, and at about eight minutes, Patrick scored on a pass from Felt, directly after a face-off.

This score served to increase the speed of the contest, and as Nye, Ballou, and Gross went in for the forward line again, the Jeffmen, throwing caution away, began sending four men down the ice at a time. Watters rose to the occasion, and in one melee, when forced from the goal, took the puck behind the net, preventing a score while both teams piled up around the goal. The play became more individual as the period went on, and penalties were frequent. Brigham got into difficulties twice, as did Parnall of Amherst. In the fading light, the Sabrina post-score rally began to fade and Williams took charge. Howe figured in several brilliant dashes down the boards, but the period ended without further score.

matched by wins over Brown, Lafayette, and New Hampshire with the conquests of Clark, R. P. J., M. A. C., Trinity, and finally Wesleyan added on. Amherst's average score per game is 40 points to 28 for the opponents, while Williams has averaged 33-26 against opponents which compare favorably with those of Amherst.

Three individual stars make up the scoring power of the Lord Jeff team, Latham and Navin at forwards and Groszkloss at guard having tallied most of the points in the games played so far. The first of this trio scored 50 points in three games, while the last was high scorer against B. U. with 16 points. Wilson at center is a changed-over guard, Notopolous taking his place at guard. The quintet as a whole has been noted for its fast work on the tip off plays and generally has played a better first half than second.

Williams chances then depend on the ability of the team to come out of the shooting slump characteristic of the last three games. Coach Messer refused to comment on the situation, but in any event the game will be close with the final outcome contested until the final whistle.

'THEATRE' TO PRESENT TWO PLAYS IN MARCH

One-Act Productions by J. Barrie and R. E. Rogers Will Make up Spring Bill

In the announcement of its next production, to be presented in the latter part of March, the Little Theatre offers two one-act plays, instead of the usual three, to comprise the bill. Shall We Join the Ladies, by J. M. Barrie, and Behind a Watteau Picture, by R. E. Rogers, are of decidedly different character, the nature of one being rather matter-of-fact, and that of the other extremely lyrical, thus retaining balance in the production.

Shall We Join the Ladies is the first act of an unfinished mystery play which J. M.
Barrie began a short time before his death.
Although it is a piece cut from another work, it has often been used as a complete one-act presentation by itself. The direction of the play is in the hands of Sewall '29.

The complementary production of the bill, Behind a Watteau Picture, is a fantasy in verse, extremely light and lyrical in form, and a new departure from the usual type. It played a six-weeks run at the Greenwich Village Theatre in New York City. The direction and costumes are the work of Casaday '29.

The casts of these plays, of which the freshmen are to be members for the first time, are as follows:

Varsity Wins Dull Game from Trinity

Alexander and Cuddeback on many occasions forced Trinity deep into her own territory. When the Hartford drive did penetrate, shooting was forced, and most of the field goals were of the sensational type.

Cuddeback's goal was the first score in the second period, but soon after this Trinity was able to score eight points, five of which were by Flossberg, thereby creeping within three points of the Purple.
The Williams team seemed paralyzed on the offense, and attempts to work the ball basketwards usually ended in failure, and many comparatively simple shots were missed. With a lead of only 16 to 13, however, the Purple emerged from its lethargy, Allen scoring two consecutive long shots. Alexander followed this precedent by working in to score two more, and only an occasional Trinity free throw punctuated a succession of shots by Willmott, Betham, Howse, and Field.

Seven free throws were made by Trinity in the second period, four of them by Flossberg, while only three goals from the floor were netted. High scoring honors were divided between Alexander, Allen, and Flossberg, with eight points each,
while Willmott was close behind with six.
Captain Betham was only able to score one field goal and two free throws, and Forward Fleming of the visitors netted only two points, as did the highly touted center, Nye.

The summary is as follows:

Patterson Honored in Frosh Class Elections

John A. Patterson, of Brooklyn, New York, William C. Fowle, of Winnetka, Ill., and Robert D. Swinchart, of Pottstown,
Pa., were elected to the positions of president, vice-president, and member of the Honor System Committee, respectively, at a meeting of the Freshman class last Thursday evening in the Thompson Chemical Laboratory. At the same time Edgar W. Lakin, of Washington, D. C., and Ernest R. Senn, of New York City were chosen to the positions of secretary and treasurer.

Patterson prepared for Williams at Poly Prep, where he was a member of the football and track teams, and played the end position on the undefeated Frosh eleven this fall. Fowle attended the North Shore Country Day School, where he was a member of the football, basketball, and track teams, and since coming to Williams was elected captain of Freshman football, and is at present playing center on the yearling basketball team. Swine-hart prepared at the Hill School, where he was a member of the golf team. He is at present a regular on the Frosh basketball squad.

Lakin attended the New Hampton School, New Hampshire, where he was prominent in literary activities. Senn prepared at Lawrenceville Academy, where he played football, and was Manager of baseball. He played half-back on the Freshman football team this fall.

Frosh FormWrestling Team

At the official opening of the Freshman team wrestling practice last Tuesday, a fairly large squad turned out giving at least one candidate for each weight, except the 115-pound class, which is still open. The men out for the team are, Mark—125 lb., Baylis—135 lb., Thornton and Thayer—145 lb., Brett—155 lb., Wood—165 lb., and Goldblatt—175 lb. A meet has been arranged with the Amherst freshmen on March 26th.

The Reverend Hugh Black, D.D., of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, will conduct the regular Sunday morning service in Thompson Memorial Chapel at 10.35 a. m.

Brief Lenten services, conducted by the college pastor, the Rev. Mr. J. H. Twichell, will be held in the Thompson Memorial Chapel every Wednesday afternoon at 5.30 p. m.

Undefeated Freshmen to Face Deerfield Five

Playing its last game before the start of the series for the "Little Three" championship, the undefeated Freshman five will face Deerfield Academy in Laisell Gymnasium today at 3 p. m. Previous to today's contest the visitors also have not dropped a game, and their recent victory over Monson Academy brought their winning streak to eight straight.

Little comparison can be made between the strength of the two teams, for their only mutual opponent was Holyoke High School whom both defeated by small scores. Among the other victims of the visitors are Leland and Gray, the Amherst junior varsity, Cushing Academy, Loomis School, the Fitchburg Normal School, and Monson Academy (two games). Their starting line-up will have Markoski and Snow at the forwards, Wheeler at center, and Captain Sheehan and Edwards at the guards. The freshman line-up will be the same as usual with Captain Good and Engle at the forwards, Fowle at center, and Cosgrove and Swinehart at the guards.

Purple Matmen Meet Norwich Team Tonight

In its first intercollegiate competition of the season, the Williams wrestling team will engage with the strong Norwich University wrestlers today at Northfield, Vt. While Norwich boasts an even stronger group of matmen than the combination which defeated the Purple team last year, Williams has been seriously handicapped by lack of interest on the part of potential grapplers and will have only two or three experienced men in the line-up. Last week Norwich defeated the Amherst wrestlers so that the meet will hold added interest by furnishing a basis for comparison.

Following is the tentative Williams line-up: 115-lb. class, Fujiyama; 125-lb. class, Spencer; 135-lb. class, Lisle; 145-lb. class, Reynolds; 155-lb. class, Baldwin; 165-lb. class, Lobo; 175-lb. class, Denning; unlimited, Andersen.

Final Match Reached in Interfraternity Handball

As a result of the final matches of the round robin series of the Interfraternity handball tournament played last Monday afternoon, Phi Delta Theta and the Commons Club are scheduled to struggle for the championship on February 15. Progress was also made in the basketball championship with three more games of the round robin completed and one defaulted during the week.

Delta Upsilon was decisively beaten by the Commons Club quintet on Monday, the final score being 31-21, while the other game scheduled for that afternoon was awarded to Chi Psi when Beta Theta Pi defaulted. The next two contests were held on Thursday, when Phi Gamma Delta easily overcame Delta Kappa Epsilon, 28-14, and Theta Delta Chi finally lost to Zeta Psi by a 28-24 margin. In the handball matches Beta Theta Pi conquered Delta Phi and then lost to Phi Gamma Delta, Delta Kappa Epsilon defeated Chi Psi, and the Commons Club gained the right to meet Phi Delta Theta in the finals by its 2-0 victory over Delta Phi.

IN MEMORIAM*CHAUNCEY LEBARON JEPSON

The sudden death of Chauncey LeBaron Jepson has deprived us of a friendship which we have valued through three years of intimate association and comradeship. In this moment of sorrow the members of the Commons Club unite in extending to his family and friends our most sincere sympathy and understanding. We do not feel, however, that the abiding ties of friendship which we have formed, too deep to find expression here, have been severed by his passing. His memory, and the memory of his days with us at Williams, have given us something lasting to perpetuate his friendship, and to reconcile us, in time, to our deep personal loss.

THE COMMONS CLUB
of Williams College

Though the period of our associations with Chauncey LeBaron Jepson was all too brief, he had won the affectionate regard of his classmates and all who knew him. In these hours of bereavement, the Class of 1930 unites in extending to his family, its very deepest sympathy.

PURPLE GLEE CLUB TO ENTER CONTEST

Ten Other College Organizations Will Test Vocal Prowess of Williams Men

Entering for the first time, the Williams College Glee Club will sing this year in the Fourth Annual New England Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest, to be held at Symphony Hall in Boston on Friday, March 1 at 8.00 p. m. Ten other New England colleges will compete at this time for the cup offered by the University Club of Boston, namely: Amherst, Bowdoin, Boston University, Clark, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Middlebury, Northeastern, University of Vermont, Wesleyan, and Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Among the entrants of this year are Wesleyan, Middlebury and Amherst, winners respectively in the 1926, '27 and '28 contests, and each holds a leg on the University Club Trophy. Since the winning Glee Club must gain the competition twice, the contest this year should be an interesting one. The winner of the New England Contest will represent this section in the National Intercollegiate Contest to be held in Carnegie Hall, New York, on Saturday, March 9.

The calibre of the entrants in the New England sectional contest compares very favorably with the National Intercollegiate group as is evidenced by the fact that the Wesleyan Glee Club, winner of the New England contest in 1926, also carried off first prize in the National Contest in 1926 and again in 1927.

The purpose of the glee club contests which are held in various portions of the country, is to raise the standard of singing in the college glee clubs. The New England Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest Association was organized in the fall of 1925 with this aim in mind, and since then contests have been sponsored annually by the University Club of Boston.

The hopes of the founders of the New England Association have been realized in part by the very noticeable improvement shown by the Glee Clubs in successive contests, but because of the heavy expenditure necessary for a competition of this nature the financial success has not been all to be desired.

As a result of this condition, a questionnaire was sent out late last spring asking the colleges whether or not the contests should be continued. The answers from the letters sent to the presidents of the various colleges were very definite in their desire that the competitions should continue, and eleven colleges signified their immediate intention of entering the contest in 1929. The committee then made plans to hold a contest this year.

From the tone of the letters received, there is no doubt but that glee clubs in New England are being benefited from the contests and the responsibility for the contest lies on the shoulders of the alumni who reside in Boston. The committee is doing its work in arranging the details of

Stern '29 Wins 'Times' Current Events Prize

Stern '29 won the first prize of $150 in the New York Times Current Events contest held here Saturday afternoon under the direction of Prof. R. A. Newhall, according to an announcement made yesterday by the committee in charge. Knox '30 and Ostrander '32 were awarded prizes of $50 each as second prize winners.

The contest was placed on a more elective basis this year, as the required essay subject included in the 1928 paper was omitted and contestants given a choice of 12 subjects. Exact identification of persons ranging from Grover Whalen to Amundsen, and of events including matters of such domestic concern as the Stewart case as well as such foreign affairs as the recent Vatican treaty was stressed.

GAITY TRIUMPHS IN 'LITTLE THEATRE' BILL

Performance 'Hugely Successful'
As 'Theatre' Devotes Evening
To Gay Comedy

Courtesy of Mr. Hubbard Hutchinson

Last Friday night the Williams Little Theatre put on a bill that furnished the evening with the gaiety of Chekov's Proposal, reduced adverse criticism to the status of the mouse in W. D. Howell's Mousetrap, and demands praise as adjectival as A. P. Herbert's Shakespearean Two Gentlemen of Verona. This choice of plays happily distinguished the offering from those to which little theatres are too prone—questionable adventures among the fragile tapestries of symbolism, and wallings in the half light of Celtic moons. The three comedies gave the organization ample space for demonstrating what it could do in the way of delicious entertainment, without taxing it beyond the bounds of amateur capacity.

It was hugely successful. The plays moved without a drop in interest and none of those dismal holes in the fabric of illusion to which even professionals are sometimes wont. The Proposal's inherent absurdity was sharpened by the stylized mode of presentation, the fine fantasy of décor which Messrs. Owre and Bannister, with an appreciative eye on the Chauve Souris, so well contrived. In this realm of frank make-believe Mr. Baxter, Mrs. King and Mr. McAneny under the direction of Mr. Sewall, romped and ranted with Slavic abandon, while managing by gesture and pose to keep well within the stylized manner chosen for the production. And if their unrelenting vocal fortissimo left their climaxes scant room for altitude, what can one do in a play whose every other stage direction is "He shouts"?

After the roars for Russia, the curtain rose upon an epoch almost equally fantastic to all save the very oldest of the audience—that Age of Innocence when woman's suffrage was an issue and legs

COMMUNIST FAILURE DESCRIBED BY PARES

Points to Present Stalin Regime as 'Milestone on the Way to Retreat'

"Communism was only definitely applied in Russia in the period 1918-1921, and since that time there has been more or less of a complete retreat", said Sir Bernard Pares in addressing the Forum last Sunday evening in Jesup Hall on the subject, "Present-Day Russia—The Communist Experiment". "The co-operative movement, in my mind, is the future," Sir Bernard went on. "The free union of a number of individual wills is the prospective advance, and this development of events is along diametrically the opposite course from that desired by the Bolsheviks."

The speaker opened his talk with a treatment of the connection of Marx with the movements in Russia culminating in the Revolution. He pointed out that the new intellectual middle class which grew up in the stretch of years from 1825 to 1855 had a tendency to emphasize the theoretical side of Fichte, Hegel, and later Marx, since the general public, after the "submit and obey" motto of Nicholas I, was excluded from practical public life. "Marx" he said, "did not conclude on a note of revolution, but of evolution, and his Russian followers must be considered more or less as heretics."

The Mensheviks were those who supported evolution when a schism occurred in the Social Democratic party in the nineties, while the other group under Lenin, the Bolsheviks, or "majority party", claimed that this program would not work—that the lead must be taken by a small, well-organized, and well-educated group. "In his whole party tactics Lenin was the deadly enemy of democracy", he called it a "bourgeois illusion". Russia was three-quarters of the way towards democracy when the war

'Cercle Francais' Joins National French Society

Announcement was recently made by President Collins '29 that the Cercle Francais has become a chapter of Beta Pi Theta, the national French Society, which was founded at Birmingham, Alabama, in 1924, and has since grown rapidly, instituting chapters in many colleges throughout the country. The society is comparable to Phi Beta Kappa in that requirements for membership include the same scholastic standing in French as the general scholastic standing for Phi Beta Kappa.

The purpose of the fraternity is to advance the progress of French and things cultural, not merely stressing the language, as heretofore in the Cercle, but also literature, music, art, and dramatics. In order to be eligible for admission, the student must be rated a full sophomore, and have a high standing in extra-curricular activities, besides having achieved high scholastic attainment. For admission he must be passed unanimously by the local chapter and the national council.

Officers for the new Williams chapter will be the same as those of the old Cercle Francais, namely: Collins '29, president, Faison '29, vice-president, and Elbrick '29, secretary-treasurer. Assistant Professor Walter Peirce of the French Department has been selected for faculty adviser. Election for membership in the society will take place this week, under the direction of the officers.

Unbeaten Deerfield Team Succumbs to 1932 Attack

Sweeping its opponents off their feet in the first quarter, and successfully resisting rallies in the second and fourth quarters, the Williams Freshman basketball team decisively defeated the hitherto unbeaten Deerfield Academy five, 51-39, Saturday afternoon in Lasell Gymnasium. The game, which was the sixth straight victory for the Frosh, was featured by frequent spectacular rallies by both teams, and by the brilliant individual play of Captain Good and Cosgrove of the freshmen, and of Markoski and Snow of Deerfield.

Starting fast, the freshmen, led by Good, scored thirteen points in the first quarter, while Deerfield, unable to score from the

SEXTET WILL OPPOSE AMHERST HERE TODAY

Purple to Clash With Middlebury
Tomorrow in Second Home
Game this Week

With one encounter with the Sabrinas satisfactorily concluded and a point toward the Trophy of Trophies safely stowed away, the Williams hockey team will attempt to duplicate last Wednesday's performance when it meets the Amherst ice-men for the last time this season on the Sage Hall rink at 4.15 this afternoon, and tomorrow will oppose the Middlebury sextet which at present leads in the race for the Vermont State Championship. Nothing can be said concerning the relative potentialities of Williams and Amherst more than the citation of the close Purple victory last week, while the strength of the Vermonters cannot well be judged since they have met none of Williams' opponents.

Including the three exhibition games played against Amherst at Lake Placid during the mid-year recess, the Purple holds a scoring advantage of 12 goals to 7 and, though soft ice has slowed practice for the past few days, the teamwork which has been a large factor in past victories should count in Williams' favor this afternoon. Both teams will take the ice with line-up intact so that a close, hard-fought contest is to be expected.

Middlebury has been seriously hampered all season by poor playing conditions and by illness, but nevertheless has succeeded in winning a good percentage of games by imposing scores. Among its recent successes were a 5-0 win over Norwich and a 2-0 victory over St. Lawrence. Although the Vermonters were scheduled to meet Amherst and Princeton, both games had to be called off because of inclement weather so that comparative scores are lacking. A number of strong individual players have featured in the Middlebury attack, while teamwork has insured the defense.

Paintings By J. A. Cook on Exhibit in Lawrence

Starting this week, the third exhibition of paintings will be held in Lawrence Hall Museum under the auspices of the Art Department, consisting of a group of water colors by John A. Cook of Gloucester, Mass. Mr. Cook is now exhibiting with three Boston artists at the Twentieth Century Club in Boston.

The exhibition here will be water colors mainly of Gloucester and Gloucester Harbor, for which Mr. Cook has earned a reputation. In reviewing the exhibition at the Twentieth Century Club, the Boston Transcript said, "The group of water colors is by John A. Cook, who paints the brilliant sunlight and gay fishing craft of Gloucester Harbor. If Mr. Cook, who was born in Gloucester and there passed many years of his life, could not paint its artistically intriguing waterfront, a reviewer might not forgive him. But Mr. Cook can, and does, paint the wharves, the boats, the dock inhabitants, and the very water that laps his native place, and does it with great ability and comprehension of what he is about."

WILLIAMS OFFENSIVE
SHOWS GREAT POWER

Scoring Attack Led by Allen and Betham Gives Purple 22-11
Lead at Half

Against an Amherst team that had won five straight games and had not been beaten on its home floor, the Purple quintet suddenly found itself last Saturday night in the Pratt Gymnasium at Amherst to administer a 38-21 beating to the Lord Jeff five in the first title contest between these two. Fast passing, quick cutting, accurate shooting, and finally guarding that forced the Sabrina team to tries from beyond the foul circle, tell the story of the irresistible tide that swept over the Amherst five from the second minute on, when Betham put Williams ahead on a perfect out-of-bounds play.

Amherst was bewildered at the sudden fierceness of the attack, falling back on the defensive for almost the entire first half. Failing to intercept the ball on the fast passes of Betham and Willmott, the Lord Jeff players fouled repeatedly in their eagerness to prevent Allen, Betham, and Willmott from shooting. With just as deadly accuracy as in their other shots, however, the fouls were sunk by the Purple and the score increased. Only occasional individual flashes kept the Sabrinas in the scoring column at all. As the game went on the playing grew rougher, though the Lord Jeffs lost more than they gained by these tactics. Incipient rallies were crushed by poor shooting and the loss of the ball to the watchful Allen, Alexander, or Cuddeback who promptly started another drive to the other end of the floor.

It was this sustained offensive, not stopping throughout the whole game, which gave Williams the victory. Passes which never went wrong, clever team work backed up by the guards, and individual quickness kept the ball in the possession of the Purple. Long shots were followed with a hawklike accuracy; plays worked with a mechanical smoothness; and the shooting showed again the form displayed against Lafayette and Wesleyan. On the defensive Williams played the man-for-man system to perfection, allowing few shots from close to the basket and hurrying these so that they went wrong. Under its own basket the team pursued the ball with the same eagerness that they followed the long shots, keeping the offense constantly working.

As the first half opened, Amherst got the ball on the tip-off and began a slow, cautious attack, awaiting an easy chance to score. The Purple did not delay, however, and, when Grosskloss had shot his foul, the storm broke. Betham scored, Navin and Alexander dropped in a foul respectively, and then Cuddeback sank a long shot from the middle of the floor, the first of many. With seven minutes of the half gone Willmott tossed the ball over his head to bring the score to nine to six, as Amherst took time-out. When play was resumed Allen contributed four points on a fast pass play and two fouls. Long shots, short shots, trick shots, and follow-ups gave Williams 22 points to Lord Jeff's 11 at half time.

The beginning of the second period brought forth Amherst's rally, which cut the Purple lead to nine points at 27-18 with ten minutes left to play. The Sabrinas were trying desperately, shooting wildly from all parts of the floor, and missing time after time. Williams offset the weakening rally with its final drive on the substitution of Callaghan for Allen and Thoms for Willmott. Betham dropped in two in a row, followed by a long shot from Callaghan's hands. Allen and Willmott returned and the former immediately scored on a "sucker" shot. Cuddeback ended the basket shooting with his third long one, and Alexander brought the tally to 38 with a foul. Howe, Fowle, Ely, and Denno took charge for the last minute, effectively checking the expiring struggles of the Lord Jeff team.

In making the first tally for Williams, Betham set the pace for the rest of the team, a pace which lasted until the end of

'Theta Delta Chi' Shows Way in Scholastic Race; Campus Scholarship Shows General Improvement

Surpassing Kappa Alpha, for four years winner of the Interfraternity Scholarship Cup, by six points, Theta Delta Chi, with 335 points, has assumed the lead of the scholarship race according to unofficial figures of the first semester marks compiled through the cooperation of the Dean's Office. That only five fraternities fell below the 300 score, as compared with half of the 16 groups last year, is indicative of the general improvement in scholarship throughout the college.

The same system of scoring is employed in compiling these averages as is used in figuring the data for Phi Beta Kappa awards, i. e., of the total number of grades received by the members of any group, the percentage of A's, B's, C's, D's, and E's is calculated; after which each percentage is multiplied by a corresponding number: A's being multiplied by five, B's by four, C's by three, D's by two, and E's by one. A score of 300 would thus represent an average of C's. The number of the different grades received by each group and the total points derived therefrom are:

MATRICULATIONS IN UTOPIA

By this time the matriculated freshman has been at Williams long enough to have formed some rather definite notions about the place. He has been hurled through the rushing mill; he has attended a rather tremendous number of early morning chapels; he has been reasonably faithful to his five courses of the classroom; and he has, in his own way, been something of an athlete—either by way of football, or those duller activities that take place in required physical training. He has even been introduced to some of the various devices conventionally made use of by Williams men for purposes of diversion, entertainment and mild dissipation. Very early he discovered the movies, and later, perhaps, "Five-Acts-Five" in the wicked city. Then came those more sophisticated adventures in pleasure which attain such charming superlatives in a fraternity houseparty or a breathless trip to "Ham" (never to Northampton). And as that finishing touch, he has been gently educated in the correct manner of dressing and in the proper use of the words, "smooth" and "wet", even mastering the subtle intonation of, "not very much". Young plastic minds are quick to assimilate such matters; and now with the digestive process about over, it would be interesting to know exactly what chemical change has taken place in the freshman as he begins his second semester of Williamsana.

If freshmen today are composed of essentially the same ingredients as those of three or four years ago, we may safely make the generalization that the Class of 1932 is at present laboring under impressions that are both false and foolish. Every year the illusions of prep. school are bravely discarded, only to make room for the more elaborate illusions of college. While it is often convenient to have one or two pet illusions to fall back upon in time of gloom, it is quite a different matter when they are indiscriminately heaped up to form a whole system of living. It is inevitable that the network of prejudices and superficial notions which every freshman seems to acquire, will in the end prove far more treacherous than soothing. When they begin to break up toward the end of sophomore year, they are liable to leave behind not a few bewildered young men who quickly become amateur cynics to cover their embarrassment. Sometimes this monument of false values lingers with pathetic persistence to the very end; and we have the spectacle of a senior or an alumnus who should still be wearing a freshman toque.

It is a futile as well as presumptuous occupation to attempt to point out to the freshman that he has a distorted perspective on things, and that in all probability he is living by mere ghosts of principles and adoring clay models of gods. The most we can do is hope that this inevitable period of high-flying among the clouds will be brief so that he may alight as soon as possible with both feet on the ground. We may also make a list of the notions which many freshmen now hold, and which they will soon learn to surrender. The result is an amazing credo which, in its obvious striving after effects of sophistication, will strike many of us as remarkably naive. Here are some of them picked at random from this collegiate air: The freshman believes—

That in some indefinable way fraternity men are a little better, morally, physically, and socially, than those not in fraternities;

That while in College he must go out for at least one managerial competition "for the sake of the House" and his character, whether or not he is interested in that sort of thing.

That a red or blue hat is a sign of desirable grace, and that not to win one is to be socially undesirable in some respect;

That the VII Club must be a very important and influential society because it is so secret;

That Gargoyle is a picturesque way of rewarding those who have done most for Williams, and that it is one of the things to go out for;

That the officers of his class will turn out to be the biggest men in College

That a "W" means more now and in after-life than a Phi Beta Kappa key;

That it is the mark of a sissy to take any but casual interest in such things as classes, dramatics, lectures, and concerts;

That "C" is a gentleman's grade;

That to be seen at Northampton raises one's social standing; and that to be seen on Mt. Greylock lowers it;

That Williamstown is no place to spend week-ends; and

That the size of a man on the campus is measured by the number of activities listed after his name in the Gul.

We refrain from appending the customary moral tag, but possibly a freshman, chancing to read this over, will recognize as his own some of these articles of faith. In that case, we recommend an immediate and thorough evacuation, realizing, of course, that our recommendation will not be acted upon until it is too late.

Garfield Will Return Soon

Pres. H. A. Garfield, having sailed February 13, from Naples, is expected to return to Williamstown Monday, February 25, according to information received by the college offices yesterday. President Garfield sailed for England December 21, for a two month vacation tour of the continent. He made extensive stays in London and Rome, and also visited Paris, Geneva, and Naples.

Communist Failure

Described by Pares

broke out, but the later developments of the struggle spoiled all this and gave Lenin his chance. In 1915, as a result of the tremendous casualties and the general dissatisfaction with the government, democracy almost became an accomplished fact. The progressive bloc came into power in the Duma, but progress was cut short.

"If the Czar had married anyone else than Alexandra the whole thing would not have happened. She was foreign, which made her unpopular, and more than that, she fell under the influence of the licentious, uneducated, and unscrupulous lay brother, Rasputin. In the middle of the war, 1915-1916, when the rest of the world produced its best brains, Russia was governed by Rasputin. This created exactly the situation which Lenin was looking for."

The Russian Revolution came without any intervention from Lenin. He arrived exactly one month and one day after the abdication of the Czar. Neither did the Duma overthrow the autocracy: it crashed of itself. "The Bolsheviks overthrew democracy and nothing else, for after the Czar there was a national democratic government with universal suffrage—almost too much democracy at a time when all other countries were curbing liberalism in order to win the war. This is the reason for the fall of the provisional government. War demands a dictatorship. This is what Bolshevism was, and that's why it won". The provisional government's loyalty to the allies was another reason for its downfall, for the Bolsheviks were the only party which was advocating a separate peace.

The only innovation in the way of self-government supplied by the Bolsheviks, besides the Soviet, was depriving every man of the franchise who decided to disagree with the communist power at the helm. The Communist Party also proposed all candidates, so that the representatives of the people in reality only represented one million out of the 148,000,000 inhabitants of European Russia. Then came the civil war, the Bolsheviks won because they were organized, and because their rivals had foreign support. The collapse of the Whites was followed by the bankruptcy of communism itself. The output of the factories decreased 86% by 1921, and only 9% of the machines were still at work. It was impossible to sell such goods as were produced on account of the lack of money.

It was possible, however, for Russia to go on with the regime so long as it was not applied to agriculture. But it was. The peasant was allowed to keep only a certain fraction of what he grew, and so the result was that he produced only that amount which he was allowed to put to his own use. This checkmated the only wholesale attempt at communism ever made in Russia. Lenin admitted he was beaten. He found that it was impossible to practice what he preached. As Rakowsky said, "if you go to Russia you will find communists but not communism". The chief obstacle to the instilling of a communist mentality in the young was the church, and so a general religious persecution was instigated. "Every religion which has been persecuted has been benefitted by it; I am coming to the conclusion that no religion can prosper without it. The most ironical thing about the whole business was that communism itself became a religion."

In conclusion Sir Bernard said: "The workers are not better off under the present system. The wages are not so good as formerly, the housing conditions are terrible. On the one side we have machinery and the government, on the other side everything else; and everything else is winning hands down, because, regardless of outside suggestion, it, embodied by the Russian peasant, continues in the way it has started regardless of any outside pressure which may be brought to bear by a minority. The present regime of Stalia is a milestone on the way to retreat. We cannot fathom the future of the communist experiment, or how long it will last, but we can perceive the tendency of Russia towards getting back to normal."

RULES FOR DUNBAR CONTEST ANNOUNCED

Foundation Secretary Urges Haste in Submission of Articles for 1929 Prizes

In anticipation of the annual competition for the James R. Dunbar Student Life Prizes, Philip R. Dunbar '00, Secretary of the Foundation, has urged that more promptness be shown this year in the writing of the articles and the sending of them to him at Boston. These annual awards, started in 1927 by a group of 25 alumni, are for excellence shown during the College year in the writing of articles, essays, or editorials.

The prize foundation was made "in the belief that society is properly concerned less with its adopted modes than with the creative and cultural spirit of the members who compose it. . . . The test of eligibility for this competition shall be whether

"athletic" meanings, as well as other more obvious meanings.

Material eligible for the competition must be submitted by the author direct standard typewriter paper. If previously floor, was held to a single free throw by Markoski. The Frosh offense and defense were functioning perfectly, and Deerfield was unable to get past mid-floor. Using a delayed offense, the freshmen got two more baskets at the beginning of the second period, and then took time out to change jerseys, since the dark suits worn by both teams were causing confusion. Deerfield's offense picked up immediately, and an attack led by Markoski and Sheehan gave them eleven points to the ten made by the Frosh in the period, bringing the count to 23-12 as the half ended.

Markoski opened the second-half scoring a free throw on Engle's foul, but a smooth passing game and several spectacular shots by Cosgrove and Engle enabled the freshmen to widen their lead to 39-22 during the third quarter. In the final period, almost the entire freshman second team was substituted, and Markoski and Snow ran wild for the last few minutes of the game, but were unable to overcome the lead the Frosh had established.

ON THE Firth of Forth, northwest of the ancient Scotch town of Restalrig in Midlothian County, lies Leith Links, one of the homes of golf. Nearby in Leith the famous Glengair line of Scotch golf stockings is hand-framed and knitted.

Truly Scotch are these fine stockings. The authentic tartans with which some are designed carry one in imagination to the steep green cliffs and purple lakes, the bens and lochs, of this country of clans. In other numbers of the line, whether they be patterns or rich solid colors, their beauty bespeaks the unmatched skill of Scotch designing in wool.

For style, or for the warmth and comfort of their fine selected wool these hand-framed golf stockings of Glengair, Ltd., are unexcelled. You will like them for informal social wear as well as for wear about the campus and for skating and skiing. We invite you to inspect them.

the game. On the offense the star forward was as elusive as ever, scoring four baskets and a foul while preventing his guard from sinking a single basket from the field. Allen got into his stride after the first few minutes to tally eleven points in three rallies. Alexander, Cuddeback, and Willmott were invaluable in the scoring, while without them the smooth working offense would have been impossible.

In Latham, left forward, Amherst had its greatest offensive star, who, nevertheless, was held to two field goals. Guard Notopolis sank two baskets and a foul for the Lord Jeff high-score total of five points, while Captain Navin, handicapped by an injured ankle, made only one basket and two fouls. Grosskloss, who has been high-scorer in previous games, was held to two fouls, though he played a strong game on the defense in parts of the contest.

Williams chances in this game depended on the team's ability to find itself in the face of strong opposition and on a strange court. The 17 point lead tells the story.

Following is a summary of the game.

Outing Club to Conduct
Winter Trip Up Greylock

Starting from Jesup Hall at 8.30 Friday morning, the Williams Outing Club will conduct its annual Washington's Birthday bike up Greylock on skis and snow shoes, making the ascent by the old coach road.
This provides an easy grade all the way, so that novices need have no trouble in negotiating the climb as is evidenced by the fact that thirty men made the trip two years ago (last year's hike was not held because of unfavorable weather).

Transportation to the foot of the trail will be furnished by the club, but hikers must bring their own lunches which will be eaten in the cabin on the summit. It is planned to make the return in time for dinner Friday evening. All those planning to make the trip are requested to attend a meeting which will be held some time Thursday to explain all details, notice will be given in the Adviser.

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS TRAIL GARNET, 5 TO 4

Purple Takes Medley Relay to Tie Meet 39-39, But Five Firsts Win for Union

By the closest possible margin, after battling the Union tankmen to a 39-39 tie for points last Saturday in the latter pool, the Williams swimming team lost their fifth straight meet when victory was awarded to the Garnet team by Referee Wheatley for winning five out of the nine first places. Although the persistent Williams losing streak remains unbroken, a promising Purple swimmer was discovered in Wolcott, who won the 440 and broke the Union pool record in the 220 with 2:45.4 to take second honors with 10 points, while Noble won his second breast stroke race and the Purple medley relay team was again successful.

Following the Intercollegiate order of events which differs from that used in the New England League, the meet opened with the 200-yd. freestyle relay. Counting eight points for the winner and nothing for the loser, this race has been a jinx for the Williams quartet all season, and proved so again when the Garnet took it easily, as Knight pulled away in the third leg, and Taylor finished in front of Higginbotham. A first and second came to Williams in the next race, however, when Noble and Gregg came in neck and neck, while Haviland of Union was third.

Another jinx seems to be following Higginbotham, Purple dash star, for again he was unable to gain a first place in the 50-yd. freestyle. He pushed Knight, high-scoring of the meet, all the way, and lost by a scant foot, as the winner clocked at 27.2 sec. In the 440-yd. swim, Wolcott trailed Ryon of Union until the last two laps, and then, showing plenty of reserve power, passed him without difficulty to win in 6 min. 14.6 sec. Burgess followed Ryon closely to win a third for Williams. Captain Perkins of the Garnet had little difficulty in winning his favorite event, the 150-yd. backstroke, while Captain Schott of the visitors, had difficulty in taking second from Conant.

Higginbotham was no more successful in his other dash event, the 100, swimming even with Knight to be nosed out by an even slighter margin than previously. Taylor again took the other point for Union. Williams got a second and third in the dives, as Shaw and Neibling finished in that order, while Hawley won for the Garnet with 80 points. With the score at 33 to 27 in favor of Union, Wolcott again showed his superiority in the distance swims when he flashed a beautiful race in the 220-yd. freestyle, an event new to Williams this year. As in the 440, he trailed the Union man most of the way, only to pass him with a burst of speed at the end, and establish a new pool record of 2 min. 45.4 sec. for the event. Captain Schott, swimming a freestyle race for one of the few times this season, came in a good third for Williams, making the score 36 to 33 for the Garnet.

With an opportunity to at least tie the number of points, the strong Purple medley relay team took the water for the final event. As last year against Union, a trio composed of Van der Bogert, Gregg, and Close had had an easy time winning with 3 min. 49.2 sec. Although the score was then 39-39, first place was awarded to Union in accordance with the Intercollegiate rules for winning the largest number of first places.

The summary follows:

200-yard relay: Won by Union (Ryon, Maltbie, Knight, Taylor). Time, 1:47 1-5.
200-yard breaststroke: Won by Noble, Williams; Gregg, Williams, second; Haviland, Union, third. Time, 3:09.2.

50-yard dash: Won by Knight, Union; Higginbotham, Williams, second; Taylor, Union, third. Time, 0:27 1-5.

440-yard swim: Won by Wolcott, Williams; Ryon, Union, second; Burgess, Williams, third. Time, 6:14 3-5.

100-yard dash: Won by Knight, Union; Higginbotham, Williams, second; Taylor, Union, third. Time, 1:01 2-5.

Dives: Won by Hawley, Union; Shaw, Williams, second; Neibling, Williams, third. Score, 80.

220-yard dash: Won by Wolcott, Williams; Perkins, Union, second; Schott, Williams, third. Time, 2:45 2-5 (new Union Tank record).

Medley relay: Won by Williams (Vanderbogert, Gregg, Close). Time, 3:49 1-5.

150-yard backstroke: Won by Perkins, Union; second, Schott, Williams; third, Conant, Union.

Gaiety Triumphs in 'Little Theatre' Bill

were called "limbs"—the basques and bustles of 19th Century Boston.

Set and costumes were faultless from mits to black marble mantlepiece, thanks to Mr. Casaday's and Mr. Clapp's discerning eyes and numerous Williamstown trunks and attics—(see back of program) and the cast—to use the vocabulary of the play—was a triumph of felicity. There was no nuance of artful ingenuousness, no delightful inconsistency, that Mrs. Birdsall, ravishing in a brocade polonaise, did not bring to her embodiment of Any, and as much may be said for the other roles. The ladies twittered and shrieked and gestured so convincingly that they might have been born to the bustle, and Mrs. Graham proved that charming naughtiness is not, as spinster aunts would have us believe, confined to an age of slip-ons. Mr. Heernance was noble in beard and long coat. The business was smooth, brisk, well-timed, and the whole light fabric of the play beautifully woven.

But the peak of the evening, in the writer's opinion, was the last play, because it was given as well as the others, and is a unique piece of writing. It is even a great play in its field; there is nowhere more superb parody. It presents its own difficulty because the pace is that of farce yet the complex lines demand the clarity of a slower tempo since they are so gorgeous that no syllable should be slurred. Skillful business and a crisp enunciation solved the problem. Mr. Lucas' staccato delivery, Mrs. Safford's vastly amusing Duchess, and the pompous philosophy of Mr. Spencer, dying by eels above a mound of carnage, were high points in a performance that sparkled throughout, save a moment when one of Mr. Sabin's speeches was lost in too energetic business elsewhere.

This is easily the best bill of the Little Theatre it has been this reviewer's privilege to see, original in choice, finely contrasted, done with verve and finish. They deserve a theatre of their own. To parody a parody,

These eyes do scan the circling horizon There to spy out some lofty-tower'd office Wherein, made happy by the sudden rise Of those swift-climbing vines that men call Stocks

Some Kind Alumnus sits, and being more In speculation than in fancy rich Counts undecided all his new-made gold Nor can devise a means for spending it. To such, when found—and haply there be such—

To knot his indecision to our need, Grafting the blossom of a timely thought Upon the sturdy rooted trunk of wealth That from this ligature there may spring fruits Ambrosial, meet for Thespia, no less; Lights, hemi-cycles, dressing rooms and domes Most spaciouly disposed; in substance, all That loving labor lacks in Jesup Hall.

Brown and Gaskill '28 While Visiting in Stamboul, Turkey, Climb Olympus With Other Williams Alumni

Wentworth Brown and C. Francis Gaskill '28 enjoyed a ten-day visit before the Christmas holidays in Stamboul, Turkey, as the guests of Luther R. Fowle '08, treasurer of the Turkey Mission of the American Board. In the accompanying photograph, Ernest Hedden '15, C. Francis Gaskill '28, Luther Fowle '08, and Wentworth Brown '28 are shown standing on top of the Bithynian Olympus near Bousa in Turkey.

Hedden Gaskill Fowle Brown

In a letter to the Reverend Joseph H. Twichell, Mr. Fowle wrote that the group in the photograph were part of a larger group of fifteen who climbed to the summit

"Our community enjoyed a visit from Brown and Gaskill and certainly there is no need of being discouraged about American college men if these fine fellows are typical. In their breadth of interest, modesty of judgment, and tolerance and friendliness, they won the respect of people here, both nationals and foreigners."

Brown and Gaskill continued their journey eastward and are probably now in Mesopotamia.

COMPARISON IS MADE OF FACULTY SALARIES

Tabulation of Professors' Salaries of Williams and Amherst Made by Hoyt

In the February issue of the Williams Alumni Review, the comparative expenses and instructors' salaries of both Amherst and Williams were published, accurate data having been secured by Mr. W. E. Hoyt, Williams College Treasurer, who secured the financial statistics from the Amherst treasurer for the fiscal year 1928 and submits those of Williams for the same time. Although the greatest difference was shown in salaries of both institutions, Amherst allotting 55% of its total expenses to its staff, as against 48% given by Williams, the recent authorization of the Williams trustees to increase salaries not later than 1930 will improve the position of the faculty and raise it to the level of most other colleges, including Amherst.

No definite time has been set for the increasing of our faculty salaries, but it will probably occur within the next year, and will provide for a $1,000 addition to the present emoluments of each. Full professors are to receive $6,000, associate professors $5,000, assistant professors $4,500, and instructors $3,000. Although the total of expense in 1928 was greater at Williams than at Amherst, teachers at the latter received over $45,000 more. One reason for this may seem to be the comparative endowments of both colleges, Amherst overshadowing Williams by more than 1½ millions.

Following are the tabulations computed by Treasurer Hoyt:

	Amherst	Williams
Total current expense	$674,553.46	$677,417.79
Instruction, including library	371,588.17	326,443.58
Percentage	55%	48%
Salaries only	334,146.29	303,191.21
Departmental expenses	37,441.88	23,252.37

SENIORS DESIGNATE PLANS FOR FUTURE

Questionnaires Show Majority To Enter Graduate Work and Business Schools

Interesting results have been returned in the questionnaire recently sent out by Dean Howes to the members of the Senior Class in order to ascertain their plans for the year following graduation. Of the 150-odd men affected by the questionnaire, approximately one-third will carry on their studies into graduate work, while a singular number intend to enter business and the remainder have not yet made up their minds concerning the future.

The Harvard graduate schools appear to be by far the most popular among the Class of 1929 according to the Dean's tabulation, since 19 men are to take up the study of law in Cambridge and 12 have decided upon the Harvard Business School. Eight seniors will continue work in medical courses; 2 will do their graduate work in architecture, and only one has signified his intention of following technical studies. There are of course the usual number who intend to work toward a higher degree.

Those who are as yet doubtful are for the most part desirous of obtaining an immediate business connection, although there are some who would prefer elementary teaching or minor athletic coaching. The remainder of the class have completed their plans and ask no help of the college, the preponderance leaning toward business and banking. A number of these men have secured positions with large manufacturing concerns and several with aviation companies, while a relatively large number will spend the post-graduate period in travel abroad.

Swim Relays Begin Today

Eight man teams from each house on the campus will compete in the Interfraternity swimming relays which will be held this week in the Laseel Gymnasium pool. Those houses in the American League will compete today (Tuesday), while the National League teams are scheduled for Wednesday, the races in both cases starting at five o'clock.

FAMOUS ARTISTS TO HOLD CONCERT HERE

Unpublished Works of Old Masters Will Be Presented by Noted French Quintet

Presenting a program composed entirely of the unpublished works of the most famous classical composers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, La Societe des Instruments Anciens, a world famous virtuoso combination, will play here Wednesday evening at 8.00 p. m. in Chapin Hall under the auspices of the Thompson Course. Since its foundation in 1901 by its leader, Henri Casadesus, this remarkable group of musicians has devoted itself to the revival of the music of old masters on instruments of a former day, and has achieved an unusual popularity among all classes of music lovers.

The Society is made up of five stringed instruments, in common use two or three centuries ago. Henri Casadesus plays the viole d'amour, Marius Casadesus the quinton, which is a small soprano viol with a sweet tone, Maurice Deviller the basses do viole, Lucette Casadesus the viole de gambe, and Regina Casadesus the clavecin, the French harpsichord. Upon this quintet of instruments of remarkable tone and performance the players render the almost forgotten airs of Bach, Haydn, Mozart, and many lesser composers of that period in musical history. Their repertory includes string quartets, quintets for strings and clavecin, trios for various instruments, symphonies, concertos, and fantasies.

The distinguished quality of their performance is evidenced by the extravagant praise meted them by prominent musical critics throughout the world. In commenting on a recent performance, Richard Stokes, musical critic for the New York Evening World, says, "Led by the Societe des Instruments Anciens, we withdrew from the clamors of the twentieth century and recaptured from the seventeenth and eighteenth some moments of musical quiet, serenity, courtliness, and charm". They have played many times before the royalty of Europe, and last spring were hailed with great enthusiasm at the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge festival of chamber music in Washington.

Commons Club Takes Handball Championship

Concluding a long-deferred round robin series, Commons Club and Phi Delta Theta met in the final match of the handball tournament on February 15, the former winning a surprisingly easy victory by 2-0. The twenty points thus gained by the Commons Club towards the Intramural Trophy advanced them to the leading position in the league, with 67½ points, while Phi Delta Theta, though scoring twelve additional points, remains in third position behind Phi Gamma Delta.

The close race between Chi Psi and the Commons Club for leadership in the A division of the basketball series continued as Chi Psi took an early advantage over Delta Upsilon to win by 54-17, and the Commons Club came from the rear to defeat Beta Theta Pi, 24-17. With T. R. Shoaff and Clark finding the basket at every opportunity, Chi Psi soon had a lead that Delta Upsilon never threatened, and which continued to increase up to the final minutes. Commons Club, on the other hand, seemed thoroughly beaten at half-time, after four phenomenal shots from the middle of the floor by Fox had given Beta a 15 to 4 lead. In the second half, however, the positions were reversed, and the Beta team stood by while Ryders, Wentworth, and Forbes ran up twenty points in half that many minutes. Hoffman finally scored Beta Theta Pi's lone basket to make the count 24-17.

FIRST TERM GRADES SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Predominance of A's and B's Over D's Betters 1927-28 Station of 'Ideal Curve'

Official and complete final grades for the first semester, as issued by the Dean's office, show a considerable improvement over the corresponding marks for 1927-28, and swing the "ideal curve," which tended last year to a predominance of D's over B's, to exactly the opposite extreme this year. The "ideal curve" is in the form of a moderated peak, with the A's balancing the E's, the B's offsetting the D's, and the total of C's causing it to rise in an arc before falling with the fair and non-passing grades.

The betterment over last year, analysis shows, is due in a large measure to markedly superior work in several subjects, and general improvement in nearly every department, which taken together are able to offset the distinctly poorer work manifested in a few instances. The 1928-29 Greek marks show more D's than B's. Of the departments in which work has materially improved, Art is especially notable. In this department there were 46 B marks as against 10 D's. In German, there was a 3 to 1 ratio, with 50 B's and 18 D's. Chemistry showed an unusual predominance of A's this year, 26 of that mark being given, while other noticeable improvement took place in the English and French departments.

On the other hand, there were fallings off in History, with 100 D's and 20 E's, in Mathematics, which had 20 E marks, as usual in Philosophy with 28 failures, and in Physics with 21 E's. All other courses adhered approximately to the standard, although Astronomy and Religion grades show a predominance of B's.

The summary of grades in every course, and also totaled into departments, is as follows:

COACH FOX SUMMONS BASEBALL CANDIDATES

Pitchers and Catchers to Report This Week; Team Has Ten Letter Men Back

Courtesy of Coach Fox

One year ago, just previous to the baseball team's first workout in the cage, a similar review was published in THE RECORD. The figures showed quite plainly that the 1927 team was weak at the bat, but a fine fielding team. The 1928 team showed weakness in both departments, until many shifts were made by Coach Fox, which finally bolstered up the team defensively. In truth, a disastrous season to any club, winning but one out of 15 games played.

Captain Smith, Danieli, and Putnam were the only letter men left from the 1927 nine. P. Cavanagh and Swift, both hard-hitting outfielders, became ineligible at the start of the season. Before the season had progressed very far, Alexander and Tittman were out for the season with twisted knees. R. Williams became laid up with an infected arm; while D. Williams was handicapped with sickness over half the season. Danieli, one of the three veterans and strong lead-off men had to resign from the team due to a football injury to his back. With lack of stars among the squad personnel, the disabilities were sorely felt, and they weakened the team's effectiveness tremendously.

The following is the average of each player individually, with a summary and team average compared with the 1927 team:

There were eighteen games scheduled. Three games with N. Y. U., Conn. Aggies, and Princeton were cancelled on account of rain. The Army, Holy Cross, Brown, Columbia, Yale, Tufts, Dartmouth, M. A. C., Middlebury, Vermont, two each with Wesleyan and Amherst, and the annual Alumni game rounded out a stiff schedule. The team did improve with the experience gained from meeting these high caliber college teams, hitting its stride in the Yale Game, a beautiful pitcher's battle, which the team lost by the score of 3-2. M. A. C. our only victory, was next defeated 14-6. We then tied Wesleyan, 4-4, in a seven inning game which was called on account of rain. The following week we lost to Amherst, 4-3, and then to Middlebury and Vermont with the respective scores of 2-1 and 1-0. As in the previous season four games were lost by one run.

If one further scans the record, it would be found that Williams had 82 men left on bases, an average of 5½ per game. Add those to the final scores of every game, and the team would have won eleven out of the fifteen games played, of course discarding the scoring possibilities of our opponents left on base. Nevertheless, a noteworthy figure. Of the 34 new season total, 24 of these were earned runs, against our opponents 48 earned runs of a 93 season total.

average per game with Captain Smith second and Wolcott third.

Captain Smith set a good example for his men to follow in hitting for .239. He not only hit well throughout the season, but scored the most runs, 6, and batted in the most runs, 6. He had two doubles, one triple, and one home run to his credit.

Captain-elect Putnam stole the most bases, 5, and obtained the most free passes, 6. Alexander in eight games had two triples to his credit, stole four bases, and drew five free passes.

Thoms, invincible as a fly "hawk", handled 20 chances in eleven games without an error and was a sure fire on the front end of a sacrifice squeeze or double squeeze play, leading with four sacrifice hits, and second to Captain Smith with five runs batted in.

Coach Fox issued the first call for Varsity battery candidates yesterday. Singmaster and Wolcott are the two veterans available with Dunlop, C. E. Smith, and Amerling likely to see service this year. The only last year's Freshmen prospects will be Langmaid and Hurd for this department. The catching staff should be well fortified with C. H. Smith, regular catcher last year. Others will be Allen, Downey, Newcomb, J. Gardner, Bancroft, Bowden, Schlosser, and possibly Captain Putnam.

The infield candidates will consist of Captain Putnam, Alexander, Tittman, Inverso, Winn, Tyson, of the 1928 teams with Howe, R. Brown, Loughlin, Wallace, Thomas, Fox, Leber, and many others.

The outfield candidates will consist of Thoms, D. Williams, R. Williams, Inverso, the 1928 team, with P. Cavanagh, Grosvenor, Ripa, Newman, Clark, and Langmaid new and valuable additions. The infield and outfield candidates will be called out about March first.

Captain Smith, Danieli, Foster, and Delano were graduated from the 1928 team. The letter men remaining are Captain-elect Putnam, Alexander, C. H. Smith, D. Williams, R. Williams, Inverso, Winn, Thoms, Wolcott, and Singmaster.

GARBO, CRAWFORD ARE FAVORITES OF COLLEGE

Psychology of Williams Cinema Fan Shown in Dislike of Sob Emotionalism

Usually watching as the crowds enter and leave the Walden Theatre, Mr. Thornton, its manager, has an excellent opportunity for observing the comment that is given on his programs. In an interview with a RECORD reporter he described the shows that "take" with collegians, outlining the essentials of a popular feature or a humorous comedy, naming the favorite stars and giving his opinion of the "talkie" and its possibilities.

"Most well-executed pictures are successful," he said, "unless they are family stories with sentimental mother-love or sob emotionalism." Although "westerns" receive harsh criticism, Mr. Thornton believes that when light and comical, they form an excellent mixture with the more serious; and he said that they are well attended by faculty, students, and townspeople. Great productions such as the "Patriot" and the "Wedding March" always draw crowds despite the increased price. "Students demand comedies and usually enjoy them even when quite slapstick," he observed, "but not more than a third care for a newsreel."

Judging by attendance and responsiveness of the audience, Joan Crawford seems to have taken the place of Norma Shearer from the college point-of-view. Greta Garbo, however, runs a close second; while Lon Chaney and John Gilbert seem about tied for the position of most popular leading man, if one disregards the super productions of a Fairbanks or a Barrymore. Students say they dislike Clara Bow, but they crowd to her performances just the same. In this fashion Mr. Thornton summed up current opinion of "movie people."

PURPLE FIVE FACES TEST AT WESLEYAN

'Little Three' Title Is at Stake as Williams Encounters Red and Black Second Time

QUINTET RETURNS FOR BATTLE WITH COLGATE

Captain Bollerman, High Scorer in Six Games, to Lead Maroon
Drive Saturday

Friday, February 22—Ready to revenge the previous defeat at the hands of Williams, the Wesleyan quintet, with one more victory and two more defeats behind it, meets the Purple this afternoon at Middletown in the second battle this season, the Cardinal and Black's last chance to win a place in the Little Three standing. Close on the heels of the dangerous Wesleyan encounter comes the contest with Colgate in the Lasell Gymnasium Saturday evening, when the giant Captain Bollerman will lead his team against the Purple.

Wesleyan at Middletown is little less dangerous than the Lord Jeffs at Amherst, for, already stung by defeat at Williams-town, the Cardinal and Black team will play this game on their home floor to the bitter end in order to keep in the title race. Colgate, though lacking a similar incentive, has a record behind it of seven victories and four defeats, three of these latter being by two point margins, attesting the rallying power of the team. Two more formidable opponents for successive days' playing could hardly be found on the Williams schedule. The Purple must show everything to win.

Wesleyan

Since playing Williams on January 26 the Cardinal and Black has been in three encounters, winning the first from W. P. I. 34-18, but losing to Tufts 34-31 at Medford and to Brown at Providence 29-27. This last loss came after a heart reaking second half when the Wesleyan players, tiring from the rapid pace of the unaccustomed man-for-man defense, lost an eight point lead when Snyder of Brown scored 14 points single-handed in this one period. Against Tufts, however, the order of the game was just reversed, Wesleyan trailing 18 to 11 at the half and making a desperate comeback in the second period only to have the Tufts team "freeze" the ball with a three-point lead. The victory over W. P. I. was a straightforward win, the outcome being certain from the first few minutes on.

Williams' 38-29 victory over Brown, coming as it did in the early part of the season, does not even give an 11 point advantage on paper, for Wesleyan has lost three out of four games away while winning six out of seven at home. Compari-

WILLIAMS SWIMMERS MEET MAROON TODAY

Colgate Natators Have Powerful Combination Which Defeated
Columbia Last Week

In their last meet of the present season before entering the Little Three series, the Williams swimming team will officially open its season this afternoon against Deerfield Academy in the Lasell tank. Deerfield has a reputation for turning out good swimming teams, but this year's aggregation has so far failed to approach the usual standard. Defeats at the hands of Wesleyan and Springfield freshmen have marred their record, and their single victory was scored at the expense of Holyoke H. S., whom the 1932 team also submerged in a practice match.

The freshmen have shown up well in practice, particularly in the backstroke and the dives, and recently extended the variety swimmers, but as yet they have received no severe test. Consequently, judgment on their prospects for a successful season will have to be reserved until after this meet, and the one with Schenectady H. S. the week following.

The Freshman line-up is as follows:
50-yd. dash—Swayze, Kerr, Taylor, Swift.
100-yd. dash—McMahon, Kerr, Taylor.
200-yd. swim—McMahon, Ripple, Swift.
100-yd. backstroke—Kerr, Taylor, Smith.
100-yd. breast stroke—Sidley, Swayze.
Dives—Ach, Van Sant, Stevens.
Relay—Undecided.

Matmen Face Alfred in First Home Meet Today

In the first home appearance of the season, the Williams wrestlers will pair off with the Alfred University matmen in Lasell gymnasium this afternoon at 4.00 o'clock. Although the Purple team has shown considerable improvement with steady practice, the visitors will present a line-up which recently brought defeat to the strong Yale team and which will furnish Williams with one of the most formidable propositions on the schedule.

Last year Alfred was encountered in the opening meet and won with little effort 18½-4½. Lisle's decision victory and a draw for Tierney being Alfred's only regrets. A few minor changes in the Williams line-up will appear this afternoon; Lisle will probably wrestle over his weight to fill the lack of a man for the 145 pound class, and Baxter will replace Lobo in the 165-pound class. Following is the tentative line-up: 115 lb. class, Fujiyama; 125 lb. class, Spencer; 135 lb. class, Reynolds; 145 lb. class, Lisle; 155 lb. class, Baldwin; 165 lb. class, Baxter; 175 lb. class, Deming; unlimited, Andersen.

ERRATIC WILLIAMS SIX LOSES TO MIDDLEBURY

Kelly's Goal in Extra Period Wins for Visitors, 3-2, as Purple Attack Fails

Failing to take advantage of an overtime period after a last-minute rush had tied the score, the intermittently flashy Williams sextet fell before the more consistent play of Middlebury, Wednesday afternoon on the Sage rink by a three-to-two score. Steady offensive thrusts from the Vermonters formed around the elusive Kelley and Nelson more than balanced the occasional brilliant attacks of Brigham, Hoyt, and Langmaid in a game which was for the most part defensive and hindered by rough ice.

After a few uneventful minutes, Kelley of Middlebury made the first of his threatening attacks. In the faster play which followed, Brigham became mixed up in the first of the game's many scuffles and was sent off the ice for one minute. Play then went into the visitor's territory, where Langmaid, Ballou, and Howe kept their opponent's defense busy for a few minutes, only to relax again and allow Kelley, at 12 minutes, to make good a short shot in a flurry in front of the cage. Before the period ended the Williams goal was several times threatened by Nelson and Kilby, but the defense held.

The second bracket began with another of the Purple's sporadic advances which soon lost force and allowed Middlebury two dangerously accurate shots at the goal. Only shortly afterward, Nelson carried the puck up the rink almost single-handed to set up a two-point lead for his

Deerfield Swimmers to Oppose Freshmen Today

With the experience of two practice meets behind them, a promising Freshman swimming team will officially open its season this afternoon against Deerfield Academy in the Lasell tank. Deerfield has a reputation for turning out good swimming teams, but this year's aggregation has so far failed to approach the usual standard. Defeats at the hands of Wesleyan and Springfield freshmen have marred their record, and their single victory was scored at the expense of Holyoke H. ## STUDENT COUNCIL

Acts on Class Elections, Agencies,

Deciding that it would be to the best interests of both the College body and the Student Council to make public the exact proceedings of that body, the members of the Council unanimously passed a resolution at a meeting on Tuesday evening, providing for the weekly publication of a complete report on its activities. This publicity will take the form of an article in each Saturday's issue of THE RECORD, and possibly will be augmented by a bi-monthly review of the principal actions of the Council during that period.

The report of the Junior Class Committee, appointed to investigate the method of class elections, was submitted for discussion at the Council meeting a week ago Tuesday. The Committee proposed an alternative plan of preferential election, whereby cards containing the names of candidates nominated by a petition of 25 men would be mailed to each member of the class, and the officers elected in preferential order from the re-

Undeclared Freshmen Face Wesleyan Quintet

Friday, February 22—Meeting their first 'Little Three' opposition of the season, the Freshman basketball team faces the Wesleyan five on the Fayerweather Court at Middletown this afternoon. Although the Wesleyan freshmen have experienced a rather poor season so far, their squad is reported potentially strong and the two weeks' practice during their recent mid-year examinations may have worked wonders in their previously weak passing attack.

The comparative scores of the two teams furnish little basis for a comparison of their strength, since they have met no mutual opponents. The Wesleyan freshmen triumphed over an unusually weak Choate five in the opening game of the season by 34-11, and ran their successes to two straight the next week by downing Taft School 28-19. Their overconfidence resulted in the loss of the third game, with Kingswood School, by 22-21, and caused Coach Lash to shake up the line-up in an effort to increase the scoring power of the

GLEE CLUB TO SING IN NEW ENGLAND CONTEST

Combined Clubs, New Members of Association, Also Arrange
Vassar Concert

Arrangements have been made for two reciprocal Musical Club concerts between Vassar and Williams, the first to be held in Chapin Hall on Saturday, April 20, and the second, which will be followed by a dance, to be held in Poughkeepsie on Saturday, May 4, according to an announcement made by Mary Elizabeth Earl and Collins '29, managers of the musical clubs in the respective colleges. At the same time it was announced that Williams has been elected to the Board of Directors of the New England Intercollegiate Glee Club Association, and that the Musical Clubs will take part in the annual concert sponsored by that organization, which is to be held in Symphony Hall, Boston, on Friday, March 1.

The Vassar-Williams concerts are an innovation, no such reciprocal agreement ever having been made with a women's college. The College Musical Clubs will be combined for the Poughkeepsie concert, which, following the April program by Vassar here, will be held in Main Hall on the Vassar campus, Saturday, May 4. In addition to this, and the participation in the contest at Boston, the combined clubs, by popular request, will render a special program in Chapin Hall some time this spring, the date to be announced later.

The election of Williams to the Board of Directors of the glee club association took place concurrently with the adoption of a new constitution by the organization, which met at the University Club in Boston last Wednesday evening. At the same meeting, W. Herrick Brown '03 of Boston was elected treasurer of the Association. The Williams representatives on the Board of Directors are Mr. Brown, and Collins. Drawings for the order of singing in the intercollegiate contest were also made at the meeting.

The March 1 participation in the New England Intercollegiate Glee Club Association's annual contest will be for the New England title, and the winning club is sent to New York City the following week to represent New England in the national glee club contest. By the drawings at the Boston meeting, Williams re-

The attention of the college is called to the following section of the Constitution of the Gargoyle Society:

Art. III, Sec. 3. For purposes of election to this society a man shall be considered a junior who, at the time he is a candidate for election, shall have not more than fifty-five (55) semester hours of class-room work to pass before graduation, according to the record of the office of the Dean of the College. No man shall be considered eligible who is in his fourth year at college, but this provision shall not work to the hardship of a man who has dropped from his class on account of illness, financial difficulty, or other such exceptional circumstances.

FIGHTING SKATERS UPSET AMHERST 1-0

"Trophy" Score Increases to 8-0 as Purple Ends Five-Game Feud
With Fourth Win

BRIGHAM SCORES LONE GOAL IN THIRD MINUTE

Game Becomes Steadily Rougher
As Inch-Deep Blanket of Snow Buries Rink

Even the roughest and most intense play seen on Williamstown ice this year failed to alter a one-point advantage gained by the Purple when Brigham flashed around Parnall to score with a hard drive in the first minutes of play, and last Thursday afternoon on the Sage rink, the Williams hockey team ended a bitter, five-game feud with the Amherst sextet by taking the final contest, 1-0, and bringing the series total to four victories for the home team and one for the Sabrinas. In spite of a steady snowfall which hid the ice and often the puck with a one-inch blanket toward the end of each period, Williams showed great improvement over their erratic performance against Middlebury the day before, although penalties were even more frequent, while the power of its defense stars, Howe and Langmaid, more than offset the brilliant play of Nichols and Patrick in the visitors' forward wall, whose backing was not comparable with that enjoyed by the Purple front line.

With the cessation of Williams-Amherst hockey hostilities in favor of the former, comes another point toward the Trophy of Trophies, which now rests in the town of Lord Jeffrey for the first time in many years. However, Williams now holds eight points to the Sabrinas' none, so that the cup may almost be considered as already half-way across the mountains. The Royal Purple hockey supremacy may be largely attributed to the possession of a better-balanced combination, rather than to the presence of outstanding stars. In the forward line, Nichols, Amherst center, compares favorably in all-around ability to Brigham, Patrick loses little to Wheeler, and Hoyt and Felt are nearly on a par. But Parnall and Perry in the Amherst rear have not shown the rare combination of tenacious defensive work, marked by clever poke-checking, and powerful, fast attacking qualities which both Langmaid and Howe have displayed all season. Thus either the forward wall or the defense combination of the Purple team can be relied on to lead an onset or break up an opponent's threat.

With this advantageous division of responsibility, the Williams team opened Thursday's contest by storming the Amherst goal at the drop of the puck. And before the astonished Sabrinas could reor-

TIGER SIX TO OPPOSE PURPLE IN FINAL TILT

Outdoor Rink May Handicap Strong Attack of Visitors; Close Game Probable

Bolstered by a fourth victory over Amherst and determined to make the season's count six wins to three defeats, the Williams hockey team will meet their former conquerors, the Princeton sextet, in a return game on the Sage rink at 2.15 p. m. today. The advantage of the Tigers lies in their furious attack, which swept through the Purple for six goals at Princeton, but this superiority is likely to be diminished by the outdoor conditions, which are entirely unfamiliar to the invaders, and by the further disadvantage to the visitors of a schedule which forces them to play their hardest game of the season, with Yale, the night before their contest here.

There is no doubt, however, that Williams will be facing the stiffest opposition of the season when she takes the ice this afternoon. The phenomenal record which Princeton has made against better than average opposition speaks for itself as to the well-balanced power of the Tiger skaters. Only one team has lowered the Princeton colors this year, and it took an undefeated Yale team, with victories over two Canadian colleges and two prominent

IGNORANCE WAS NOT BLISS

By its decision to make public the proceedings of its meetings, the Student Council has at once spiked those unnecessary rumors that it is trying to be a secret society and prepared the way for greater confidence and good will on the part of the rest of the College. It has always been the argument of those in favor of enacting this legislation behind closed doors that the most efficient method of solving a campus problem is to do the figuring in private and announce the answer in public. This saves the "investigations" from becoming embarrassed by the questions of the curious, and allows deliberations to proceed without interruption.

On the other hand, the student body has generally felt that it has some right to know what its representatives talk about when they hold a meeting. Nor was it merely idle curiosity that prompted such a feeling, but a real interest in the affairs of the campus with possibly a desire to join in the discussion. College meetings will never appear attractive to the apathetic undergraduate as long as they serve up nothing but the dull decisions. Hence the decline and fall of free-for-all discussion.

It will be interesting now to see whether this weekly publication of Student Council doings will really stimulate a greater interest in college matters. It is quite possible that things will go on in the same serene manner, with the Council doing all the thinking and the rest of the College doing all the grumbling. At any rate we cannot see that this publicity will cause much damage, and there is always the possibility that it may start some constructive thought in unexpected corners of our campus. There may, of course, be a slight risk in making these sometimes delicate affairs matters of general knowledge, but the Student Council, it is presumed, will use its discretion as to what news is fit to print.

This year's Student Council has shown itself in many instances to be an efficient and wise organization. But not the least of its achievements is this recognition that every undergraduate is entitled to know how it arrives at some of its conclusions.

Upset Amherst 1-0

ganize their defense, Brigham had stick-handled his way past Parnall, crossed in front of the cage, and whipped the disk into the net. After the face-off, the Williams attack did not let down, but it found an Amherst team now thoroughly awake and on the defensive. For the next five minutes, Hoyt took charge of the situation with a series of brilliant solo advances, only to come into inevitable collision with Parnall or Perry. Langmaid started off a long series of penalties by going into exile for one minute after a too-vigorous body-check. During the middle of the period, however, the play lacked color, and only toward the end did Amherst open a real threat which was partly broken by Howe and stopped by Watters. The latter continued to play a faultless game through the rest of the contest, and was rivalled by Hanson in the visitor's goal, who was called on to stop a ceaseless barrage of shots, often with phenomenal saves. The Amherst rally and the increasing blanket of snow produced rougher play towards the end of the period, and a corresponding enthusiasm among the spectators.

With the ice again swept clean, the second bracket opened with faster hockey as Williams again descended on the Sabrina goal. Brigham nearly repeated his first-frame performance, narrowly missing three tries. The attack shifted to Howe and Langmaid who were also unsuccessful, while Amherst could not reach the Williams goal at all, being forced to take long, high shots which several times left the rink. As the period progressed the play again became rougher, and the sometimes not too artful tripping of both teams were often penalized amid the cheers or jeers of the onlookers. Varsity B got its second chance when it was substituted at about 10 minutes, and Field and Ballou showed up well in their last hockey game against Amherst. The Sabrinas threatened again to no avail as the period closed.

Several chances to score were missed at the beginning of the final bracket as Williams failed to follow up the solo advances of Langmaid and Brigham. This weakness had robbed the home team of several shots earlier in the game, and the fault was not wholly corrected during the rest of the game. But what was lacking in the way of finished hockey was made up for by plenty of personal contact which brought roars from the spectators. Parnall got a two minute penalty, and was soon followed by Brigham. From then on, there was an almost continual procession to and from the pen, but neither team was able to capitalize on absences. The flood-lights went on at about 10 minutes, and their advent seemed to usher in a prolonged Amherst rally. This renewed offensive became dangerous as the whole Purple team several times got too far up the ice and Nichols broke away for the home goal. Fast skating by Howe twice prevented a shot, but once Watters was forced to make a beautiful save. Three penalties were exacted in the last two minutes, which left only a quartet of Williams men on the ice, and permitted Amherst to continue its offensive until the final whistle.

An empire hung on that strap

THE hitch must be right, the pack must be tight. On details such as that hung the attainment of the day's goal and the final success of the expedition.

Lewis and Clark, first Americans to cross the continent, knew the importance of "trifles" in the concerted plan. They saw to it their equipment was right, they supervised every step from man-power to pack-horsepower, they applied sure knowledge and constant vigilance to their task.

Today's leaders in business have the same point of view.

Men in the Bell System, exploring new country, take infinite pains in preparation. They work toward the smooth coordination of engineering, manufacturing, warehousing, accounting, finance, public service.

Sir Bernard Pares Discusses English Educational Methods and Growth in Number of Universities

"If I wanted to teach something important to my own son, I certainly wouldn't go about it by standing up and lecturing to him," said Sir Bernard Pares to a representative of The Record who had asked him about that mysterious being, that English university professor. "That's the ideal we go on, though of course one can't entirely do without lectures, especially in our new universities with their large student bodies. But about our new universities—I imagine you Americans haven't heard much about them."

Sir Bernard, English knight, professor in the University of London, and expert on Russia, went on to discuss the changes in English education since the War as he now and then peered over his gold-rimmed spectacles with a friendly, "You know what I mean?"

"Since I was at Cambridge, a good many of our industrial cities such as Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, London, and so on, have established universities, so that now we have 11 large ones instead of two. The idea began when a few intelligent business men wanted to establish professorships in some of the more 'practical' subjects like economics, modern languages, and history. Now there are several alert, live institutions which give every-day courses at about one-eighth the cost of Oxford or Cambridge. The new movement offered so much freedom in teaching that it won over a great many of the most progressive professors in England and had a good deal of influence on the conservatism of Oxford and Cambridge. They aren't nearly so much like social clubs as they used to be."

"Most of our professors are pretty liberal. They are getting away from the old idea that 'It's so because I say so'. We do keep the tutorial system though. There's nothing that breaks that stand-off pomposness of a teacher so well. Yes, we professors are enthusiastic. At board meetings we are sometimes too much so, for each one thinks that his course is so important that it ought to be required. The student's opinion is almost forgotten."

"Another significant thing is the number of elderly women who teach in England. A man, I think, is often apt to become stagnate as he grows older, but a woman never does. After the War, it looked as if there might be a serious break between the old way of doing things and the new. It was then that the middle-aged women were the best defenders of the young people. Men are too bridling."

"It was interesting to watch how the cities went about getting their professorships. At Liverpool, for instance, there was a University Club of enthusiastic citizens long before there was a university. The best men in the city were members. Finally, after plans were well begun, someone might suggest a chair of economics let us say. 'All right. Who knows the most about it?' 'Mr. X. He's up at Oxford'. 'Well, why not have him down for a day or two?' At the dinner, somebody would ask Mr. X about his work. Just what would he do if he had a free hand in equipment and assistants? What sort of a laboratory would he like? In the middle of the conversation, some wealthy man would offer the money, and the conquest was over. No, rich men in England don't often try to buy pretentious degrees with their gifts, but we do put them to useful work by making them treasurers or something like that. You know what I mean?"

But it was late—almost time for the lecture. The Record reporter rose to go. It had been a pleasant few minutes, for though Englishmen refuse to be interviewed, they enjoy nothing better than a friendly talk.

team. As a result, the Wesleyan line-up is still undecided, but will probably consist of Brown and Johnstone at the forwards, Striebing at center, and Wells and Van Vranken or Odell at the guards.

Williams enters the game with a string of six straight triumphs behind it, in which the five has shown a remarkably consistent offense and an almost invulnerable defense. Provided that the team maintains its previous standard of play and is not affected by overconfidence, Coach Fox anticipates little difficulty in running the string of victories to seven. The line-up will be as usual with Captain Good and Engle at the forwards, Fowle at center, and Cosgrove and Swinchart at the guards.

AMHERST SCORELESS IN RACE FOR 'TROPHY'

Basketball Win Increases Purple Lead to 9½ Points; Return of Plaque Seen

By virtue of the decisive victory over Amherst in basketball last Saturday and the 1-0 win of the hockey team on Thursday, Williams scored two and one half additional points toward the winning of the coveted Trophy of Trophies. Maintaining the standard set by the football squad and followed by the soccer team, Williams total was raised to eight and a half points as compared to no points for Amherst.

Of the total to date, Williams owes four points to the football team's 40-15 defeat of the Sabrinas on Pratt Field last fall, while the sweeping victory of the soccer team and the previous triumph of the sextet registered three points. If the Purple conquers her rival in either track or baseball and in any one other sport, the Trophy will come across the mountains, while Amherst must win almost every remaining event to retain possession of the plaque. The present Trophy is a replica of the one which was permanently awarded in 1924 when it was won by Williams for the fifth consecutive year. The score toward the Trophy to date is as follows.

Sport	Total Pts.	Williams	Amherst
Soccer	2	2	0
Basketball	3	1½	0

THEORY OF STATE IS EXPOUNDED BY MILLER

Conflict Between State and Will of Individual Stressed in Tuesday Lecture

"In its general features, the state is a form, a function, an organization, but not an entity," asserted Assistant Professor John W. Miller of the Philosophy Department in his lecture, "Some Problems in the Theory of the State," delivered last Tuesday in the Thompson Physics Laboratory as a part of the Tuesday Afternoon Lecture Course. Maintaining that there is a connection between general philosophy and the philosophy of the state, Professor Miller stated that all problems of the state are reduced to one and that this one problem is the conflict between the individual will and the state.

"All philosophy of state may be classified according to two beliefs: the one that the organized state should be tolerated merely as an alternative for anarchy; the other, that the states are absolutely necessary agency for the promotion of general welfare." Hobbes, Benson, and Spencer regarded the state as a "necessary evil" while even Jefferson said that "a state governs best which governs least". Professor Miller pointed out that the state is compelled to lay own laws for its own preservation because of the conflict between individual self-assertion and state control. He went on to show that the "state is the bond between man and society" and added that "if it is true that man can live with social intercourse, no philosophy of government is possible".

In concluding his lecture, Professor Miller referred to the recent political situation of this country, through examples of present-day laws and laws, pointed out problems in the theory of the state.

Dvorak's Songs My Mother Taught Me will be given as the "prize song", in which competition Williams will sing eighth. Under the direction of Mr. Charles L. Saffo the club will sing Yard by Yard as a "college song", Williams to be the folk to sing, and at the end all clubs will join in singing the Prayer of Thanksgiving. Announcement of the personnel of the Williams contingent will be made and the group will leave Williams for Boston on next Friday morning.

W. C. A. Is Represented at Religious Meetings

The W. C. A. was represented by Strong '29, Park and Fedde '30 at the Annual Winter Conference at Northfield held last week-end, February 16-18. The subject was the recent textile workers' strike at New Bedford, Mass., and after the case had been presented by representatives of the various factions concerned, the problems were discussed from a Christian point of view. Dr. Henry Ward of Union was the principal speaker.

Richard C. Overton '29 will probably be the W. C. A.'s delegate as discussion group leader at the Preparatory School Conference to be held in New Haven on March 1-3. The problems before the conference will be those of transition from prep school to college, especially the ones dealing with the rapid changes necessary in intellectual and religious fields.

ENGLISH UNIVERSITIES TO SEND TENNIS TEAM

Stars of Williams and Princeton
Will Meet Cambridge and Oxford Players

Combining their tennis teams, Princeton and Williams, represented by Captains Wolf and Appell and other leading players of the two colleges, will meet a visiting team of ranking British players from Oxford and Cambridge some time early in July. The match will be played on the turf courts of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club at Seabright, N. J., by teams of six or eight men, three or four (as the case may be) from each of the colleges and universities in question.

Among the Princeton players who will compete in the match is Captain Kenneth Appell, who ranks ninth on the intercollegiate tennis ladder, one step above Captain Wolf of Williams. Others are Walter Thomas, one time winner of the Boy's National Championship, and Donald Strachan, both of whom have played with and under the direction of Tilden. Williams' representation will be led by Captain Wolf, winner of the college championship last year, of the New England Intercollegiate singles championship in 1928, and of the doubles championship in 1927 with Marsh and in 1928 with Banks. The rest will be chosen from Chase, who has been undefeated in varsity matches in the last two years, Sewall, also a member of the varsity team, and Shoaff, runner-up in the college tournament last fall. The British universities, having no ruling against postgraduates participating in athletic contests, will probably be represented by "Bunny" Austin, one of England's foremost players, and other stars of the front rank.

The match has a counterpart in one played in this country three years ago last summer between tennis players of the same institutions. Williams then was represented by Baker, Marsh, and Banks. In 1926 Yale and Harvard, also hosts to the visitors in 1925 and 1929, sent a combined team to England to play a return match, but no important contests of the same kind have been held since.

Odegard Writes Book

Assistant Professor Odegard of the Government Department has recently written a book, published by the Columbia University Press, entitled Pressure Politics, dealing chiefly with the Anti-Saloon League and issues in the recent presidential campaign. In criticizing the book, the New York Times says: "It is an impartial investigation of the methods and manners used in accomplishing prohibition. This study lets the facts and figures speak for themselves."

PENN OPPOSES PURPLE DEBATING TEAM TODAY

Harvard Faces Williams in Jesup
Monday Evening; Varsity and Frosh Trials Held

In the second triangle of league debates for this season, the Williams team, having already conquered Yale and lost to Brown last December, will engage the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia tonight at 8:15 p. m. and Harvard this coming Monday at 8.00 p. m. in Jesup Hall upholding the negative in the former and the affirmative in the latter debate on the following question: "Resolved, That this House approves the Baumes Law of New York State." Early this week, trials were held for the varsity debating teams, which will be quite active until after the spring vacation, and also for two freshman teams, which will engage Hotchkiss and the Wesleyan freshmen in the spring.

The Purple debaters slated to face Pennsylvania tonight are Erskine and Heaton '30, while Bates and Straw '30 oppose the Crimson on Monday evening. Continuing the custom of Interecollegiate debates, each team will consist of two men only, and the final verdict of the debate rests with the audience. As this debate forms the second bracket of League debates, the third will be held with Princeton on March 23 and Vassar, sometime later in the season. Overton '29, Gilbert '30, and Oxtoby '31 will uphold the affirmative against Princeton while Harris '29, McKean '29 or Erskine, and Heaton '30 will take the negative against Vassar on the proposition: "Resolved, That this House favors birth control."

In its first debate after those with Pennsylvania and Harvard Williams will meet the Albany Law School on March 8. As a result of the trials, Baptiste '29, Manning '31, and Gardner '32 will represent the Purple in upholding the following resolution: "Resolved, That the United States should build a naval force within the next five years which will put it on a par with Great Britain." Three weeks later, another Williams team, composed of Hibbard '29, Newhall '30, and R. Wheeler '31 will argue against Bucknell that: "The American jury system should be abolished."

In addition to the League debates already mentioned, Williams is scheduled to debate Amherst at some future date, after the spring recess. Harris, Overton, and Reeves '29 will represent the Purple in this contest, whose subject has not as yet been selected, but whose outcome will secure one point in the Trophy of Trophies for the winning side.

As a result of the freshman trials, two teams were chosen to compete against Hotchkiss and Wesleyan '32 this spring. In an effort to better relations with leading preparatory schools it was decided to include the Hotchkiss debate in the freshman schedule. Fowle, Cress, Hurst, and Good will oppose the Lakeville team, while R. Reeves, Walter, and Zalles were chosen for the Wesleyan debate. For an interclass debate, Hamilton, Robertson, Sellery, and Riekey, will compete against Goldblatt, Thornton, West, and Mark.

Winter Sports Team to Take Part in Title Meet

In its last scheduled meet of the season, the Winter Sports team will compete for the Interecollegiate Winter Sports Union championship, which has not been won by Williams since 1924, at Lake Placid on Monday and Tuesday, February 25, and 26. The New Hampshire University Carnival, the other remaining meet in which Williams was entered, has been called off for this year.

Because of the slight illness of Moore, which will prevent his participating in more than the skiing events, J. A. Reynolds will be the only Williams entry in snowshoeing. Fedde and Captain Little will enter the skiing; and Sears in the fancy skating and Husband in the speed skating will complete the team. Other colleges invited to compete in the meet are Amherst, Bates, Bowdoin, Colgate, Dartmouth, Loyola, Maine, McGill, Middlebury, Montreal, New Hampshire, Norwich, Ottawa, and Syracuse.

Erratum

In the February 19 issue of THE RECORD it was stated that the address to which articles submitted for competition for the Student Life Prizes should be sent was Care of Philip R. Dunbar, 84 State Street, Boston, Mass. This should be Care of Philip R. Dunbar, 89 State Street, Boston, Mass.

have been made, the techniques mastered, and concerts given as nearly like those of the olden time as is possible.

This is neither the time nor the place to enter into a lengthy description of the instruments used so delightfully in Wednesday evening's concert. Any person interested may take the program and look up the detail of these charming examples of the string family, and the dainty and refined clavecin or clavier, as we would call it. There is only sufficient space to speak of the rendition of the program.

In spite of its somewhat quaint and unusual sound, the ensemble showed at once five thoroughly-equipped artists who created a profound impression by the delicacy and finesse of their playing. Naturally the three soloists, M. Marius Casadesus, with the Concerto for the Quinton, Madame Regina Patroni-Casadesus at the Clavecin, and M. Henri Casadesus, the founder of the group as soloist with the Viole d'Amour, attracted the most attention. But the group as a whole achieved a perfect blending of beautiful, soft and tender tone, to which the Clavecin furnished the proper background of nuance and effect. In addition to the brilliant effects of the soloists must be mentioned the charming and ravishing Menuet Tendre, which presented a more personal touch of feeling and expression.

There was in the strings a much softer and more intimate note than in the violins and cellos of our day. It is quite evident that the proper medium for their use would be a smaller auditorium than Chapin Hall. Therefore to some ears the range of expression might seem somewhat restricted. But in its own way, and within its own limits nothing could be more perfect.

Not the least among the delightful qualities of the evening, to the writer at least, was the utter absence of any impression of conceit. It seemed as if the audience had gathered in a drawing-room, quite at their ease, to hear a group of friends play beautiful music in a beautiful way.

It is to be hoped that at some future time, these splendid artists will honor the community again.

The artists presented the following program:

1. Petite Symphonie Morais
Allegro, Menuetto, Rondo
Quatuor des Violes et Clavecin
2. Concerto pour Quinton Bruni
Allegretto, Andante et Final Marius Casadesus
3. Partita pour Clavecin Ayrton
Allegro, Siciliano, Tocatta
Regina Patroni-Casadesus
4. Divertissement pour Viole d'Amour Cimarosa
Introduction, Madrigal, Largo, Rondo
Henri Casadesus
5. Le Jardin des Amour Mouret
Pavane, Gaillarde, Menuet Tendre, Canarie
Quatuor de Violes et Clavecin

Williams Conquered by Norwich Matmen, 15-21

Once again the Williams wrestlers won as many falls as their opponents, and once again those opponents, in this case the Norwich team, were able to gather a majority of the decisions, so that the Purple has a 15-21 defeat to show for its trip to Northfield last Saturday. Though in general the matches were interestingly even, the greater experience of the Norwich grapplers was in evidence often enough in the early matches to indicate the outcome.

An easy victory by Lisle, and two more falls won by Deming and Andersen accounted for Williams' 15 points, while Norwich took two matches by decision in addition to a like number of falls. The most spectacular bout of the meet was that in the 125-pound class in which Spencer was thrown only after several minutes of rapid action.

Purple Five Faces Test at Wesleyan

son by means of the M. A. C. game gave the Purple only a two point advantage, though the first game was actually won by 13 points. Over the period of the season, however, Williams and Wesleyan match almost equally in scores, the average of the latter being 32 to 27 for the opponents while the Purple's is 33 to 25.

Individual honors at Wesleyan go unquestionably to Center Nye, who has averaged eight points a game in 11 contests this season, while Howard, a forward, shares second place with Sanders, a guard. Owen, who has been playing one forward throughout the season, is at present ineligible. Millsbaugh, guard, showed up well in the first games against Clark and Boston University, and has played the same consistently strong game since then. Van Cott and Ward alternate at the remaining forwards, Ward also substituting at center.

The following is the probable line-up:

WILLIAMS		WESLEYAN
Willmott	r.f.	Howard
Betham	l.f.	Van Cott
Allen	c.	Nye
Cuddeback	r.g.	Sanders
Alexander	l.g.	Millsbaugh

Colgate

The record of the Maroon five follows the general rule of losing when away and winning on the home floor. Three out of four games were lost on trips, a lone victory being chalked up against N. Y. U., the conqueror of Columbia. At home St. Bonaventure went down to defeat in the first game, 33-22, followed by the University of Toronto, 34 to 17. Fordham scored the first victory over the Maroon, who retaliated against N. Y. U. the next night. The University of Buffalo also fell by a large score, while Bucknell, Penn State, and Syracuse all put the Maroons to rout. Upsetting all the dope by its unexpectedness, Colgate showed real power to defeat Michigan State 36-35 in the best game this season. Hobart went down to a 36-28 defeat two weeks later.

With their attack built around the tall center, Bollerman, who alone has averaged ten points per game, the Maroon has a fast-passing, accurate-shooting offense. In eleven games the average score has been 31 to 28 against opponents whose own records leave little doubt as to the power of the Colgate five. Following close upon Bollerman in the scoring column is Bonacker, flashy right forward. Replacing Hagy, who sprained his ankle in the Hobart game, Forward Smith will probably start against Williams. Guards Bramer and Walsh have starred in individual games as high scorers, all the while playing a tight defensive game, but Bollerman is the potential threat.

The following is the probable line-up:

WILLIAMS		COLGATE
Willmott	r.f.	Bonacker
Betham	l.f.	Smith
Allen	c.	Bollerman
Cuddeback	r.g.	Bramer
Alexander	l.g.	Walsh

Tiger Six To Oppose Purple in Final Tilt

hockey clubs, to turn the trick by the narrow margin of 2 to 1. Princeton has played sixteen games, won fourteen by decisive scores, tied one, and lost once. No team yet has scored more than two goals against the defense presented by Pennypacker, her star goalie. Scoring honors have been rather evenly divided for the visitors, although J. Jones, who alternates at left defense and left wing, is perhaps the chief offensive threat. He has received able assistance from his two teammates on the forward line, G. Jones and Rice, the former scoring two goals against the Purple at Princeton. The Princeton scoring machine presents one slight weakness, however, in the fact that it has performed to best advantage, almost without exception, on the indoor rink at Princeton, on sticky ice and under generally slower conditions.

This will be the final game for the Williams team, and with a day of rest after a week of intense competition to put them on edge, the Purple should be fully prepared to make the concluding game one of the closest and best of the year. The probable line-up of the two teams is as follows:

WILLIAMS		PRINCETON
Wheeler	r.w.	G. Jones
Hoyt	l.w.	Cuyler
Brigham	c.	Rice
Langmaid	r.d.	Adams
Howe	l.d.	J. Jones
Watters	g.	Pennypacker

Student Council

sults of this balloting. Objections were advanced that the system would prevent the election of a candidate to the office for which he was best fitted, and that it offered no possibility for a general meeting of the class. The plan was finally rejected as not feasible, but the Council will welcome further suggestions. The Student Life Prizes offered by the Dunbar Foundation for the purpose of stimulating thought and discussion among the students on the problems of social ethics and other aspects of college life, were commended to the attention of the student body. Rumors of bootlegging in the College dormitories were brought to the notice of the Council, and suitable action was immediately taken.

At its most recent meeting, on February 19, the Council acknowledged a letter from the National Student Federation of America. The Committee on Foreign Relations of the Federation expressed itself as desirous of "developing a real and permanent interest in foreign students of American Colleges", requesting the appointment of a Hospitality Committee which will co-operate, in turn, with the Federation in entertaining one or more of Williams' foreign students. The suggestion was turned over to the Purple Key Society for further consideration.

The new procedure for Freshman elections, tried out for the first time last week, was brought up for discussion, and approved as satisfactory. The nominating committee for this election consisted of one freshman from each fraternity, appointed by the head of the house, and six freshmen from the non-fraternity body, appointed by the President of the Commons Club. The nominating body met with the Chairman of the Student Council, and in this case, decided to choose a sub-committee to make the nominations. The election was held under the supervision of the Student Council, and with the Chairman in charge of the meeting. The class President and the representative on the Honor System Committee were elected first, by direct ballot, elimination of candidates taking place according to a scale determined by the number nominated. For the three lower offices of Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, the class was given a choice between the elimination system and the preferential system, and voted to continue the method of elimination.

The Council also voted to approve the report of the train agency, submitted by F. C. Welles and Williams '31, for the special train between Williamstown and New York on December 22.

Erratic Williams Six Loses to Middlebury

team. Brilliant individual play on the part of Williams was handicapped by poor passwork and wild shooting throughout the rest of the frame, though the Purple was usually the aggressor. At the same time, rough play on both sides kept the spectators in an uproar.

As usual, a flash of better grade assault in which Howe barely missed a chance to score and in which Langmaid made a beautiful recovery, gave way to a mediocre if not ragged, performance as the final period opened. Finally the Williams sextet began in earnest with a desperate rally which gave Hoyt a chance to make effective a quick stab at the enemy cage in five minutes. With both teams at last going at full speed, hard play was the rule, and within a short time Langmaid and Kelley were put off for three minutes. This time however, the Purple held to the pace which eventually netted a score-tying marker by Brigham at seven minutes and which continued to make the going hard for the Vermonters.

But in the overtime period, Kelley again broke through with a tally. In spite of good chances to score, the Middlebury defense could not be penetrated. Williams' nearest approach to the goal which would again tie the score came when Hoyt managed to hit the mark only to find that the referee's whistle had blown. In the desperate few minutes that remained, going once more became rough and, as the game ended, Kelley was making another of his deadly excursions up the rink.

The line-up and summary follows:

WILLIAMS (2)		MIDDLEBURY (3)
Brigham	c.	Kelley
Hoyt	l.w.	Crocker
Wheeler	r.w.	Makela
Howe	l.d.	Nelson
Langmaid	r.d.	Foote
Watters	g.	Douglas

Substitutions: WILLIAMS—Ballou, Nye, Gross, and Hazzard. MIDDLEBURY—Kilby.

Goals: First Period—Kelley, (Middlebury), 12:30. Second Period—Nelson, (Middlebury), 3:00. Third Period—(Williams), Hoyt, 5:30; Brigham, 7:30. Overtime Period, Kelley, (Middlebury), 2:00.

Penalties: Brigham, 1 min.; Langmaid, 3 min.; Kelley, 3 min.

Referee, Lemoine. Time: 3 15-min. periods; 10 min. overtime.

Williams Swimmers Meet Maroon Today

Captain Schott and Birnie or Van der Bogert in the dorsal event might be close. The divers—Bartholomey and Scott for Colgate and Wheeler, Shaw, and Niebling for Williams—are difficult to compare since all are without much varsity experience. The Maroon will probably win the majority of first places, but the Purple is likely to take enough seconds and thirds to make the meet depend on the final event—the 200-yard relay.

A list of the probable entries is as follows:

WILLIAMS

200-yd. relay—Higginbotham, Davis, Gardner, Doughty, Close, Wolcott, Schott, Bancroft, Healy.

200-yd. breast stroke—Schott, Healy, Noble, Gregg, Cavanaugh.

50-yd. freestyle—Higginbotham, Davis, Gardner, Doughty, Close, Bancroft.

440-yd. freestyle—Wolcott, Burgess, Birnie, Garth.

150-yd. backstroke—Schott, Birnie, Davis, Van der Bogert.

100-yd. freestyle—Higginbotham, Doughty, Birnie, Close, Wolcott, Schott, Bancroft, Burgess.

Dives—Shaw, Wheeler, Niebling, Runo. 300-yd. medley relay—backstroke—Schott, Davis, Van der Bogert, Birnie.

Breast stroke—Schott, Gregg, Noble, Healy.

Freestyle—Doughty, Close, Birnie, Wolcott, Schott, Bancroft.

COLGATE

200-yd. relay—Tamblin, Scott, Starkweather, Bring.

200-yd. breast stroke—Eldon.

50-yd. freestyle—Bring.

440-yd. freestyle—Grimes.

150-yd. backstroke—Erickson, Slakey.

100-yd. freestyle—Bring, Starkweather.

Dives—Bartholomey, Scott.

300-yd. medley relay—Erickson, Eldon, Starkweather.

Swimming Relays Postponed

Because of the difficulties met by all but two houses in attempting to assemble eight-man teams for the Interfraternity swimming relays, the entire series has been postponed until next Monday, when six-man teams will compete. This modification of the rules should make it possible for every house to be represented.

TIGERS RALLY TO BEAT WILLIAMS SIX IN FINAL

Purple Skaters Even Count in 3rd But Late Score Wins for Princeton, 3-2

HOWE AND SCHWARTZ TALLY

Defeated Only by Yale, Powerful Tigers Play Return Game on Sage Rink

With a mid-game rally which caught the Tigers as they rested seemingly secure behind an early two-point lead, and shattered this advantage with a corresponding score, the Williams hockey team forced the Princeton skaters, conquerors of all but Yale and consequently second in the East, to show everything they had before Livingston could sink a winning tally with four minutes left to play in the final and fastest game of the Williams season last Saturday afternoon. Before one of the largest crowds ever assembled around the Sage rink to witness a hockey game and with perfect weather for both skaters and spectators, the former victors over Williams by a 6-1 score found a Purple combination, playing on familiar ice and stimulated by fast competition, showing the most brilliant hockey of its season, and only the superior skating and smooth pass-work of the Orange and Black forward wall made up for the desperate checking and equally vicious attack of both the offense and defense lines of the Williams sextet.

In sharp contrast with the final Amherst game, played two days earlier, Saturday's contest was marked by many spills and only two penalties. Although probably the hardest-fought match played on Williamstown ice this year, it was also the cleanest. Both defense combinations were working hard throughout the contest, the Williams team alternating the forward line or the backs and the Tigers using all five men when pressed, but neither necessitated much discipline. While the Princeton attack was carried to the home goal almost entirely by the clever passing of the two Jones' on either side of Rice, diminutive center, in the Tiger front line, the Purple threats were advanced as much by the backs as by the forwards. This is shown by the fact that both the Williams tallies were made by defensemen, the first by Schwartz, who showed some fine play in the only game in which he has been able actively to participate, and the second by Captain Howe, who played his last hockey for Williams on Saturday. Both these goals were the result of furious melees which drew Pennypacker, the usually impassable Princeton goalie, out of position.

The first period opened with the early lassitude which has been characteristic of the Williams team, and with hardly more activity on the part of the visitors. However, while the Purple attack still remained unorganized, except for occasional but fruitless advances, the Tigers got under way, and at five minutes, J. Jones whipped out a long, fast shot from the side of the rink, and, as he crashed into the sideboards his try clipped the corner of the cage for the first score. Although Princeton did not let down its offensive, the Williams second line of Ballou, Nye, and Gross, which was substituted immediately after the initial score, at times carried the attack to the Tiger goal while the string combination was resting.

The latter came in again, and, strangely enough, its advent into the play brought another Princeton tally. G. Jones, on the opposite wing from his namesake, accounted for this one with a short, hard drive after a passing advance. Princeton continued to maintain its offensive, and the Purple skaters were forced to be content with shots from mid-rink as a five-man defense broke up the occasional solo advances of Brigham or Wheeler. As Pennypacker soon showed himself the master of any long shot, Howe and Langmaid started to work up to the visitors' cage, and one of their excursions nearly resulted in a point. Langmaid advanced, passing between Adams and Livingston to Howe, and the latter let out a hard one, which Langmaid caught on the rebound from Pennypacker's stick for a drive that had the latter worried. This renewed Williams offensive was stopped by the period whistle, as Adams took the first penalty for tripping.

Having at last found itself, the Williams combination did not allow its attack to

Purple Loses to Penn in Debate Over Baumes Law

Defeated by an audience vote of 44-19, the Williams debating team, upholding the negative of the proposition: "Resolved, That this House approves the Baumes Law of New York State," succumbed to the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia last Saturday evening. This debate was the first of the second series of the League debates, in which Williams has now won only from Yale, having been defeated by Brown and Penn.

Heaton and Erskine '30 represented the Purple against Frey and Foosner of Penn. Frey began the debate for the affirmative, stating that the Baumes Law existed to protect society against the criminal, instead of the criminal against society, which the absence of this Law practically assured. The speaker cited numerous figures which showed the unrestrained increase in crime and the consequent financial loss to the country. Erskine, opening the case for the negative, replied that the Baumes Law does not protect society because it cannot be enforced, while no provision is made for the reform of the criminal.

The second speaker for the affirmative, Foosner, stated that the question of debate did not concern the discussion of the enforcement of the Baumes Law, yet tried to hold the negative for a consideration of

WOLF AND CHASE TO ENTER INDOOR TENNIS

Will Represent Williams In Eastern Intercollegiate at Cornell This Week-End

Starting its 1929 season with the indoor tournament at Cornell on Friday and Saturday, March 1st and 2nd, the Williams tennis team has arranged a schedule of twelve matches to be played this spring, and a match in which Williams and Princeton will team up against a combined Oxford and Cambridge team early in July. The team which will represent Williams at Cornell is composed of Captain Wolf and Chase '29, who will compete in both singles and doubles.

Although it is only an invitation indoor tennis tournament in memory of William A. Larned, Cornell '92, seven-times national singles tennis champion, the tournament is rapidly becoming the indoor intercollegiate championship tournament of the Eastern colleges. It is held by the Cornell University Athletic Association under the sanction and direction of officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Colgate, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Hamilton, Harvard, Lehigh, Michigan, Ohio State, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Swarthmore, Syracuse, Williams, and Yale have entered. The representation of any one college may not exceed two players in the singles and one team in the doubles.

Capt. Marsh of the Williams 1927 team was runner-up in the singles to Whitebeck of Harvard in the first tournament. Last year Seligson of Lehigh defeated Van Ryn of Princeton for the title, although by their victory in the doubles, Appel and Van Ryn won the team trophy for Princeton.

The first match of the outdoor season will take place in April. The schedule is as follows:

April 24	Springfield	at Williamstown
April 26	Haverford	at Williamstown
April 27	M. I. T.	at Williamstown
May 4	Union	at Williamstown
May 9	Bowdoin	at Williamstown
May 11	Princeton	at Williamstown

Seminary Conference

A conference of those anticipating taking up religious work at a seminary subsequent to college will be held at Union Theological Seminary on Friday and Saturday of this week. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin as well as a number of the Seminary students will meet with those attending for the purpose of explaining seminary life and work. The visitors will be guests of the seminary during their stay in New York. Anyone desiring to attend this conference is asked to give his name to L. D. Rohrbach '29 in 22 Jesup Hall immediately.

THOMPSON COURSE TO BRING 'JITNEY PLAYERS'

Unique Group of Actors Will Give Lady Gregory's 'The Dragon' in Chapin Hall

For the first time in several years a group of dramatists will appear in Williamstown under the auspices of the Thompson Course when the Jitney Players present Lady Gregory's The Dragon in Chapin Hall next Thursday evening at 8.15. Pronouncing themselves "the most unusual theatre in America", these amateurs of the stage have, "through ability, experience, and something of ordinary companies lack—the buoyancy of youth" attained a remarkable vogue, and elicited universal commendation.

From experimental beginnings as a group of young play enthusiasts who "jitneyed" about during the summer, the Jitney Players have established an enviable reputation throughout the east and this season are, for the first time, continuing their activities during the winter months. Of their treatment of The Dragon the Boston Transcript says: "The Jitney Players found The Dragon ideal. They set their scene simply in bold colors. The Dragon, like the Jitney Players themselves, compasses a happy juxtaposition of means. It is at once simple enough to amuse a child, and keenly aware enough to manage an undercurrent of two-edged satire."

This play of Lady Gregory's is a modern Irish classic, first produced in Dublin in 1919 and later successfully staged in New York where Mr. Elliott, director of Jitney Players' productions, played an important role. Though a fairy tale, The Dragon is written in a comic and satiric style with modern applications. In short, "the play is a fantasy having well-drawn characters of romance, comedy, satire and drama."

Freshman Five Suffers First Defeat of Season

Starting with a rush that swept their opponents off their feet and netted a 13-2 advantage in the first few minutes of play, the Wesleyan freshmen succeeded in losing out to the Williams freshmen quintet last Friday afternoon in Fayerweather Gymnasium at Middletown by 32-30. Overconfident at the start and then rather bewildered by the smallness of the floor, Williams had difficulty in organizing its passing attack against a team which made up in individual ability what it lacked in teamwork and whose brilliant guarding broke up the yearling attack for the first time this year.

Play during the opening minutes of the game was very fast, with Wesleyan holding possession of the ball most of the time and Williams missing all of its occasional chances from the floor. It was not until late in the second quarter that Fincke broke through to score the visitors' first field goal and bring the score to 13-4. From that time on Williams held a slight margin over the home team, but the effective man-to-man defense featured by the individual work of Wiggers retarded their

Local Cigarette Fiends Prefer Theirs Toasted

If representatives of the "Old Gold" publicity department should conduct a test, blindfold or otherwise, among Williams undergraduates, the chances are that they would again have to announce an "honorable defeat" at the hands of deep-rooted Williams conservatism according to cigarette salesmen in the College Pharmacy, Hart's Drug Store, and Bernie's. "Luckies are two to one favorites with the students," said one of them, "and Chesterfields usually come next, with Camels, Old Golds, and Fatimas following along in about that order."

Thus it would appear that if advertising slogans have much influence, the Williams man is either tired of sweets, has fears for the youthful slenderness of his figure, or aspires to have the voice of a Caruso rather than being susceptible to the merely sensual gratification of the ever-satisfying Chesterfield. Then too, spells of coughing which would necessitate an overwhelming supply of carload after carload of that throat-easing brand are evidently checked in the bud by suitable administrations of mere medical precautions. It is very probable however, that the students in this rugged mountain college prefer to keep in equally rugged physical condition by walking a mile for every hard-earned Camel, a tendency which is further proved by the local indifference to the oriental laziness inherent in the Fatima.

SWIMMERS DEFEATED BY COLGATE, 39 TO 29

Relay Again Proves Deciding Event Schott Lowers Pool Record in Breast Stroke

Strength in the short races—the 50, the 100, and the relay—enabled the Colgate swimmers to defeat the Williams swimming team, who were without the services of Wolcott, Noble, and Birnie because of colds, in the Lasell pool last Saturday by the score of 39-29, the meet being decided by the final event, the 200-yard relay. Bring of the visitors was high scorer of the meet with ten points to his credit, while Captain Schott did best for Williams by scoring eight points and turning in excellent time in the 200-yard breast stroke.

The meet was noted for several fine times, particularly Schott's remarkable performance in the breast stroke. After having swum on the medley relay team and the backstroke, the Purple captain navigated the 200-yard breast stroke in 2:40.3 to set up a new pool and college record only two seconds above the present intercollegiate record held by Millard of Yale. The Williams medley relay team of Davis, Schott, and Doughty also established a new pool and college record in that event with the time of 3:31.4.

The dashes—the 50 and the 100—proved to be goldmines for Colgate when the visitors took first and second in both with the good times of 25.4 and 58.2 respectively—the best performances of this season in the pool. Although Grimes of Colgate took first in the 440, Burgess and Wilson took second and third easily. Shaw and Wheeler won first and third for Williams respectively in the dives with good performances, while Bartholomew was second. Erickson of the visitors did 1:57.6 to win the 150-yard backstroke, while Schott was a fair second and Slabey of Colgate was third.

Captain Schott and Gregg led the Colgate entries in the breast stroke by over half the length of the pool to take first and second respectively in that event. Thus, before the 200-yard relay, the score stood 31 to 29 for Colgate, and a win in that

Debate Tonight

Monday, February 25—Facing the Harvard University debaters tonight in the second series of debates among the members of the Eastern Intercollegiate League, Bates and Straw '30 will uphold the affirmative of the question "Resolved, That This House approves the Baumes Law of New York State". The meet, which was postponed from last Saturday evening on account of the numerous fraternity initiation banquets at that time, will take place at 8 p. m. in the Jesup Hall Auditorium. Decision will be by vote of the audience.

PURPLE OUTPLAYED IN STIFF CONTESTS

Team Play of Wesleyan Results in 34-20 Victory, While Colgate Five Wins 41-24

BOLLERMAN SCORES 19 POINTS AGAINST PURPLE

Zone Defense of Wesleyan Halts Williams; Colgate's Block Play Scores

Two defeats in two days were chalked up against the Purple last Friday and Saturday when the Wesleyan five battled Williams to a standstill for a 34-20 victory at Middletown and Captain Bollerman led the Colgate team to a 41-24 triumph in Williamstown. By winning the former game, in which the Red and Black gained an early lead of six points and consistently checked the Williams attack with an impenetrable zone defense, Wesleyan retained her only chance to win the Little Three Championship title.

Whether or not the defeat at the hands of Wesleyan had any effect, the Purple was dead on its feet against Colgate, losing the ball time and again when opportunities to score presented themselves. In both games the futility of the Williams attack was the real reason for the loss as only six baskets were scored from the floor in the Wesleyan contest while against Colgate Alexander contributed almost half the field goals with his characteristic side shots, and only two close tries were successful in the second half.

Wesleyan Game

That the Cardinal and Black was not only ready for Williams but also determined to revenge the loss at Williamstown was obvious from the first minute of play on; and the Purple, on the other hand, lacked entirely the brilliant fire exhibited occasionally this season, as against Wesleyan in the first game and Amherst Saturday a week ago. The Red and Black had more than the will to win, however, with a zone defense that defied the Williams offense on that narrow floor and a pair of guards that left few opportunities to follow up the repeated long shots which Cuddeback and Alexander were forced to try.

Three successful shots opened the first half with a bang for Wesleyan when Anderson dropped a long one in, Nye followed another one up a moment later, and Sanders shot the third. Williams hardly got hold of the ball in these first few minutes, and it was not until Alexander sank a foul after seven minutes of playing that the Purple broke into the scoring. Betham made another, and Alexander brought the score to four to six, as Ward replaced Anderson and Thoms went in for Willmott. A fast out-of-bounds play with Thoms on the scoring end followed by a spot shot by Betham made the count 8-9 in favor of Wesleyan. Sanders' foul and a trick shot from under the basket by Ward gave the Red and Black 12 as the half ended with Thoms sinking a foul for Williams' total of 9 points.

The first part of the second half showed the weakening efforts of the Purple fail against the Wesleyan close fitting forward wall. Betham lost a basket by fouling; then made it up a minute later by dropping in his second spot shot from the foul circle. Ward widened the lead to three points for Wesleyan with a try from the middle of the floor, beginning the irresistible march through the Williams defense which was checked only momentarily by Willmott's follow up. Field's long tally, and several scattered fouls. Shots by Ward, Nye, and Nichols brought Wesleyan's total to 34 points as the game ended.

Unquestionably the honor of winning the game goes to the Wesleyan teamwork, for, although Ward was high scorer with 11 points, all live men of the starting lineup scored at least three or four points. Under the basket the bear-like Sanders prevented many Williams tries by gaining possession of the ball against all comers. Anderson, playing his first varsity game, set the pace in the early part of the contest, scoring two baskets, while Center Nye besides keeping in the scoring, played his position on the defense to perfection, stopping many of the Purple passes for what looked like sure scores.

Betham's individual efforts were largely responsible for the Williams rally at the

FOR INTERCOLLEGIATE HARMONY

The announcement that the musical clubs are to enter the New England intercollegiate singing contest next Friday is, for many of us, good news. Not within the memory of the present generation in college has Williams matched voices with other colleges. Although always active in intercollegiate circles in such matters as tennis, golf, swimming, debating, and even journalism, we have been exceedingly backward about exchanging songs. We are not quite certain as to the exact advantages of intercollegiate singing contests, but if in any way they stimulate interest in the declining art of glee-club harmony, we are strongly in favor of them.

It is perhaps unfair to expect the Williams singers to win a high rating in their first attempt of this sort, but what is far more important is the fact that when staunch young voices render Songs My Mother Taught Me at Symphony Hall next Friday, Mr. Safford's men will be among those present. Should they fail to qualify for the national contest in New York, they should not feel that the trip to Boston was by any means a waste of time and breath. It will at least have started a precedent that future Williams clubs will do well to follow. And, according to reports of the Christmas trip, there are still a few voices among us that have not been altogether drowned out by the phonograph and the radio.

Williams Six in Final

wane. Although Howe was forced out of the play by a leg injury, Schwartz, who has recovered from a series of similar mishaps, ably filled his place. He showed some of Howe's tenacious defensive work in the next few minutes when he poked-checked Rice with a headlong dive, and Watters again frustrated the fast, little center a moment later by catching the puck on his skate as the latter took an open shot from close quarters. The dependable Williams goalie, who has steadily improved all year, played a stellar game all through the contest, his last at Williams. Working with Langmaid, a combination which proved so effective on last year's Freshman team, Schwartz showed his offensive power by carrying the disk to the opponents cage where Langmaid took a shot from the side and Schwartz came tearing in to force it through, as Pennypacker tried to knock it clear.

The play became faster after this Williams threat, but the Princeton skaters were taking most of the spills. The Princeton coach was using most of his substitutes, and they permitted the Purple skaters to storm the Tiger goal repeatedly, Pennypacker proving too good each time. With the return of Howe to the Williams line-up after being treated, the Princeton first team again took the ice. Jones descended on the home cage after the Williams defense had been split, and Watters showed fine judgment in coming out just in time to forestall a hard shot.

The third period ushered in vacillating attack, which was cracked whenever it entered Williams territory by the consistent poke-checking of Howe and Langmaid, a feature that had been prominent throughout the game. In a counter attack at about four minutes, Langmaid shot from the side, drawing Ingersoll, spare Princeton goalie, out, and Howe came straight in on the rolling puck, to score in almost the same manner as had Schwartz previously. Seeing the score tied and a possibility of defeat imminent, Princeton redoubled its efforts, but with no immediate results. The Purple attack continued to work smoothly, and the team was following up the shots of Brigham and Hoyt like they had not done all year. The second line with Hazzard as defenseman was again substituted, and it kept up the pace of the first string, although several chances to score were missed by a too-long wait before shooting. Then Varsity A returned at 12 minutes, and again Princeton seemed to find them easier than the second team. Only four minutes later, after a momentary lapse, the Tiger defensemen carried an attack to the Williams' goal. It happened that the sun was directly behind Livingston as he shot, and Watters was unable to see the disk, catching it too far back on his pads, and ricocheting it into the cage. Williams made every minute count during the rest of the game, but without success, Howe and Hoyt carrying the puck down repeatedly. Langmaid took the second and last penalty for tripping, as Princeton carried forward a counter attack just before the final whistle.

The summary follows:

end of the first half and beginning of the second period when, with the aid of Thoms, he twice cut the Red and Black lead to a single point. Guards Alexander and Cuddeback had their hands full in playing the relays of Wesleyan forwards that were sent in, while Field who replaced the latter after the referee began to call fouls closer, managed to score on a long shot and a pair of fouls. Team play was the lacking factor in the Williams' game.

Colgate Game

Nineteen points by a single player are enough to account for any game. The colossal Bollerman, captain of Colgate, might have been stopped by Williams if he could have been reached, but his teammates invariably passed the ball to him at a height of nine or ten feet, and if he was within range of the basket, the tallest Purple player was powerless to stop a score. And yet, Bollerman was by no means the single scoring threat, as Colgate had a peculiarly effective team organization, featured by a block play and lightning-like, overhead passes of considerable length even when the team was in the scoring zone. As a result Hagy, Walsh and Cynoski scored six points apiece.

At the outset, Williams appeared able to match the Maroon basket for basket, coming up to a 6-6 tie after trailing 1-4 in the first few minutes. But with the score knotted, Colgate launched a 14-point attack which was checked only by Alexander's pretty one-handed shot. The Purple defense was free from fouls, but the opposing drive, centered about Bollerman as pivot man, penetrated deeply and quickly when near the basket, and a clever block play combined with an uncanny ability for shooting on the part of the whole team showed Colgate's superiority in the first half, and portended a Purple defeat.

Entering the second half with the score 14-24 in favor of the Maroon, Williams scored three points in short order and crept within seven of Colgate, but, after a basket by Hagy, Bollerman showed his true power by scoring the next nine points for his team. He made a short basket from the side, two free throws, another short shot, and then followed with two longer scores to put the Maroon ahead 35 to 19, as Williams had scored only four points during the Colgate drive. After Alexander had put through a long, looping shot from the side of the court, Walsh, Bonacker, and Cynoski added six points, and the Purple came to life long enough to score three on Willmott's free throw and Howe's goal.

With the exception of the first minutes, Williams played a lackadaisical game all evening. They lost the ball often, not only on passes, but when dribbling. They were bewildered when the time came to work in towards the basket. Their shooting was mediocre. But they would have had to play a beautiful game to defeat Bollerman and Colgate. Alexander scored eight points and played perhaps the best floor game for the Purple, Betham's three free throws enabled him to amass five points, and Allen, besides spending his time chasing Bollerman, scored four points, as did Willmott.

The summary is as follows:

WILLIAMS (24)	B.	F.	Pts.

Authorization of a spring baseball trip for the members of the Williams Varsity was granted by the Athletic Council at its meeting last Saturday noon. Coach Fox has received an invitation from the University of Virginia for the team to train there during the spring recess. In light of the fact that the trip two years ago was so successful the Athletic Council granted the Baseball Association fifteen hundred dollars with which to make the trip.

1932 SWIMMING TEAM SUBMERGES DEERFIELD

Two Point Lead Safeguarded by Victory in 200-Yd. Relay;
Score 36 to 26

Although somewhat handicapped by a strenuous week of initiations, the Williams Freshman swimming team, in its first regular meet of the year, was able to defeat Deerfield Academy Saturday afternoon in the Lasell pool by a 36 to 26 score. A win in the 200-yard relay, bolstered by a fairly consistent number of second and third places, finally decided the outcome of a meet in which first places were halved and individual brilliance was not conspicuous.

The meet opened with an advantage for Williams when Kerr and Swayze took first and second places in the 50-yard which was almost a dead heat clocked at 27.1 sec. The score evened up however when Bird of Deerfield won the 200-yard free style followed by his teammate Coonley. Ach, by making consistent fives and sixes in the diving outdid Foster of the visitors by four points to put the frosh again in the lead. This margin was further increased when Smith and D. Taylor made a clean sweep of the 100-yard backstroke.

The Deerfield aggregation then furnished some excitement by drawing up to within striking distance of the frosh in the 100-yard free style as Kerr, making a fine spurt, still failed to catch either Ray or Smith of Deerfield in a neck and neck race. A second place by Swayze and a third by Sidley in the 100-yard breast stroke practically neutralized Grave's first, and at the beginning of the relay, the score stood at 28 to 26 in favor of the freshmen. Downs held his opponent Smith to an even race in the first leg of the deciding relay, while Taylor and Kerr each maintained the lead established by Swift to win the race, and consequently the meet, in the time of 1 min. 48.3 sec.

The summary is as follows:

50-yard free style—Won by Kerr (W); Swayze (W), second; Johnson (D), third. Time: 27.1 sec.

200-yard free style—Won by Bird (D); Coonley (D), second; Swift (W), third. Time: 2:26.7.

Dives—Won by Ach, (W)—44 points; Foster (D), second—40 points; Van Sant (W), third—34 points.

100-yard backstroke—Won by Smith (W); D. Taylor (W), second; Emery (D), third. Time: 1:19.

100-yard free style—Won by Ray (D); Smith (D), second; Kerr (W), third. Time: 1:3.

100-yard breast stroke—Won by Graves (D); Swayze (W), second; Sidley (W), third. Time: 1:26.

200-yard relay—Won by Williams freshmen (Downs, Swift, Taylor, Kerr); Deerfield (Smith, Coonley, Bird, Johnson) second. Time: 1:48.3.

event would give either team a victory for the meet. However, Colgate's power in the short races showed up, and the Maroon took that race in the excellent time of 1:44.7.

A summary of the events is as follows:

300-yd. medley relay—Won by Williams (Davis, Schott, Doughty); Colgate (Carberry, Rosenbaum, Lockwood), second. Time: 3:31.4 (New Record).

50-yd. freestyle—Won by Bring (Colgate); Tamblyn (Colgate), second; Higginbotham (Williams), third. Time: 25.4

440-yd. freestyle—Won by Grimms (Colgate); Burgess (Williams), second; Wilson (Williams), third. Time: 6:01.6.

Dives—Won by Shaw (Williams); Bartholomew (Colgate), second; Wheeler (Williams), third. Winning points: 83.7.

150-yd. backstroke—Won by Erickson (Colgate); Schott (Williams), second; Slabey (Colgate), third. Time: 1:57.6.

OUTING CLUB TAKES HIKES AND SKI TRIPS

W. O. C. Members Take Advantage of Ideal Weather to Climb
Greylock Trails

Practically perfect weather combined with a newly-fallen 12-inch layer of snow made possible several of the most interesting Washington's Birthday ski and snowshoe trips ever held in the Taconic region, over the past week-end. A group of nine made the annual W. O. C. ski trip up Greylock with President Hales, and the latter recommends this trip for next week-end, best made by way of the Old Coach Road, for all interested in taking advantage of the current skiing conditions.

Five feet of snow was found deposited on the mountains on the route of the Old Coach Road, and the trees were weighted with snow and hoar-frost. The nine who ascended Greylock via the Old Coach Road were Mr. Collins, of the Chemistry Department, Hales, Bodenstein, Cook, Demuth '29, Fedde, Travers, J. Winn '30, and Detwiler '32. They struck the road ascending the mountain at Braytonville, and upon reaching the top spent an hour and a half for rest and lunch before descending in an hour and a quarter. The entire trip covered 17 miles. Hales strongly recommends the Old Coach Road as the ideal means of ascending Greylock. The most inexperienced skier can easily negotiate the moderate grade and well-defined trail, and the scenery along the trail is equal to any winter scenery in this region.

Greylock was also climbed by seven other men, by a different route which was difficult to trespass. Faison and Sparks '29, Johnson '30, and Johnson '32 went up Greylock on skis by way of the Hopper Trail. Three others, Cannon, Guernsey, and Sufferin '31 made the same trip to the summit on snowshoes.

ALFRED WRESTLERS DOWN PURPLE, 24-8

Reynolds and Lisle Only Williams
Men To Win Matches Over
Experienced Foes

Encountering one of the most formidable opponents on their schedule, the Williams wrestlers were decisively defeated by the Alfred University team on the mats in Lasell Gymnasium last Saturday afternoon by a score of 24-8. A fall by Reynolds in the 135-pound class and a decision for Capt. Lisle in the 145-pound class were the only Williams victories, while Alfred accounted for three falls and three decisions with but one match running into an overtime period.

Unfortunately the Purple was not able to make its best showing before an encouragingly large audience. Capt. Lisle stepped out of his class to fill the lack of a man for the 145-pound class, and Lobo wrestled considerably over his weight to replace Andersen, who was out with injuries, in the unlimited class. However Williams made a creditable showing against an unusually well-balanced and well-trained team.

With the 115-pound class represented for the first time Fujiyama of Williams struggled with Gallop through the sole overtime period of the meet, only to lose by referee's decision. Shorter and livelier was the 125-pound event in which Sanchez of Alfred threw Spencer for an early fall. Reynolds, in the 135-pound division, registered the only Purple fall of the day by pinning Britton of Alfred in about five and a half minutes. Capt. Lisle displayed his usual ability to win a decision over his heavier opponent in the 145-pound class.

Alfred showed marked superiority in the heavier classes, Baldwin and Denning of Williams losing decisions, and Baxter and Lobo being dextrously downed for falls. Following is a summary of the meet:

115-lb. class: Gallop (A) won from Fujiyama (W) by referee's decision. Time: Two extra 3-minute periods.

125-lb. class: Sanchez (A) defeated Spencer (W) on a fall. Time: 2:2.

135-lb. class: Reynolds (W) defeated Britton (A) by a fall. Time: 5:27.

145-lb. class: Lisle (W) won from Ham-bel (A) by referee's decision.

155-lb. class: Staiman (A) defeated Baldwin (W) by referee's decision.

165-lb. class: Phillips (A) defeated Baxter (W) by a fall. Time: 1:55.

175-lb. class: Fredericks (A) defeated Denning (W) by referee's decision.

Unlimited class: Kickham (A) defeated Lobo (W) by a fall. Time: 1:54.

Referee: Grant.

scoring sufficiently to maintain a two-point advantage at the end of the game.

At no time during the game were the Williams freshmen able to organize an effective offense against Wiggers and Captain Wells of Wesleyan, whose fine guarding hurried their opponents' shots and destroyed their usual accuracy. Wesleyan's passing attack was never strong, but they displayed unusual power in dribbling through to score on individual efforts from close under the basket, and their success in these efforts resulted in a 30-20 lead with about five minutes to play. Williams staged a desperate rally in the closing minutes and came within two points of tying the score, but the visitors took the ball on the final tip-off and held possession of it to prevent any scoring in the last few moments.

TERROR GRIPS TOWN Darkness Reigns in Williamstown As Throgs Marvel

Consternation, fear, and wonder seized the crowds assembled at the Colgate swimming meet last Saturday night when the electricity failed North Adams and Williamstown, plunging the two towns into utter darkness, and all business into uproar and confusion. Upon being interviewed by a Record reporter, Mr. French of the Williamstown Gas and Light Company explained that the mishap was due to trouble with the high tension wires of one of the plants of the New England Power Company (from which his company gets its power), and that after a futile effort to remedy the trouble, power was obtained from another plant farther east in the vicinity of Boston.

As blackness settled upon the town, the Spring Street merchants frantically searched for matches, flashlights, candles, or attempted to light the gas. A suspected attempt at robbery of the post office was frustrated before the appearance of the robbers, when the postmaster carefully lit two candles at the "Stamps" window. A rather small crowd gathered at Walden's Theater was quieted by a concert at the piano, and another gathering at Bemis's was absorbed in awesome discussion of the portent. Hart's Pharmacy reports no untoward happenings save the attempt of a Record "compet" to cash a bogus check. Amateur astronomers clustered in the street in silent admiration of the new brightness of the stars, or in vain attempt to see the Northern Lights.

In the swimming meet the unaccustomed blackness was greeted at first by an astonished silence, then by cries of "music, music!" Someone produced a harmonica and proceeded to still the clamor with his playing, interrupted only by loud applause. Freddie, in the massage room rubbing down one of the swimmers while others struck matches for him to see by, was heard mournfully to remark that it was the first time in thirty years he hadn't had electricity to work by. One of the Colgate swimmers, reclining on the floor in the hallway, was stepped upon for his imprudence, and Frank, upon being interviewed, vowed that he had been beset by three Colgate rooters who mistook him for Captain Schott, and pounded to a pulp. Numerous matches and cigarette lighters helped dispel the gloom, but the gatekeeper was obliged to get some candles before he could be sure that his post was not being made a port of free entry. When finally the light returned for good, people were seen to jerk themselves suddenly out of grotesque postures, and Scott mounted the diving board to complete the back dive that had been suspended in mid-air.

GLEE CLUB ENTERS N. E. INTERCOLLEGIATES

Williams Competes For First Time With Ten Other Colleges in Boston Tonight

Friday, March 1—For the first time in the four years in which New England Intercollegiate contests have been held, the Williams club will compete with ten other colleges at the Symphony Hall in Boston at 8.00 p. m. tonight for a silver cup, donated by the University Club of Boston, the winner receiving the privilege of representing New England in the National Intercollegiate, to be held at Carnegie Hall in New York City on March 9. In 1923, the first year in which the contest was held, Wesleyan took first place, Middlebury winning the honor in 1927, and Amherst securing the top position last year.

Each club will sing three songs, including a college song, the prize song, and one chosen at random by each. For these, Williams has chosen Yard by Yard, Londonderry Air by John Hyatt Brewer, also sung on the Christmas tour, while the prize song, which every club will render, is to be Songs My Mother Taught Me by A. Dvorak. Judges for the contest include Dr. W. C. Hammond, Professor of Music at Mount Holyoke College; George S. Dunham, Head of the Department of Music at Laselle Seminary; and Dr. George W. Chadwick, Director of the New England Conservatory of Music.

Colleges competing in the 1929 contest are the following: Amherst, Bowdoin, Boston University, Clark University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Middlebury, Northeastern, University of Vermont, Wesleyan, Williams, and Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Only two victories are necessary to acquire permanent possession of the cup, so that either Amherst, Middlebury, or Wesleyan can do so by winning tonight's tourney.

The Williams Glee Club, including members of the Class of 1932 for the first time, has left for Boston with the following membership: Baptiste, Beals, Collins, Faison, Ford, S. L. Johnson, Patterson, and Van Etten '29; Amerling, Balize, Chamberlain, Clarke, Fitch, Hodgkinson, Mailey, McIntosh, Sherman, Webster, and Willson '30; Brandegee, Francis, Getman, Harmon, Heermance, Megenth, Reynolds, and Runo '31; Baldwin, Boyce, Gardiner, Sherwood, and Stratton '32.

Harriers' Schedule Announced

Five dual meets and the New England intercollegiate cross-country meet will compose the schedule of the Purple cross-country team, it was announced by the Athletic Council last Monday. M. A. C., Middlebury, R. P. I., and Wesleyan will again be met, while Brown is a newcomer on the list. The schedule is as follows:

Oct. 18, M. A. C. (pending) at Williams-town.
Oct. 25, Middlebury at Williamstown.
Nov. 2, R. P. I. at Williamstown.
Nov. 9, Brown at Providence.
Nov. 15, Wesleyan at Middletown.
Nov. 22, N. E. C. C. A. away.

Lieutenant Governor Lehman '99 Emphasizes Values of Associations With Fellow Students and Faculty

Notwithstanding an unusually active day in the New York State legislature, Lieutenant Governor H. H. Lehman '99 found time after adjournment to give an interview to a Record reporter about those things which, developed in college years, led later to his political success. Conversing in a friendly, informal manner in his private office at the Capitol, Governor Lehman stressed the importance of two factors, close associations with the faculty and participation in extra-curricular activities, as being of "paramount importance in developing business acumen and a sense of responsibility."

Speaking at some length on student associations, he said he did not believe that the Faculty or upperclassmen in general appreciated the real benefit they could give to the lowerclassmen. "Their mistake is that they expect the students to take the initiative, and this the latter refuse in most cases to do". Every freshman has a certain amount of hero-worship in him for the prominent upperclassman. He went on to relate how, depressed by a series of reverses and bad luck, he, himself, was ready to give up and clear out when his whole outlook was changed by the cheer-

J. F. ALLEN IS NEW EDITOR OF 'GRAPHIC'

R. L. Armstrong, Managing Editor, and J. S. Chapman, Manager, Complete Board

John Frazer Allen, of Williamstown, and Ray Livingstone Armstrong, of Brooklyn, New York, were elected to the positions of Editor-in-Chief and Managing Editor, respectively, of the Williams Graphic and Literary Monthly at a meeting of the board members held Thursday evening in Jesup Hall. At the same time, John Stewart Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., was chosen to succeed to the position of Business Manager, Ralph Edwin Burgess of Washington, D. C. moves up to the position of Subscription Manager, Hugh Ford Stewart, Jr. of San Marino, California was elected Photographic Editor, and Austin Ripley Harmon of Brockport, N. Y. was made Circulation Manager.

A graduate of Williamstown High School and Riverdale Country Day School, New York, Allen was active in Freshman athletics, winning regular berths on the basketball and baseball teams, besides being elected to the Graphic board at that time. For the last two years he has been regular center on the varsity basketball team. Armstrong has connected himself with the religious work of the Williams Christian Association, is a member of the Williams Outing Club, the News Bureau, the directing department of the Little Theatre, and is assistant manager of the Adelphi Union.

HARVARD DEBATERS LOSE 26-5 DECISION

Bates and Straw '30 Successfully Defend Baumes Penal Laws Against Crimson

In contrast to the previous defeat of their negative team at the University of Pennsylvania, the Williams debaters won the vote of a small audience in Jesup Hall last Monday night from the Harvard team, 26-5, advocating the affirmative of the proposition:

"Resolved, That this House approves the Baumes Law of New York State". Straw and Bates represented the Purple against Harrington and Silverman of Harvard in speeches that lacked a real clash of interests inasmuch as one team upheld facts and records, whereas the other appealed to the audience's emotions.

Prepared with evidence from a personal interview with Senator Baumes, Straw opened the affirmative issues with a volley of figures to prove that the Baumes laws, which require that conviction of a fourth felony shall carry with it life imprisonment, have worked successfully in New York State and have been a definite social contribution in mitigating its "crime wave". He stressed the problem of handling the hardened individual criminal who is without fear or respect for the law, and the necessity not of punishing but of isolating this type from society. Emphatically he

SWIMMERS TO MEET WESLEYAN SATURDAY

Close Meet Is Expected With the 200-Yard Relay as the Deciding Factor

In their opening meet of the "Little Three" series in the Lasell Pool at 4.00 p. m. on Saturday, the Williams natators encounter the strong Wesleyan swimming team, which, while it has lost by narrow margins to Springfield, Worcester Polytechnic, Brown, and Amherst, has a well balanced line-up as well as several individual stars. Although the Cardinal and Black will probably take the majority of first places, Coach Graham expects the Purple squad to win the greater number of second and third places which, with Captain Schott's two sure firsts, will be sufficient to make the meet depend upon the final event—the 200-yard relay.

The first event of the program—the 300-yard medley relay—is expected to be won by Williams, as the Purple trio has turned in better time than that of Wesleyan this season. In both dashes, Peck of Wesleyan has made faster time than Higginbotham, who, however, should have little difficulty in taking second, while third places in both 50 and 100 will be a close fight. Healy, who returned to the Purple squad on Thursday after being out all season following an operation, can be counted upon to win the 300-yard individual medley, or to take second if Captain Schott swims the event. Captain Bodel of Wesleyan, the star diver who has not lost his event this season, will doubtless win the dives, while Shaw can probably take second.

The backstroke promises to provide a close race between Hibbard of Wesleyan and Schott, or Van der Bogart of Williams. Parr of Wesleyan has turned in better time in the 440 than either Williams man, but Burgess and Wolcott may cause an upset in this meet. Captain Schott will, of course, have no difficulty in winning the breast stroke, while the fight for second between Mattoon and Gregg should prove interesting. The 200-yard relay, upon

Debates Sportsmanship, Initiations, and House Parties

Four important matters were considered by the Student Council at the meeting of February 27: the recent decline in the good sportsmanship, which has always been extended by Williamstown audiences, in the past, to visiting teams and officials; withdrawal of membership in the National Student Federation of America for the year beginning September 1929; suggestions for the saner conduct of fraternity initiations; and proposed changes in the present method of conducting mid-semester house parties.

Consideration of the question of the sportsmanship of spectators at athletic contests was made necessary by the deliberately unfair reception accorded the Amherst hockey team in the game last week, and by thoughtless demonstrations of booing officials and opposing players

President Garfield Believes That All Europe Expects International Problems Under Hoover Administration

"All Europe is waiting eagerly and somewhat apprehensively for the new Hoover administration, and its attitude on international problems of commerce and armaments," believes President Harry Augustus Garfield, basing his statement on the observations of a two months' stay in England and on the continent. Having secured an additional speaker of note, as well as gaining final assurance of the attendance of others, President Garfield pronounced as successful the results of his trip in respect to the completion of arrangements for the 1929 session of the Institute of Politics.

"Hoover is a man of such wide knowledge," explained Dr. Garfield, "that Europe is apprehensive lest he set a still more rapid pace in international competition in commerce and armaments." President Garfield found England especially disturbed by Coolidge's Armistice Day address. Italy under Mussolini had, he noted, made very noticeable gains since his last visit there four years ago; and, with improving economic conditions, he found French optimism rising. The control exerted over public opinion in Italy,

AMHERST TO SEEK REVENGE IN FINAL

Wesleyan's Victory Over Sabrinas Points to Williams Triumph This Evening

CAPT. NAVIN OUT OF LINEUP

Comparative Scores Give Purple Slight Edge Against More Difficult Teams

Comparative scores, teamwork in previous games, general morale and season's averages all tend to show the Purple a slight favorite in the contest with the Amherst basketball team tonight in Lasell Gymnasium, when Williams meets the Lord Jeffs in the final court battle for "Little Three" and Trophy of Trophies honors. Since the first Williams-Amherst game two weeks ago, the Sabrinas have broken even, triumphing over Holy Cross and losing to Wesleyan Wednesday night, 40-21, while Williams has lost to both Colgate and the Cardinal and Black; but the comparative calibre of the teams played by both gives the Purple a slightly better record, against stiffer opponents.

The decisive trouncing administered by Wesleyan in Amherst this week came as a surprise. The Sabrinas were able to cling fairly close to the Middletown team throughout the first half, but in the last period Wesleyan gained a substantial lead, and unleashed a powerful attack every time Amherst threatened. The outcome of this game leaves the "Little Three" winner undecided. If Wesleyan wins the second game with the Lord Jeffs, and Williams also wins tonight, the race will end in a tie; however, a defeat suffered by either the Purple or Wesleyan while the other is winning will make an unambiguous finish to the race, while if Amherst defeats both, a tie will result.

A resume of the Purple season so far shows a record of nine victories and five defeats. Amherst's record, although numerically practically the same, is besmirched in comparison to Williams because of the showings made against teams played in common. Brown was defeated by the Purple by a comfortable score, yet the next week the Providence five administered a drubbing to the Sabrinas. Both defeated Lafayette, both defeated New Hampshire, both defeated M. A. C. The Wesleyan games played by both afford an interesting comparison, as on the home floor Williams won handily, only to be defeated by 14 points in Middletown; against the Lord Jeffs, the Cardinal and Black has played only one of the games, triumphing decisively in Amherst Wednesday, so that a good showing in the Middletown game will in a measure redeem Amherst.

The Amherst-Wesleyan game Wednesday brought to light no dangerous men in the line-up of the former. The fact that Amherst has been hit by sickness and injuries is favorable to all her opponents. Captain Navin will be unable to play because of a broken ankle bone sustained in a game against Lowell, while Guard

FOR MORE INTERCOLLEGIATE HARMONY

The behavior of players and spectators at certain intercollegiate contests held at Williams this winter has been in several respects decidedly lacking in decorum, discretion and good taste. Hockey players, it seems, have been whacking the shins of their none too friendly enemies with distressing accuracy, while the mob, unusually thirsty for blood-shed, has cheered as viciously as Spaniards at a bull fight, or Trojans at a cock fight. This same dangerously restless spirit has even pervaded our beautiful basketball court, where on several occasions the officials have been hounded with gratuitous and not very kind suggestions from the grandstand concerning the correct manner of calling a decision. Things like this, of course, do not make for harmony in intercollegiate athletics, nor do they cast a pretty reflection on Williams. If this be Williams spirit, let us all shut up.

We who are in the habit of calling ourselves gentlemen because we happen to dress the part, should be careful lest our actions give us away. For example, it is the mark of a gentleman to be a good sport. Is it to be a good sport to insult our athletic guests and to whine when a decision goes the wrong way? Of course it is merely the heat of the contest that inspires these ugly breaches of sporting etiquette. Neither players nor spectators have ever shown a special inclination to be mean for the mere pleasure of being mean. And yet it is at precisely those exasperating moments of the game when the referee has made a raw decision or an opponent has just committed murder that a college is tested for muckrakerism or sportsmanship. The players, being very human when in action, somewhat naturally hold that one dirty play deserves another. The inevitable result is that what might have been a perfectly clean contest of skill, is soon split up into numerous little private battles on the side, with everyone thumbing noses and crying for justice. It is difficult to stop such by-plays once they have gathered momentum, but at least they may be discouraged to some extent by a suppression of primitive hallelujahs from the sidelines.

It is not a pleasant matter to make these pointed remarks on the eve of an Amherst basketball game. But the apparent necessity for them is even more distasteful. Ever since the football season this traditional rivalry has been threatened with an infection, which unless checked immediately may lead to unhappy results. The history of this rivalry is itself testimony that Williams-Amherst games need no penny firecrackers to make them thoroughly exciting. And every case where ungentelemanly conduct has barged in, victory for either side has had a nasty taste. The two colleges have always represented in their athletic encounters a fine proof that there is nothing incompatible between rivalry and friendship. If recently either side has been at fault in maintaining this relation, Williams at least should take advantage of tomorrow's basketball game to show once and for all that our notions of sportsmanship do not jibe with our notions of a good fight on the court.

(With a code id his doze)

Pertaining to the Plan of the Board of Selectmen at a Recent Town Meeting.

What's this I hear?
Dame Rumor hath
It that we soon
Will be a grown-up village.

One hears it said that
The town fathers are about to do
What will show them city fellers
A thing, or maybe two,
Inspired perhaps by Whalen, and his Plans of changing traffic rules and Regulations along the white lights
Of New York,
The recent meeting of the villagers

Has brought forth a novel plan,
And what a change it brings.

One whispers that lights,
Green, yellow, and red,
Will be erected for the common weal.

Look what we see;
The early morning farmer with his cart
Proceeds cautiously, or else stops
At every crimson light.

Next, undergraduates line the curb
Waiting for the green,
While the fast fours begin to ring.
(Chief Royal is at hand in shining
Uniform, to see that none
Do break the law.)

The village matron, in the family Ford,
With children hanging out the doors,
Becomes excited at the yellow light
And stalls her car.

Comes nightfall, and
The dean is seen to surreptitiously
Slip by the warning light,
On his way to Walden's, wherein Clara Bow is featured in "Her Step-ins".

Lastly we see the jovial student,
Fresh from Adams, or perhaps the Falls,
To whom the lights
Are beck'ning signs, or
Circling arcs beyond his ken.
Since nothing matters then,
He drives straight on, behind
The wheel of Steele's steed.

One way to trap a beaver

Not everybody in the Hudson's Bay Company was a trapper, any more than everybody in the Bell System is a telephone engineer.

The Hudson's Bay people trapped a good many beavers in the company offices, where the skilful financing and careful business management served to back up the men actually on the front lines. Organized activity succeeded then just as it does today. The men who put up telephone lines can work the better because back of them are other men who painstakingly design and make their equipment, and still other men who correlate all these activities into a smoothly meshing plan.

WYNNE LECTURES ON ENGLAND'S SITUATION

Sees Hope for an Improvement in Unemployment in Featuring New Industries

"International conditions have undergone a change to the detriment of England so that the life of the basic industries in her export trade has been cut off," said Asst. Prof. W. H. Wynne Tuesday afternoon in his lecture, "The Present Economic Status of Great Britain," given in the Thompson Physical Laboratory as one of the course of Tuesday lectures. This change, together with an increase in population in spite of the war, is, he pointed out, the real reason for the existing unemployment situation.

Tracing the industrial development of Great Britain through the 18th and 19th centuries, Professor Wynne outlined the influence of the "Industrial Revolution" upon English life. This movement, he said, brought about a decided shift in population from south to north to engage in trades based upon exports, with a simultaneous industrialization of the whole social scheme. "The consequent economic system, relying upon international trade for its success, was necessarily closely touched by any change in foreign commercial conditions."

"The war highly organized the whole industrial system so that the basic industries of coal, iron, and steel were over developed. Peace brought a natural serious deflation, but unemployment conditions have become no better as the immediate effects of the war have receded." This new situation, found only in the older export trades, has been laid to a good many causes such as misplaced taxation, class antipathies, and laziness among the working classes encouraged by too much charity. But Professor Wynne believes the main difficulty to be in the growth in population and in foreign complications—political unrest in Russia and China, currency troubles in Europe, and the rise of a sense of economic nationalism. Professor Wynne in conclusion suggested that the solution may lie in a new industrial revolution featuring new industries supplying local needs which can absorb the surplus workers in the old trades, and a decided movement toward the efficiencies of consolidation in kindred industries.

Schenectady to Test 1932 Swimmers Today

After swimming to a close victory over Deerfield, made secure only by a fast relay that added eight points to a two-point margin built up early in the meet, the Freshman swimmers will encounter Schenectady High School in the Lasell tank this afternoon in the last meet before the match with Amherst Freshmen a week from today. With the handicap of initiations removed, which hampered the freshmen considerably before the last meet, the 1932 swimmers should be prepared to meet the Schenectady team on even terms, although the short distances which make up the program of the meet are more familiar to the visitors.

Two new events will be contested this afternoon, a 150-yard medley relay, and a 150-yard individual medley. The longest swim will be 200 yards, and the back and breast strokes will both be 100 yard events, instead of the customary 150 yards. The shortened distances are likely to make the events unusually close, and the outcome of the meet hard to predict. If the result again centers about the final relay, the chances of the freshmen will be improved, as the relay team has been making consistently good time.

The Freshman line-up:
50-yard dash—Kerr, Taylor.
100-yard dash—Kerr, McMahon.
200-yard swim—McMahon, Fenton.
100-yard breast stroke—Swayze, Sidley.
100-yard back stroke—Taylor, Smith.
150-yard individual medley—Swayze, Ripple.
150-yard medley relay—Smith, Sidley, Downs or Swift.
Dives—Aeh, Van Sant.
Relay, free-style—Undecided.

Prof. Kellogg Lectures on the Ductless Glands

Starting with Howells' prediction, made forty years ago, that organized ductless glands which secrete would be discovered, Professor James L. Kellogg, of the Biology Department, gave a general resume of the present state of the science of endocrinology in his talk on "The Functions of the Ductless Glands" delivered at the February meeting of the Science Club last Tuesday evening. After mentioning the discovery of the "hormones" secreted by the various glands in the body, Dr. Kellogg proceeded to discuss the importance of each in turn.

Considering the thyroid, which he termed the "master gland", he stressed its importance in many pathological conditions, principally cretinism or myxedema and goiter, and outlined treatments which have been found effective. Then he took up in turn the parathyroids and their effect on the nervous system, the glands which control growth and development, namely the thymus, the pituitary, and the pineal bodies, and the adrenals which are believed to secrete several hormones which prepare the body for physical effort, and stimulate the heart. Finally Dr. Kellogg discussed the possibility that the sex organs may also secrete hormones, and mentioned the disappointing results so far secured in gland transplanting operations.

Wrestlers to Oppose Brown at Providence

Last Saturday while the Williams wrestlers were being decisively downed by Alfred, the Brown University matmen, who had already met and trounced Alfred, were successfully retaining their clean slate by subjugating the potent Harvard team, 17-11. Tonight the Purple is scheduled to encounter that same Brown team at Providence, and will return to engage in a return meet with the North Adams Y. M. C. A. mat team on Monday evening in North Adams.

In Captain Harry Cornsweet, "Al" Cornsweet, and I. E. Cardon, Brown will be represented by holders of the New England Intercollegiate Championships in the unlimited, 175, and the 115-pound classes, none of whom have met defeat this season. The strong teams of Yale, Springfield, M. I. T., Alfred, and Harvard have successively fallen before their strength and without doubt Brown presents the most formidable combination that Williams will face. Two minor changes will be made in the Purple line-up; Andersen will again appear in the unlimited division, and Lobo will replace Baxter in the 165-pound class.

Following are the probable line-ups:

WILLIAMS (Class lbs.)	BROWN
Fujiyama 115	Cardon
Spencer 125	Stein
Reynolds 135	Anderton
Lisle (Capt.) 145	Alper
Baldwin 155	Dimond
Lobo 165	Wentworth
Denning 175	A. Cornsweet
Andersen Unlimited	H. Cornsweet

Forum Speaker to Talk on Armament Question

"Sea Power and Cruisers" will be the subject this Sunday evening of Mr. George Young, English Diplomatist, when he addresses the Williams Forum at 7.30 p. m. in the Jesup Hall auditorium. A strong opponent of heavy armament, Mr. Young will probably introduce into his lecture, certain substitutions for armaments which he has drawn up.

In reviewing one of Mr. Young's lectures, the Nation stated that "Mr. Young would make an admirable professor of foreign affairs". Mr. Young, recipient for twenty years of many honors in the field of diplomacy, left the Diplomatic Service of the British Government in 1915. He is at present studying politics and is one of the outstanding members of the Labor Party in England. Mr. Young has written "Diplomacy, Old and New", "Nationalism and War in the Near East" and "Freedom of the Seas."

PROF. DUTTON REGARDS SYSTEM AS GRATIFYING

Plan of 'Unguided Independence' in English 7-8 Class Is Found To Be Successful

Results of the individualized study plan introduced in English 7-8 immediately after the Christmas recess have been "very gratifying", according to a summary of the results made by Prof. G. B. Dutton, who introduced the system. The popularity of fiction, the stimulus to the working capacity of the students, and the effect of the system upon grades are commented on by Professor Dutton, who also remarks on the responsibility placed upon the individual, who is made the sole judge of his reading and its adequacy, while displaying his mastery of the methods and principles taught in the course.

Gissing, the novelist, was the favorite choice of the 51 students in the course, being selected by 36 for study; Adams, the historian, was chosen by 12; while Swinburne, the poet, was studied by three. Although Professor Dutton notes no relation between the amount and quality of the reading done, he remarks that, under the plan, 41 students read more than the necessary assignments, and ten read only as much as was required. Examination grades higher than their pre-examination standings were secured by 21; 23 remained the same; seven students fell below their pre-examination grades. "In general," the instructor notes, "the men not accustomed to reading penetratingly suffered; those with an understanding of their reading found the work advantageous."

Professor Dutton has as yet made no decision as to the maintenance of the plan at the close of this semester. He points out that careful preparation is necessary to enable the student to use such "unguided independence." The opinion of the class using the system favored its continuance, as the majority of the students felt that it had increased their knowledge of the author, his subject matter, and his meaning.

Prof. Licklider Talks on 'The Inoffensive Barrie'

"To solve the puzzle of Barrie, we must consider him as an artist of the emotional life of the race, as a Celt, and as a journalist," declared Prof. A. H. Licklider in his lecture, "The Inoffensive Barrie" given Tuesday evening under the auspices of the First Congregational Church. Mastery of technique, and emotional and poetic charm from the appeal of the playwright, he continued, "for all people who haven't grown up at all, or who have grown up entirely."

Barrie cannot be classified as belonging to any one of the schools of thought from realism to sentimentalism, Professor Licklider explained, since in trying to depict life as he sees it, he must embody them all in his work. Furthermore, the Scotch writer is not a propagandist: "Interested in youth, tenderness, courage, common sense, irony, humor—he offers fundamental human emotions without disturbing ideas."

W. C. A. Cabinet Meets

A number of plans for the near future were settled at the meeting of the W. C. A. Cabinet last Wednesday night. Announcement was made that Henry Ely '26, now at the General Theological Seminary, will be in Williamstown on March 7 to meet students who expect to enter the ministry, and that Covell '30 will have charge of his appointments. It was decided that Park '30 will represent the W. C. A. as discussion group leader at the New England Prep School Conference at New Haven on March 1-3. The Treasurer gave a summarized report to date which will be ready for THE RECORD shortly. The Annual Big Brother Banquet is planned for Tuesday, March 12, definite announcements for which will be made later.

Fraternity Swimmers Compete in Lasell Pool

Continuing the interfraternity winter athletic schedule, the interfraternity swimming relay races were held on Wednesday afternoon in the Lasell Pool. Inasmuch as three houses defaulted, only five first round races were held instead of the scheduled eight.

In the first round of the American League, the results were as follows:
Psi Upsilon defeated Delta Psi.

Chi Psi defeated Delta Upsilon.

Delta Kappa Epsilon defeated Zeta Psi by default.

Phi Delta Theta defeated Kappa Alpha by default.

In the first round of the National League, the results were:

Phi Sigma Kappa defeated Alpha Delta Phi.

Delta Phi defeated Beta Theta Pi.

Phi Gamma Delta defeated Sigma Phi by default.

Commons Club defeated Theta Delta Chi.

In the only second round meet of the afternoon, Phi Delta Theta defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon.

Freshman Quintet Ends Season Against Amherst

Still smarting under its recent defeat at the hands of Wesleyan, the Freshman basketball team will meet its other 'Little Three' opponent this afternoon in Lasell Gymnasium when it faces the powerful Amherst freshmen. Although the visitors started their season very poorly, their team play has been improving steadily, and brought them to a 34-31 victory over the Wesleyan freshmen last Wednesday evening.

The comparative scores of the two teams offer severe contradiction as to the strength of Amherst, for, in contrast to their fine showing against Wesleyan, they displayed a very mediocre offense two weeks ago when they lost to Holyoke High School by, 41-24. Since the Williams freshmen triumphed easily over Holyoke, 35-23, this comparison indicates that the home team should be able to run up a large score against the visitors.

There is some question as to whether De Pasqua, high scorer of the Amherst quintet, will be able to start the Williams game, due to a knee injury which has been bothering him all season. Unless he is able to play, the Amherst line-up will have Smith and Reynolds at the forwards, Salmon at center, and Rheem and Kenyon at the guards. The freshmen will line up as usual with Captain Good and Engle at the forwards, Fowle at center, and Cosgrove and Swinehart at the guards.

Sears Scores at Lake Placid

Despite the fact that Williams was represented at Lake Placid by a winter sports team, Edmund Hamilton Sears, '29, was the only man able to score for the Purple in the carnival which was easily won by New Hampshire. Sears won fifth place for Williams in the fancy skating event, thus getting credit for the team's one and only point. As no more carnivals or meets are scheduled this year the team will disband until next winter.

W. O. C. To Elect Tuesday

Nominating officers for the coming season, the executive council of the Williams Outing Club met Tuesday evening in Jesup Hall. Elections, at which all qualified members are urged to vote, will take place next Tuesday noon and evening. Those nominated are as follows: for president, Billo, Covell, and Fedde '30; for vice-president, Travers '30 and defeated presidential candidates; for secretary and treasurer, Cannon and Guernsey '31.

'LITTLE THEATRE' TO CHANGE MARCH BILL

Staging Difficulties Necessitate Alteration; Play by Moliere Will Be Given

Because of complications in connection with the producing of Behind a Watteau Picture, by R. E. Rogers, the Little Theatre has been obliged to substitute for this play Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, by Jean Baptiste Poquelin (Moliere), to be presented together with Shall We Join the Ladies, by Sir J. M. Barrie, in the bill for the latter part of March. The production, which will be directed by J. S. Casaday '29 and will consist of only the last three acts of the original play, is a light satire on the life of the French nouveau riche of the days of Louis XIV.

The cast of the play, which includes freshmen for the first time, is as follows:

Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme	Moliere
M. Jourdain	Reiff '30
Cleonte	Heermance '31
Dorante	Lakin '32
Covielle	Rutz-Rees '32
Master Tailor	Spencer '31
Mme. Jourdain	Mrs. Graham
Lucille	Mrs. Birdsall
Dorimene	Mrs. Bloodel
Nicole	Miss Healy
Mufli	Demuth '29

Tailors, Lackeys, Turks, and Dervishes

Sisley, Manning, Pulsifer '31

Scene: Paris, M. Jourdain's home.

Directed by J. L. Casaday '29

Costumes by J. L. Casaday '29, Gane '31.

Freshmen Will Debate on Fraternity Rushing

Next Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock, the first mass meeting of the Freshman class will be held in Chapin Hall, the purpose of this meeting being the discussion of the proposed system of fraternity rushing. Two Freshman teams, chosen last week, will debate on the subject: "Resolved, That the proposed system of rushing is preferable to the present."

The affirmative squad which will speak in favor of the proposed plan consists of Goldblatt, Thornton and West, with Mark as alternate, while those who will uphold the system now in use are Hamilton, Sellery and Robertson, with Walter acting as alternate. Each speaker will speak once, and one member of each side is expected to make a rebuttal, the decision resting in the hands of the audience according to the Oxford system. This will be the first debating done by the Freshman class so far this year, as all previous speaking has been limited to the regular weekly classes.

Lacrosse Team Practices

With approximately 15 men reporting at the first meeting of candidates on Tuesday and with prospects for several more, the lacrosse team began practice for its second official season at Williams. A schedule has been arranged, beginning two weeks after spring vacation with a game at Union. Daily practices are now held under Coach Bellerose in the cage on the Old Campus. After the holidays practice will be shifted to the Laboratory Campus.

Although this is only the second year that lacrosse has been recognized as an official college sport, a fairly stiff schedule has been arranged:

April 27 Union	Here
May 4 Brown	Here
May 11 Springfield	Away
May 18 Harvard	Away
May 25 St. Stephen's	Here
May 30 Springfield	Here

Commons Club Defeated by Chi Psi in Basketball

Continuing the fierce competition of the early part of the basketball round-robin series, Chi Psi won a hard fought victory over the Commons Club last Tuesday to triumph by a 17-9 score, while Beta Theta Pi lost to Delta Upsilon after a second half rally failed to tie the score by four points, the count being 22-18. Phi Gamma Delta pulled another close game out of the fire when Zeta Psi was defeated 20-18 Thursday afternoon, and at the same time Delta Kappa Epsilon defaulted to Theta Delta Chi.

Chi Psi's victory over the Commons Club gives it the undisputed championship of the upper bracket of the round robin tourney, but the lower half remains in a triple tie with Phi Gamma Delta protesting the game with Theta Delta Chi. If Phi Gamma Delta wins the play off of this questioned game, it will play Chi Psi for the College championship, while a loss will necessitate the playing of the whole series over again.

Buffinton Writes Book

Anglo-French struggles from 1689-1815 will be dealt with in a new volume of the Berkshire Studies in European History which Asst. Prof. A. H. Buffinton expects to have ready for the editors of the series within a few weeks. This will be the second book of the series to be written by a member of the Williams faculty, Prof. R. A. Newhall, having already contributed a study of the crusades.

Track Competition Starts

The annual track competition, by which the managements of track and cross-country, tennis, lacrosse, and Freshman track will be awarded in that order, was entered on Tuesday by the following 17 members of the Class of 1931: Alheim, Barrows, Clark, Deshler, G. Evans, Francis, Gibson, Hoge, Hufnagel, Husband, Lavino, Lucas, Morrison, Moser, Van Sant, Ward, and Williamson '31.

Jitney Players Well Received

Last Thursday evening in Chapin Hall Auditorium, the Jitney Players presented Lady Gregory's play, "The Dragon", a fantasy in three acts. The presentation, which was the final program of the Thompson Course for the year, was very well received by the audience, and will be reviewed in the next RECORD.

Cole To Talk on Plagiarism

Continuing the course of Tuesday lectures, Associate Professor Elbert Charles Cole of the Biological Department will speak on "Studies in Plagiarism" next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 p. m. in the Thompson Physical Laboratory.

Avery Delivers Lecture

"Martial and his Epigrams" was the topic of a talk given by Assistant Professor Maurice W. Avery of the Greek and Latin Department before a meeting of the Classical Society at the home of Dr. George E. Howes last Thursday afternoon.

College Preacher

The Reverend Willis H. Butler of the Asylum Hill Congregational Church of Hartford, Conn., will conduct the regular Sunday morning chapel services at 10:35 a. m. in the Thompson Memorial Chapel.

Treasurer's Notice

The time for the payment of term bills is extended to 4:00 p. m. on Friday, March 8, 1929, on or before which date all accounts must be satisfactorily adjusted. Students who fail to make necessary adjustment will be reported to the Dean for suspension.

ALL WORKS OF TASTE must proportion to the skill, taste, time, expense, and risk attending their invention or manufacture. Those things called dear are, when justly estimated, the cheapest; they are attended with much less profit to the artist than those which everybody calls cheap. Beautiful forms and compositions are not made by chance nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense. A composition for cheapness, and not for excellence of workmanship, is the most frequent and certain cause for the rapid decay and entire destruction of arts and manufactures

Student Council

which have marred several of the recent basketball games. The College wishes to maintain athletic relationship with Amherst on the basis of friendly rivalry, free from friction, which has always existed between the two institutions. It is also highly desirable for the student body, and particularly the entering classes, to realize that Williams has a standard of sportsmanship to maintain, which will assure visiting teams and officials of a clean game and fair treatment from the audience. Consequently, in cooperation with the heads of houses and The Record, the Student Council particularly asks the student body not to cheer the mistakes of opposing players, not to protest the decisions of the referee, under any circumstances, and not to bring discredit to the College by any exhibition of violent partisanship.

In withdrawing membership from the National Student Federation for 1929-1930 the Council indicated its approval of the aims of the organization in uniting the colleges of the country by a central unit, but concluded that the positive benefits of the Federation, particularly in view of the fact that the 1929 student conference will be held in California, would not justify the expense involved. The College remains a member until the end of this year, and may renew its membership at any time it sees fit, upon application to the Federation.

Cases of unnecessary and deliberate disturbance of townspeople by fraternity initiates as part of their initiation duties were brought to the attention of the Council, as well as one instance involving personal danger to a freshman. The Council referred the matter to the Interfraternity Council, appending the suggestion that fraternities limit their activities to members in the house immediately concerned, and that greater precaution be taken for the protection of the physical well-being of the freshmen.

A change in the present operation of house parties was considered by the Council. A committee was appointed to assemble all matter pertaining to mid-semester house parties, and to make a detailed report. Direct action will be taken by the Council as soon as possible, although any important change will be brought before a college meeting.

The question was raised whether Junior Advisers were bound to stay the year in the Freshman dormitories, especially if elected head of a house. The Council recommended that the Advisers should remain in the Freshman dormitories for the whole year, if possible. In special cases, the Council will name men to fill the vacancies.

A conference of Williams, Amherst, and Wesleyan, to be held at Amherst on the 23rd of March for the purpose of discussing common problems, was approved. Kobbe '29, Editor of The Record, was appointed as one representative, the other representative to be chosen shortly by Kobbe and the Chairman of the Student Council.

A petition of the Musical Clubs for the privilege of bunched cuts was approved by the Council, and submitted to the Administrative Committee for final decision. A report on the agency for the special train between New York and Williamstown after Christmas vacation, held by Robinson '30 and L. E. Brown '31, was accepted. A proviso to be included in future grants of train agencies was adopted by the Council, limiting the legitimate expense for train fare of the men holding the agency to a round-trip fare for only one man. The Cap and Gown agency was awarded to Warren and Willmott '29.

Harvard Debaters

upheld the safeguards given the criminal against injustice, noting the careful use of evidence, the ease of reference to a higher court and generous executive clemency.

To this Harrington of the negative replied for the Crimson with a strong emotional appeal against surrendering criminals as hopeless, and advocating in its place a reformed penal system for first offenses. Attacking the arbitrary distinction between misdemeanors and felonies, alike in no two states, he quoted several cases of injustice. With glowing hyperbole, he said the law had a "stupid background", passed in a fictitious crime panic, and smacked of the severe punishments of yore.

As the second affirmative speaker, Bates retaliated with the fact that our brief experience has been overwhelmingly in favor of this law. It has given the law a "sting" which has the criminals worried. With murder and manslaughter in New York State reduced ten per cent and burglary thirty per cent, it has gained almost without exception the indorsement of judges and district attorneys. Of those now convicted, he said their earlier terms lasted ten years on the average. Therefore the laws had succeeded in their basic principle of segregation.

In reply the last speaker of Harvard, Silverman, called habitual criminality a vague term and criticized the mandatory exactions of a law which so restrict the discretion of a judge. Our choice is whether we are to punish our criminals by fear or by modern psychological methods. Like his colleague, however, he pointed to statements of isolated critics Straw, giving the affirmative rebuttal, criticized their sentimental appeal and pointed out several fallacious arguments. With a spectacular finish he ended the debate by producing a convincing collection of evidence which he submitted for authentication to the chairman.

Swimmers to Meet

Wesleyan Saturday

which the meet will probably depend, will be close, although the Cardinal and Black quartet has turned in better time by half a second than the Williams team. The meet will doubtlessly be closely contested, and slight upsets in second and third places will be the deciding factors.

The tentative entries are as follows:

300-yd. medley relay—Williams: Birnie or Davis, Schott, and Doughty; Wesleyan: Hibbard, Mattoon, and Bailey.

50-yd. freestyle—Williams: Higginbotham, Doughty, Gardner; Wesleyan: Peck.

440-yd. freestyle—Williams: Burgess, Wolcott; Wesleyan: Parr, Joice.

300-yd. individual medley—Williams: Schott, Healy, Birnie, Davis; Wesleyan: Staelin.

Dives—Williams: Shaw, Niebling, Runo; Wesleyan: Bodell, Davis.

Amherst to Seek*Revenge in Final

Notopoulos' infected foot may cause his absence from the line-up. Coach Wheeler of Amherst is appointing a temporary captain for every game for the remainder of the season.

In the Holy Cross game, Amherst won after a comparatively tight struggle. Holy Cross previously defeated Dartmouth, but its other victories were against mediocre teams. In this game the Sabina coach tried a rejuvenated line-up, which, it is thought, will face the Purple tonight. Coach Messer will again start his usual line-up, which has shown improvement in practice since the two-game slump. Betham's shooting has bettered during the past week in practice, while Alexander and Cuddeback have maintained their excellent defense work.

The probable line-ups are as follows:

WILLIAMS		AMHERST
Willmott	r.f.	Latham
Betham	l.f.	Groskloss
Allen	c.	Tennant
Alexander	l.g.	Wilson
Cuddeback	r.g.	Notopoulos

of Lehman Hall, he feels that Williams cannot expand and still preserve the advantages of friendships and close associations which it now enjoys. Williams has lost rather than gained in her growth from the four hundred of his day to its present size. "Teas and general gatherings were frequent until the increase in students made this a task instead of a pleasure", he said in regard to the greater intercourse between faculty and students at that time.

Governor Lehman replied to the argument that small colleges are usually not as alluring as large universities for attracting a brilliant faculty, by contending that Williams ought never to consider expansion on this account. "Her history and traditions", he said, "as well as the Institute of Politics and the cultural atmosphere of her surroundings are as potently attractive as the wealth of greater institutions". He strongly opposes the establishment of chairs of research, the development of a graduate school, or even the granting of different degrees, because he wants to see his Alma Mater remain a center of culture and general knowledge for the progressive undergraduate, not the bookworm.

TANKMEN DEFEAT WESLEYAN, 45-35

First Purple Victory Gives Chance for 'Little Three' Title, Held for Two Years

CAPT. SCHOTT STARS WITH TWELVE POINTS

Captain Bodel and Peck Are High Scorers for Wesleyan in Hard Fought Meet

Winning five out of eight first places, trying for first in the relay, and taking the great majority of seconds and thirds, the Williams swimming team uncorked its power for the first time this season and defeated the Wesleyan natators in the Lasell Pool last Saturday by the score of 45-35 in the opening meet of the "Little Three" Series. Captain Schott, swimming in his last meet for Williams in the home pool, was as usual the star Purple performer with 12 points to his credit through firsts in the breast stroke, backstroke, and swimming on the winning medley trio, while Peck scored 7 points for Wesleyan by a victory in the 50, a third in the 100, and swimming anchor man on his relay team.

The meet was closely contested with the lead see-sawing back and forth between the two teams until ability in the last three individual races—the 150-yard backstroke, the 100, and the 200-yard breast stroke—and a tie in the relay clinched the meet for Williams by the comfortable score of 45-35. The high light of the meet, which brought the whole gallery to its feet, was the 100-yard dash in which Higginbotham and Wolcott took first and second, defeating Peck, the Cardinal and Black star dash man; this event put Williams far in the lead while the addition of Schott's first in the breast stroke assured a Purple victory, in spite of the fact that the 200-yard relay was only a tie after Williams had snatched an early lead.

The opening event of the meet—the 300-yard medley relay—was easily won by the Williams team, composed of Schott, Noble, and Close, with the slow time of 3:42.7. Wesleyan garnered two first places in the 50-yard dash and the 440 when Peck and Parr led the fields respectively. In the 50-yard dash, Peck was clear of the rest by a foot in navigating the course in the fast time of .26, but the three other entrants finished almost simultaneously, Davis of Williams edging out Hibbard for second by a slight margin. Burgess of Williams and Parr fought for honors in the 440-yard grind but Parr made a spurt for the lead in the last lap, winning in the fine time of 5:52.4 while Wolcott of Williams was a good third.

The 300-yard individual medley tied the meet when Healy of Williams, who has been absent from the squad all season following an operation, won the event in (Continued on Second Page)

LEHMAN CUP CONTEST BEGINS IN TWO WEEKS

Skinner '30, Last Year's Winner, Is Favorite in Annual Board-
Track Meet

With Skinner '30, Gailer '29, Lane '29 and all the rest of the men who took the first twelve places in last year's Lehman Cup Meet still in College, competition in the 30th annual board track meet for the two cups offered by H. H. Lehman '99 will reach a new height this year. Beginning about Wednesday, March 20, the contest will run through Thursday, Saturday, and the following Wednesday, trials and finals on separate days being arranged for some events and one whole day being devoted to the high jump.

Included in the program of nine events, which are calculated to test out all-around track ability, are the 50-yd. dash, 60-yd. high hurdles, 60-yd. low hurdles, 440-yd. dash, 880-yd. run, mile run, shot put, high jump, and potato race. For the first five places in the 50-yd. dash and the two-hurdle events, the scoring will be as follows: five, three and one-half, two, one, and one-half. In the remaining races points will be awarded on the basis of ten, seven, four, two, and one for first, second, third, fourth, and fifth places respectively. (Continued on Third Page)

1932 FIVE IN TIE IN 'LITTLE THREE' RACE

Easily Won Victory over Amherst
Yearlings Gives All Teams
Equal Standing

Gaining an easy victory over a much weaker Sabrina quintet by 32-18 in a game preliminary to the Varsity contest with Amherst in Lasell Gymnasium last Saturday evening, the Freshman basketball team went into a triple tie for the 'Little Three' Championship. Captain Good, with a total of 18 points to his credit, was by far the high scorer for Williams, while DePasqua, Kenyon, and Rheem of Amherst each scored four points, the highest number for any player on their team.

The first half was quite slow as a whole, and neither team appeared to be very aggressive. Cosgrove started the scoring with a free throw, and at the end of a disappointing quarter the score stood at 6-3. The second quarter, though somewhat more lively than the first, was poorly (Continued on Third Page)

WRESTLERS CRUSHED BY BROWN TEAM 31-3

Decision for Baldwin Only Purple Victory as Brown Scores
Five Easy Falls

Against the undefeated and reputable Brown University wrestling team, the Williams matmen were unable to survive even by adopting defensive tactics, and were beaten 31-3 at Providence last Friday evening. Baldwin's time decision over Dimond was responsible for the only Williams points, while the home team scored five falls in an average time of slightly more than three minutes, and took two other matches by well-earned decisions.

Although the Purple defeat was decisive beyond question, the Alfred team which recently defeated Williams' 24-8 suffered a similar setback at the hands of Brown, and the successful mat teams of Yale, Harvard, and Springfield have likewise lost to the Providence wrestlers. The meet last Friday was featured by little action due to the defensive tactics which most of the Williams team were forced to adopt against their stronger opponents.

The meet opened inauspiciously for the Purple when Cardon, holder of the New England Intercollegiate Championship in the 115-pound class, pinned Fujiyama in 1 minute, 35 seconds, and Spencer was downed by Stein of Brown in 3 minutes, 50 seconds. In the 135-pound division Captain Lisle of Williams was too late in gaining the upper hand over Anderton and lost by referee's decision. The next match went to Alper of Brown who threw Reynolds for a quick fall, but in the 155-pound class Baldwin of Williams succeeded in gaining a decision over Dimond for the sole Purple victory of the meet.

The heavier classes proved Brown's consistently wide margin of superiority. Lobo of Williams lost to Wentworth by a fall, and A. Cornsweet finally gained a decision over Deming after incurring the displeasure of the spectators with an idle exhibition of brawn. In the unlimited class Captain H. Cornsweet, holder of the (Continued on Fourth Page)

Dr. Noehren Will Give Lecture on Hindustan

In an endeavor to display aspects of India not presented in such critical works as Katherine Mayo's Mother India, Dr. Arthur Noehren, College Health Officer, who spent 13 years in the Y. M. C. A. and government medical service in that country before joining the Williams faculty, will lecture on "Fascinating Hindustan" next Thursday evening in the Thompson Biological Laboratory. Dr. Noehren will illustrate his talk with 175 colored slides of pictures which he has taken of interesting localities.

Comparative religions and religious architecture of the land will be discussed, as well as the progress of physical education among the Indians, "a people," remarks Dr. Noehren, "potentially as physically clever as any other nation." The advantages of British rule will be analyzed, and the British control of India defended from the experience of one who participated in the English system for more than a decade.

WESLEYAN AWARDED GLEE CLUB CONTEST

Middlebury Barely Noses Purple
Out of Second Place at Symphony Hall

ALUMNI PRAISE RESULTS

Boston Press Comments Favorably on Excellent Showing Made by All Entries

Although no official third place was awarded by the judges at the fourth annual New England intercollegiate glee club contest which was held at Symphony Hall in Boston last Friday evening, there was a disparity of less than two points between the scores of the Williams organization and the winner of second place, so that the Purple singers may be considered to have been third among the eleven colleges represented. Wesleyan took first with 226.2 points, Middlebury second with 212.2, Williams third with 210.8, while the Amherst club's total placed it in fifth position.

A large and enthusiastic audience applauded the singing of Yard by Yard as arranged by Mr. C. L. Safford, and the new precedent set by this first appearance of Williams in intercollegiate glee club competition was warmly praised by local alumni in congratulating the Musical Clubs upon their success. The Boston Globe remarks upon the excellence of the work of the several clubs in the fourth contest since the war, taking this as an earnest sign of the annual continuance of the event in the future.

As a result of its victory the Wesleyan club will go to New York this Saturday to compete there in Carnegie Hall for national supremacy with the winners of contests held in other sections of the country. This marks the second year in which Wesleyan has come out ahead in the New England championship, 1926 being the date of the previous Cardinal and Black victory.

Announcement was made last Sunday by William Howes Collins '29, manager of the Musical Clubs, that plans were being considered for a concert in Williamstown on March 27. Arrangement has been made by a group of Eastern glee clubs to broadcast selections each week, and the turn of the Williams organization comes around at that time, so that it will be possible, if so decided, to kill two birds with one stone.

CRITIC SCORES 'DRAGON'

Performance of 'Jitney Players' Enjoyable; Not Perfect

Courtesy of J. L. Casaday '29

The Thompson Course might well include more drama in its programme. In the last four years, apart from the Yale Puppeteers, there has been nothing in this field. Last Thursday evening the Jitney Players filled Chapin Hall. The audience judging from the applause thoroughly enjoyed the performance. Fintan brought great enthusiasm. (Why, I cannot say.)

The Jitney Players gave Lady Gregory's fantasy, The Dragon. Lady Gregory has fallen along with the rest of the Irish School in the minds of the present litterati, whether it be too much "wailing under Celtic moons", or bad productions, or lack of philosophical content. The Dragon is a thoroughly clever and delightful play. ## SCHENECTADY LOSES TO FROSH SWIMMERS

Kerr Wins Twice for Freshmen;
Visitors Take Five Events,
But Lose, 44-36

Reversing the result of two years ago, when the Schenectady High School swimmers defeated the Williams freshmen by a single point, the 1932 swimming team conquered their second opponents of the year by the decisive score of 44-36 in the Lasell pool on Saturday afternoon. The freshmen yielded four first places out of eight events to the visitors, and lost the final relay by disqualification after establishing a comfortable lead, but the fact that every man who swam for Williams placed in his event was enough to insure victory with a few points to spare.

Smith and Sidley turned the first event, the medley relay, into a rout for the freshmen, and Downs easily held an advantage of 25 yards through the last leg of the race. Kerr added another first place for the (Continued on Fourth Page)

GEORGE YOUNG GIVES TALK ON SEA POWER

'Forum' Speaker Sees International Agreement for Abolition of Naval Races

"We can find an agreement by which parity can be attained and then reduce sea power to police", was the conclusion reached by George Young, noted English diplomat and author, in his lecture on "Sea Power and Cruisers" delivered under the auspices of the Williams Forum in Jesup Hall last Sunday evening. Mr. Young is a prominent member of the Left Wing of the Labor party in England, and is the author of numerous books on diplomatic matters, besides having served as an emissary of his party in various Continental crises.

Stressing the importance of naval matters in the different wars and crises between this country and England, he made clear the point that Great Britain owes her national existence, her colonial empire, and even her daily bread to her command of the seas, while the United States wants only freedom of the high seas. Sounding a note of warning, he insisted that "to say that we couldn't fight about this, that it is unthinkable, only means that we are not thinking at all", but then went on to say that most conditions make for agreement rather than war, and cited the great concessions made by England to facilitate enforcement of Prohibition in this country as an example of how the two nations really can cooperate. He also emphasized the fact that the English do not look upon our cruiser program as a challenge but rather as a specific attempt to decrease naval forces to police after parity has been attained.

Mr. Young then pointed out the diplomatic blunder committed in the Washington Conference when it was not made clear that England did not agree to parity in cruisers, and ascribed the breakdown of the Geneva Conference to the fact that the British Government had not yet brought itself to the point of agreeing to complete parity, which he thinks will be accepted (Continued on Fourth Page)

Commons Club Is Host at Dinner for Trustees

Responding to a general invitation, ten members of the Board of Trustees and several undergraduates were guests of the Commons Club at dinner, Friday, March 1. The visitors inspected recent developments in Currier Hall, especially the new lounge room and alumni dormitory, and expressed pleasure at the progress noted.

Those who attended the dinner were: President Harry Garfield '85, Mr. Alfred C. Chapin '69, Dr. Henry Lefavour '83, Mr. Herbert J. Brown '85, Mr. William P. Sidley '89, Dr. Vanderpoel Adriance '90, Mr. Willard E. Hoyt '92, Treasurer, Mr. Robert H. Jeffrey '95, Mr. Charles M. Davenport '01, and Mr. Henry R. Johnston '09.

Continuing the Tuesday Lecture Course schedule, Assistant Professor Elbert C. Cole of the Physics Department will speak today on "Studies in Plagiarism". The lecture will be given at 4.30 p. m. in the Thompson Physics Laboratory.

WILLMOTT LEADS SABRINA, 43-26

Amherst's Hard Game Unable to Stop Purple from Piling Up
Decisive Score

WILLMOTT LEADS DRIVE WITH NINE FIELD GOALS

Final Purple Game Leaves 'Little Three' Title Dependent on Wesleyan Tilt

As in the memorable 1928 Williams-Amherst football game, in which credit for the victory went "to the better backfield in a battle of backfields," so, again, on the court, credit must go to an attack powerfully superior in regard to floor work, shooting, passing, and dribbling which enabled the Purple basketball team to break through to a 43-26 triumph in the last game of the season, played in the Lasell Gymnasium last Saturday night. Thus the Varsity five, steadily pulling away from a 9-9 tie at the end of the first 15 minutes, and led by Willmott with nine field goals, piled up a seven-point lead at half-time and further widened the gap by consistent scoring in the last period.

By this splendid finale to a .667 season, Williams assured herself of at least a tie in the "Little Three" basketball race, and will be the winner if the Lord Jeffs are able to overcome Wesleyan on the latter's court tomorrow night. The Purple victory keeps the Sabrinas' Trophy of Trophies score at zero, and increases the Williams Total to nine points and a half.

Amherst's pivoting game and her tendency to ride in roughshod when in the scoring zone, kept her close to the Purple for over half the first period, but the individual work of Willmott, made possible by well-functioning team play and shifty passing, could not be matched even by Groskloss and Acting Captain Wilson, who undoubtedly gave the best performances for Amherst. A field goal by Groskloss which gave his team a momentary 6-5 lead was one of the prettiest shots made this year in the Lasell Gymnasium, and Wilson made a basket in the second half which was equally phenomenal. Yet this inspiring work did not keep the Lord Jeffs in the running, largely due to Willmott's elusiveness and Betham's floor generalship combined with a hard working defense.

Amherst's doggedness interrupted any Williams rally of duration, and the result was that on many occasions the teams exchanged shot for shot for a considerable period before the Purple managed to pull away. The longest rally was one of seven points, engineered by Willmott, Betham and Allen, which boosted the Williams lead to 25-11 after a half-time score of 18-11. From this time on, the teams battled evenly until the gun, Alexander scoring five of his eight points consecutively near the end of the game.

Willmott started the scoring when he broke loose to sink a short shot. The Lord Jeff attack was at its height at this point, although when they assumed a 4-2 lead it was by virtue of four free throws. Willmott tied the score, and on Betham's converted foul the Purple took a 5 to 4 lead. From this point until Groskloss tied the score at 9-9 with a free throw, the lead vacillated between the teams, 5-6, 7-6, 7-8, and 9-8. The pause that followed was the calm before a storm, for, with five minutes to go, Allen scored a field goal, Willmott another, and Alexander made good two free throws. After Notopoulos' goal, Alexander and Cuddeback came to the fore to make three points just before the period ended.

With the resumption of play, the Williams attack reached its high point. Wilson stopped the Purple rally after it had reached seven points, but after his basket, Willmott scored his seventh field goal and Cuddeback and Allen added three points more. Pangboney's introduction into the line-up revived the Amherst attack, he and Wilson enabling the Sabrinas to hold their own from a scoring standpoint until the end of the game. Seven minutes from the final gun, Coach Messer sent in an entire team of substitutes, and after letting them play four minutes, sent back the first team to finish.

After Willmott, Allen and Alexander scored the greatest number of points with nine and eight respectively, Betham and Cuddeback getting four apiece. Gros (Continued on Second Page)

OUR DIRTY COLLAR COMPETITIONS

Inasmuch as managerial competitions seem to be established as an important and eternal condition of campus glory, it is quite essential that their machinery be kept in good running order. Every sophomore, to be worthy of his Greek letters, must in some season of the year dedicate his complete and whole-hearted service to the whims and demands of some genially officious manager; and before the competitions are over not a few awkward undergraduates have mastered the very special technique of the snow shovel, the hammer, or the paint brush. Some day these indefatigable handy men will be a great help around the house, but the question before us at present is might they not be of somewhat greater help around the campus. We do not mean to disparage the thousand and one ways by which the lowly compets contribute materially to the equipment of the College; the superintendent of grounds and buildings is no doubt duly appreciative of this gratuitous labor. But we do feel that a little more emphasis might quite properly be laid on managerial ability and less on pure carpentry. The altogether inhumane practice now in vogue among managers of allowing—indeed requiring—their compets to be as busy as possible doing nothing for the greatest length of time seems to one on the outside to be the worst feature of a system which at best is about as gracious as a bed of cactus. There should be a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Compets—especially when this cruelty appears to have so little direct bearing on the business of athletic management.

Possibly it is felt by some that a position as important as major manager should have appropriately fiendish entrance requirements. But this is a childish way of inflating the value of campus honor. There is no real reason why an athletic manager should be more jealous of his office than any other kind of respectable manager. And the chances are that the title would be more respected if some of the brain and brawn now expended in the production of elaborate contraptions during a competition were converted into useful service after the competition. Perhaps, for some psychologically sound reason, it is essential that our teams be continually coddled by compets; but after all, the raison d'être of the whole thing is not to make life miserable for a few, but to make it easier for athletes to serve best and win most.

What we specifically object to about these competitions is that vicious element quite accurately designated as "extra work." It is work, and it is extra; so extra, in fact, that it is extraneous. And because extra work apparently plays so important a part in the final recommendations, it necessarily results in cut-throat tactics and a colossal waste of time. If the managers feel they really do need these prolific inventions to keep the teams contented, at least the actual materialization of them should be relegated to the category of regular "assigned work." Let the young Edison have plenty of credit for his initiative and genius, but mercifully restrain him from spending a large portion of his college career in working over his brain-child and pampering it. Labor paid by the time will never be very speedy, and it strikes us as exceedingly incongruous that these competitions, which presumably represent the College's supreme high-power test, should thus make inefficiency and stalling a basis for reward.

As we see it, the fundamental function of a managerial competition is to assist in picking the best man for the job. This first requirement should not be allowed to become obscured by desperate desires to preserve the undergraduate aristocracy. Remove the absurd and illogical "extra work," and perhaps the competitions will reveal, as they should, true executives and managers instead of errand boys and handy men.

Tankmen Defeat

Wesleyan, 45-35

4:41.2 with Staelin and Boden of Wesleyan taking the remaining places. Again, the race for the third place was the contested point, Birnie of Williams coming in an arm's length behind Boden. Captain Bodel of Wesleyan upheld his record of consecutive victories this season when he clinched the dives while his teammate, Davis, was four-tenths of a point above Shaw of Williams. Captain Schott and Van der Bogert leveled the score again by outdistancing Hibbard of Wesleyan in the 150-yard backstroke with the fair time of 2:03.6; Schott won first easily, while Van der Bogert swam a fine race to touch out Hibbard for second by a hand.

Higginbotham and Wolcott came in ahead of Peck of Wesleyan, in the 100 with the time of 1:0.9. In the 200-yard breast stroke, Schott did 2:43.8 with Mattoon of Wesleyan leading Gregg in the closest finish of the meet. Ahead by ten points and sure of a victory, the Williams 200-yard relay team, composed of Davis, Doughty, Gardner, and Higginbotham, entered the pool for the last event of the meet. The Wesleyan team of Bodel, Frederick, Hibbard, and Peck trailed behind the Purple early in the race, but the event finally ended in a dead heat with the time of 1:47.6. Although Williams won the majority of first places, the ability to take seconds and thirds proved to be the deciding factor which finally gave the meet to Williams with the score of 45-35.

The summary is as follows:

300-yard medley relay—Won by Williams (Schott, Noble, Close); Wesleyan (Chadwick, Smith, Bailey), second. Time: 3:42.7.

50-yd. freestyle—Won by Peck (Wesleyan); Davis (Williams), second; Hibbard (Wesleyan), third. Time: .26.

440-yd. freestyle—Won by Parr (Wesleyan); Burgess (Williams), second; Wolcott (Williams), third. Time: 5:52.4.

300-yd. individual medley—Won by Healy (Williams); Staelin (Wesleyan),

ALUMNI COLUMN

B. Colby '90 Urges Pooling of Anglo-American Fleets

Strenuous international discussion was provoked in Paris last Thursday when Bainbridge Colby '90, Secretary of State in the cabinet of President Wilson, repeated the suggestion he put forward in London in December that Great Britain and the United States should take a tip from the example of Lloyd's, the famous English marine insurance company, "by employing the combined navies of the two powers as a mutual insurance for preserving the freedom of the seas and preventing all future conflicts". Speaking before a luncheon gathering at the American Club, the former Williams man asserted that there must be an understanding between two great naval powers sprung from the same origins, speaking the same language and fundamentally unified.

According to an article in the New York Times, Mr. Colby's solution is "that Great Britain and the United States pool their navies and underwrite the peace of the world, brushing aside as of minor importance the question of whether Great Britain or America has most cruisers". The causes of the Anglo-American naval controversy may be condensed into two main psychological facts. The first is the difficulty encountered by most Americans in bearing in mind that morally we are English; according to Mr. Colby we are still morally, intellectually, and historically so. On the other hand it is difficult for Englishmen to accept the American pretension of ascendancy, and there lies the problem which, in the speaker's words, "should be a subject of accord."

kloss' hard game checked the Purple on several occasions, and his seven points and Wilson's six led the Amherst scoring. Coach Wheeler was unable to find a suitable offense combination to cope with Alexander and Cuddeback, and the four forwards he tried were altogether able to score but three field goals. Amherst's late scores came on individual dribbles and long-range shots, while the Purple played unified, albeit rough basketball until the gun ended the game with Willmott's ninth field goal between his hands and the net. It was a fitting conclusion to a successful game and a successful season.

Lehman Cup Contest Begins in Two Weeks

One point will be given for every inch over four feet, six inches in the high jump, and in the shot-put one point for every six inches beyond 29 feet.

Skinner's victorious total of 30 points last year was scored by a first place in both the high and low hurdles, second in the half mile, third in the quarter, and a tie for second in the high jump, while second honors in the meet were tied between Gailer and Lane '29 with 22½ points apiece. Abetting Skinner's chances for another victory is the fact that Mason ex '31 will not be in the high jump; but on the other hand Dougherty '31 will furnish more competition in the hurdles, while Goodbody and Guernsey '31 will be dangerous rivals in the track events. Beals '29 is also expected to be a point scorer especially in the dashes, while the Freshman runners are the customary dark horses.

played and featured several misses of apparently easy shots from the floor right under the basket, while twice the game closely resembled a football scrimmage when the ball was played on the floor. A redeeming feature of the half, in which Williams showed her superior ability, came when, after a rally and some very tricky passwork, Fowle was able to shoot the ball in the basket for a well-earned goal. The score at half time stood at 14-5 for Williams, Good scoring fully half of the freshmen's points.

In the final half, which was much more active and interesting, Williams earned another 18 points to the Sabrina's 13, which gave a final tally of 32-18. Good started the scoring with a field goal after two minutes in the third quarter, and taking advantage of several opportunities when unguarded, earned another 11 points for his team during the half. Three times again, the ball was on the floor in what closely resembled football scrimmages. Many substitutions were made during the last period of play, and though Amherst scored as much during the last quarter as in all three of the other quarters, she was able to bring the final score only to 32-18.

WOLF AND CHASE GET THIRD PLACE IN TENNIS

Team Loses to Princeton Pair in Finals of Intercollegiate Held at Cornell

Victorious in his first two matches in the singles, only to lose a gruelling contest in the semi-finals, and, paired with Chase, invincible until the final round of the doubles, Wolf provided some of the most spectacular tennis exhibited at the third annual intercollegiate indoor tennis tournament for the Larned Cup, which was run off at Cornell University last Friday and Saturday. Julius Seligson, of Lehigh, winner in 1928, again won the singles by defeating MacDonald of Dartmouth, while Appel and Thomas of Princeton won from Wolf and Chase of Williams in the doubles, after a terrific five-set struggle.

The tournament included representatives of 13 different colleges, counting among them the best college players of the east. After the contest of Friday, Williams and Lehigh were tied for first place with nine points each, with Dartmouth and Pennsylvania tied for third, having garnered eight credits, followed closely by Princeton and Cornell, with seven points apiece. The victory in singles helped Lehigh win first place at the finish with 18 points, while Princeton, with the doubles victory, rose to second place with 14. Williams added three to its total, but was forced back into a tie with Dartmouth for third place, each team tallying 12. The other scores were as follows: Pennsylvania, 8; Cornell, 7; Yale and Amherst, 4; Colgate and Rutgers, 2; Columbia, Syracuse, and Ohio State, 0.

In the first-round matches, Chase was put out by Hayes of Amherst, who staged a comeback to win after losing the first set, 1-6, 6-3, 9-7. Wolf drew a bye in this round and found no difficulty in upsetting Meury of Rutgers in the second, winning 6-0, 6-1. In the third bracket the Williams captain had his hands full with Custer of Cornell, whom he conquered 6-3, 6-2, after displaying a varied offense including some excellent work at the net. Entering the semi-finals, Wolf was opposed to MacDonald, who had just defeated Appel of Princeton, former intercollegiate doubles titleholder with Van Ryn. This match proved to be one of the most strenuous of the tournament, Wolf succumbing after three desperate sets, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5. The winner, after a short rest, had to face Seligson in the finals, but was too worn out to make a determined bid for victory.

Wolf and Chase, paired in the doubles, offered spectacular playing throughout their contests, and fell only before Appel and Thomas of Princeton in the finals of a fiercely-fought encounter, 5-7, 6-2, 11-9, 2-6, 6-4. In their first round match, the Williams doubles team won easily from Okerbloom and Brown of Ohio State, 6-1, 6-1. The second round provided much greater difficulty, Kardon and Stanger of Pennsylvania succumbing only after a hard struggle in three sets, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2. Custer of Cornell, whom Wolf defeated in the singles, was paired with Hene to oppose the Purple team in the semi-finals. After two sets of hard playing, the Williams entrants won again, 6-2, 7-5. Following this came the match with the Princeton team, Appel and Thomas, who were victorious in three out of five sets, clinching second place in the tourney for the Tigers.

Generating Brain Power

BRAIN power, not horsepower, is the chief operating requirement of the electrical industry.

This requirement must be continuously anticipated to provide leaders for the future. Accordingly, each year, more than 400 picked college graduates come to the General Electric Company for a post-graduate course in electrical science.

With a faculty including inventors and engineers of international distinction, something more than electrical knowledge is imparted to these young men. Here they also find inspiration which prepares them for leadership in this electrical age.

Lacrosse Squad Practices

Preliminary lacrosse practice has taken place daily in the indoor baseball cage for the past week, with a squad of 15 men, headed by captain Collins, reporting to Coach Bellerose. Although several members will not be available until after this week because of participation in swimming and wrestling, it was thought best to round the squad into shape as early as possible to prepare for a stiff schedule, which opens against Union on April 27. Practice has consisted chiefly in handling the stick, throwing the ball, and learning the fundamentals of the game.

freshmen by swimming the 50-yard dash in the good time of 26.7 seconds. Schenectady was more successful in the individual medley, however, as Budymas overtook Swayze in the last few strokes to win a close event. The yearlings continued to add to their advantage in the next two events, as McMahon was not pressed to win the 200-yard swim in 2.31.2, with Fenton in second position, and Kerr and Smith also took both places in the backstroke. The Schenectady team rallied at this point, however, and took first place in each of the next three events, Barrett capturing the dives by a ten-point margin, Maney swimming to a fast victory in the 100-yard freestyle in 1.02.6, and Budymas making short work of the breast stroke. Pierce, Swift, and Taylor opened a long lead in the relay, but Kerr, the Freshman anchor man, was disqualified for leaving the mark too soon, and the race was awarded to the visitors.

The summary of the meet:

150-yd. medley relay—Won by Williams (Smith, Sidley, Downs); Schenectady H. S., second.

50-yd. dash—Won by Kerr (W);

He then turned to a consideration of the revolutionary changes in the whole subject brought about by the World War, showing that England has lost her old isolation and that the United States is rapidly assuming her former position in world affairs. In closing he mentioned the 100-year old agreement between the United States and Canada, reducing the navies on the Great Lakes to mere police forces, and expressed the hope that something similar will be effected between England and America as the first step in disarmament, emphasizing the assistance toward this end which can be rendered by public interest in and discussion of this subject.

Critic Scores 'Dragon'

The scene in which the king wishes to take his after-dinner nap, but is interrupted by the frantic tale of the nurse and then the solicitous voice of a second wife, may well be placed beside the arbor scene in Much Ado About Nothing and the double-lovers scene of Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme for sheer comic delight.

The setting was adequate. As the curtain opened one was taken in pleasantly, but the set did not catch the spirit of the play.

The costumes were, all in all, well suited to the play. Those worn by Sarj, the aunts, the king, and Dall Glic were well conceived. The nurse wore an admirable head-dress, but her costume seemed to be out of keeping. The costumer evidently realized this and added a few colorful spots which did no good. One felt that the costumes had not been chosen with regard to each other. The dragon itself left one longing for the monster of the Yale Puppeteers of a year ago. The sets and costumes were brilliant in color but they did not create a beautiful picture.

The most enjoyable part of the play was that of the nurse. She had a beautiful voice. She played her part vividly, and yet with restraint. Both the Queen and Princess might learn how to act from her. Elizabeth Zacharey, as the nurse, was excellent throughout. The King, taken by Harrison Dawd, was, in many places, as amusing as Lady Gregory intends him to be, but the brogue and poor enunciation caused many of his lines to be completely lost. Elizabeth Zacharey was practically the only member of the group equal to the brogue; too much can not be said of her performance. "The Aunt with the green mitts" in playing up to her costume, gave a clever bit of acting. (The costume may have been the Queen's difficulty). The Dall Glic of Jack Rennick was excused solely by his two charming coat-tails. Little need be said of the other performances.

The production as a whole lacked unity and harmony of conception. The Queen played in one manner, the Nurse in another. In a word, the production seemed to have grown, undirected as a whole. There were undoubtedly fine hits of direction, but in details only. The director had not definitely conceived the play. If he did, it was done so inconsistently.

Yet we enjoyed seeing The Dragon and should like to see the Itney Players do A Trip to Scarborough could we be sure of one or two things.

Dinner Will Be Held on Tuesday at Commons Club—150 Boys Are Expected

(Courtesy of D. K. Strong '29)

Plans for the Big Brother Banquet to be held next Tuesday evening at 6.30 in the Commons Club dining room are nearly complete according to Strong '30, chairman of the W. C. A. committee in charge of the affair. About 150 out of the 225 boys who make up the total enrollment of the Williamstown Boys' Club have been invited, and the committee is now turning its efforts toward the college body from which 150 hosts will be chosen. The three speakers of the evening will be Lloyd D. Rohrbach '29, president of the W. C. A., president of 1929, and member of Gargyle, who will speak for the college and the W. C. A.; Richard Treadway of the Boy Scout Troop who will speak for the boys; and Willard French, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee of the W. C. A., while Dexter K. Strong '29 will act as toastmaster. A menu has been planned which will make the gathering a real banquet, and a program of musical and humorous entertainment is being arranged. The charge will be two dollars for a host and guest.

No boy will be allowed to attend unless he is accompanied by a "big brother" from the college whose guest he will be for the evening. Students who desire to act as hosts may sign up any time before Sunday on lists now being circulated through the college. These lists are in charge of the 16 members of the Big Brother Banquet Committee which has one representative from each of the 15 fraternities and from the Commons Club. These committee members are:

Beta Theta Pi	W. H. Collins '29

PROF. COLE TALKS ON PLAGIARISM OF IDEAS

Tuesday Lecture Shows Value of Nature Study in March of Machine Age

"There has been a widespread appropriation by man of ideas and systems long existent in the book of nature around him", said Associate Professor E. C. Cole of the Biology Department in his talk on "Studies in Plagiarism" delivered as part of the Tuesday Lecture course in the Thompson Physical Laboratory last Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Cole devoted the major part of his lecture to citing some of the many instances where mechanical ideas new to man have been used by various members of the plant and animal kingdoms for thousands of years.

Taking up first our principal tools, he showed that certain wasps use a pebble for a hammer, that the sawflies have a regular saw, that the ichneumon flies are equipped with drills, and that the common garden snail has a file for a tongue. Then Professor Cole turned to the more recent conquests of the earth, the air, and the deeps, giving several examples of borrowed ideas in each. The well-known vacuum cup non-skid automobile tires have their prototype in the suction cups by which the squid or octopus grasps and holds its prey, and the all-important idea of lubrication has long been used by many animals, even the lowly worm. Artificial silk is made today by forcing a sticky liquid through minute holes into a medium in which it congeals, exactly the same process as that developed by the spiders and silkworms.

Our conquest of the air was made only after much study of the birds, and we (Continued on Fifth Page)

Wesleyan Ties Purple by Court Win Over Amherst

Coming from behind with a rush in the second half of the last "Little Three" game with Amherst Wednesday night at Middletown, the Wesleyan basketball team overcame an 11-point lead piled up by the Sabrinas in the opening period to win by a 43-30 score and thereby shatter Williams' hopes of being undisputed winner of the 1929 basketball race. Negotiations between Coach Messer and the Wesleyan team for a tie-off on a neutral floor to break the tie failed to materialize due to the fact that the Wesleyan Faculty Advisory Committee has deemed it inadvisable that the two teams meet again this season.

The uphill victory registered over Amherst was made possible by the work of Forward Howard of the Cardinal and Black, who led his team's attack early in the second half. Almost single-handed he brought Wesleyan's score to 24 before Amherst had scored a point, and from then on the Lord Jeffs fell steadily behind. This victory made Wesleyan's "Little Three" record for the season three victories and one defeat, which is the same as that of the Purple. Wesleyan and Williams each having defeated the other on the home floor. Amherst was defeated decisively in all four games against the two teams.

BASKETBALL SEASON ENDS SUCCESSFULLY

Sweeping Victory Over Amherst in Final Game Gives Purple .667 Percentage

Ten victories, five defeats, and a tie with Wesleyan for the "Little Three" Championship Title make up the record of the 1929 Williams basketball team, which terminated its season last Saturday night with the gratifying triumph over Amherst. Starting with three easy victories, the quintet went through a season of ups and downs, winning when aroused and playing opponents of equal strength, losing hard fought games to superior teams, but playing poorly against weaker combinations.

After the games with Clark, R. P. I., and Brown, which the Purple won in short order, the team journeyed to New York where, playing on a strange and poorly lighted court, it lost a game to Columbia by the high score of 49-33. Directly following the Christmas vacation, St. Stephens came to Williamstown and won an unexpected victory in an overtime contest, though the next week the quintet settled into its stride to overwhelm Lafayette 53-30. M. A. C., Wesleyan, and New Hampshire fell before the Williams attack in the next three games, while Yale again turned the tide with a three point win. Recovering only slightly from the poor playing of the Eli game, the Purple managed to score a 32-20 victory over a weak Trinity five, four days later. At Amherst the following Saturday night, however, the team flashed its real power to win 38-21 and gain the lead in the Little Three race, which was speedily lost at Middletown the following week when Wesleyan took advantage of over-confidence to inflict a thorough beating on the Purple. Colgate, with one of the smoothest working teams seen in Williamstown in many years, continued the work of Wesleyan the next night when a 17 point lead was piled up against Williams. Aroused by these losses and led on by "Little three" and Trophy of Trophies hopes, the team effected a comeback against Amherst in the final game to smother the Lord Jeffs 43-26.

Outstanding in the victories of the season are the games with Brown, R. P. I., and M. A. C.; the first because the Bruins conquered both Wesleyan and Amherst, furnishing an interesting comparative score in each case, the second because R. P. I. later in the season defeated St. Stephens in two games, and the third because the Aggies have since defeated Harvard and other strong teams. The Purple's best game was probably the one played against Amherst at Amherst when with a sudden flashing attack, the team ran up a 17 point lead over a surprised and bewildered Sabrin five, which never even had a chance to rally.

Against St. Stephens Williams played its poorest game when, lacking the services of the regular guards, Alexander and Cuddeback, its attack failed to function almost (Continued on Fifth Page)

BASEBALL PLAYERS START WINTER WORK

Daily Work in Cage Under Fox to Determine 15 to Train One Week in Virginia

Baseball practice was started in earnest this week when a squad of 25 or 30 responded to Coach Fox's call for candidates, and the men are now working out daily in the cage in anticipation of a schedule which is characterized as "not quite as hard as last year's, with prospects for a more successful season". Helping Coach Fox with the battery are Coach Caldwell and Joe ("Iron Man") McGinnity, famous National League pitcher from 1899 to 1909.

The spring training trip this year will be to Virginia. The city where the team will locate has not been decided as yet, but in all probability it will be near Charlottesville, so that the University of Virginia nine may be played in practice games. Fifteen men, to be picked soon before vacation, will make the trip, as well as Coaches Fox and Caldwell and Manager Fowle. The contingent will leave from New York the day after vacation starts and return one day before classes start. A special car has been chartered.

Of the 26 men who are now practicing daily, 12 are veterans, and a few more members of last year's squad will report with the termination of the swimming season a week from today. Ten members of the 1931 team have come out, and in addition to this five men not out in other years have reported. These are Bright, Cavanagh, Doherty, Eiszner, and R. Williams. Since the end of the basketball season last Saturday, Alexander and Thoms have joined the squad, both of them veterans of last year's nine.

There are seven candidates for the pitching staff, Bright, Doherty, Dunlop, Hurd, Poissant, Singmaster, and Starkey, (Continued on Sixth Page)

Cuddeback Is Elected Captain of Basketball

Charles Van I. Cuddeback '30 of Port Jervis, New York, veteran guard of the quintet for the past two seasons, was elected captain of next year's varsity basketball team at a meeting of the squad last Thursday afternoon. Starting as a substitute in his Freshman year, Cuddeback improved steadily during the next two years, taking Alexander's place on the team in the middle of last season when the latter was unable to play and pairing with him this year to form one of the strongest defense walls the Purple has had in several years.

Besides playing basketball Cuddeback has been active on the campus as Circulation Manager of the Purple Cow, Assistant Intramural Manager, Treasurer of his class, and a member of the Purple Key Society. At Andover where he prepared, he participated in class athletics, while at Williamstown he played Freshman football his first year and then turned his attention to basketball.

Springfield Meet Today Last Home Mat Contest

In its second and last home meet of the season, the Williams wrestling team is scheduled to encounter the experienced and successful wrestlers of Springfield College this afternoon at 4.00 o'clock in the Lasell Gymnasium. Counting M. I. T. and Alfred among its recent victims, Springfield will close a season of more than average success against a Purple team which has yet to win a meet and which is still being altered to find the most effective combination.

With added experience and training many of the difficulties which the green Williams wrestlers had to contend with in the opening meets have been remedied. Among the interesting matches this afternoon should be that of the respective captains, Lisle of Williams and Quimby, who wrestle in the 135-pound class and have both been consistent point winners. McIntosh will appear in the Purple line-up for the first time, taking Spencer's place in the 125-pound class, and Lobo will again be in the 165-pound division.

HOCKEY TEAM TAKES 8 CONTESTS, LOSES 5

Purple Sextet Wins Series With Amherst 4-1; Howe, Brigham, Langmaid Star

Although the credit sheet of the Williams hockey team reads only eight victories to five defeats during a season that started with an exhibition series against Amherst during the gala holiday period at Lake Placid and ended with a brilliant performance against Princeton in one of the finest hockey spectacles ever witnessed in Williamstown, the total of 43 points scored to its opponents' 22 indicates a fairly successful season. In spite of the most favorable conditions in years, which forced the cancellation of the Colby game only, the warm-weather jinx made enough trouble to prevent the sextet from taking the ice more than 37 times in three months, including the series at Placid and all other games.

Making use of every available opportunity, however, Coach Bellerose developed a sextet in which Brigham ably filled the pivot position left vacant by the graduation of Blaney, Watters developed into a goalie that solved the problem of providing a substitute for the dependable Hutehins, and Langmaid came up from last year's Freshman six to cinch right defense early in the season with his fast, rugged play. Captain Howe continued his fine work at the other back position, while Hoyt and Wheeler, two fast juniors who saw service last year, flanked Brigham to make up the first string line.

From the start, the team showed smooth pass-work on the offense, and tenacious poke-checking and body-blocking on the defense. Calling on the forward line and the backs to show both these qualities, the system of alternating the two units, continually on the attack was used throughout (Continued on Sixth Page)

SWIMMERS TRAVEL TO AMHERST TODAY

Victorious Team Wins 'Little Three' Title, Held by Williams for Past Two Years

With the outcome of the meet deciding the "Little Three" Swimming Champions, since both teams have defeated Wesleyan, the Williams swimmers journey to Amherst to encounter the Purple and White natators at 2.45 p. m. today in the Pratt Gymnasium pool. If Williams is to win and thus secure the "Little Three" title, which it has held for two years, the Purple team will have to roll up a lead of more than eight points before the final event of the meet—the 200-yard relay which provides eight points for the victorious team and which Amherst is almost sure to win.

Since the meet is to take place in the Amherst pool the Purple and White swimmers have a slight advantage, as their tank is of peculiar construction and the times of visitors are invariably cut down. First places in most of the events can be picked before the meet, and the deciding factors that determine the winning team will be the little upsets in second and third place. The meet will doubtlessly be closely contested and, with the winner becoming "Little Three" champions, both teams can be counted upon to exert themselves to the utmost and probably to turn in the best times of the season.

Captain Schott is expected to find little difficulty in winning first in both his speciality, the 200-yard breast stroke, and in the 300-yard individual medley. Healy and Kleene of Amherst will battle for second in the medley, while Gregg of Williams and Bill of Amherst should provide a fine race for second in the breast stroke. Angleman, the star dash man for Amherst, has a slight advantage over Higginbotham in both the 50 and 100, but the upsets of last week in both of these dashes may be duplicated. Wolcott will probably swim with Higginbotham in the 100, while Davis will be his partner in the 50.

The outcome of the medley relay race will be close, although the Williams trio has turned in slightly better time than the Amherst team. Kleene of Amherst, who has made excellent time in the 150-yard backstroke, will probably take first in that event with little difficulty, while Van der Bogert and Birnie should take second and third. Burgess, who performed creditably against Wesleyan last Saturday in the 440, can probably edge out Webbe of Amherst in the distance event, while Wolcott will give a strong bid for second.

The divers of both teams lost first and (Continued on Fifth Page)

LEHMAN CUP CONTEST STARTS MARCH 18TH

Scoring For High Jump and Shot Put Revised—Potato Race Eliminated

Starting next Monday, March 18th, with the 60-yard low hurdles, the first section of the 50-yard Dash, and the trials in the 440-yard Dash, the 30th annual board track meet in competition for the two cups offered by H. H. Lehman '99 will be continued on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday of that week. All undergraduates are eligible for competition, and Coach Seely requests the entrance of all men interested in track work, even though they may wish to take part only in a few chosen events.

Several changes have been made in the program for this year, including the elimination of the potato race and a revision in the point scoring in the shot put and high jump. Under the new rules, the point score for the shot put and the high jump will be the same as that used for the quarter, half, and mile runs, with ten seven, four, two, and one points being awarded for the first five places in order. One point was awarded formerly for every inch over four feet six inches in the high jump and for every six inches beyond 29 feet in the shot put. The first five men in the high and low hurdles and the two sections of the 50-yard dash will receive five, three and one-half, two, one, and one-half points respectively, the same total as last year.

The 60-yard low hurdles, the trials in the quarter mile, and the first section of the 50-yard dash, as previously stated, will be held on the first day of the meet. The high jump will occupy the entire second (Continued on Fifth Page)

WE WHO GET SLAPPED

The things a man laughs at are usually fairly reliable indications of the sort of man who does the laughing. Not infrequently we pass judgments on our fellow-creatures by observing their various reactions to such devices as puns, risqué stories, delicate bon mots, hair-trigger repartee, pie throwing, and the other forms of practical joke, including the well-known banana peel incident. Every group and social class has its own peculiar and distinguishing rules for laughter: they are a part of the etiquette of life. A college audience, for instance, is not supposed to guffaw at slapstick comedy, although it is quite permissible to let loose at certain heart-throbbing, soul-stirring, or hair-raising scenes. Others, with a less sophisticated or less buoyant point of view, may find this somewhat annoying because it seems so inexplicable; but as a matter of fact undergraduates, packed in a moving picture theatre, usually display an excellent sense of humor. If they tend to find the ridiculous in the sacred, one may safely conclude that there is something wrong with the sacred. For it is not often that youthful appreciation of the funny becomes the snicker of a travelling salesman; it is at least genuine, and it is often spontaneous. But let no movie hero who desires to preserve his dignity in Williamstown refer to his horse as "Old Pal"; let no poor working girl expect sympathy from this quarter by sobbing "Mother", "Ma", or "Mammy".

The undergraduate does not always laugh when he should. For example, he pretends to see nothing funny in those sloppy love-scenes with their tremendous passions and interminable kisses. A few brave wise-cracks may be contributed out of the dark, but the general atmosphere is one of almost reverent admiration—and not a little envy. Even so, college movie audiences are probably the most intelligent in the world.

Unfortunately, however, there seems to be a discrepancy between an appreciation of the funny and the production of it. In vain one searches the pages of college comic magazines for some evidence of that supreme wit and humor which our educated laughter has promised. But even the undergraduate (and let this be said to his credit) is rarely caught laughing at his own funny sheets. He simply can't.

Mr. E. E. Whiting, correspondent for the Springfield Republican, has evidently discovered that something is wrong, and in his latest "Boston Letter" he fills considerable space by deploring the situation. But we are not quite convinced that he knows what the situation is. Using as his springboard the enforced resignation of the editor of the Boston University Bean Pot, because of an indecent cover, Mr. Whiting takes a reckless dive into the shallow pond of Younger Generation Degeneracy. After crashing his head on rock bottom, he quite naturally sees some strange things; if they were founded in fact, his conclusions would be most alarming. For example: "The college undergraduate publication suffers from a perverted sense of proportion and a sacrifice of simplicity. The net result of all this appears to be a non-college publication wearing a college name, which is one of the magazines you don't bring into your home if you have young children whose morals and decency you care to protect". And furthermore: "Parents, glimpsing these evidences of bad taste, wonder about sending their boys and girls away to school—to learn what?" And finally: "American colleges are suffering from tainted atmosphere."

One need not point out the fallacy of judging colleges by what is, with very little question, their worst aspect; nor need we worry much about sweeping assertions that are based on rare and isolated cases. If Mr. Whiting had really cared to help us out, he would have criticized not the indecent character of undergraduate humor, but the indecent lack of it in those publications specifically dedicated to the laugh. He would have had a word to say about puns, about hackneyed "He-She" jokes, and about a disgraceful divorce between illustrations and captions. These things are faults, but they are harmless ones. Mr. Whiting must mean something else when he talks about the perversion of innocent children and the contamination of college atmosphere. But as he himself observes, "How easy it is to capture a little attention by being offensive!"

COMPETITIONS NOT CRUEL

Editorial on Extra Work Untrue Say Managers

To the Editor of THE RECORD:
Dear Sir:

Inasmuch as it is felt that the editorial printed in the March 5 issue of THE WILLIAMS RECORD is of such nature as to paint a rather lamentable picture of athletic managerial competitions, some of the "generally officious" managers wish to defend an institution which, while having its weaknesses, has existed and proved reliable for a good many years.

It has not been and is not the policy of managers in charge of competitions to encourage their competitors to spend undue attention and time on work which is not assigned. Quite obviously the theory of so-called "extra work" is to encourage initiative on the part of the compet and give them opportunity to bring about changes which will increase the general efficiency of the organizations which they hope to manage some day. Each of the athletic associations seeks to improve. To bring about this end more readily the suggestions and efforts of the competitors are sought. The time spent on improvements and innovations is incidental to the main purpose. Excessive hours are discouraged by the managers. It is how the competitor spends his time that is important. And since a competitor cannot go ahead in carrying out his schemes until granted permission by his manager there is not a great chance of his uselessly spending time on unimportant items.

Contrary to the impression created by the editorial, then, competitions are run with a certain leeway allowed, by which the individual can show his abilities for observing inefficiencies and for proposing means of correction, and not because a manager must go through a period of intense manual labor with time spent the index of his suitability for gaining the office he covets. The only "Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Compets" can be formed by the compets themselves. But in any competition, if one earnestly desires to win from one's rival, does one deliberately restrain oneself? Can anyone limit the time a student seeking scholastic honors spends on his work? One can advise—the advice may or may not be heeded. The professor judges, not on the time the student spends on his work, but on the results. The case is closely analogous to that of competitions. If the honors can be gained and the man prove himself the best without the expenditure of time and energy, well and good. Everyone is satisfied.

Managerial competitions at Williams have been a cause for debate, on this ground and on others. They are by no means perfect and no one realizes this more than the men who have been through them, successfully and otherwise. But until the better plan is proposed we champion the present system as one which serves its purpose well. And investigation will show the present managers are the poorest sort of snow shovellers, masons, and carpenters.

Picking the most capable men, from the standpoint of initiative, interest, and (Continued on Sixth Page)

PRESENT SYSTEM OF RUSHING IS APPROVED

Hamilton, Sellery, and Robertson
Gain Decision in Freshman Class Debate

Arguing on the negative side of the question: Resolved, That this House approves the proposed new plan for fraternity rushing, Robertson, Sellery, and Hamilton '32, with Walter as alternate, won the first freshman debate of the year which was held in Chapin Hall last Tuesday afternoon, by a 118-72 vote of the audience. The proposed plan, which Goldblatt, West, and Thornton, with Mark as alternate, upheld, suggests that fraternity rushing be done in Williams College a week before the commencement of curricular activities in September, and that each house entertain all of the freshmen during that week.

After giving a brief sketch of the history of the tradition of holding monthly Freshman mass meetings, this being the first one this year, Professor Licklider, the chairman of the Department of Public Speaking, introduced the speakers in turn, and also announced that the annual Freshman declamation contest would constitute the next mass meeting, to be held early in April, at which two prizes, offered by the Board of Trustees, for excellence in public speaking, will be awarded.

Goldblatt, the first speaker for the affirmative showed that the present plan of fraternity rushing was not democratic, and did not make for peace since it was a compromise between college and rushing, and was disadvantageous to the freshmen, the faculty, and the fraternities. Robertson, speaking for the negative, then stated that the present system has been the growth of 15 years in Williams College, and needs no change, meanwhile pointing out that it gives the freshmen and the fraternities a better chance to get acquainted, and also prevents "cut-throat rushing".

West, the second affirmative speaker then stated that the proposed system, with one solid week devoted entirely to rushing would be fairer, more systematic, and democratic. Sellery, who disapproved of the plan, then declared that the new plan would not give everybody an equal chance; and that there was no great loss of scholastic work during the present rushing week.

Thornton, the final speaker for the affirmative, said that studies were more important than rushing and that marks were decidedly lower during rushing week than at any other time of the year, and therefore proved that the proposed plan was logically worthwhile. Hamilton disproved the statement of his opponent by stating that the authentic records in the dean's office showed that there was no depreciation of marks during the rushing period, and that by holding the rushing a week before the opening of the rest of the college, when neither the freshmen nor the fraternities knew each other hardly at all, four years of uncongenial companionship might result, which would surely be a "colossal blunder".

The negative rebuttal, given by Robertson, showed that it was too great a load on each house to entertain 250 men, and that men who are unavoidably late in entering college, are out of luck, while the present plan is as a whole fairer to the freshmen, the houses, and the college. Thornton, giving a rebuttal for the affirmative showed how the democratic ideal of the proposed plan is a progressive step, and stated that in spite of the records in the dean's office, the college curriculum is "sadly disrupted" during rushing week.

Interfraternity Relays Are Held in Lasell Pool

Phi Sigma Kappa and the Commons Club, by victories over Delta Phi and Pi Gamma Delta Wednesday afternoon, have reached the final round in the National League bracket of the interfraternity swimming relays. The only match scheduled in the American League, which was to decide whether Chi Psi or Psi Upsilon will meet Phi Delta Theta in the finals of that League, was postponed when Chi Psi was unable to swim on account of the interfraternity basketball game which was going on at the same time.

In the first few laps of a 300-yard relay, Phi Sigma Kappa, represented by Andersen, Willmott, Lawton, Holbrook, B. Hales, and Phelps established a lead over Delta Phi which was increased gradually until Phelps finished ahead of Engle in the slow time of 3:13.2. In the second race between Phi Gamma Delta and the Commons Club, the Commons Club team composed of Phillips, Lawson, Ehleider, Eyster, Groceek, and Webster won by half a lap in 3:10.7.

Frosh Swimmers Face Final Test at Amherst

Accompanying the varsity swimming team to Amherst, the Freshman swimmers will line up against the Lord Jeff freshmen this afternoon in the last, and probably the hardest meet of the year. The Amherst yearlings have met with two reverses recently, losing early in the week to a powerful Wesleyan team, 47-34, and yielding again last Saturday, this time by a single point, to a Deerfield aggregation that was beaten 36-26 by Williams; but they have strong men in the 440, the breast stroke, and the individual medley, and are likely to carry the battle to the final relay.

With the exception of a few minor changes, the 1932 team will present the same front to Amherst that has been successful on two previous occasions this year. Kerr, swimming in the backstroke and the dashes, has been the only outstanding performer on a team that is notable more for balance and composite strength than for individual stars. The freshmen have shown consistently better time, however in the relay and dash events, an advantage which may prove decisive in a meet that is sure to be otherwise closely contested. Amherst has an excellent distance man in Strohmeier, who has been covering 440 yards in 6.14, another good swimmer in the breast stroke, Spargo, whose time has averaged about 2.53, and a versatile man in Myron, who swims in four events and has been amassing points in the individual medley and the dives.

The Freshman line-up:
50-yd. dash—Kerr, Swayze or Taylor.
100-yd. dash—McMahon, Kerr or Taylor.
300-yd. medley relay—Stevens, Pierce, Downs.
300-yd. individual medley—Swift, Swayze or Ripple.
440-yd. swim—McMahon, Fenton or Stevens.
150-yd. backstroke—Kerr, Taylor or Smith.
200-yd. breast stroke—Sidley, Swayze or Ripple.
Relay—Swift, Downs, McMahon, Swayze, Taylor, Kerr.

'CHI PSI' WINNER OF COURT CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeats Phi Gamma Delta in Final 24-11; Commons Club Still Leads in Total

Although handicapped by the loss of Scott, a regular guard, the Chi Psi intramural basketball team drew ahead in the last half of the game to win the College championship from Phi Gamma Delta by a score of 24 to 11 Wednesday afternoon. The 20 points gained by this victory, although not enough to threaten the Commons Club's 76½ point total in the race for the interfraternity trophy of trophies, still puts Chi Psi in second place with 69 points, exactly one-half a point ahead of Phi Gamma Delta.

Phi Gamma Delta was first to score when Heine tallied late in the first period which ended with that team holding a 3-0 lead. In the second quarter however, baskets by Bersbach and Clark started a see-saw of scoring which left Chi Psi with a 7-6 advantage at the half. Later a sudden attack by J. Shoff and Clark broke through Phi Gamma Delta's defense and throughout the rest of the game Chi Psi's lead steadily increased, especially in the last period when every member of the team made a field goal to raise the score to its final count at 24 to 11. The polished team play of the Chi Psi five, particularly of the Shoff brothers, and Clark's basket shooting ability were responsible for the victory which Heine, backed up by Wolf and Herriek, could not prevent.

Phi Gamma Delta had advanced to the finals Tuesday afternoon by eliminating Theta Delta Chi 34-14 in the second game between the two teams, the first having been declared illegal because of an official's error. Beside raising Chi Psi to second place in the interfraternity standing, the basketball results have not otherwise changed the order of the first five houses. The total scores to date are as follows:

	Previous Score	Basketball	Total
Commons Club	67½	9	76½
Chi Psi	49	20	69
Phi Gamma Delta	58½	10	68½
Phi Delta Theta	56	5	61
Delta Kappa Epsilon	53	6	59
Delta Phi	50	5	55
Zeta Psi	46	9	55
Phi Sigma Kappa	49	5	54
Sigma Phi	46	5	51
Delta Upsilon	41	8	49
Delta Psi	42	5	47
Kappa Alpha	40	5	45
Psi Upsilon	40	5	45
Beta Theta Pi	37	6	43
Theta Delta Chi	32	8	40
Alpha Delta Phi	34	5	39

Freshman Five Victorious in Seven of Eight Starts

Downing the Amherst Freshman five in Lasell Gymnasium last Saturday evening by 32-18, and so involving the 'Little Three' teams in a triple tie for the championship, the Freshman quintet brought to a close one of the most successful campaigns of recent years. Although its record is marred by the defeat administered by the Wesleyan freshmen two weeks ago, the freshmen won seven out of their eight games and numbered among their victims several of the strongest high school teams in the vicinity.

The freshmen opened their season with two unofficial games on their home court, in which they had little difficulty in downing the Williamstown and Adams High School teams. The first official test of the season came at the hands of St. Joseph's High School of Pittsfield, who presented some of the stiffest opposition which the freshmen encountered this year. Their attack, however, was broken up successfully by an almost impenetrable defense which proved the best feature of the Freshman quintet and carried them to rather easy victories in succeeding weeks over Holyoke and Drury High Schools and the Deerfield Academy team.

In meeting Wesleyan at Middletown, the freshmen played their first game away from their home court, and had great difficulty in getting their attack organized on the limited playing space of the Fayerweather court. The handicap of the court together with a considerable amount of overconfidence from which they were then suffering, brought about their downfall, and they lost their first game of the season by 32-30. That their defeat may be considered in the light of an upset is substantiated by the decisive win which they scored the following week over the Amherst quintet, who had just conquered Wesleyan on their own floor at Middletown.

Captain Good at left forward was the outstanding player of the season, and should put up a good fight next year for the Varsity berth left open by the graduation of Captain Betham. The playing of the other four men on the team, Engle at the other forward, Fowle at center, and Cosgrove and Swinchart at the guards, together with Fincke, who often replaced Swinchart, was about on a par and considerably stronger on the defense than on the offense. There is little chance that any of them will be able to displace the remaining four members of the present Varsity, who have played together throughout three years here, but they should provide ample reserve material for next season.

March 'Graphic' Will Be First Under New Board

Five short stories, three poems, and two essays will compose the subject matter of the March issue of the Graphic and Literary Monthly which is slated to appear shortly. Waters of Babylon, a short story by Prescott '30, is the outstanding article among the prose work of this number, which will be the first put out by the 1930 Board.

Other short stories which will be featured are Lure and War, by Erskine '32; Ahasuerus, Cursed of God, by Walter '32; A Perfect Crime, by Jenks '31; The Story of Harold Westcott, by Allen '30; Which Way Parnassus, by T. Wilson '30, is a musical criticism, and A Psycho-Medical Treatise, by Baxter '30, is a light essay. The poems consist of Recollection by Ovre '30; Songs of Sorrow, by Sellery '32; and Power, by Lakin '32.

New Post Office Awaits Congress' Appropriations

Permission for a new postoffice in Williamstown was recently given by the Postmaster-General, and its cost, $85,000, was included in the list of expenditures submitted to Congress on February 28. Letting of contracts will take place as soon as the necessary funds are appropriated, and Mr. George Schryver, President of the local Board of Trade, promises that in a year or two a handsome structure will rise on the Spring street lot donated by the town for this purpose.

Three years ago the deplorable jams of students about meal times were brought to the notice of the district Congressman, Allen T. Treadway, by local business men who have been trying to secure a new building, and they offered for it the nearly lot of the Williamstown Boys' Club. "Williamstown is unusually fortunate", stated Mr. Schryver, one of the most active backers of the proposal, "in receiving a much larger sum than is being given to other towns of its size, because the Post Office Department has adopted a particularly generous attitude toward school and college communities."

'Deutscher Verein'

Moving pictures of Germany, taken by members of the Deutscher Verein were shown at a meeting of the organization, held at the Phi Delta Theta house last Thursday evening. After refreshments had been served, a short eulogy was given of Carl Schurz, the 100th anniversary of whose birth was celebrated on March 2.

Four Enter Union Track Meet

Williams will be represented in the third annual Union College board track and field games at Schenectady Saturday afternoon by Dougherty, Goodbody, Lenihan, and Sufferin '31. Dougherty will compete in both hurdles events, Goodbody the novice mile, Lenihan, the fifty-yard sprint, and Sufferin, the two-mile handicap run.

F. W. FISKE '72 TELLS OF HIS LONG CAREER

Teacher of Many Prominent Men and Women Studied Under Mark Hopkins

Frederick W. Fiske, '72, of St. Paul, Minn., who has spent 56 of his more than 80 years in the teaching profession, recently told some of his reminiscences of his long and distinguished career in which he taught numbers of men and women who have since become prominent in every walk of life, business, law, the diplomatic service, banking, education, railroading, medicine, and society. Among his former pupils are Robert Olds, Under Secretary of State, Dr. W. B. Cannon, physiologist at Harvard, Marshall Thompson, dean of the Pittsburgh Law School, and John W. Riddle, former Minister to Russia and Argentina, as well as many who are prominent in every line of endeavor in St. Paul.

While at Williams Mr. Fiske was one of the editors of Vidette, the College weekly of those days, when he formed a fast friendship with Solomon B. Griffin who was for forty years managing editor of the Springfield Republican. He recalls having a narrow escape from entering the newspaper business himself when a letter making him an offer failed to reach him, and he took up teaching at the Greylock Institute here instead. Among his pupils during his eight years there was Bliss Perry who has since become well-known as an educator and is a Trustee of the College. Mr. Fiske's class was the last to be graduated under the presidency of Mark Hopkins, whom he remembers well.

Moving to St. Paul in 1881, he has lived there ever since, with the exception of a year and a half. After several years of teaching in various high schools there, he joined in the founding of the St. Paul Academy where he is now teaching Latin, Greek, and mathematics. Despite his advanced age he refuses to stay home even in the severest blizzards and meets his classes on time. His memory is quite clear and he can recall an incident 68 years ago when he played hockey from school with another boy, hiding all day in the cupola of the town hall and throwing down papers on which were the words "Vote for Lincoln".

Covell Is Elected 1930 Outing Club President

Charles Van Orden Covell '30 was elected 1930 President of the Williams Outing Club at a meeting of that organization held on Thursday evening, March 7. The other officers chosen by the W. O. C. at the same time were Gabriel Bernhard Fedde '30, Vice-President; John Cannon '31, Secretary; and Jackson Edwin Guernsey '31, Treasurer.

Covell prepared at Chestnut Hill School, in Philadelphia. At present he is advertising manager of The Record, assistant manager of lacrosse, and a member of the boys' work committee of the W. C. A. The Outing Club also announced that Professor E. I. Shepard has accepted the position of comptroller of the Club for next year.

Prep School Conference

William C. Park '30 acted as representative of the W. C. A. at the annual New England Prep School Conference in New Haven on March 1-3. The purpose of the conference was to discuss with secondary school men the transition period between prep school and college, and to present the viewpoint of both sides. There were delegates at the conference of seven New England colleges: Brown, Amherst, Yale, Williams, Dartmouth, M. A. C., and Harvard; about 125 boys were present from the leading preparatory schools of the New England States. The principal speakers were Leslie Glens, Mr. Kinsolving, pastor of Amherst College, Professor Calhoun of the Yale Divinity School, and "Firro" Green, captain of the Yale 1928 football team.

day, Tuesday, and will be followed by the 60-yard high hurdles, the shot put, and the half mile, on Wednesday. The trackmen will be idle on Thursday and the final events, the quarter mile and mile and the second section of the 50-yard dash, will be run off on Friday.

An entry list will be posted on the bulletin board in Lasell Gymnasium this Monday, and all men wishing to enter are requested to sign up for all those events in which they are interested. Since the Lehman Meet offers one of his few opportunities to observe any new candidates for the Varsity team in competition, Coach Seeley urges that all men who wish to try out enter at least those events in which they hope to compete this spring.

have very good examples of both the monoplane, in the birds, and the biplane, in the dragonflies. Every fish has to be a complete submarine, while certain other animals have developed methods of diving comparable to the recently invented artificial lung. In summing up, Dr. Cole expressed the opinion that man should be congratulated rather than condemned for plagiarizing his ideas from the world of nature. "Man will show the degree of his shrewdness by the care with which he studies the structures and activities of competing organisms. He may well spend much time in investigating the plants and animals around him, with a view to appropriating those ideas which, adequately used, will give him leisure for the enrichment of his own life." At the conclusion of his talk he exhibited several lantern slides illustrating various points he had mentioned.

Basketball Season Ends Successfully (Continued from First Page)

entirely, though the struggle was prolonged through two extra periods by the individual efforts of the Purple players. Columbia, Colgate, and Yale were stronger teams than Williams, winning in steady hard-played games, though the last of these barely escaped with a three point triumph. The Wesleyan game at Wesleyan, however, was a battle between equally strong teams with the decision going to Wesleyan because the Cardinal and Black team fought for it from the first minute on.

Leading the Williams players both in floor work and shooting throughout the season was Captain Betham, who averaged eight points a game, making a total of 123 in the 15 contests. It was his passing ability, however, that made him invaluable in the offense, while his quick getaway kept at least one of the opponents guards occupied in every game. Next to Betham in scoring power comes Willmott who first broke into the tally sheet in the Lafayette game and averaged better than six points a game from then on. The combination of Betham and Willmott made the two Amherst games the runaways they were for Williams with Betham shooting and passing, and Willmott following.

At center Allen played a difficult position well throughout the season, scoring six points a game on the average while working into the offense and defense with a precision which made many of the Purple victories the great triumphs they generally were. Bulwarks of the defense and prime movers of the offense were the veteran pair Alexander and Cuddeback, who steadied the teamwork and kept the Purple in the running in the defeats and shone in victory. Field, recruited from the Freshman team of last year also showed up well in many games, especially the one with Columbia when he scored five points after he had been substituted.

Backing up the first five and alternating in many of the early games were Thoms, Howse, and Fowle, forwards, Callaghan, center, and Ely and Denne, guards. To Thoms goes the credit for pulling the R. P. I. game out of the fire almost single handed when he sank six field goals for the Purple, while Howse and Fowle were always safe reliefs for the first two forwards. Callaghan was also a strong second center, and saved many scores when substituted for the tiring Allen. Denne and Ely were always to be counted on also when put in at guards.

With four of the first five players coming back next year and five of the substitutes remaining besides the additional players from the Freshman Squad, prospects look exceedingly bright at this time for another good team. With Captain-elect Cuddeback as floor general, Connel Caldwell will face next season with the best of possibilities.

second to Wesleyan, and the outcome of that event in this meet is uncertain. Shaw and Runo of Williams and Howe of Amherst are the entrants. The Purple and White relay team of Ling, Allen, Campbell, and Angelman has turned in better time than the Williams quartet of Gardner, Doughty, Davis, and Higginbotham; Coach Graham virtually concedes this event to Amherst, and counts upon taking enough points before the relay to offset a defeat in that event.

A summary of the entrants is as follows:

300-yd. medley relay—Williams: Davis, Schott, Doughty; Amherst: Kleene, Bill, Allen.

50-yd. freestyle—Williams: Higginbotham, Davis; Amherst: Angelman, Campbell.

George Young, British Diplomat, Discusses Problems and Policies of the Labor Party, Offering Solutions

"The Conservatives would put the general election, which has been set between the Derby and Ascot (races) in June, much earlier if they could, for there has been a strong swing in favor of Labor developing in the past few months", asserted Mr. George Young, British diplomat and ardent worker for the Labor Party, in an interview with a Record reporter last Sunday afternoon, in which he discussed British problems and the policies of the Labor Party. "It seems unlikely that any party will win a large majority in the House of Commons, but the present probability is a repetition of what happened in 1924 when the Labor Party was in power, though without a majority."

Questioned in regard to the possibility of an issue on protective tariff, which wrecked the Conservatives in 1923, he said, "There is a strong movement now in England in favor of protection. Straight free traders are to be found only among the Liberals, who have been reduced to insignificance. Opposition in the country, however, to a general tariff, especially taxation on food is so great that the present Conservative government, with the largest majority on record in both Houses of Parliament, has been unable to introduce protection, under the name of safeguarding, for a few quite unimportant items. If, however, the Labor Party should obtain a large majority, it will introduce protection for British labor, not in the form of a tariff, but rather in the form of state trading and state imports, so as to maintain a standard of wages, supplementing this by negotiating international regulation of labor conditions."

"The principal object of reconstituting state trading and state importing by government boards, as was done during the war", he explained, "is to restore British agriculture, which is at present more in need of help than is American agriculture. The British farmer must now pay a minimum wage to the farm worker, as enacted by the Labor Government of 1924, but he has no security in respect to prices or his produce. The refusal of the Conservatives thus far to give him protective tariff, a few weeks ago, caused a revolt of the farmers' Federation, which represents the farmers' vote that for a century has returned conservatives from the agricultural district. The Labor program proposes to help the farmer by fixing prices in stable products such as wheat, by state purchase of future fallen crops, and also by organizing his marketing to reduce the middle man's profits.

"With regard to Anglo-American relations", he went on to say, "the recent news of the deal between the Royal Shell Oil Company and Soviet Oil, and the consequent end of the price-cutting campaign between organized British and American interests is of importance to the future relations between the two nations. The rivalry between these immensely powerful oil interests has been reacting most dangerously on international relations. Resentment on the part of Shell at the success of Standard in securing the Russian surplus some time ago is supposed to have caused the raid upon Arcos (the Russian official organ of trade in London) and the rupture between Great Britain and Russia. While the competition between Shell and Standard for the Indian and Asiatic markets of supply has probably largely contributed to the anti-American attitude of the British Press, the British public will cheerfully pay the higher rate for their gasoline which has already resulted from the end of the price-cutting war, if this means an improvement in British relations with the Soviet Union on the one side and the United States on the other.

"With new governments coming into power on both sides of the Atlantic", he concluded with a pardonable show of confidence in his party, "this summer should offer an ideal opportunity for reaching mutual agreement and for expressing the common ideas and interests of the two peoples."

February Snowfall Unusual

"Meteorological observations made at the Williams College station show that the highest temperature during February was 47, on the 18th, and the lowest six below zero, on the 5th, and the average of 21.6 degrees makes the month slightly warmer than the average February", according to a statement issued by Professor Milham of the Astronomy Department. His statement also asserts that the total snowfall was 25.5 as against a normal of 16.1 inches, and that this has been surpassed only twice in 20 years. Weather reports have been made at Williams since 1816.

the season. As a result, the criss-cross advances of Howe and Langmaid, and the shooting power of both, accounted for 20 goals, while the forward wall, with its scoring strength centered in Brigham totaled 17 points. However, the 1-0 shut-out registered by Cornell and the 3-2 win gained by Middlebury may rightly be blamed on the Purple's failure to follow up their tries. In both these contests, the only real upsets of the season, Williams held the puck in enemy territory most of the time, but missed many chances to force it into the cage by neglecting to take the rebounds after a first try.

The three game series at Lake Placid resulted in two victories for Williams and one for Amherst. Before the crowds that gathered at the New York winter resort every year for the colorful Christmas-time carnival, the Purple sextet took the first game, 5-3, on fast ice. The second exhibition, however, was played in a heavy snow-fall, and Amherst came through with a 2-1 victory over a somewhat listless Williams team. The Purple seemed to regain their former power in the final contest, and walked away with an easy 4-1 score.

In the opening game of the official schedule, the sons of Eph travelled to West Point where the Cadets, conquered 7-1 the year before, yielded even more easily, 10-0, in a game that was uninteresting because of its oneness. Carrying their strong early-season attack to Williamstown ice, the Purple scored four goals in as many minutes of a third-period rally to defeat Union, 5-1. Brigham slugged in three of these, and continued his work the next week against M. A. C. at Amherst. With an almost impassable five-man defense—later characterized as a "basketball team on skates"—the Aggies checked every Purple try after Brigham had bulged the net early in the first period, and the game ended 1-0 in favor of Williams.

Following a week of inactivity due to poor weather conditions, Cornell was met in Williamstown on the Saturday before the mid-year examination period. In contrast to the team that was swamped, 7-1, by the Purple the year before, the Red and White brought a combination largely composed of sophomores that unleashed a strong attack at the strategic moment early in the game to score one point, and then resolved into a defensive machine, which, backed up by goalie Heye, defied all penetration.

Again the weather jinx interfered, forcing the cancellation of the Colby game, but the next day the sextet set forth on an invasion of the South during the mid-year recess. Penn, with a hockey team organized for the first time this year, presented little opposition in the Philadelphia Arena Friday night, and almost every member of the team scored in a 9-1 victory for Williams. However, the order was nearly reversed the following evening when the powerful Princeton Tigers were met in the Baker rink. The Orange and Black was held to a 2-1 lead during most of the game, Brigham accounting for the Williams tally, but the Jones pair broke loose in the final minutes of the third period to score four times over the tiring visitors, making the score 6-1.

On Feb. 13, Williams garnered two points to Amherst's one in the first official contest between the two rivals, and also one point in the Trophy of Trophies race. The defensive combination of Howe and Langmaid, always strong in this department of the game, showed their scoring powers, which they continued the rest of the season, by netting both the Williams tallies. This victory was followed by a let-down both in the play and in the score. Middlebury, leaders of the Vermont League, played the Purple to a 2-2 tie in an erratic game, but in the overtime period, Kelley, star visiting center, sank a winning shot.

With regained powers, Amherst was met the following day, and in a fast, rough game was defeated, 1-0, by Brigham's goal, scored in the first three minutes. Hampered by a heavy snowfall, the teams battled through the rest of the game to no avail, except to incur numerous penalties. With the second victory in hockey Williams increased its Trophy lead to 9½-0. Princeton was received in Williamstown on Saturday of the same week in the fastest and also the cleanest game of the season. The Purple showed fine team-work and defensive play after a week of intense activity and Howe and Schwartz broke through in the second period to tie the early 2-0 lead gained by the two Jones'. However, Livingston turned the final game of the Purple's season into a defeat when he netted the rubber for a deciding score four minutes before the final whistle.

The scoring statistics of the squad are given below:

		Goals
Brigham	Center	12
Howe	Left defense	11
Langmaid	Right defense	9
Hoyt	Left wing	4
Wheeler	Right wing	1
Nye	Center	3
Ballou	Right wing	1
Schwartz	Left defense	1

Big Brother Banquet Plans Are Complete

final plans for the actual banquet have to be made on the basis of the number to be present. These lists should be as large as possible, since the number of boys who may be entertained depends upon the number of hosts.

Entertainment is to be supplied by the Purple Knights who have offered to play during the evening, and further arrangements are being made for individual performers by S. Johnson '29, chairman of the W. C. A. deputation committee. Plans for seating the guests are in the hands of Richard Ely '30, and he has requested that the "big brothers" make no statement of preference as to the boys with whom they sit. If the college men have any particular friends, they may locate them at the Commons Club before the banquet starts. If any man who has signed up as a host finds it impossible to attend or if anyone has any questions in regard to the banquet, he is requested to see Strong '29 in 22 Jesup or to call the room at 172-W.

Baseball Players Start Winter Work

while Wolcott will report for practice after the last swimming meet. These men have done little work on the mound so far, confining their work chiefly to warming up their arms in an effort to combat the early-season soreness and stiffness. Dunlop, Singmaster and Wolcott will be the only veteran hurlers. Those trying out for catcher are Downey, Scholsser, and C. H. Smith, the latter a member of last year's first team.

Definite plans as to the infield are still incomplete, with 11 men out at present for the four positions. First base candidates are Alexander, McGlynn, Tittman, and Tyson, all of whom but McGlynn played last year, while McGlynn was the regular first baseman on the Freshman team. Inverso and Winn are the two regulars who are candidates for second base, while Eisner, a new man, and Fox of the 1931 team are also out for the position. Thomas, third baseman for the freshmen last year, and Eisner are trying out for third base. and Captain Putnam and Wallace, captain of his organization last year, are working for the shortstop post.

Outfield candidates include Cavanagh, Grosvenor, Thoms, D. Williams and R. Williams. Cavanagh did not play last year, while Grosvenor was a regular fielder on the 1931 team. Thoms played center field on the Varsity and both D. Williams and R. Williams are veterans. Coach Fox anticipates a wealth of outfield material soon.

Eighteen games comprise the schedule, 12 of them to be played at home and six away. After the opening game with Clark here on April 14, the team plays only once more in Williamstown before two weeks of games on foreign diamonds. From May 11, however, until the end of the season, West Point will be the only foe played away from home. Amherst will invade Weston Field for the usual Memorial Day game, while an innovation will be made when Japanese University is played on Commencement Day, three days after the annual encounter with the Alumni nine. The schedule follows:

April 14	Clark	Home
April 20	R. P. I.	Home

BIG BROTHER BANQUET PLANNED FOR TUESDAY

Mr. C. L. Safford Will Entertain at Dinner for Town Boys in Commons Club

Approximately 150 members of the undergraduate body have signed up to attend as hosts to Williamstown boys the annual "Big Brother" Banquet, to be held on Tuesday evening at 6.30 in the Commons Club dining room under the auspices of the Williams Christian Association. The three principal speakers of the evening will be Lloyd D. Rohrbach '29, president of the W. C. A., president of 1929, and member of Gargoyles, who will speak for the college and the Christian Association; Richard Treadway of the Boy Scout Troop who will represent the boys, and Willard French '29, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee of the W. C. A. Dexter Strong '29 will act as toastmaster.

A program of entertainment has been arranged by S. Johnson '29 which will be headed by Charles L. Safford, who will perform on the piano and sing; the Purple Knights will also play during the evening. A menu has been arranged which promises to make the gathering a real banquet. The seating is in the hands of Richard Ely '30, who has requested that the "big brothers" make no statement of preference as to the boys with whom they are to sit. If the college men have any particular friends among the boys, they may locate them at the Commons Club before the dinner commences.

No boy is allowed to attend the banquet unless accompanied by a host; thus it is imperative that as many college men as possible sign up if the affair is to be a success and provide an evening of entertainment and good-fellowship for the greatest number of Williamstown boys. The charge for the banquet is two dollars which is to be paid by each host and which will include his own and his guest's dinner.

BAUER TO INAUGURATE NEW CONCERT SERIES

Student Committee Plans Series
If Eminent Piano Virtuoso Is Well Received

Appearing as the first of a number of artists expected here in the future, Harold Bauer will give a piano program in Chapin Hall on Sunday afternoon, April 28. Procured through the influence of a group of undergraduates, this eminent virtuoso will come to Williams to give a more or less experimental concert which, if successful in interesting the undergraduate body, will inaugurate a series of concerts intended to be on a somewhat more magnificent plane than any that have been had here in the past.

"It will be a recital by a profound scholar, a decidedly unusual type of musical personage," remarked Professor Safford, "a man whose greatness lies not so much in his virtuosity as in his exhaustive knowledge of interpretation." Although he is more of a student of musical history and artistry than a spectacular concert tourist, he has received international recognition equalling that of Rachmaninoff and Paderewski, and has just concluded a most successful series of concerts, both in double piano programs with Gabrilovitch, and in individual performances, at Town Hall, New York City. His far-reaching understanding of early compositions and enthusiastic study of old forms has gained him the reputation, in the words of Samaro, critic for the New York Post, of being "a tireless explorer in the domain of unfamiliar music."

Regarding the style of Bauer as a performer, there are considerable technical characteristics which distinguish his work. "He relies more and more upon pedal effects, nuances of tone-color, the special treatment of inner voices which has been one of his traits as an interpreter," is the opinion of Olin Downes, musical critic on the New York Times. "He appears to us somewhat more of an impressionist than he was, at least in the interpretation of romantic composers; there is less 'forte', more 'mezzo piano' and 'piano' and shades between. The style of earlier days was bolder in outline, sometimes more powerful."

Matmen to Compete in Intercollegiate Friday

This week-end five members of the Williams wrestling team will journey to Cambridge to take part in the annual New England Intercollegiate Wrestling Association meet which is to be held next Friday and Saturday. Against the powerful teams from Harvard, Brown, M. I. T., and Tufts, Williams will be forced to show an inspired form of wrestling in order to gain any points, and will enter the meet with a much less impressive record for this season than any of her opponents.

The preliminary round matches will be held on Friday evening, and after the eliminations have been determined, the finals will take place Saturday evening. The Purple will not be represented in the 115, 145-pound, and unlimited classes due to lack of adequate material, while the remainder of the line-up will be as follows: 125-lb. class, Spencer; 135-lb. class, Lisle; 155-lb. class, Baldwin; 165-lb. class, Lobo or Baxter; 175-lb. class, Deming.

'THEATRE' TO PRESENT TWO PLAYS ON FRIDAY

'Shall We Join the Ladies' and 'The Bourgeois Gentilhomme' To Comprise Bill

Friday night at 8.15, the Little Theatre will present its March bill, consisting of Shall We Join the Ladies, by J. M. Barrie, and Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, by Molière. These plays, which take as long in presentation as the usual three one-act plays, are entirely different from anything the Little Theatre has given before.

Shall We Join the Ladies is the first act of a mystery play which the author, James M. Barrie, decided to leave unfinished. It deals with a week-end party at which the host has assembled all those who might have been implicated in the death of his brother, years before. After each of the guests has in turn incriminated himself, the play ends in an unusual manner. It is being produced under the direction of R. B. Sevall '29.

The second production of the bill will be Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, by Jean Baptiste Poquelin (Molière). This play, which will be given in English, will be directed by J. L. Casaday '29. It is a light satire on the French nouveau riche of the time of Louis XIV, written by one of the greatest dramatists of France.

The casts of the plays, with such changes as have been made since the last announcement, are as follows:

'The Origin of Man' To Be Published by Prof. Cleland

Appearing as the second of a series of articles on "Evolution" published by the monthly magazine, "Science and Invention", is an article by Professor H. F. Cleland entitled "The Origin of Man" which will be printed in the April issue. Professor Cleland's article starts with the study of fossils and proceeds throughout the ages to the development of the modern man.

Beginning with the fossils he says, "One of the most remarkable things brought out by a study of fossils is the fact that as one goes further and further back in time animals of every kind become more and more simple. Man in particular holds our interest and it is because of this that we find the study of evolution." Professor Cleland goes on with a study of the human embryo to show that it once had a tail longer than its legs, muscles for moving this tail, and at one stage the embryo was covered with hair, which seems to indicate a basis for the theory of evolution. Tracing the human development through the period of the Neanderthal (Continued on Second Page)

ALBANY LAW WINS ARMAMENT DEBATE

Small Audience Favors Visitors as Preparedness Causes Clash of Argument

Asserting that the world interests of the United States compare closely enough with those of Great Britain to require equal protection, that England is a potential enemy of this country, and that the United States should be in a position to "command peace", Wenger, Webster, and Cole, representing the Albany Law School, gained a 7-5 decision from a meagre audience over the Williams debaters Friday evening on the question, "Resolved, that the United States should build a naval and auxiliary air force within the next five years which will put it on a par with Great Britain." Baptiste '29, Manning '31, and Gardner '32 urged, on the other hand, that there is no danger of war with England, and strongly emphasized that "preparedness causes war."

Wenger of Albany cited the extensive territorial possessions of this country as well as her 17 billion dollar foreign trade to demonstrate that her interests require equal protection with British holdings. Dependence of American industry on foreign sources of raw materials was also stressed. As the second aspect of the affirmative justification of the proposal, Webster represented England as a potential enemy of the United States because of friction over trade competition, and anti-American propaganda. "England," he stated, "is mobilizing all Europe against us, as is shown by the Franco-English naval agreement, and the failure of the Geneva arms conference through British action. With her commerce decreasing before the rise of ours, why is she pursuing a policy of naval aggrandizement unless to use that power against us?"

The two teams clashed directly on this argument, when general economic depression, coupled with recent treaties against (Continued on Third Page)

Athletic Tax

All Athletic Taxes for the college year 1928-1929 must be paid on or before Sunday, March 17, 1929.

The names of those men who have not paid the tax by that date will be published in THE WILLIAMS RECORD of Tuesday, March 19, and the following week all athletic privileges will be denied those men not paying their tax. This is the final notice.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Sets Houseparty Dates; Confers With Administration

Dates for the spring houseparties were set last week by the Student Council for Saturday, May 4, and Saturday, May 11, and a satisfactory agreement on the conduct of these houseparties was at the same time reached by the Council and the Administrative Committee. At the customary Council meeting on Tuesday evening, it was recommended to Mr. Botsford that either this spring or next fall, as he sees fit, cards of admission to athletic contests be issued in recognition of payment of the College athletic tax.

The latter action was taken by the Council as a necessary measure to secure prompt and complete payment of the athletic tax, after the annual report of the Athletic Council had been submitted, indicating that 130 men had as yet failed to pay their assessment. This situation threatens to make the athletic year a financial failure, and as the loss of interest on these delayed payments has already (Continued on Third Page)

Goodbody Wins First at Union; Dougherty Places

Competing under unusually severe weather conditions in the third annual Union College board track and field meet at Schenectady last Saturday afternoon, Goodbody and Dougherty '31 succeeded in collecting nine points for Williams; Goodbody winning the novice mile by a comfortable margin and Dougherty placing second in the 70-yard high hurdles and third in the 70-yard low hurdles. Lenihan '31, who was eliminated after a close race by the eventual winner of second place in the 70-yard dash, and Sufferin '31, who competed in the two-mile handicap run, were the only other Purple runners to make the trip.

Goodbody, running the mile distance for the first time this year, took an easy first place in the novice mile, pulling up from fourth place at the half to win by a margin of over thirty yards. The time of 4:55 was fair considering the adverse (Continued on Second Page)

RELAY WINS FOR 1932 TANKMEN AT AMHERST

Kerr and McMahon Lead Freshmen
To Third and Final Victory
Of the Season

Fortified by victories in both dash events, the 440-yard swim, and the backstroke, the Williams Freshman swimming team raced away from the Amherst freshmen in the final relay to clinch the concluding meet of an undefeated season, at Amherst last Saturday, by the score of 45 to 35. Amherst's trio of individual stars, Myron, Spargo, and Strohmeier, accounted for 27 points in brilliant style, but the all-around strength of the Purple freshmen gradually built up a two-point lead, and with the meet hinging on the relay, the first year men had no difficulty in preserving their slender advantage.

There were two high lights in the meet, the performance of Myron, of Amherst, in the diving, and of McMahon, of the Williams team, in the 440-yard swim. The former turned in the almost unbelievable point total of 91.1 after a beautiful exhibition of diving; while McMahon, after a 400-yard battle with Captain Strohmeier of Amherst, had a little more left in reserve for the final sprint than his opponent, fighting his way through the last 40 yards to win in the excellent time of 6:10.8. Myron was the high scorer of the meet, with two first places, and Captain Kerr again led the freshmen with eight points in the dashes, and the anchor-man position on the winning relay team.

The Amherst team scored the first of four victories in the 300-yard medley relay, Nash, Spargo, and MacColl holding a comfortable lead throughout the race. Swayze and Kerr evened the score for the freshmen in the 50-yard dash without being pressed, although the time of 28.6 was rather slow. McMahon and Fenton added six more points in the 440-yard swim, but the freshmen could not hold their long lead, and when Myron took the individual medley race, and followed this victory up with (Continued on Second Page)

Taylor Addresses 'Union' on Abnormal Psychology

"The psychological student learns to air his mind, yet does not think to the detriment of neting", was the conclusion drawn by Professor W. S. Taylor of Smith College in a lecture on the subject of abnormal psychology, delivered last Sunday evening in Griffin Hall under the auspices of the Philosophical Union. Dr. Taylor stated that self-knowledge growing out of ethical training and insight was the only means of curing mental abnormalities, and gave several interesting examples of the influence of suggestion upon individuals, as well as tracing neurology and other functional disorders back to unhealthy surroundings during early life.

Among his descriptions of the results of suggestion the speaker included imitation, gastronomic phenomena, emotional linkages, obsessions, and finally hypnotism. The latter he characterized as being made possible by "keeping out distracting stimuli", and said that hypnotism, formerly a study shrouded in mystery, has now been largely reduced to law and order. "All these phenomena, however, are subject to the unification of personality. The ques- (Continued on Second Page)

NATATORS LOSE TO AMHERST BY RELAY

Opponents Win Close Contest With 44-36 Score and Take 'Little
Three' Honors

Loss of the final event of the meet—the 200-yard relay—accounted for the defeat of the Williams swimming team at the hands of the Amherst natators by the score of 44-36 last Saturday in the Pratt Pool at Amherst; the score before the relay was tied at 36 points apiece, but Amherst took the event in the good time of 1:43.2, gaining an edge of eight points over Williams. Amherst thus secured the "Little Three" title by virtue of victories over both Wesleyan and Williams, while the Purple, who have held the title for two years, stands second through one victory and one defeat, and Wesleyan third with two defeats.

Captain Schott was as usual the individual star of the meet, with the maximum number of possible points—12, by winning the 300-yard individual medley, setting up a new pool record for the 200-yard breast stroke with the excellent time of 2:39.4, and swimming on the victorious medley relay trio; Angelman of Amherst also tallied 12 points for his team, although he set up no records, through firsts in both dashes and swimming anchor on the winning relay team.

Two new pool records for the Amherst tank were established by the Purple swimmers. Captain Schott's remarkable performance in the breast stroke, after having swum two races before, set up a record of 2:39.4 for that event, the time being only two seconds above the intercollegiate record, now held by Moles of Princeton. The Williams medley relay team of Davis, Schott, and Dougherty also made a new time of 3:31.1 for the Pratt Pool. Kleene of Amherst set a new college and pool record in the 150-yard backstroke when he navigated the distance in the fine time of 1:55.4. These times, especially Schott's mark in the breast stroke, are the more noteworthy in view of the peculiar Amherst tank, which is without gutters and thus troublesomely rough.

The first event of the meet—the 300-yard medley relay—was won by the Williams team of Davis, Schott, and Dougherty, principally through the work of Schott in the breast stroke division of the race. Angelman and Ling of Amherst, who got off to perfect starts in the 50, won first and second in that event, while Higginbotham was a close third. The winning time was 25.1, tying the Pratt Pool record. The lead in the 440 see-sawed back and forth between Webbe and Burgess until Webbe finally edged out Burgess by a body's length to win in 6:42; Wolcott of Williams took an easy third. Howe of Amherst won the dives with a total of 81 points, while his teammate, Stuart, beat out Shnw for second by five-teaths of a point.

Schott and Healy encountered no difficulty in winning the 300-yard individual medley, while Bruck was a poor third for Amherst although both Schott and Healy had swum easily. Kleene of Amherst won the 150-yard breast stroke with a new record of 1:55.4; he had a wide margin over van der Bogert and Birnie, who finished almost simultaneously, winning second and third respectively. Angelman, Amherst's star dash man, took the 100 in the slow time of 1:11.1, while Wolcott and Higginbotham were close on his heels to win second and third.

The 200-yard breast stroke proved to be a gold mine for Williams when Captain Schott, continuing his unbroken string of victories for four years in dual meets, won first with the fine time of 2:39.1, while Gregg had little difficulty in taking second from Bill of Amherst. Thus, before the 200-yard relay, the score was tied with 36 points apiece, but the Amherst team of Ling, Allen, Campbell, and Angelman, won easily over the Williams quartet of Gardner, Dougherty, Higginbotham, and Davis; the Amherst team opened up an early lead which was steadily increased, until the Purple and White was over five yards ahead at the finish. The eight points from this event clinched the meet for Amherst by a 44-36 score and also the "Little Three" title.

A summary of the results are as follows:
50 yards—Won by Angelman, Amherst; Ling, Amherst, 2d; Higginbotham, Williams, 3d. Time, 25 1-5.

100-yards—Won by Angelman, Amherst. (Continued on Second Page)

ANOTHER INAUGURATION

The next official appearance of THE RECORD will mark the debut of the 1930 board. This fact is probably of not much importance to anyone but ourselves, and yet a change of administrations is not an altogether private affair. Even readers of college newspapers may be presumed to have some interest in who is doing the writing and the managing. And so, in accordance with tradition, before slipping off with Mr. Coolidge to a quiet little place like Northampton, we make this announcement.

The 1929 board has tried to leave a clean desk for its successors, but this has been found to be impossible. Affairs of either the state or the campus cannot be disposed of simply by getting new presidents and new editors; they have a habit of lingering on long after the inaugural ceremonies are forgotten. It is therefore quite inevitable that we hand to 1930 a number of campus problems, some of which were handed to us last year. We are not sure that our treatment of them has made them any less difficult of solution, but that is why this exchange of editorial administrations in mid-stream is a good thing. It brings a fresh point of view to bear on the old questions, and a new energy to deal with them.

For the next year the paper will be in the hands of an editor of broad views and progressive ideas. We do not mean to anticipate the policy of the incoming board; that is a matter which must be decided, or rather developed, as the weeks go by. But we do hope that it will see fit to finish some of the things which of necessity were left undone by us. As for those other things which we have missed altogether, we are confident that these also will be quickly discovered by the new editors in the responsible fulfillment of their obligations. It is their pleasant duty now to record with accuracy and good taste a period of Williams history, and to keep vigorously alive undergraduate thought on all college matters. They will find this a liberal education in itself.

'The Origin of Man' to be Published by Prof. Cleland

man, the Pittdown man, the "ape man", the author shows that man and the ape have a common ancestry, though man is not descended from any genus of living ape.

By a comparison of ancestry and the general character of the brain of man and the ape, Professor Cleland shows that the descent of man and apes from a common ancestor is no longer a theory, but a fact. In regard to the future of the human race after these "hundred million years of progress", he seems to be of the opinion that it depends on man's ability to master his environment. It is probable that in the near future, with the aid of recent inventions, he will be able to regulate the temperature of his house and body and so overcome the tropical climate. In closing Professor Cleland says, "Do we not have reason to be confident that human progress will be terminated only when the sun's temperature shall have cooled to such a degree that animals or plants cannot live on the earth, or until the earth shall have been disrupted by the passing of some great star?"

Professor Cleland will spend the first semester of next year in completing some scientific writings, including a short book on evolution, a source book for elementary courses in geology, and several articles for scientific magazines. A western university professor is expected to be secured to substitute for Mr. Cleland, who will carry on his work in this country.

Taylor Addresses 'Union' on Abnormal Psychology

tion, Do beliefs influence behaviour? may be answered in the positive if the beliefs are integrated, but when they are disjointed, beliefs and behavior are not necessarily in unison."

Dr. Taylor also discussed hallucinations, delusions, and lapses. The latter often lead a person to saying what he truly thinks instead of what convention under the circumstances tells him to say. In an effort to overcome different abnormalities, many individuals are victims of over-compensation, as an example of which Dr. Taylor told of the formerly cruel man who joined the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. After categorizing the schools for study of abnormal psychology into psychoanalysts, suggestionists, and inferenceists, Dr. Taylor ended by refuting the belief that "philosophizing is for the purpose of escaping reality" and said, rather, that it was for the purpose of enlarging one's mental scope and broadening one's aspect of life.

Kerr won the 100-yard dash in 1.03, and the freshmen again seemed on their way to an easy victory, but Spargo and Johnson, of Amherst, recovered the lost ground for the Sabrinas by annexing the first two places in the breast stroke in easy fashion. The Williams relay team of Swayze, Swift, Taylor, and Kerr, with each man gaining on his opponent, decided the meet, winning a fast victory in 1.48.5.

SPRINGFIELD DEFEATS
PURPLE ON MAT 29-3Baldwin Again Gains Only Williams
Victory as Wrestlers Lose
Sixth Straight

Again saved from a complete shut-out only by Baldwin's three points from a win by time advantage, the Varsity wrestlers suffered their sixth consecutive defeat of the season at the hands of the Springfield College team, by the score of 29-3, last Saturday afternoon in Lasell Gymnasium. Falls in four matches and decisive time advantages in three others, against the one decision taken by the home team, enabled the visitors to win easily over the Williams matmen, who were wrestling in their last home meet of the season.

In the 115-pound class, Nichols of Springfield defeated Fujiyama of Williams by a time advantage of 7:41, the Williams wrestler having the advantage for only ten seconds. In the 125-pound class, McIntosh, wrestling for the first time this year, lost to Cutler by a fall in 8:40, and Capt. Quimby of Springfield secured a fall on Reynolds by a front body hold and arm bar. Lisle of Williams, wrestling over his weight in the 145-pound class, was unsuccessful in trying to break the losing streak and succumbed to Coe on a time decision.

With the score 16 to 0, Baldwin won a decision over Hartwell of Springfield in the 155-pound division for Williams only victory of the afternoon. The match between Garland of Springfield and Lobo was also close. Neither gained the advantage in the first two-minute period, but Garland won by scoring a fall in each of the two subsequent periods. The last two matches both went to the visitors when Booker gained a generous time advantage over Deming in the 175-pound class, and Jenkins threw Andersen with a body hold.

A summary of the meet is as follows:

115-lb. class: Nichols (S) won from Fujiyama (W) by referee's decision. Time advantage: 7:41.

125-lb. class: Cutler (S) threw McIntosh (W) with a front body hold. Time: 8:40.

135-lb. class: Quimby (S) threw Reynolds (W) with a front body hold. Time: 6:48.

145-lb. class: Coe (S) won from Lisle (W) by referee's decision. Time advantage: 7:25.

155-lb. class: Baldwin (W) won from Hartwell (S) by referee's decision. Time advantage: 5:20.

165-lb. class: Garland (S) won from Lobo (W) by two falls. Time: 3:55 and 1:08.

175-lb. class: Booker (S) won from Deming (W) by referee's decision. Time advantage: 7:23.

Unlimited class: Jenkins (S) threw Andersen (W) by a body hold. Time: 7:52.

Albany Law Wins

Armament Debate

war and our freedom from entangling alliances were offered by Baptiste as reasons why no nation is able or willing to attack the United States today. England, he noted, owes too much money already to enter upon an expensive war. It was strongly emphasized, also, that a conflict between the two kindred peoples would be racial suicide, and would be prevented because of that aspect and because of England's feeling of friendliness and moral obligation for our aid in the World War. The Williams speaker also stated that this country was at present adequately prepared for war, citing her isolated position, self sufficiency in food, the work of military training camps, and the ability to use her industries for war needs.

The strongest clash of the debate was on the question of preparedness to end war. Cole, for Albany, urged that our position in wealth and isolation from European fears, peculiarly fits us to take the lead in the move for peace, but that we must have force enough to back up "paper treaties which are effective only when there is a power and will to enforce them." Playing jingoism and war propagandists, Gardner of Williams, however, cited the example of armed Europe in 1914 to prove that preparation causes war. Manning continued to emphasize strongly that "there will be war as long as there are arms", and pointed out that there could be no naval or air competition between England and the United States without eventual hostilities.

AMHERST WINS TWO POINTS FOR 'TROPHY'

Victory Over Purple in Swimming Brings Count to Eleven to Two for Williams

Two points scored through the victory over the Purple swimming team last Saturday afternoon gave Amherst its first tallies in the annual race for the Trophy of Trophies toward which Williams has already scored eleven points in four events. Sweeping victories in football, and soccer last fall were followed this winter by a double triumph in basketball and two wins in hockey to gain eleven points for the Purple before the Lord Jeffs could make a single tally.

Last year at this time the Sabrina athletes were leading 8½ to 4½, the scoring being exactly reversed except that basketball and hockey were split while football and soccer had gone to Amherst and swimming to Williams. Of the remaining five events the Lord Jeffs won two last spring and the Purple three to make the final score -13½ to 11½ in favor of Amherst. A triumph in any one contest except debating or golf will bring the coveted plaque back across the mountains this year, however; and the prospects of the tennis and track teams make the possibilities look exceedingly bright.

The score toward the Trophy to date is as follows:

Sports	Total	Williams	Amherst
Football	4	4	0
Soccer	2	2	0
Basketball	3	3	0
Hockey	2	2	0
Swimming	2	0	2
Debating	1	?	?
Track	4	?	?
Baseball	4	?	?
Tennis	2	?	?
Golf	1	?	?
Total	25	11	2

'Culture and Knowledge' Features 'Alumni Review'

Featuring another article by the anonymous author of "Trustees—By Divine Right or Democracy" and "Scholarship and the Alumni" entitled "Culture Versus Knowledge", the March issue of the Alumni Review recently appeared with its selected bits of College, editorial, and alumni news. Opposite the title page a photograph of Edward Herriek Griffin '62, one-time Professor at Williams and later Dean at Johns Hopkins University, accompanies the obituary of this eminent alumnus, who was buried in the college cemetery on January 25.

"Culture Versus Knowledge" points out the impracticability of almost all the courses at College along avowed cultural lines because they fill the students with temporary knowledge unconnected with any real facts. The author suggests, humorously, that the trustees create a system of re-examination of the alumni every five or ten years by means of a questionnaire similar to that prepared for the Bureau of Social Hygiene by Dr. Davis. And the article ends with a suggestion that the public school practice of taking the children to see what they are studying about be applied at Williams.

Alumni interest received a little write-up in the publication of the figures on trustee elections in more than 30 colleges in the United States. Williams led with 50% of the alumni recording their choice on new trustees, while Brown was second with 40, and Wesleyan third with 38%. Other articles in this March issue include the latest figures on the decline of the increase in college enrollment and a passing comment taken from the New York Times on the well-worn subject of professors' salaries.

'Chi Psi' Swimmers Win

Swimming off a postponed race in the interfraternity six-man relay meet, Chi Psi had little difficulty in downing Psi Upsilon last Friday afternoon in the rather slow time of 3:06. The winners will meet Phi Delta Theta in the finals of their league this week, while the Commons Club faces Phi Sigma Kappa for the championship of the other league. Immediately following the completion of the match between the winners of these two races for the interfraternity title, the first round matches in the interfraternity volleyball tournament will be started.

Plans for Graves Prize Contest Are Announced

Plans for the annual Graves prize contest, open to members of the senior class, were issued recently by Professor Albert H. Licklider of the Public Speaking and Dramatic Literature Department. Prizes of $20 each will be awarded to those seniors who prepare the best essays on assigned subjects and a prize of $80 will be given to the student who shall deliver his essay most effectively in the public contest in June.

Because of the special essays in scholastic and honors work, a special topic or any other essay written for regular college requirements may be submitted this year but no essay may be given which has been entered in any other contest. The members of the Class of 1928 who received prizes for essays in the Graves contest were: Talcott M. Banks Jr., James Hodge, Jr., Vernon W. Littlefield, James L. Ritchie, the first-named being the recipient of the prize for excellence in delivery. 'AH!' POUTS SLICKSLIDER
'IT WAS SIMPLY CUNNING!'

Eugene Oh Kneel, Author, Presents
'This Way Out' with Mss. for

Descending on that most elusive and synthetically aesthetic group known as the Williamstown theatre-goers with a gusto and precipitancy which bade fair to dislodge the Puritanical precepts of that august body, Gus Garfield, Berkshire Barnstorming Baron, led his enigmatic crew to a scintillating triumph on the boards of Chafing Hall stage yesterday evening. As the final curtain dropped on the laudable and frivolous flitting of the leading character, the massive auditorium was nearly rent asunder by the force and complexity of the phonetic frenzy that followed. Dr. Slickslider, always fidgety—even in his natural habitat, was seen to execute a double-reverse of the biceps and metacarpal, presumably to scratch his back, but in this case to whack it in mimicry of applause. Loosely-sewed buttons slipped their moorings through the fanatical deportment of their owners, whalebone stays and health belts alike failed to contain the collected mirth, while in the background was a continual snapping of fingers and filing of nails.

But enough of such conservative criticism. Judge for yourselves, dear gentle reader (two bits your subscription's overdue, you fourflusher!) from the original manuscript, placed in our hands by none other than Mr. Eugene Oh Kneel, and here presented to THIS WAY OUT readers hot from Gene's griddle:

FACULTY CLUB BURNS WHEN STILL EXPLODES

Rum Ring and Gambling Joint are Exposed When 'Birdie' Adds
One More Raisin

One too many raisins added to a distilling concoction of applejack resulted in a disastrous explosion last Wednesday night when the Faculty Club was wrecked and partially burned following Birdie Lickcider's attempt to improve the quality of the latest shipment of "Faculty Special" by his own recipe. Although the fire broke out almost immediately, resident members of the Club managed to save their roulette wheels, loaded dice, bridge tables, and false teeth, though little Jimmy, the Mathematician, singed his best set of chin whiskers when he went back for the joint of his wooden leg.

There were some anxious moments in the first minutes of the fire when "the in-offensive Birdie" dashed up to his roof garden studio to retrieve the famous "Blue Light" and a set of "art prints" which he has refused to share. Bull Locke, alone of the residents, retained sufficient presence of mind to keep the flames going until the Fire Brigade could arrive with their oxygen tanks and do the job right. Jim Tardy claims he lost a complete set of "Little Blue Books" when his

Dr. Foal Lectures on Vivisectionism; Lights His Pipe

"Did you know," queried Dr. Adalbert Foal, Roarin' Rage Professor of Applied Obstetrics in a lecture before the Science Club in the Thompson Frog Hatchery last night, "that the vivisectionists aren't so hot? When I was in Woods Hole last summer," he went on, pounding his gnarled fist on a table covered with reeking horse meat, "I happened to be out after curfew one night"—he winked slyly—"and by sheer happenstance, I came to realize the great debt we owe our philogenetic relatives (that is, in the vernacular, our animal friends) and came to a deeper appreciation of the universal scheme of things". A tear dropped in the gore on the table.

"Some say that we came from the lowly molluscoidia, but my plagiaristic research makes me absolutely positive, nay, almost sure, well, anyhow, I got a sure-fire notion, that we are direct descendants of celhalapod (the lowly squid). Parts of us resemble ascarus lumbricoides in the grabid stage, but this evidence is entirely without suspicion. And here's why", he said in a convincing manner, reaching behind him for a dripping Ikma that hung on the wall.

"In 1901, Dr. Phrastus Hempeldonk, the eminent bronchiosurologist of Vienna, discovered a pheasant while on a walk. Subsequent research brought to light many revolutionary theories which rocked the scientific world. Dr. Hempeldonk spent twenty-five years on this one animal, and on the eve of what he characterized as a "notion", the doctor died of bacillal streptococcus of the leg. You ask, What relation has this to our evolution? Frankly, I don't know". Lighting his pipe, he added after a pause, "Perhaps Dr. Hempeldonk could tell."

TOWN TRAFFIC PERIL SAVAGELY DISCLOSED

Prickly's Heated Talk Moves 'Little Sisters'—Choo Choo Train Halts Proceedings

"When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for an Egyptian ai to remove itself from an undercooled ham smoking parlor, what will poor Robin do then?" was the most intelligent thing said all evening recently by "Prickly" Heavyhand, famous author of "Three Ways of Discouraging a Cow" and other treatises on maritime law and bird lore. Heavyhand, addressing the annual Little Sister banquet held in the Cinderella Room of the Hoosac Tunnel, paused a moment to let the significance of his words sink in. "While Grover Whalen was probably not implicated in this," he continued, "the relation of the babes in the woods to the disarmament peril is somewhat negligible, if not overweening." At this point "Rabbi" Weak was heard to mutter under his breath, "Doesn't he make a perfectly heavenly host?"

After the white vested choir had mumbled a few bars to make amens for this, "Prickly" continued to speak authoritatively to the assembled big brothers and little sisters, who by this time were engaged in an exciting little game of "Button, button." It seemed that Bess Friggam forgetting all the principles of fair play, had carelessly let the besought pellet slide into his urinary cavity. But we digress.

"It all began with those beastly traffic lights", ventured Heavy hand, pausing to replace a pimple which had come out during the course of the conversation. "Time was when a person wishing to inject himself into Williamstown at one end and excrete himself at the other, did so in a straightforward manner. Now, with the inauguration of the post and lintel system and the doctrines of lazy fair, the process has become ever so complicated. Take the case of Perey Rumpeldickie '00 (pronounced naughty naughty)", gurgitated the speaker, waving his hands at one of the little sisters until they dropped off. "Be-

'PLAY PURE TWADDLE' ANIMADVERTS ALUMNUS

Discourtesy of Blubber Botchinson '54, '40
(or Fight)

Although delayed until last Sunday at 12.40 due to difficulties in taking out their poetic license, Diddle Theatre in collusion with Yap and Yells Corpse finally succeeded in perpetrating the classic Russian tragedy, Muchadoaboutnothingski, by Dustimovski. The play, which was translated from the original by waterpower, was given under the express direction of Pixie Ghoul '29. It has never appealed to me personally, even since I heard of it on Saturday. Besides its consisting entirely of treacle and wind-pudding, I have an inherited prejudice against dramas of 13 acts, not to mention the prologue, epilogue, and synagogue, which fortunately do not exist.

The plot hinges somewhat ereakily upon the history of our heroine, Countess Sunya Sunniva Sunnivavitch, whom, in her youth, Michael Strogoff reduces to the ranks. She takes umbrage at this and breaks Michael's heart. Sunya is an inveterate umbrage-taker and often takes more than is good for her. However, we diverge, since neither hero nor heroine enters into the actual play—

The first act is laid in the Przemysl village square about four feet square in Jesup Hall. Here villagers village in the approved Faust-Meistersinger manner all during the act. They are noted in the program as Tapoff, Falloff, Dyoff, Wayoff, Dub, Drub, Grub, Tub, Blub, Glub, Dump Gump, Grump, Hump, Thump, Trump, Chump, Stump, and so on incessantly. ## WORLD LEADERS AWED

Lenin-Trotsky Promise Military Backing—Hoosick Falls Sends Severe Protest

News of the most outstanding interest flashed out from the cellar of Jesup last Wednesday night when the Student Council, in congress assembled, came to the drastic decision that the Faculty members were no longer capable of being entrusted with driving automobiles. The action, which was long expected and desired by both students and townspeople, was inevitable, following, as it did, upon the heels of the most recent Faculty outrage. Prof. Lickcider was discovered driving no-handed, a Shakespeare in one hand, and a girl in the other, and this combination was decided too dangerous for the safety of those concerned.

The automobile question has had a long and inspiring history. As we review the events which led up to the tragedy we cannot help but venture the opinion that the decision should have been reached years ago. It all began back in 1857, when T. C. Sniff, then a rising young history instructor, wrapped himself around a tree after falling out of his buggy on the road to South Williamstown. Ten years later, in 1869, Dean Howls had his famous streak of insanity while trying to pass a woman driver on the road to Mandalay. The third offense occurred when Red Danaher, chairman of the Student Council, was severely splashed about the head and ankles by a professor who looked dangerously like a well-known teacher of rhetoric. Pat Delaney later established an alibi for this professor, saying that he was not on that road at all. The students, however, refused to take Pat's word, and the said professor could not convince them that he was innocent until he brought his now famous Undistributed Middle into play thirteen years later.

Right on the heels of this came Prof. Lickcider's stunt, and the Student Council rightfully thought this was too much. The statement which it issued Wednesday night after the celebration in Montreal was as follows: "Whereas, in our infinite wisdom it has been brought to our knowledge that our professor's are no longer capable of driving cars; whereas, we came to see our professors in class, not in Hoosick; whereas, everybody is being pursued and run down by Faculty fanatics who have just got their licenses; whereas, Prof. Lickcider can't drive with his knees, we, the Student Council, in congress assembled, hereby declare, by the unanimous vote of 13 to 2, that the faculty of said institution shall no longer appear on the street on anything other than shoes, which clause abolishes to them the right to operate automobiles, buggies, bikes, and kiddie cars." An exception was made when the question of motorcycles was brought up, and it was decided that the Faculty was rightfully entitled to drive motorcycles, since a wreck on said vehicle could result in injury and maybe death only to the driver. Another exception was made in the case of Instructor Taylor. He is to be allowed to drive all he wants, as the students feel his reputation to be above reproach even taking into consideration his recent demise in Troy.

Telegrams and cables began pouring into our little village early Thursday morning. Among the first were Lenin and Trotsky, who said, FINE DOPE. EXPECTED IT SOONER. WILL BACK YOU WITH WHOLE RED ARMY IF NECESSARY. BEST BOMBERS ALREADY ON WAY.

From President Portes Gil: HEARD OF YOUR ACTION WHILE DODGING ANOTHER BULLET. CONGRATULATIONS TO EACH AND EVERY STUDENT. YOUR ACTION SMACKS OF REVOLUTION. Will Rogers telegraphed in characteristic fashion: THREE CHEERS FOR LICKCIDER AND THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The only protest came from Hoosick Falls, whose PEW!

What this College needs is not a good 5-cent cigar, but a new chapel. Although it must be painfully obvious to most of us how inadequate the present one is to meet the reasonable demands of a highly civilized student-body, we shall endeavor to point out in a polite way some of the more glaring defects, and to suggest, perhaps not so politely, a few remedies.

In the first place, let us consider the location. Of all sites in the world, none could have been worse for our chapel than Williamstown. But isn't that just like an architect? With the whole universe to choose from, he must plunk this gothic monstrosity right in the heart of town, cluttering up one of the most valuable pieces of real estate in Massachusetts, and cruelly choking the expansion of our Spring Street merchants. Where some appropriate movie palace (with talkies!) could rise in gilded splendor, this awkward relic of prehistoric days rears its grotesque shape. We not only tolerate this archaic institution, but we must flaunt it conspicuously on quite the nicest mound in town, and right on the Mohawk Trail, too. What must tourists from Wichita think as they trundle past in their fords and flivvers during the open season for hot dogs? "Oh yes, this must be Williams where they still make the boys look for God at 7.45 every morning. How quaint!" Oh hang your heads, hang them in a

all. If we must have a chapel right on Main Street, at least the place should be decent. As it is, the place is about as pleasant as a B. & M. railroad station. Nothing but pew after pew after pew. And those miserable book-racks never yield anything readable. A fresh copy of the Springfield Republican in these racks every morning would at least make for an atmosphere of modernity and service—something like the Statler Hotels, you know. And speaking of Statler, what's the matter with the radio? We have some dandy loud-speakers, to be sure, but what do they tune in on—WJZ? WEAF? Oh no, we tune in on the Williams College chapel service and make what's already too loud, cryin' out loud. Let someone attend to our wave lengths. At least let us get Schenectady, and let our motto be: "A radio in every pew."

And then there's the matter of the bells. Oh, those bells, bells, bells, bells, et cetera. One would think we had something to ring about. Every morning the whole neighborhood must wake up to deafening, fiendish clanging. They must throw hammers at the things. Why, O Mr. Bellringer, don't you get an ax? You might be able to arouse North Adams. Honestly, we all know the chapel's there—how could we forget it? Is it quite necessary to rub it in so brutally?

As for the show itself, it is absolutely the worst that was ever perpetrated by human imbecility. A drab, utterly sexless, chorus clumps out to music that would make the Devil weep. Not a good song or dance in the whole thing. And the leading man—so help us God—is actually bald-headed!

Come all ye censors from the Watch and Ward, here is your meat. Something far more disgraceful is being enacted every morning in Williamstown than ever you'll find on Broadway. Let us pray—ah, let us pray for the chance to pray!

THE SQUARE STOOL

The Square Stool notes with favor the recent resolution of the village patriarchs to install traffic lights along the intersections of Main Street. Such a step, in our opinion, is in keeping with the intellectual and physical advance of modern ideas in this promising young town of ours. Perhaps we ourselves, in our smug complacency, might take a hint from our town elders. And so it is with due deference that we humbly suggest to our paternalistic trustees that machines, either Cadillac, LaSalle, or Chrysler roadsters, be provided for each and every undergraduate of Williams College. For, we ask with tears in our eyes, what availeth traffic lights if there be no cars to take advantage of them? What a pity if there were none to slip through at the last possible moment before the coming of the red! Sons of Eph, think of the advantages that will accrue to even the most insignificant when this weighty recommendation becomes a reality. Then we can satisfy that suppressed desire to motor out into the country, the better to commune with nature and enjoy its beauty for its own sweet sake. And to think that each one of us can make Hamp in only an hour and a half, or even less when we get to know the way better.

But the foregoing is neither here nor there. It's the principle of the thing that worries us. Are the city fathers to be more progressive than we? no! No! No! Strong men pick their noses and beautiful women chew their children in the excitement of the moment. Trustees, O Trustees. Conquer your inhibitions. Take out your fountain pens. And order us those autos. (For my part, I prefer a blue Chrysler roadster.)

The following, for which we take no responsibility, was culled from the wastepaper basket of Pres. Heckmeadow. Perhaps its only significance is to show how great minds amuse themselves during spare moments, and in this respect we notice a hidden leaning toward scribbling bad verses. There is one salient fault which the reader may discover.

The water was cold
And came right up to her ankles.

Havacigar '29 Will Be Rewarded by College

According to rumors now current on the campus the valuable services rendered to the College by the veteran watchman Ulysses G. Havacigar '29 (?), of Hoosick Falls and Williamstown, are to be rewarded by a gift of a new set of rubber teeth and a pair of shinguards, suitably inscribed with felicitations from President Garfinkel and the Secretary of the Board of Trustees. Mr. Havacigar is understood to be in need of the above mentioned articles, his activities on behalf of the College in various political matters having completely worn out his old set.

The understanding is that the presentation will be made by a delegation of Phi Beta Kappa men, appropriately clad in Ku Klux robes, and will take place in the cellar of Berkshire Hall at midnight on Maundy Thursday. When interviewed by a representative of this organ, the great politician, who is often called "the power behind the throne" or the "Rasputin of Williams College", not to mention other names, declined to affirm or deny the rumors. Finally, however, he vouchsafed, the information that he had it on unofficial but very good authority that some such emolument was about to be bestowed upon him. Desiring to learn something of the future the interviewer inquired as to his plans for the policies to be adopted at the next meeting of the Board of Trustees, but at this Dr. Havacigar appeared nervous. Excusing himself and remarking that his nose was itching, he dashed out, baying and keeping his nose to the ground, on the trail of a sophomore in an ancient flivver.

little difference in the play but much to various Gul activity cards.

The action opens with a duel in which Ferilly Flitski and Hookertwitch call each other by their middle names several times. Comic relief is supplied by the screamingly funny antics of the two Bores (to use a Latin plural), Boris Bevelitch and Boris Belliaque, who talk about the crops in Russian and smoke cigaretteskis, or cigarettes. The audience finds all this much more amusing than a Russian would, especially when Hookertwitch kicks Ferilly in the droshky.

As soon as the hostilities between the principals have ceased to keep the attention of the audience, the Bores launch an offensive on the flank, rapidly firing their santovard. The villagers stop villaging for a moment and join in. Best shot: Hookertwitch taken in the rear while hoisting vodka behind the Kremlin. At this time it is noticed that two or three dogs are gathered together and seem to have some petition to be granted. It transpires that they are messengers disguised as Russian wolfhounds who have been sent to announce the death of Trotsky. They are told to go out and make sure. After consulting the book they admit that it is Lenin who has died. All laugh heartily at their mistake and commit suicide.

recently appointed mayor, Calvin Coolidge, believed that the action will cause a large dropping off in the beer trade with the Faculty and urged the Council to reconsider. The Council, however, stood Pat.

And so, again, Williams takes a lead among the colleges of the country. What with our Institutot in the summer and our earless Faculty in the winter we are becoming quite a center of amusement and interest. It should also be added that the Council, with full approval of every member of the Williamstown Police Department, extended the use of autos to all members of the undergraduate body, it being felt that some means was necessary to secure fines sufficient to keep the town treasury above water.

FIRE BRIGADE CRASHES THRU WITH SIXTH FIRE

Rudnick's Store and Faculty Club Razed Mercilessly; Mu Tau Mu Frat Joined

Chief Millard of the college fire brigade, whose reputation has shot skyward as a result of some recent magnificent fires about town, has announced that his organization has been invited to join Mu Tau Mu the National Fire Brigade fraternity, the purpose of which is to stimulate and foster bigger and better fires, at whose expense makes no difference. Our brigade drew nationwide attention recently through its fine work in having made successful, if not caused, no less than six splendid conflagrations in Williamstown during the past month.

After a successful demolition of Goodrich, Jesup, and Morgan Halls, the brigade turned its attention elsewhere, and capped a brilliant climax last week by razing Rubbernick's store and the Faculty Club in successive evenings. The burning of Rubbernick's was unannounced well planned, no stone being left unturned to make the affair a howling success. The time was most opportune, as it took place just after dark, while George himself was still there, counting the shekels he had eked out of victims recently gypped. Imagine his astonishment and consternation when he soon found his supposedly fire-proof edifice in seething flames. Realizing his danger, he rushed onto the roof tearing his bushy hair, wailing and moaning something about 'shuits'. At the same time, members of the fire brigade, including first lieutenants, second lieutenants, super-lieutenants, and sub-lieutenants,—in fact, all kinds of lieutenants,—could be seen dashing about heroically administering little bits of inflammable substances to enliven the blaze. Unfortunately, Rubbernick got away.

The Faculty Club affair also deserves mention. The excitement here was great, because several faculty members had been trapped, and it looked for a while as though some of them would actually be finished off. Again the brigade showed heroism at the crucial moments by fanning the flames vigorously, (some were even thoughtful enough to bring bellows), while others carefully emptied alcoholic contents of small bottles at various strategic points. A great shout went up when someone was seen flitting about on the roof, having evidently lost his senses, but unfortunately he dropped from his high position to escape, on hitting the ground, with only a few scratches. He seemed very pleased with his little experience and gracefully engaged many spectators in excited conversation with child-like intensity. Others who had narrowly escaped with their lives refused to join in the general hilarity and pienieky atmosphere of the occasion and were accordingly chastized for their unsportsmanlike conduct.

Before the gathered multitude, Chief Millard extended his thanks for the fine turning out and spoke of the new step his fighting force is to take. "Ain't we got a darn good bunch, I ask you now," he said oratorically. The audience tried, but could not express all the approval and appreciation warranted. Following a glorious speech, in which the works of the organization were innumerable and a fine eulogy of fires was given, "Swillhard" concluded: "I owe it to myself and the rest of the gang to get some real, big recognition. Just watch us in Mu Tau Mu. Our bunch is going to run all other fire departments out of the country, and don't miff it!" Stupendous applause, led by Prexy.

FACULTY BRAWL AT MEADOWBROOK DANCE

Seven Suspended After Rowdyism At Prehouseparty Affair Last Friday

DEAN SOWSE FORCED OUT Caught Stealing Silent Cop For Souvenir of Disgraceful Drunken Orgy

Continuing their recent course of ridiculous conduct, the Faculty brought further disgrace to Williams last Friday evening by precipitating a scene unprecedented in the annals of Williams rowdyism at Meadowbrook Dance Hall. According to the official report of the Student Council, not a one of the attendant Faculty was in a sober condition save the 'Long Arm of the Dean' and possibly the Dean himself.

Although the offenders attempted to explain their orgy as a gesture of despair at being excluded from the Fortnightly gossip session at Mrs. Goughy's residence, the Trustees felt themselves forced to take very serious action to curb such tipping among the Faculty. Their investigation has already led to the forced resignation of Dean Sowse and the suspension for two weeks of Professors Yesser, Beers, Slong, Wavy, Gleeland, and Sniff, and Father O'Twitchitt. Further disciplinary action is anticipated tomorrow, and several members of the Faculty are even now getting their baggage in readiness for departure.

Friday evening's debauch is supposed to have started with a liquid supper at Bulgaro's, after which those members to whom the pleasures of Albany did not appeal (some dozen in number) betook themselves to Meadowbrook for the pre-houseparty dance. Some indication of what the night was to bring forth was evidenced early in the evening when Professor Yesser was caught entering the grounds over the fence at the rear. Upon his arraignment he explained that his leap had merely been the outcome of a wager with Professor Beers as to which was the best jumper. (Girdloin cleared the fence easily with a fine flexing of the abdominal muscles, but Professor Beers was so unfortunate as to come to roost on the barbed wire at the top, and is now in the North Adams Hospital suffering from conclusion of the brain.)

About eleven p. m. another bit of disgraceful behavior came to light. Driven by Professor Sniff, a group of faculty members entered the grounds at high speed and caromed off a convenient telephone pole to come to rest in the midst of an exhibition of bad taste by Professor Slong, whom further investigation proves to be rather notorious for that sort of thing.

Returning from an inspection of the scene of Professor Sniff's first disaster, a quartette composed of Professors Goughy, Filler, Coma, and Newbell felt inspired to stop proceedings and render an unusual version of "Let's Misbehave". They were accompanied at first by the Blackbirds orchestra, whose leadership Father O'Twitchitt had recently taken upon himself, but their accompaniment soon ceased as the College Fester teetered and tumbled into the tuba.

This unmannerly exhibition of rowdyism aroused the Dean, who still retained some vestiges of sobriety, and he sent his 'Long Arm' in the person of J. G. (Hick) Braviland, out to the center of the floor to deliver another of his exhortations to public decency. That such a pervert, who was exposed as the mysterious 'Peeping Tom' of Morgan Hall last evening, should be allowed to address an assembly of decent undergraduates still rankles in the hearts of the Student Council.

Braviland's speech quieted the brawling faculty only for the moment, and soon Professor Hearty was busy organizing a game of leap-frog in a far corner of the premises. The flagrant derelictions of their instructors began to dismay the undergraduates, who gradually fled from such demoralizing influences, but the faculty stayed on to the bitter end at one p. m.

Events following the dance brought the offenders into even greater disrepute. The car of Assistant Professor Jack Robber was stopped when the police saw Professor Gleeland riding home on the radiator to the tune of "Do, Do, Do", while Professor T. C. Sniff was involved in a three-car smash at the crossing of Railroad Avenue and South Street, in which one of his companions was deprived of an ear.

Little need be said in justification of the Student Council's action in recommending the removal of Dean Sowse and the suspension of all the offenders for a period of two weeks. It remains only to ask if something cannot be done for the improvement of faculty morals and the safeguarding of our young innocents from their corrupting influence.

YESSER SHOTS BULL IN PHYSICS LABORATORY

Speaker Fires Verbal Epigrams as Listeners Suffer; Many Slain in Rush For Door

Opening with a rush that carried him through the first four sentences without a break, or at least no bad breaks, and which time and again brought the audience to its feet in thoughtless demonstrations of whole-hearted booing and unsportsmanlike conduct, Prof. Birdlime Noless Yesser was delivered of his first Tuesday Lecture, entitled "How I Worked Up From Foul Shooting to Bull Shooting" in the Physics Laboratory in the fast time of 4.30.4 yesterday afternoon. Uncovering the most offensive attack witnessed this year, the grand old man of P. T. scored on many long shots that went over the heads of the spectators, and this evening would make no statement on his brilliant debut other than the modest admission that "Everything seemed to come my way this afternoon."

The preliminaries were performed by Prof. Mackerdolph, occupant of the chair of Physics, who did his best to account for the presence of Prof. Yesser, assuring the spectators that the ear-splitting speaker would next year pursue his labors on the S. S. Random, where he is confidently expecting a birth. Prof. Yesser acknowledged the introduction with a few simple bows, touching his toes and recovering to the count of four. Then, reaching for a 'Luckie', to which he attributes his sylph-like figure, he inhaled and exhaled deeply and took the platform, before anyone could stop him, with head up and chin in. "Piffle," remarked the speaker by way of preface, explaining by means of a diagram and 62 lantern slides that this was the most concise method of stating Ananias' famous theory, "Love most and serve best."

After this stirring introduction, Prof. Yesser wiped away a tear and continued to the body of his speech. "The body," he said, "should be kept well oiled, and every movement should be made gracefully to avoid kinks in the lower intestine, which often cause consternation. As for myself, I find nothing more beneficial for removing kinks in the lower intestine than taking a few flap-jacks on top of my wife's biscuits every morning. And need I remind you that the voice with a smile wins, inasmuch as smiling exercises 84 muscles of the face, not counting five of the lower bicepspids."

At this point the speaker reached for a decanter at his elbow, and moistened his lips with a modest half pint of methyl alcohol, containing 60% pure kerosene, which had been kindly contributed by Prof. Sprained Ears, who was analyzing 14 kegs of this substance in the Chem Lab cellar. "But this is all beside the point," ranted the speaker. "Our poolmen are going down this afternoon to tackle one of the toughest crews in New England at Abe Swindle's gymnasium. I can guarantee that the boys will be in there fighting all the time and that they will be on the cue ball from start to finish. They're going to give you all they've got, and I want you behind them on every shot they make or take. Give them your support. If you can't play yourself, at least be athletic supporters. So while they're in that pool room don't let them forget their p's and q's, and when they roll those ivories, get down on your knees and pray that the old two ball combination will ring up the winning point."

Noting that Prof. Pillham had produced four watches from his vest pockets, the eminent physiologist hastened to conclude with one of his pungent epigrams. "Smile and breathe," was his parting admonition. But the audience fooled him. They laughed out loud.

No Orgelklang This Week

Owing to the serious illness of his audience, Ima Pansy '32, who is now in the Thompson Memory Reformatory with a cold sore contracted while playing the flute, Herr Doktor Professor Karl Jacob Augustus Friedrich Wilhelm von Dorffas has decided not to play with the organ in Grace Chapin Hall this Wednesday at 4.15. This is a great disappointment to Father John who must find some other place to blow.

COLLEGE NOTES

Captain Schott of the swimming team broke the Columbia record last week. Bemis charged him .85.

Prexy, alias Harry, alias Augustus, or whatever you damn please, has been summoned by Sing Sing to occupy the chair of applied electricity. Many alumni will be overjoyed to hear of this.

Prof. Lieckeder has announced that he will spend the coming Spring vacation in the Intense Inane.

Rudnick Store Burns; Fire Brigade Attends

Rudnick's, Spring Street sartorial center, burned last night with an unestimated loss in pressing tickets and two pair of checked trousers, alleged property of Elliott '29, who had left town at press time. The flames were checked in spite of a six hour fight by the Williams Fire Brigade before they reached Bemis'.

Authorities disclaimed suspicion of incendiary origin, although rumors originating in high circles of Purple Key reported the arrest on suspicion of two Freshmen who could offer no explanation for their presence in the College Library. The flames did not gain much headway at first, as the majority of the students refused to leave the last reel of the current Garbo attraction. "It's hot enough in here," said a prominent Senior, voicing the popular sentiment.

Chief Millard of the Fire Brigade narrowly escaped death when the Rudnick building collapsed after midnight tonight. Millard, who suffered near-suffocation when, frightened by the crash, he choked on a peean, was removed from Hart's to the infirmary, where he was resting comfortably this morning. General student satisfaction with the event was expressed, although Professor G.(i)N. Messer voiced disappointment with the conduct of the cheering sections. "The spirit displayed by many when the hose burst in front of Professor Easton was quite regrettable, and not in accord with traditional Williams sportsmanship," stated Mr. Messer. "Cheering should be done tactfully."

TONY GEORGE SPEAKS ON IMMIGRATION LAW

Famous Anti-Fascist and Criminal Expert Lectures to Large Forum Audience

"The Inspecta, he say, they no want soap, Tony. But I say, give me tha soap", discoursed Tony George, well known Anti-Fascist and criminologist, in his latest lecture on anything at all given under the auspices of the Williams Forum last Sunday morning. Mr. George went on to explain that many of the immigrants from his native country had fleas when they arrived in Quarantine at New York, a condition which could be best eradicated by applications of soap and water.

Tony, as the lecturer is popularly known among his many friends and compatriots in Williamstown, went on to explain the difficulties of getting into the United States, with and without the assistance of J. Christ, perforating his lecture with many gestures as he spoke from his chariot drawn by that splendid white horse. Loud acclaim from the students lately released from the boredom of chapel, greeted the lecturer when he proceeded to a brilliant sermon from his mount in which he touched on the necessity for faith.

Breathless attention was still accorded Mr. George as he changed the subject of his daring exposition to stealing, a naive transition which might well be emulated by future Forum lecturers who find their audiences yawning. Concerning stealing Tony said it just wasn't right, and every one agreed that he must know since he lately paid a visit to one of our larger institutions designed to correct such tendencies.

Again showing a fine disregard for the customs prevalent among Forum speakers, Tony continued his lecture until the last person was walking away, and then drove up the street, singing jovially to himself. All the students who managed to get to the lecture said it did them more good than ten regular Sunday sermons.

Manager Stratton of the wrestling team spent the week-end in Northampton arranging for meet.

'Silent Cal' Is Paid Visit by Reporter Who Is Able to Pick Up Nothing Better to Amuse Him in 'Hamp'

Although a deposed monarch of this land—a former vice-president of the United States—impresses us common mortals with little of the glamor and romance which surrounds other fallen heroes—a bartender turned reformer, a stage beauty grown old, a defeated heavyweight champion, a pardoned murderer, a Lindbergh who has crashed, or a drunken Prohibition officer, still a This Way Out reporter pried a few moments from certain important business in 'Hamp last week to spend in a call on Calvin Coolidge, who has returned from a six years' stay in Washington to his native haunts of pool rooms and barber shops in rural Northampton.

Our correspondent assures us that he would much have preferred to go to an eight-ring circus, to have witnessed a fire, or even to have pitched pennies into the Connecticut if the Connecticut hadn't been so far away. But none of these diversions being possible, and since the Denishawn Dancers proved to be the only competition against the former president, the reporter finally decided to pay his respects to Coolidge—so up he went to 22 Massasoit Street.

The 'umble home of the former first man of the land—God knows what numeral should be applied to him now—be-speaks with simple eloquence that he has sprung from homes even as yours and mine. No gilded palace his—a mere half of a double house. The one living room and particularly the books in this room—there is no library—bear witness to his intellectual attainments: on the center table are an old family Bible, which contains the curly locks of prehistoric Coolidges, and large piles of Time and The Literary Digest; in the bookcase are a one-volume Shakespeare, a set of O. Henry, an uncut edition of Victorian authors in 22 volumes, carefully expurged, of the immoral scenes so common in the 19th century literature and a loose-leaf encyclopaedia of the world in four and a half volumes. Truly, the intellect of the man is deep and wide!

During the call of your correspondent Mr. Coolidge himself spoke little, although he admitted that his traditional silence might in the future be frequently disturbed at the rate of one dollar a word—which is the price for which he had contracted to write for a certain publishing house. He said with a sly smile that he

LILYS HUNG IN DEAR OLD HEATING PLANT

Art Executed by Ex-Pound Keeper on Display, Musser, Horsey,
Have Their Say

Continuing the interminable series of special art exhibitions presented for the enlightenment of the College by the Department of Plant, Structures, Street Cleaning and Art, under the chairmanship of Professor Don Carlos (Iron Man) Vesting, better known as the Prince of Wales, an exhibit of Mr. O. U. Lily is hanging in the Central Heating Plant near the old campus (that is, the paintings are hanging, not the artist, worse luck). Mr. Lily was a well-known plumber in his home town, afterwards becoming a garbage collector and keeper of the pound by unanimous vote of the Board of Selectmen of Medicine Bottle, Ohio, and it was while filling the latter office that he turned aesthete and began to paint his remarkable pictures.

When interviewed on the latest developments in this outrage, Sir Joseph Duvcey Horsey, Knight of the Bath (Saturday) and now second violin in the Street Cleaners Band, said he had nothing to say and continued with the statement that "while these pictures may not be the best ever painted, they certainly aren't the worst". (Mr. Horsey was careful not to take this distinction from his colleague, Dr. Vesting—Ed.) They are priced very moderately from $99.50 up, f.o.b. Spokane, Wash., and I am sure every student will jump at this wonderful opportunity to secure some of these exquisite views of the city dump and pound for his collection of early Lilies.

The exhibition was viewed by The Right Reverend Promessor Fusser—Profusser Misser,—oh, gracious, you know who I mean, anyway—who took great delight in the fact that Mr. Lily was an old pupil of his, having got four A's in P.T. Mister Musser said in part: "Mr. Lily's great success is due in no small measure to my principle of 'Love most and serve best', as the broad feeling, the firm stroke, and the unrestrained passion of his work shows. While in College he was a breast and back stroke star and you can see the evidences of his early efforts all about you." The interview was abruptly terminated at this point when an urchin scored an ace with a piece of coal, carefully wrapped in snow and tied with pink ribbon, a beautiful shot through the window which made a perfect basket in the lecturer's right ear, winning the game for dear old St. Michael's. Among the pictures on display are "Morning", "Dawning", "Yawning", "Morning After", and "Still Lie." was paid $75,000 a year as president without speaking a word, implying that the American people might have heard more of his silvery tongue if they had been as generous as the publishing house. When questioned as to his future occupation, Mr. Coolidge allowed that he would be content to write words as the bills came in—one hundred words for a hundred dollar bill, and so forth.

When finally led around to college affairs—Mr. Coolidge did graduate from Amherst, believe it or not—he expressed the modest hope that he would be asked to throw the first ball in the opening Williams-Amherst baseball series this spring, and went on to assure your correspondent—who, God knows, had no doubts about the man's "wing"—that experience at Washington with the big leagues had taught him to get the ball within 18 feet of the pitcher. He frankly admitted that, when he was governor of Massachusetts, he never could get the "damn thing" to go anywhere but directly to the ground or off somewhere in the west bleachers. In fact, Mr. Coolidge was so eloquent about his improved arm—at the rate, mind you, of exactly nothing per word—that Williams athletic supporters had better be wary that he is not smuggled in as an Amherst pitcher at some crucial point in a baseball game with the Purple.

At this point in the conversation, Mrs. Coolidge, who had been peeling potatoes in the kitchen, rushed in with her apron and cried, "Hurry, Calvin, there's no wood for the kitchen stove and you'll have to chop some if you want me to get any supper"; with that, she disappeared. Mr. Coolidge turned to me with a wry face and said that he guessed the interview was over as he had to chop that kindling wood, "hang it". But your correspondent laughed aloud at Mr. Coolidge's pretended dislike of this homely duty, for he has seen billions of campaign pictures of Coolidge in his shirt sleeves chopping wood, milking cows, planting and digging potatoes, sweeping the floor, and fulfilling the role of the common American citizen and husband in a hundred other ways. So your reporter left Mr. Coolidge in a merry mood with the thought of chopping wood ahead of him—the very privilege which he has longed for and told Western farmers about for six years.

Merely a letter to Hassan Ali

"Bring me," commanded Mustafa, merchant prince of Tripoli, "a sheet of my best writing paper. I indite a letter to Hassan Ali in the Sudan."

And the servant, hastening to do his bidding, thought to himself: "It is but a letter to Hassan Ali. Any paper will do," and brought his master the first that came to hand.

Whereupon Mustafa grew angry and severely reprimanded the servant.

"But, master," the servant stammered. "He is only a small merchant—certainly of no great consequence. Furthermore, he knows of your greatness—"

"He is part of my trade," Mustafa interrupted in a severe voice, "and so part of my greatness. All things I do should, in his sight, carry out the dignity he believes to be mine. Thus I weld him to me. Bring parchment, fool!" . . .

Modern business, too, has discovered that an impressive, dignified stationery is an important factor in building prestige and good will . . . in projecting upon your letter contacts the dignity and personality of your firm.

Letterheads on Crane's Bond—that 100% new white rag business paper—have the faculty of building confidence, esteem, prestige, because they convey an impression of substance, of dignity, of stability; a sense of the importance of the firm they represent.

Town Traffic Peril Savagely Disclosed

fore coming to Williamstown, he was a sane man. But the traffic system got him. It always gets them, that old devil sea.

"It seems that hardly had he reached Main Street when he was accosted by three policemen, clad in bullseye lanterns and shotguns. (See accompanying illustration which may or may not have anything to do with this article. It doesn't seem to mean much.) It seems the accosters were looking for pithecanthropi.

TYPICAL TRAFFIC JAM ON MAIN STREET
Showing Method of Disintegration

There had been a scourge of the pests recently, and they had eaten most of the fur off the furze bushes. This just had to be stopped. Hence the search. After the occupants of Mr. Rumblepuckle's car had been thoroughly probed for signs of the deadly hacillus proboscis corrie, among which, it is said, the pithecanthropi are only too fond of making their little birch bark nests, they drove on to the next corner, presumably to await further instructions. At the end of fifteen minutes of waiting in front of a red light, during which the only sign of a traffic peril was the flight overhead of a herd of geese, a rather soporific looking old vegetarian or whatever it is you are when you are seventy years old, appeared, bearing in his hand a book. "Follow these instructions", quoth the veterinarian, "and I'll guarantee to get you out of Williamstown ere cock-crow." (It was then eight p. m., and the crow had shown not even the slightest inclination toward cocking.)

"Well, the instructions were rather involved, but I remember they went something as follows. You go down to the third house on the left and buy some purple armhands. That gets you by the man free, he thinking you are Amherst men.

Then you drive around Weston Field three times, singing "You're the Nail in My Shoe" in a low falsetto voice." At this point Prickly's jaw dropped, causing a dent in the table which has been known until this very day as "The Wolf of Wall Street." After replacing this necessary article (the jaw), he continued.

"To make matters worse, I mean, to make a long story short, the Rumblepuckle party got through these instructions all right, but found still more awaiting them. By the time they were ready to leave town, our hero was beside himself. This made too many in the front seat, and the driver was crowded out onto the turnpike. When my search party found him the next day, he was slobbering softly to himself a few verses of what must have been a dim echo of the past, or maybe it was something he ate. They went like this:

Upon his lofty Chapel seat
Sanctified Joseph stands.
Benedictions issue from his mouth,
His arms end up with hands.

Canto Two

"Drink" Moxie is a pleasant lad,
But his jokes too oft are heard
And the stuff he clucks at us in class
Is logically absurd.

But here President Horseback arose to interrupt the proceedings. "Gentlemen and girls", he said, "this can't go on. I move that the present tormentor be sesquipedaliated and given a thorough coating of phaliginous matter." Needless to say, the motion passed enormously. But before the sesquipedaliation and phaliginous incoaters could set about their appointed tasks, the gathering was interrupted by the sudden arrival of the 11.88 from Briggsville, which accomplished the desired result more humanely than it could have been done by mortal hands.

Scarheel Happy in Tunnel Ring Trade

ners"—most of them retired faculty members, and a few of them his "old Washington friends"—were continually coming in through the door leading to the tunnel, with requests such as "Twenty-five cases for the Faculty Club," "Dean Cowes wants to know why in hell you are holding up his regular Friday wheelbarrow-load," "A dozen for the library, and they want it right now," etc. To these demands "Gus the Dip" would reply "O. K., Doc," in the voice which has assured him a warm spot in the heart of every alumnus and business friend. Along the east wall of the basement, beside the entrance to the Southworth Street Tunnel, was the Stein-way which was polished by Number 34, whom the reporter recognized to be "Buck" Doughty, Vair E. Platinidous Professor of American History. Helping him was Foolidge Oats Chapman, the official Scarheel yes-man.

"Yes, yes, what this country needs more'n new cruisers 's old-fashioned schooners. Righto' Ah'm a poet 'n daon't knaow it," blurted out Gus, blushing like a girl. Queried concerning his work, "the Dip" said "I am very much wrapped up in this work. As I look back along the avenue of my life, in constant touch with Williams men and Williams tradition—" tear came into his good eye—"I-I-I-I" but he could go no further, and would have broken down had not some of his aides chimed in with "A bunch of the boys was whooping it up in the Malamute saloon." but they got no further when "Gus the Dip," moved by a song that meant so much to him, joined his loud, jubilant voice in singing the lilting strains.

"Come, come," interrupted the reporter, "Let's get down to business and call a spade a spade."

"Double a spade," was the swift rejoinder, and before long the witty gang leader had his helpers holding their sides. But for this austere figure there was a limit to tomfoolery. There was an impressiveness about him as he stood up to his full height. A silence fell, and bounced under a chair. Holding up a gnarled hand that marked him as a son of the soil, "Gus the Dip" solemnly said in a voice that electrified the dank basement air, "Omitting the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth stanzas, let us unite in singing the first seven stanzas of hymn number three hundred and eighty-one." And, with a sly wink, he was gone.

room went up in smoke and burning alcohol. He did save, however, his natty set of foulard pajamas, which he was wearing at the time.

An investigation instituted immediately by the students revealed that the "Club" was the center of a vast "rum ring" with pipe lines extending to Hoosick Falls, Troy, Adams, and Blackinton, and that the gin which lately tested 40 per cent wood alcohol probably came from this source. At least those who sampled the rescued quarts said it did. The roulette wheels, whose ownership is still unknown, were discovered to have peculiar electric arrangements underneath. Doctor Garfunkle is said to have mumbled something about beeches when he heard this, though he probably did not know that the wheels were made of oak instead of beech. Indictments are expected in a few days, but meantime Chief Royal says "Boys will be boys."
